PUNCHARD SENIOR PLAY

School Students Give Excellent Presentation of "The Rivals" Before Capacity Audience in Town Hall Friday Evening

Town Hall F.

The reputation for excellence established by the Punchard plays, especially during the last few years under the coaching of Mervin E. Stevens, filled the town hall on Friday evening when members of the senior class presented "The Rivals" by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. Nor was any one in the audience dissponited in the evening's entertainment. Fromptly at eight o'clock the Punchard orchestra, under the leadership of Miss Miriam Sweeney, played Rubinstein's Melody in F and its close the curtain smoothly disclosed a street in Bath. In fact, all the stage settings for the five acts of two scenes each, were apparently managed with ease and dispatch, showing a deal of careful planning. A background of pleasing color and texture set off the ladies in their hoops with satins and laces and powdered wigs, and the men in velvets, knee breeches, cocked hat and frills to the greatest advantage, while a new method of indirect lighting, sen on the Town hall stage for the first time, added glamour to the scene. The furniture, loaned by Mrs James Anderson, was appropriate to the period.

Mrs. Malaprop in the person of Miss Daisy Stevens, was easy in her transitions from the arrogant and domineering chaperon to the ingratiating matchmaker, and her "parts of speech" were much enjoyed by her audience. Her charming and romantic tharge, Lydu Languish, was played by Miss Kathryn Hernan. Miss Languish sighed for intrigue mixed with her love affairs, was devoted to Ensign Beverly, but unresponsive to the advances of Captain James Absolute, and proved but a cold coquette when his suit was proposed by her aunt and his blustering uncle. The dark-haired Julia, played by Miss Helen Saunders, was a pretty foil for Miss Languish as they exchanged their grilsh confidences. Miss Julia found a faithful and prepossessing lover in the elegant brills and the research were the advanced on the than William Bradford.

The part of Captain Absolute was well carried by William Emmons, a lover lacking in self-consciousness, apparently ductile in the hands of the managing chaperon, tactful but not spiritless with his hot-headed father. James Gallant as Bob Acres was most amusing and seemed to have almost as much flun as he gave the audience. At first a self-confident, yet impossible, aspirant for the hand of Lydia he was ready to fight his rival, the unknown Beverly, his courage soon oozing at sight of a pistol, in a manner so conical as to fairly convulse the spectators. Nothing could have been more satisfactory to all parties than to find Beverly and Absolute identical.

In spite of Andover's increasing population the number of births, deaths, and marriages remain fairly constant, the number of births, 200, being exactly the same as for last year. Of the 134 persons who died, as compared with 142 in 1925, only three died from communicable diseases, and 51 lived to be over seventy years of age. The number of marriages was 97 as compared with 90 the year before.

The grim reaper visited Andover impartially every month in the year from January to December, neither summer heat nor winter cold apparently putting undue strain on the vitality of this New England community. Twelve infants scarcely drew their breath and ten others gave up the struggle within the year. Three more died before attaining the tenth year. There were 3 deaths between the ages of ten and twenty, 9 between the ages of twenty and thirty, 6 between theirty and forty, 7 between forty and fifty, 14 between fifty and sixty, 14 between sirty and seventy, 37 between seventy and eighty, 14 between eighty and ninety, and 5 between ninety and one hundred. Before an audience that included many state and city officials, ranking officers of the Army and Navy, American Legion officers and ex-doughboys and gobs, "What Price Glory," the William Fox feature picture based on the famous stage play by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson made its Boston debut at the Majestic Thearte on Monday night. If the terrific applause and the rollicking laughter that greeted this latest epic of the recent conflict across the seas can be taken as a criterion, the Majestic Theatre will be a popular spot for many weeks to come.

The fun, the thrills and the realism which made the stage play of "What Price Glory" immortal are all retained in the screen version. Raoul Walsh, who directed the picture, has kept faith with the authors to such a degree that he has earned the congratulations of both of them. In many respects the motion picture "What Price Glory" excels any other production of its kind and its certian to be the most talked-of photoplay for many seasons.

