MANUAL ARTS - DRAWING EXHIBIT

Work Done by Pupils of Public Schools Makes Interesting Exhibit - Prizes Awarded for Excellence in Sewing and Manual Training

Useful and pretty graments, furniture which would be an ornament to any home and delectable food, to say nothing of an exhibition of drawing and painting which tends toward the creation and appreciation of what is beautiful — all the work of pupil in the Andover public schools, filled Punchard hall and attracted hundreds of admiring parents and friends during yesterday after-toon and evening. Those who did not take divantage of the opportunity to inspect the lisplay yesterday will have another chance this afternoon and evening.

"MAIL-ORDER BRIDES"

An audience was what was chiefly lacking at the presentation of "Mail Order Brides" given in the Town hall last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Auxiliary to Andover Post 8, American Legion, less than one hundred fifty persons being present. The play was amusing and the cast showed the careful work of the coach, Mrs. Ashley Watson.

snowing the successive stages of paper cutting, coloring, and tearing in the lower grades, on through examples of arrangement, composition, design, illustration and mechanique in water-color work.

On the stage were three sand tables arranged by children in Grades I, II, and III of the Shawsheen and Jackson schools representing a Japanese village and two Dutch villages. Houses, windmills, cattle and tailip gardens were all the work of the children's fingers. Some interesting examples of soap modeling were the work of children in Grade VI.

The results of the interest and industry of the Arts and Crafts club of the Junior High school, under Miss Bernice Stimpson filled a long table. Glass candlesticks and boxes,

The son and daughter of an old friend arrive at the ranch for a visit and the lively cow punchers attempt to drive some sense into the affected youth with hands no gentler than they would use in roping a steer. The sister is disgusted with his vapid mannerisms, so disgusted that she even pretends he is not her brother and does not interfere with their horse play. A very competent maid arrives who seems to make a great hit with the young man of the house and finally the "mail-order brides" who all have an eye to the main chance.

Where at first there were not enough paper-cutters and thermoneters, tinted prints and leather work were included in the collection.

The work of English III of the High school attracted much favorable comment. STOLEN SILVER GOES UNCLAIMED

Romance and Tragedy of French Girl and Her German Husband.

New York.—Some time ago there appeared in the newspapers a little item telling of a set of silverware which, stolen by a German from the home of a villager in a small tow in the northern part of France during the Teuton invasion of 1914, had been returned to the village by the German with a sincere expression of contrition for his theft.

Not knowing the exact name or ad-for his theft.

Not knowing the exact name or address of the owner of the diverware he had forwarded it to the mayor of the little town, asking that executive to kindly locate the owner and see that the property was once again placed in his hands.

that the property was once again placed in his hands.

But—strange as it may seem—the mayor was unable to discover the real owner, although he made diligent search. And to this day the exact identity of the one to whom the silverware really belongs remains a mystery. At least officially it does. The mayor has his own beliefs and suppositions, and, as told to a New Yorker who was touring the northern section of France last summer and fall and has recently returned to New York, they make an interesting story. This New Yorker, Louis Aschenfelder, a well-known local singing teacher, studied music for many years abroad, mostly in France and Belgium, and knows both countries and the customs of their people well.

Sole Topic of Discussion.

Sole Topic of Discussion.

It was in September, just shortly after the purioined silverware had been received by the mayor of H——, that Mr. Aschenfelder arrived at that been received by the mayor of H—, that Mr. Aschenfelder arrived at that town. The place was naturally in a state of great excitement. The sole topic under discussion by the town's total population, which numbered only a few hundred, was the silver and the possible identity of its owner. Of course, the task of the mayor was complicated by the fact that, due to the heavy artillery warfare which obtained in that part of the country, almost throughout the whole period of the war, many houses had been reduced to mere plies of stone and mortar, unrecognizable even by their owners, who, returning after the cessation of hostilities, had taken only one look at their former dwelling places and then, unable to bear the thought of ever again seeing the ruins or even living in any sort of proximity to them, had hurriedly left for parts unknown.

And the mayor, according to the story he told Mr. Aschenfelder, has an inkling, or at least a premonition, as to the identity of the owners, but so far has said nothing, officially.

