Our Local Industry

The Andover telephone exchange is a local industry. The plant is permanently rootted here. It represents many thousands of dollars invested in poles, wire, cables, conduits, switchboards, etc.—dollars that would shrink to fractional currency if this delicate and costly plant were not maintained to give efficient telephone service.

The exchange's welfare is to a large degree dependent upon the welfare of Andover. As Andover prospers, more business for Andover means more telephone plant. Plant is permanently rooted here. It represents many thousands of dollars invested in poles, wire, cables, conduits, switchboards, etc.—dollars that would shrink to fractional currency if this delicate and costly plant were not maintained to give efficient telephone service.

Our Company is a part of the great Bell System which connects 75,000 cities and towns in the United States. But our success as an exchange and as a part of this great system is judged by what we do here in Andover and for Andover.

We have many incentives of selfish or civic interest, therefore, to work for efficient telephone service for Andover, not only that our work may receive official recognition and reward, but also that our friends and neighbors may be well served, and that these local industries whose patronage furnish us bread and butter may receive our hearty co-operation.

It is in this spirit we express a desire to receive suggestions that will make the service of the Andover Central Office a matter of even greater local pride.

Figured in terms of health and time—as well as money—does it pay you to launder at home?

Can't you put your time to more profitable use than to spend it over the wash tub?

And don't conclude doctor's bills occasioned by too much housework, more than off-set the slight cost of letting us launder?

We know many men who have found it wise to

Glenwood

Don't grow old with an old range.

COOKING three meals a day, 1000 meals a year, you actually spend three solid months of working days at your range from January to January.

Life is too short to waste your time over an old stove that you can't depend on and that has to be coaxed to do its work. Isn't it about time you traded your old range for an efficient Modern Glenwood? Ask us for particulars.

Some Things We Can Do

Our desire is to see how much—not how little—we can give our customers for their money. Don't interpret this as a burst of philanthropy. It isn't. It's plain, common-sense business, because a satisfied customer is the best possible advertisement.

Every telephone becomes a part of the universal Bell System the moment it is installed. The service that may be afforded a patron, however, is largely dependent upon his knowledge of the telephone's varied possibilities. We can suggest some of these, leaving to him the privilege of availing himself of them.

Does he know how to make an Emergency Fire or Police Call?

"Does he know we will try to make the telephone much more valuable to him, and perhaps a little cheaper, in every way he uses it? Does he know what we are glad to do in the way of emergency service that may be afforded a patron, however, is largely dependent upon his knowledge of the telephone's varied possibilities. We can suggest some of these, leaving to him the privilege of availing himself of them.

interest in the prosperity of Andover was strong and constant. He was the first to advocate of every sound public improvement, especially the one that would benefit the town. He was the first to see the future of Andover, which had reached a point of crisis. His ideas were not always accepted by the town, but they were always listened to carefully. He was especially fond of his community, and he always sought to promote the interests of Andover. He believed that education was the key to a prosperous community. He was also a strong advocate of the arts and culture. He was a member of the local art society, and he supported the local theater. He was a strong supporter of the local church, and he contributed to its building fund. He was a strong supporter of the local library, and he contributed to its building fund.

The World War gave Mr. Cole another chance to prove his worth to his country. It had always been his ambition to serve in the army, but he had been rejected for medical reasons. When the war began, he decided to join the army as a volunteer. He was quickly promoted to the rank of colonel, and he served in the army for four years. He was a brave and skilled soldier, and he was decorated for his service. He was especially proud of his service on the Western Front, where he led his men in the trenches. He was a brilliant strategist, and he was able to outmaneuver his opponents. He was a popular leader, and he was loved by his men.

Mr. Cole was a printer by trade, and he had a great love for his craft. He was a master printer, and he was able to produce fine-quality printed material. He was a perfectionist, and he took great pride in his work. He was a hard worker, and he worked long hours. He was a generous person, and he was always willing to help his fellow printers. He was a respected member of the printing community, and he was loved by all who knew him.

The funeral of Mr. Cole was held on October 31. It was a simple ceremony, attended by a few close friends and relatives. It was a fitting tribute to a man who had given so much to his country and his community. It was a fitting end to a life well-lived.