The Washington Ball

The Washington Ball

Once a year the Andover Historical Society switches its interests from Sandwich glass and Gov. Winthrop chairs, to soft lights, Gen. Washington and dancing.

This year the Washington Ball will be held on Tuesday evening, February twenty-second in the Town hall, and every one interested is invited—to quote from the Ticket, "your company is solicited."

To be truthful and exact, it will be necessary to present at the door a little yellow card, with a lady in a sedan chair, not to mention two stalwart gentlemen bearers, upon it, which may be purchased from any members of the committee.

George Washington, who has previously finds that it will be impossible for him to be present.

Spring will be starting at Mt. Vernon, and Mr. Washington who was much interested in cutting and pruning, as we all know, would feel that he should not leave at this important time. A historic cherry tree will be chopped by hand.

But the committee rejoices because "Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe" and "Mr. Samuel Francis Smith" will be in the receiving line, filling President Washington's place as well as substitutes can.

filling President Washington's place as well as substitutes can.

Mr. Smith has been suffering from a severe cold and will be unable to sing "America" for the company, but doubtless the orchestra will respond instead, if called upon.

Just here, it may be well to remind everyone, in case of emergency, to brush up a bit on the verses of "America." Everyone knows as far as "of thee I sing," but when it comes to proceeding, what to sing about is the question.

Often it's an even race between Mrs. Prim who pipes up about "rocks and rills," and Mr. Small, his tenor soaring with "sweet freedom's sound," many la-la's filling in the waste spaces.

freedom's sound," many la-la's filling in the waste spaces.

Mrs. Stowe, we feel sure will enjoy the ball, as there always was a frivolous side ther literary nature. She was the first hostess in Andover who dared invite guests to a card party, which was heresy and real scandal in those days.

Mrs. S. H. Bailey, Jr., is arranging a group of exhibition dances which will be most attractively given with unusual lighting effects.

aftractively given white autosate inginized effects.

There will also be general dancing, with music by Stanley Pratt's orchestra.

Extremely good punch (which will be substituted for the proper Virginia mint julep and toddy), delicious ices, and little cakes adorned with cherries from President George's prize tree, will cool and refresh the inner man.

adorned with cherries from President George's prize tree, will cool and refresh the timer man.

The committee hopes that everyone will come in early American costumes, but begs that, if the said costume is to be a stumbling block instead of a handsome decoration, they attend just the same, looking as festive as possible.

There will be judges to choose the most correct and beautiful costumes, and appropriate prizes will be presented.

A few yards of cloth, some elastic and a card of safety pins, all duly mixed, will make an attractive costume for a woman.

The gentlemen's attire may be hired for a small sum or better still, two males might purchase one pair of plus eights or sixteens, which dissected horizontally, would easily provide two pairs of Puritan pants!

Space does not permit us to proceed with the pattern for the upper portions.

"The Bishop's Crusade." Two speakers, the Rev. R. A. Heron of Lawrence and Mr. Paul Sterling of Melrose, spoke to a group of people from St. Paul's, North Andover, and mr. Christ Church, in the Parish House, last Tuesday. They came to tell about the "Bishop's Crusade." This is a movement conceived at the last General Convention of the Church.

The objectives of the Crusade are all spiritual. There is no thought of great accessions to Church membership, no idea of money-raising. If so large a thought can be expressed in so few words, the Bishop's Crusade is a call to the people in the Church, to know their Leader better, to rededicate themselves to Him, not pledge unequivocal Bith of the Church of the

Phillips Club Holds Ladies' Night

A new picture of Russia, quite upsetting his hearers' preconceived conceptions of that country, was drawn for members of the Phillips club and their guests at a ladies' night held at Peabody house on Monday evening, by Pierrepont B. Noyes of Oneida, New York. Mr. Noyes, who is a man of affairs, returned only six weeks ago from Russia, where through his business connections he had an opportunity to visit not only schools and factories and the homes of the people, but also to talk personally with those who are helping to direct the government.

the people, but also to talk personally with those who are helping to direct the government.