"In the period between the FrancoPrussian war and the outbreak of the world conflict in 1914," the mayor pointed out to Mr. Aschenfelder, "there were, as you know, a good many German students, lecturers, travelers and professors who toured this section of France.

"Most of these 'tourists' passed on after a brief sojourn in our midst, but here and there one would 'settle' down for periods varying in length from several months to several years, perhaps longer. We thought then they had only come because they enjoyed the camaraderie of the people here and the beauties of our scenery. Since then, however, we have found out that if they were interested in our hills and valleys from the stand-point of esthetic appreciation they were none the less interested in them as stamping grounds for future artillery operations and infinitry maneuers.

Painter "Battles" There

Painter "Settles" There.

Painter "Setties" There.

"One young lad, I remember, actually did 'settie' right near our villinge, buying a tiny farmhouse some distance up the road and installing himself as a 'painter' of landscapes. He certainly could paint.

"One day when he was sketching down near the river a girl from our own village came upon him. It appears he was sketching on her land and that, while she would not have minded this in one of her own countrymen, she resented it very strongly in him, because of the fact that the scourge of the Franco-Prussian war had been laid very heavily apon her family and she, in consequence, disliked all subjects of the country which had provoked the conflict. had provoked the conflict.
"Her own mother and father had died shortly after her birth. She was without other near relatives and practically alone in the world. The painter, however, refused to budge from her land.

"She appealed to the authorities and he was officially dispossessed. But only temporarily. Two days later he, was back again, canvas, easel palette, paints and all. Again she ordered him off, and when he would not go she tore up the picture he was painting. But this did not faze him, for a week had hardly elapsed before he was back in the same place. And now she began to grow suspicious.

"On her property was a splendid, high-browed hill with rich timber, and it was in this hill that the artist appeared to be interested. Of course, it went without saying that a battery of artillery enscorred on one side of this slope and camouflaged with the foliage overhead would have had a communding sweep of the entire countryside. And the young girl, whose mind had been filled with little else since childhood but stories of the war of 1870, and to whom, in consequence, every timbered lane and hillock seemed to conceal a battailon of Prussian Infantry or a battery of artillery, divined this peculiarly military fact herself and arrived at the conclusion that it was for this reason, and for this reason alone, that the young artist with the Teuton acceut was interested in the hill.

"And she guessed that if he was interested in that particular hill for such a reason, then there must be other points about the neighboring countryside in which he would be interested for the same reason. So she decided to change her attitude and to find out as much as she could about the young man and his activities. Accordingly, on the occasion of his third visit she appeared to be grudgingly willing to grant him permission to complete his painting, if only he would not bother her in the course of doing so and would get off the place as soon as he had finished.

"But, of course, as I said before, she was very pretty and, for some reason or another, always seemed to

"But, of course, as I said before, she was very pretty and, for some reason or another, always seemed to be pursuing some kind of duty which led her in the vicinity of the painter and his easel, and so it was not long before he had fallen head over helm in love with her.

"This, you may be sure, was a little more than she had expected. But, having once begun the game, there was nothing for her to do but to play it to the end.

They Were Married.

"And I do not think there is any doubt that in time she came, after a fashion, to return this affection. At any rate, in 1900 they were married.
"She had many friends in the town

"She had many friends in the town and he, likewise, during his stay in the vicinity had made a number of pleasant acquaintances, so they received, of course, a goodly complement of gifts. My father was mayor at the time and 1 remember accompanying him to the home and mixing with the people and seeing the presents.
"Some of the gifts were very costly. Some simple. All, however, were fine to look upon, but none more so than a set of silverware which, I thought, to be the most stunning set I had ever seen. Evidently the bride and groom did not share this opinion, for they had not given it any place of prominence in the display, simply permitting it to rest to one side in an unobtrusive fashion.
"The exact cut and style of the sil milting it to rest to one side in an anobirusive fashion.