Thomas F. Dean, Superintendent of Agriculture: "In the death of Mr. John N. Cole, the Commonwealth has lost a man who in the high position he held and the other fields in which he was employed, gave to his public work the respect and confidence of all who knew him or associated with him. To co-workers and others he was a source of inspiration and of absolute devotion to the interests of the Commonwealth. His loss is deep and will be felt by all who knew him or knew of him."... There is a characteristic frankness in the style of Mr. Cole's letters which makes them quite the most enjoyable reading. He was born into the world, and died in it, with an unusually large capacity for the active affairs of life in which he was engaged. His position in the active affairs of life was such as to command all the respect of those who knew him, and to deserve it. His letters, of which he was particularly fond, were addressed to the most prominent men in the community, and were filled with the views which appealed to his mind and his capacity.

The late Mr. Cole was a man of deep and wide experience. He had been a prominent citizen for many years, and had been associated with the most prominent men in the community. His letters were characterized by a frankness and a directness which were particularly appreciated by his associates.

The late Mr. Cole was a man of great personal strength and ability. He had been a successful lawyer, and had held many important positions in public life. His letters were characterized by a frankness and a directness which were particularly appreciated by his associates.

AN "Open House" in your homes, will be conducted Oct. 21st and 22nd, in the 1750 Modern Laundries of BANCROFT LANDRY, 21 St. Mary’s Street.

You should know how this work is performed. You should see a Modern Laundry in operation—and to make this easy for the visitor, has been arranged a special tour of inspection. Experience has taught us that the most effective way is to show the operation of the works in their normal condition. It will be found that the Modern Laundry is the most efficient and the most economical method of doing laundry work in any city, and the different operations can be seen conducted in an orderly and systematic manner.

Remember the dates Oct. 21st and 22nd, a Cordial Welcome Awaits You.

"Why, I couldn't find his name in the telephone directory."

This is the reply I get occasionally, when I ask a subscriber why he didn't send a toll message, and thus settle some important matter.

As it would be practically impossible to include in one book all subscribers to the Bell System, each book is designed to include a given territory within which there are numbers frequently called.

If a Bell subscriber who lives outside this territory is wanted, you can reach him quickly and easily even if his name and number do not reach him quickly and easily even if his name and number do not

If you make your call on a station-to-station basis you will save both time and money. It really makes no difference whether he is in Bangor, Sioux City or/for Francisco. It is only the cost of the telephone, in any telephone or branch office in the city to which he is connected.

The next time you want to reach some distant friend whose name you can't find in the telephone directory, just call the Toll Operator and tell her what you want. She will try to help you, and may be able to get a message to your friend, even though he has no telephone, and get him a Public Telephone Station to talk to you.

How much? Used to be the thing you'd consider in a pair of shoes.

It's still important but not the main argument for a shoe.

Good judgment goes beyond the pocketbook.

It considers the fit, the wear, and the price.

The most valuable thing in a shoe, you cannot see, and that is service.

Co-operation

Every person who reads the following paragraph and gives it a moment's consideration will, I think, accept it as true:

Our operators are desirous of giving good service and are anxious to avoid errors. Error calls simply make additional work for them; therefore, every instance of self-interest suggests that they answer calls promptly and correctly.

Mistakes occasionally will occur, some unquestionably resulting from operating errors, others from the calling of wrong numbers by subscribers. Not infrequently some defect in the delicate equipment of the central office is found to be responsible for a fault which the subscriber attributes to the operator.

It is our duty and our desire to strengthen these weak points in our work, whether the weakness be of human or mechanical origin, and we can do if subscribers do not wait until criticisms come.

May I suggest this form of co-operation:

If there is reasonable doubt of the accuracy of our reports, such as "don't answer," "wrong number," etc., then the call must be reported to the chief operator be called at once. She is directly in charge of the operating room and responsible for the efficiency of its discipline. Therefore, serious criticisms should be discussed with her in the great majority of instances, she is in a position to make prompt investigation and adjustment.

If the trouble is persistent, I want to hear of it and I will be especially grateful to those whose reports give dates and facts upon which to base a definite inquiry.

Men and Women of Massachusetts—
You have a personal interest in the proposed law, to be voted on Nov. 7, to limit certain classes of the laundries to the washing of light articles of clothing. It is your duty to assist those who are working for this important law, and it is your right to defend this attack upon freedom. We appeal to all those who are interested in the interests of labor and the public welfare, and who are Members of the Massachusetts Citizens' Alliance Against Combination and Unfair Labor Practices, to join in the enrollment of their names.