It is easy to get to Russia, and easy to go about, said Mr. Noyes. There is no communism; everyone who works in factories gets graded pay and there is more piece work than there is in this country. There is no murdering, and "no Bolshevists throwing people down wells" as in the lurid pictures which persist in the minds of many from a period ten years ago. The government is stable and in the five years since the revolution was over a wonderful amount of detailed organization has been accomplished. Indeed, he felt that system and statistics were almost a fetish with them. Ninety percent of their industries and commerce are nationalized and a close watch is kept on raw materials and manufactures.

Manufactured goods are extremely cheap which is fortunate, as everyone's pay is limited, no one in the country receiving more than 250 rubles a month. The ruble is at par, but American money is circulated freely and is very acceptable everywhere. Housing space is allotted to each person. The government owns the houses so that rents are very low and no rent is charged to those out of work. The people are dramatic and emotional and have great enthusiasm for the new regime. In an effort to wipe out illiteracy, twenty-five percent of the national budget has been apportioned to education. New methods in education are being successfully practised in schools where the pupils range from eight to sixteen years. Sports and physical education are pursued for the best development of the body and not with the competitive spirit popular with American young people.

Some of the aims of the Communist government are no war, everything for the worker and a dictatorship by the poletraits. No one

Some of the aims of the Communist government are no war, everything for the worker and a dictatorship by the poletariat. No one who employs more than two persons is allowed to have a vote. Paradoxically, an army is maintained, and much private property has been returned to its owners. The attitude toward religion has been completely altered. Although people are allowed to attend church, and church buildings are not torn down except with the consent of the congregation, no teaching of religion is permitted to young people under sixteen years of age. Materialism has been adopted, and by extensive experiments in vivisection, the Russians hope to add to the sum of human knowledge, particularly concerning the functioning of the human brain. The popular theatre of the day is one without scenery, curtain or other accessories to help the actors, who nevertheless are able to present a very interesting play. However, Mr. Noyes said that he attended a ballet such as he had seen in previous visits.

A very up-to-date factory was visited where 30,000 pairs of rubbers are made a day, seventy-five percent of the operatives being on piece work. The fact that the factory was government-owned, accounted for the leakage and waste in many departicater.

being on piece work. The fact that the factory was government-owned, accounted for the leakage and waste in many departments which as Mr. Noyse expressed it, "would have caused someone to get canned" if it had persisted in a privately-owned shop Nevertheless the workers thirst for American efficiency as exemplified by Henry Ford They feel that they need America as they do no other nation, and would, if the case were properly presented to them, undoubtedly pay debts which they wouldn't pay to any other country.

properly presented to them, undoubtedly pay debts which they wouldn't pay to any other country.

The change that has gradually been coming into American industry in the last twenty-five years with the realization by manufacturers that people are people and not cogs in a machine, that they have responsibilities to their employees, and that there is a solidarity in human happiness, together with her system of economics, makes Russians believe that the United States is a country that can't be revolutionized, according to Mr. Noyes.

He looks upon Russia as a young nation, with a tremendous future before it. The relation of human beings in Russia, different from anything tried out before, is a most interesting experiment, especially if the modification comes from the inside and from the play of human forces.

Although Mr. Noyes had visited Russia before, his recent stay was of but two weeks duration, and he made no profession that he had a thorough knowledge of conditions. Nevertheless his informal talk, giving his own keen observations and opinions, made a very interesting evening for his hearers.

Following the talk on Russia, the company adjourned to the grill room where refreshments were served.

Sunday Evening Movies for Andover?

We are now called upon to decide whether or not we favor having a movie show at the local moving picture house on Sunday evenings. Petitions made out to the Andover selectmen will soon be received by local residents, requesting the town fathers to grant the local management a license for Sunday evening shows.

local management a license for Sunday evening shows.