"The exact cut and style of the silver I cannot recall today, for that was over twenty-seven years ago. One hing I do remember, however, and that is my father telling me that this articular gift had come from the ordegroom's folks in Germany and hat they had not marked it with his mine because, according to the story my father told me, they did not approve of his going away from the fatherland to live, and so considered in in a way, lost to them and dead or, at any rate, quite nameless.

"Of course, this made-sit look as though his visit here and his remaining in France was the outcome of some sort of quarrel.

"Ills wife, however, was not to be too easily fooled. My father used to say in the privacy of his family that he believed the young girl had mareled the painter merely because she nelieved that as his wife she might in the event of his actually being en gaged in any sort of 'spy' work, be able to render a decided service to her country and at the same time pay off some of the debts which she felt due from her to the empire across the fibline.

pay off some of the debts which she felt due from her to the empire across the Rhine.

"But as the years went on, my father used to tell us, the girl began to grow more and more perplexed. Try as she would she could not surprise her husband in a single en deavor to carry on any converse, secret or otherwise, with any agency in his native land. She began to wonder if perhaps her earlier conclusions had been too hastily and un fairly drawn.

"And then, just when all the evidence seemed to indicate that indeed they had been, she came upon him one night down by that fill near the river where she had first seen him.

one night down by that mill hear the river where she had first seen him There was a rather bright moon in the sky, and, as she approached within several feet of him before he became aware of her presence, she could see that he was making sketches or drawings of some kind on a pad.

A Surrentitions Sketch

A Surreptitious Sketch.

"Of course, when he turned and saw her he said it was only part of a picture he was sketching, but she tore the pad from his hands and found that it contained a "sketch not only of the hill but of the entire country-life for man, miles example." countryside for many miles around countryside for many miles around And in the 'sketch' this bill doninated the entire neighborhood, its advantage as an operating base for an artilitery battery being thus clearly indicated and emphasized. At the bottom of the pad were brief notations, figures which, as she divined set forth the estimated distances be tween this hill and other vilinges round about.

"With the indubitable confirmation of all her worst suspicions in her hands, she denounced him fiercely for his duplicity and treachery and said she would turn him over at once to the authorities.

"From the girl nerself, during the war, I learned something—a sort of sketchy outline of the whole story of her life with the palater—but as scanty and chaotic story it was, and one with huge gaps which I have filled in myself as best I could.

"It was, then, in the summer of 1914 that she discovered him in the moonlight with this carefully detailed map of the countryside.

"When he saw that indeed he could not deceive her as to the military character of the map, he told her she must keep it a secret and said that he had been conducting the sufvey not for the German government, as she suspected, but for the French government. Of course, she did not believe this and threatened to go at once and spread the alarm through believe this and threatened to go at once and spread the alarm through the village.

"He pleaded with her not to Jo this, pointing out that since it was generally feared the Germans were preparing for a war of some kind, it would be dangerous to let them know of the strategic position enjoyed by the hill in question. And if a row were raised about the matter he said this fact would be sure to be bruited far and wide.

"He finally succeeded in dissuading her from taking any immediate action. It was agreed that on the morows she would get in touch with the authorities and learn from them row she would get in touch with the authorities and tearn from them whether he was working for the French government or not. In the meantime she took possession of the map. But on the morrow he was gone and the map, which he had taken while she slept, was gone with him.

Then Came the War.

Then Came the War.

"And then the war broke out and before many months the German armies were swarming over our section of the country in huge masses. Finally, they concentrated their drive on a certain sector in which our village seemed to be the keypoint. For days the battle waged. The young girl, in danger of her life, crept up to the French positions to tell them of the strategic advantages of the hill on her property. And one of the young officers accompanied her to the young officers accompanied her to the hill and showed her a French battery ensconced there. The commanding officer of the battery was her husband.

"Of course, in view of this, the poor wife could not do enough to try and make up to the artist-soldier for her doubts and suspicions concerning him. Nor was there much time in that place or on that occasion. They agreed to meet later at a certain designated place if the line of battle did not shift too materially. And then they parted.

"During that same night the German gunpers found the exact range

"During that same night the German gunners found the exact range of the artillery on the hill and demolished it completely. Next day the French were driven out of the sector and the Prussians took it over.