Our worthy forefathers would doubtlessly have thrown up their hands in holy horror at such a proposal, and pronounced violent diatribes against it as the work of the devil and his agentst. Those were the days when good people were supposed to be inactively pious on Sunday. Times have changed, however, and today there are very few towns indeed that do not permit the showing of selected films on the Lord's day. At any rate the time has passed when certain people proposed to dictate to their fellow-citizens that they must not do this or that on Sunday.

Do Andover people want Sunday evening movies? They certainly do if the number to go to Lawrence for entertainment is an index to the situation. Last Sunday afternoon over 200 people were counted who got off the Andover trolleys and headed for the various amusement houses of that city. As many more probably went in the evening, and many others would have gone but for the inconvenience of going out of town. That many Andover people want this form of Sunday diversion, is too obvious for argument. Why can't they have it at home? Because of outworn customs and traditions. If it is a crime to attend a movie in Andover, it is just as much so in any neighboring community. If, as is evidently the case, people want this thing, it would be exceedingly presumptuous on the part of anyone to say "you cannot have it." It would be better for Andover to have her people attend a local show than to go to some large city for diversion.

The effect on the town would simply be to collect five dollars per Sunday, making a revenue of over $250 vearly.

Lecture By Captain Noel

One of the two or three most important entertainments of the season will be given in George Washington Hall on the evening of Friday, January 28th, when Captain John Noel, a member of the Mt. Everest Expedition of 1924, will give his famous lecture, "The Epic of Everest", illustrated by some of the finest motion pictures ever shown on the screen. Captain Noel, who had been on three previous expeditions of the ascent of Mt. Everest, started out in 1924 as official photographer of the expedition, under the command of the Honorable C. G. Bruce. He accompanied the two British explorers, Mallory and Irvine, to a point of 800 ft. below the top of the great mountain, and was not far away when these two men, with oxygen tanks strapped to their backs, disappeared from view forever. The heroism of the final dash to the summit, involving as it did the cutting of over two thousand steps in the ice, has rarely been equalled in the history of adventure. The prices of admission for this lecture will be 50 cents and $1.00. Seats will be reserved for undergraduates of Phillips Academy, but the general public are invited to attend. Tickets will go on sale at the Andover Bookstore Saturday morning.

Communication

To the Editor:

In the Townsman of July 9 the A. V. I. S. Publicity Committee say: "Carmel Woods has great possibilities as a woodland park, and we hope to see some work done there by the Town in the not distant future." This suggestion of the Publicity Committee brings to my mind a suggestion of one of our business men as to the possibility of Carmel Woods for a Municipal Tourist Camp.

In the coming of the automobile the barrier of distance has broken down, and with it the great open spaces, lakes, streams, and forest are within the possibility of a few hours or days. The community can no longer hold within its confines its population the whole year round, and in the summer a vast population is on wheels. It is estimated that 15,000,000 visit the 5,000 camps by early.

More and more every year camp life is the motive force that spurs human energy on to the habit of an earlier age. The population wishes to throw off the restraint of the conventional civilized life. It desires to be "boss free" and live for a time an individualistic existence.

With the automobile transportation has become more convenient and individualistic.

Attention is drawn to the paragraph concerning M. H. H. Joachim's lecture on India which is to take the place of Mr. McClure's previously announced lecture on the twenty-second of January.

On Sunday evening, the Rev. Markham W. Stackpole of Milton, Trustee of the Academy, will conduct the service.

The dates of the Mid-year examination period are January 27, 28, and 29.

"An Adventure in Intelligence"

All living is, or should be, an adventure in intelligence, but the words as chosen for the title of her lecture by Mrs. Helen Talboy, before the members of the November club on Monday afternoon, and which had stimulated the cariosity of her hearers, were applied by the speaker to the League of Nations.

lated the curiosity of her hearers, were applied by the speaker to the League of Nations.