"Two weeks later when the French with heavy reinforcements, launched a counter-attack and again conquered the sector, two German artillery officers were found dead beside two demolished German cannon on the hill on the French girl's property. And one of these officers was her husband.

"What happened to her after that nobody knows. But it is very likely that, if she is not dead, she fears to once again live among her country men; at any rate, in this section where she is so well known, in view of the treachery of her husband. "The set of silverware, of course, I believe to be that gift which came from the Fatherland unmarked, thus being served up as a sort of decay to fool any too vigilant observers. The house in which this strange pair lived was totally destroyed by shell-dire in the early stages of the war and the girl herself has not been seen by any one connected with the village since her disappearance following her discovery of her husband's body lying beside one of the German guns and clad in a German uniform."

China, which buys ten times as many American-made cignrettes as any other country, has reduced total exports of the United States 26 per centuring the first nine months of 1927. The United States Department of Commerce warns that American manufacturers should consider this situ ation as a factor in planning production programs, for any surplus must be absorbed at home.

During the period China purchased only 3,540,000,000,000 (tagrettes as compared with 5,380,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1920. The total exports searcely exceeded 5,500,000,000,000 cigarettes, yet production reached 73,660,000,000, an increase of 8.9 per cent.

The place kick was won by Bill Black, now of Beverly, but formerly resident in town and for several years fullback for the United at which time none excelled him in that position. Bob Jackson, another back who took up the position after Bill Black had gone to Beverly, and who won great favor with the spectators for his forceful but clean playing was second, while the third place went to Jimmie Low who is still going strong on the soccer field for Smith & Dove, of which team he is the backbone. Bill Black kicked 143 feet 10 inches. Bob Jackson 142 feet and Jimmy Low 120 feet.

The whippet races created much enthusiasm and the appearance of the fastest dog in the country, Coomassie owned by James Gilligan of Lawrence featured the event. The champion ran two heats against Nlygha owned by F. R. Eddington and won the first by a foot while the second was a dead heat. Coomassie allowed its rival a 5-yard handicap. The banquet in the evening was another success where previous practice in athletics gave no advantage to those who sat down to the splendid dinner served by Caterer Weigel. The toastmaster was Alexander Anderson, Sr., who handled his part in fine style. The singing was led by James Low while William Hyde presented the prizes won during the afternoon. The committee in charge was John Coleman, Edwin Anderson, Alexander Anderson Sr., Charles Fettes and William Hyde.

A concert was given and the program included vocal solos by David Lowe, James Watt, Harry Ross, Jim Lowe, Charles Hughes and Jack Munroe; violin solo, David Gentles; accordion solo, Robert Wetherspoon. A very artistic panel "In Memoriam" the work of Miss May D. The successful Field Day was reminiscent of the scores of such affairs held by the old Andover Cricket Club when it was one of the leaders in the state and of the annual Field Days of a little more than a decade ago. It is likely to become an annual event.

Utilizing the Beauty of Ancient Paneling

Paneling in Tudor days was a necessity, not a luxury, and there was continual activity in the building lines asys an article in Arts and Decoration Magazine. In many instances the changes and alterations are closely associated with the history of the family who were the owners of the building.

Ity who were the owners of the building.

At the time of Henry VII the interior of many of the famous houses throughout the land was much changed and there seemed a greater desire for smaller and more private rooms. The great hall usually contained the finest examples of wood carving, but in Elizabethan times the long gallery and smaller rooms succeeded it and the beauty of the paneling was frequently hidden by richly colored and magnificent tapestries.

Much of this fine work has withstood the wear and tear of centuries by pure accident, in many case being covered by thick coats of plaster which has seemed to an erstwhile owner more attractive than the somber wall covering. The clever antique dealer of today takes a portion from one house, a door from another and a wall from a third and, if cor-from one house, a door from anothe and a wall from a third and, if cor rect in period, puts them together to form a room that breathes the mel-lowness and charm of antiquity.

Badly Injured in Fall From Tree

Falling 35 feet from a tree on School street, David Speakeman, 21, of 215 Harvard avenue, Allston, sustained serious internal and head injuries shortly before noon Monday. He is now at the Lawrence General hospital where X-ray pictures have been taken of the injuries to his back and hip-His name is on the danger list.

Speakeman, working with two other men in the employ of a concern with head-quarters in Ohio, was trimming a tree on the property of George Endicott of 42 School street. He was working on a limb that was held fast to the main trunk by a cable. While crawing back to the trunk, he accidentally loosened the safety wire, plunging to the sidewalk below, with the heavy limb falling on top of him. Ropes and cables used in the cutting operations, dragged down telephone and telegraph wires as the young man's body shot through space to the ground. Motorists who plan to take a vacation tour, this summer, will be interested to know that The Automobile Club of America has just published the fourteenth edition of its annual road book, the 1928 Associated Tours Guide, which is now ready for distribution.

Bleeding badly from a head wound and sufering intense pain from internal injuries, the young man was picked up and rushed to the hospital in the Andover fire department ambulance. According to his companions, Speakeman was engaged in cutting the limb and was returning to a safe position when the weakened branch was released by the loosened cable, resulting in the fall.

The Alumni have come and gone carrying with them many pleasant memories of the occasion, yet one was heard to say with a sigh—it's all so new. When his friend reminded that we are living in a new world he said—yes! I know it, but I think! I will go home and hunt up my pictures of the old school. One could hear only exclamations of delight as old comrades met, exchanged confidences, "so long" and off for new discoveries. A distinguished alumnus—though they were all distinguished—from the west had told his hostess he must leave before the luncheon as he had an important engagement elsewhere. The hour arrived for the departure. He was missing. The genial host hunted all over the hill for him without success. In due time he arrived smilling. He had forgotten the engagement in the joy of meeting an old schoolmate and had been with him reveiling in the joys almost forgotten of other days. Then there was a very aged man who, breakfast not having been announced decided it was time to eat what was served without waiting for his hostess. Not seeing a napkin, he helped himself to a doille and went gaily on with his meal. A woman determined to be present when President Coolidge arrived at the Headmaster's, vaulted the low fence in front of the house and hiding in the shubbery accomplished her purpose. Two little girls in their anxiety to see him crowded too near the steps, were seen by the everwatchful policeman and driven back. The President saw them, rewarding them with a smile, for he has a smile as well as the first lady of the land. When the Star Spangled Banner was sung a man did not remove his hat. A young girl behind removed it for him, much to the satisfaction of the good American citizens who witnessed the deed.

Birds Public Benefactors

Birds Public Benefactors

Contrary to popular opinion, says the biological survey, various birds eat even the hairy types of caterpillars, like those of the tussock gypsy and brown tall moths, and the tent caterpillars. That bureau has found for ty-five specien of birds which feed extensively on the alfalfa weevil, while ty-five species of birds which feed extensively on the alfalfa weevil, while sixty-six attack the cotton boll-weevil. Orloles will pick weevils out of the squares or flower buds of the cotton while swallows feed on them when in flight and extending their range. Mallard ducks have been effectively used in ponds for mosquito control. Redeyed vireos seem to be attracted by fall webworms, while cutworms form a large part of the diet of starlings, crows and jackdaws. Blackbirds help to keep down the number of boll worms and many other pests. Sparrows and other birds have been observed to clean up infestations of termites. Birds should be regarded as an ever-present force that should be kept at a maximum efficiency by protective measures so that their service may be utilized whenever possible. annual road book, the 1928 Associated Tours

The Guide in its one hundred and twentyeight pages, contains a wealth of useful information for exactly planning where to go on your vacation trip and how to get there.
The Motor maps, mileages and itineraries shown in the Guide, covering the vast area of the United States east of the Mississippi and eastern Canada, as well as the more popular transcontinental and trans-Canadian routes, afford the motor vacationist a wide range of tourning fields from which to select.

In all, the Guide gives over one hundred

Cat Mourns Bird

Cats and birds, like dogs and cats, are rarely friends, but when such friendships are made they are very friendships are made they are very real.

Not long ago a black cat lost a jackdaw which had been its close companion for five years, and the bird's death seemed to make life not worth living for the cat. It refused to feed, and at last became so ill and weak that it was taken to the people's dispensary for sick animals at Bethnal Green.