Mrs. Talboy is a lawyer and a writer and has twenty-five years experience as a newspaper woman. She was connected with a Near East unit after the war, was in Turkey when the Nationalist government was formed, in the war zone when the Greeks advanced on Angora, and has been at the Hague and Geneva. She has but recently returned from a trip over Europe, much of the journey being made by airplane. With this varied experience, she spoke with rare intelligence and clearness of the work of the League of Nations, an attempt to build up in the world a national organization that will function intelligently.

The League of Nations is not a solution of problems, but a method of getting a solution. We are now living in the whole world—all of us. We daily use products from the uttermost parts of the earth and if international trade were interrupted, unemployment and bankruptcy would touch everyone. International problems and contacts increased daily and become more difficult and complex, affecting us all. War anywherd is a danger everywhere. Like a little fire not put out, it may become a devastating configaration.

With fifty-six nations transacting business through the League, the United States is the only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only great power not to take advantage of its only grea of Russia, Turkey, Afghanistan, Mexico and Equador.

Mrs. Talboy told how the members of the council are chosen, how it functions and some of its accomplishments. Continuity of conference makes for progress and publicity makes for reasonableness. With a World Court it is possible to attain a maximum amount of cooperation among nations at any given time. It has been said that if there had been a conference of nations, there would have been no World war. The speaker contrasted the efficiency of the League of Nations with the old system of private diplomacy — with the army and navy behind each diplomat's shoulder — with all its inevitable limitations of information, with all its possibilities of secrecy and intrigue. The League is the scientific method of conducting diplomatic negotiations.

In speaking of the present situation in licaragua and Mexico Mrs. Talboy pointed out the difficulty of obtaining sufficient information on the situation to determine the best policies. The methods now employed, come downto us from the centuries, are themselves inadequate and out of date. If the United States is right, our method is such that our rightness is not obvious to the rest of the world.

Report of Librarian of Memorial Hall Library To the Trustees of the Memorial Hall Library.

Gentlemen:

I herewith present the report of the librar for the twelve months ending December 31, 1926.

This has been an eventful year in the history of the library. When, at the March meeting, the town voted to remodel the Memorial Hall, it became necessary to find temporary quarters.

Memorial Hall, it became necessary to find temporary quarters.

The selectmen, with some apologies for a place which at first sight seemed dismal and unattractive, offered us the lower town hall. Thanks are indeed due for this hospitality for our books and the taking of a little thought at once transformed the room into a plessant and comfortable home for the library. We consider ourselves most fortunate to have had so convenient and accessible a place in which to spend the months of exile. The public has really been more inconvenienced than the staff.

To move a library from a building which ienced than the staff.

To move a library from a building which it had occupied for over fifty years and with the accumulations of half a century was osmall undertaking. Plans and preliminary work began at once and the staff put in many extremely busy weeks. It was due to careful planning as well as to the whole-hearted cooperation of everyone concerned that the actual moving on the first of July went smoothly, quickly, and with little confusion. About half the books were stored in a cooperation of everyone concerned that the vactual moving on the first of July went is smoothly, quickly, and with little confusion. In About half the books were stored in a froom built in the library basement. To choose those that could be t be spared regulared consideration, and we have needed some which were left. But our borrowers I have been uncritical when we could not supply their needs and have accepted cheer-fully our temporary limitations. Though the library moved early in July, the actual iclearance of the Memorial Hall was not completed until the middle of August, only shortly before the work of construction started. This delay, trying from some points of view, was none too long for the emptying of the attics, the storing of the framed photographs from the third floor, and for the general disposal of the building's contents.

A vacant store on Barnard street was fulfilzed as a temporary room for the boys and girls. Rough shelving, the old cork carpet I and several large pictures quite transformed the old fish-market. Interested friends contributed two big ferns, the draperies for the back windows, and the yellow curtains for the from tones. From the opening of the room the young people took complete possession with satisfaction and delighted proprietorship. Miss Agatha R. Wade, an Andover girl, and a former assistant in the library, who was graduated from Simmons College Library School in June, came to take charge of the work with the boys and girls, and is already in close touch with the schools and with the parents.

During November there was great interest in the State reading lists. Miss Wade visited the grade and parochial schools and the result was a gratifying cooperation of teachers and pupils. At times after school the young people's room has been so crowded that newcomers had to await a chance to enter.

With a separate room for the boys and girls the age limit has been abolished. Any child who can write his name may have a card, and books have been bought for those just beginning to read. Miss Wade has made a duplicate catalogue for the juvenile books and is teaching the younger children to use it. Special help is given them with their school topics.

Health Crusade at Its Height in Essex County

County

The Modern Health Crusade work of the Essex County Health Association is now at its height in the schools of the County. The Crusade is carried on through the Christmas Seal Sale money and consists of health education in the public and parochial schools. Nearly 25,000 children will be benefited this year by the Health Crusade which is carried on under the direction of Miss Cota L. Cooke, the Field Secretary of the Essex County Health Association with the assistance of Miss Anna W. Johnson, Educational Secretary of the Massachusetts Tuberculosis League. The children are trained to keep regular health habits in regard to food, sleep and cleanliness and receive interesting and inspiring talks about their own per onal health.

Yeste day the grade schools at Amesbury, West Newbury, Newbury and Salisbury were visited — Gloucester, Manchester, Marblehead, Swampscott and Saugus will be visited in the near future. It is planned to cover all of the schools in the County regularly during the remainder of the school season. The Crusade has proved the most beneficial of all health undertakings for the child. It is based on the theory of the knights of olden times thus proving a stimulus for the imagination of the children.

Gave His All

It was at a fashionable wedding. The bridgeroom had no visible means of support was his father, who was rich. When he are to the stage of the service where he had to repeat:

"With all my wordly goods, I thee endow!" is father said in a whisper that could be heard all over the church. "Heavens! There goes his bicycle!"

Record Year in Fish and Game Law Enforcement

Record Year in Fish and Game Law Enforcement

A marked increase in the prosecutions for violations of the fish and game laws is noted in a recent summary issued by Director William C. Adams of the State Division of Fisheries and Game covering the fiscal year of 1926.

A total of 1002 cases has been presented to the courts during 1926 and fines totalling $12,961 were assessed against these violators. This compares with 607 cases and $9,928 in fines for the year 1925.

This increase in prosecutions is the direct result of a policy announced by Director Adams earlier in the year that every effort would be made by him and his wardens to bring about a better observance of the fish and game laws.

As bearing on efficient law enforcement service, it is pointed out that only 58 cases were discharged. The Division is not trying to build up its record by prosecuting technical and trivial cases.

Much of the credit for this record is due to the splendid support that has been given by most of the judges throughout the commonwealth. It is regrettable, however, to have to state that in some districts the courts still fail to recognize the value to our people of the firm enforcement of the laws protecting our wild life.

The penalties provided for most violations are small in comparison to other states. The fail to recognize the value to our people of the firm enforcement of the laws protecting our wild life.

The penalties provided for most violations are small in comparison to other states. The greatest deterrent is the provision of law which automatically revokes the sporting or trapping license of any person convicted. He is barred from obtaining a new license for one year from the date of his conviction. A violator who operates without a license is similarly barred from obtaining a license for one year.

The force is made up of a Chief Warden, Deputy Chief Warden, and 31 wardens, assigned to inland districts which average more than 250 square miles in area. Last year 5 additional coastal wardens were added whose chief duty is to exclude the public from taking shellish from contaminated coastal areas.

Only 21 of the 31 inland wardens are equipped with automobiles and the operating expenses per month has been limited to $50 out of which the cost of operating the automobile must come.

The dangers of the wardens' work are not fully appreciated by the public. The men must operate in isolated regions and very largely alone. The service records contains many instances of wardens being assaulted with dangerous weapons and of other serious injuries received from year to year. On the inland force of 31 men there are 8 men who range in age from 60 to 69 years.

In spite of this rather appalling situation the outlook is not altogether disheartening, for experience has shown that the number of early cases to be cured can be markedly increased through knowledge on the part of the public of a few of the early signs of cancer, and a readiness to act upon this knowledge by immediate application for treatment in skilled hands.

With the direct purpose in view of informing the public of these early signs the Stite Department of Public Health has lanched a campaign for the control of cracer. Personal questions are always veloomed at the office of the Department at the State House. Reading matter, too, is available for distribution, and speakers are early to meet groups who may be interested to hear of the new work for the control of this sc ourge of modern times.

How Many Wrong Numbers?

Is Cancer Increasing?

There is good reason to believe that cancer is actually on the increase, according to the Advisory Committee on Cancer of the State Department of Public Health of which Dr. George H. Bigelow is chairman.

In Massachusetts cancer causes 1 death of every 7.3 over the age of 40. This means 1 in 9 among men and 1 in 6.3 women in this gag group. Furthermore, it is estimated that this rate is increasing by 2 per cent each year. While some of this increase is undoubtedly owing to better diagnosis on the part of physicians and improved methods of reporting, it is probable that about two-thirds of the increase is in actual prevalence of the disease.

In spite of this rather appalling situation the outlook is not altogether disheartening, for experience has shown that the number of early cases to be cured can be averaged.

Beautifying the Practical

Beautifying the Practical

Every so often I feel it my special mission in life to protest against the general ugliness of our common household appliances. Why on earth we should have a charming hearth-brush in the living room and a hideous yellow-handled red-labelled broom in the kitchen, I don't see. Why should the tea-cart in the dining room be lovely to look at and the ironing-board in the laundry be "as plain as an old maid's face," as the old saying was many years ago.

Recently I have been trying to educate some of the manufacturers of household tools, implements and furniture by writing to them and suggesting amusing decorative handles, gay coats of paint or enamel, and perhaps a bit of really good designing in the shape of the article itself. If they only knew it, women would buy their wares just twice as fast if they were beguiled by a delift blue dust-pan, an ironing-board with the legs painted sage green and buff, or a carpet sweeper of orange and black. A set of kitchen forks and dish mops with blue handles to match the blue-tiled linoleum would be irresistible to most housewives.

Well, they'll do it some day, and housewives.

Meanwhile, we

There is no place in the modern kitchen, gay with crisp curtains, pots of flowers on the sill, and rows of pretty plates on the wall, for the unadorned and ugly tools of common household service. If the makers will not beautify them, we must do it ourselves.

Old Rag Dolls More Durable Than Pretty

Durable Than Pretty
In many of the early New England homes rag dolls were treasured helf-tooms. They were of all sizes, and attred in all sorts of quaint costumes. The only points in common were that their faces were invariably flat, their hands stiff and rigid and their toes turned out in a "west-footed" manner. Sometimes they had black buttons for eyes, but more frequently their faces were painted with beet and fruit juices. However, their eyes, noses and mouths were sometimes embroidered. For hair they had toupees of yarn or hemp or small bunches of the full-skirted variety and they sometimes wore sunbonnets of the same material as their dresses. One doll of this type is said to have pleased the daughters of one New Hampshire family for more than eighty years, and is still in use. Of course it is a little worse for wear, but it may be made "new" again simply by recovering its face with a new piece of cloth.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Shields of Old Fighters
Hidde was the only material used for the plains; their neighbors of the Southwest, the Pueblos, made their shields of wicker. The indigenous animals which afforded hide of sufficient thickness were the elk and the buffalo. In the introduction of firearms might have been expected to render the raw-hide shield obsolete, but the protection afforded by it was probably from very early times conceived as magical in nature, and the shield long continued to be a part of the equipment of the mounted warrior armed with the musket or the rifle.