No wonder the cat was fretting over its lose, for the jackdaw had been its daily playmate. The two had feed to gether and their friendly relations were so good that the jackdaw would often settle on the sleeping cat's back and both would doze in comfort.—Children's Newspaper, London.

No Worry for Animals

As far as we are aware, animals have no notion of time in the rense we have. The future means nothing to them, and for this they are much happier than we are. They live for the present moment only. They have no fears of what may happen to them in days to come—no fear, then, of death and no yearning after immortality. Nather do we suppose that they have any clear conception of the past, although undoubtedly they have unconscious memory. The formation of habits depends on this. But they don't consciously think over the happy days of youth gone by, nor brood over the sorrows of old age.—H. Munro Fox in the Forum.

Miss Jean Porter of Cleveland, Supervisor of the Andover Vacation School to be held mornings during July, was in town Sunday t evening, and after speaking briefly in the Christian Endeavor societies at the Free, f Baptist and South churches, met with the Council in charge of the School and some of a the prospective teachers at the Christ church parish house.

Among those who have volunteered their services for a week or longer are: Mrs. J. Albion Burtt, Mrs. Albert N. Wade, Miss Florence I. Abbott, Miss Viola Cashman, Miss Margaret Manning and Miss Evelyn Mayer. Full information about the School may be obtained from Mrs. C. Norman Bartlett, Secretary of the Council.

Some of the activities of a church school, supplementary to the religious education and worship, are described in the following story by a Cleveland reporter about the school which Miss Porter supervised last ysummer.

story by a Cleveland reporter about the school which Miss Porter supervised last summer.

Three giggles and a joyous laugh. Then three joyous laughs and a giggle. The reporter pushed open the paneled door and looked within.

Clustered about gay, painted tables were laughing groups of children in bright-colored garments, resembling nothing so much as so many bouquets of flowers.

From one of the bouquets a larger flower than the rest disentangled itself and came to greet him.

"What can I do for you?" asked Miss Jean Porter, who was in charge of the groups.

"What can I do for you?" asked Miss Jean Porter, who was in charge of the groups.

"I would like to enter your vacation church school," remarked the reporter, remembering the happy days of his own childhood, "but I suppose I am too old. What I really came for is to find out just what one does in vacation school."

"Yes, you are too old," she smiled, "but David here will tell you what we do."

David's last name proved to be Weaver. He was quite small and joyously bright. He and his particular boy friend, Tommy Aldrich, volunteered to furnish all the information anyone wanted.

It developed that they had just returned from a "picture walk," which apparently was a very delightful proceeding, and were now intent upon drawing a picture of David.

"You know," reminded Tommy, "the one that killed the big giant." Other kindergartners were illustrating other aspects of the world's first "battle of the century" as heavyweight tilts are now termed.

In an adjoining room, Miss Porter introduced the primary class. A score of eager youngsters, a shade larger than David and Tommy, were busy with scissors and colored paper and paste.

"This," explained little Elizabeth Kein, holding up a cutout picture of a rather large blue bird settling upon a rather truy tree, "is one of God's gifts to make us happy."

"Here's another one," urged Miriam Worth, exhibiting a rather impressionistic drawing of the sun and the stars in ensemble, so to speak.

Miss Ruth Homans, in charge of the primary children, explained that the project was in the nature of a pleasant lesson on the Creator's goodness in giving us the beauty of nature.

A larger room, next to the primary department, housed the juniors. Allan Homans and Dick Frost were bending over what promised to become in time, a radio set. Other youngsters were similarly engaged in building other sets.

A merry group of funior girls worked away with needles and scissors and tinted fabrics, making gay curtain holders.

"Well," asked Mrs. M. P. Dickens-Lewis, chairman of the Clev

BETTER HOMES DAY AT ESSEX AGGIE, JUNE 13

largaret Slattery to be the Speaker

The fifth annual Better Homes Day conducted by the women's section of the Extension Department will be held on Wednesday, June 13, at Essex Aggie. This is the day when Extension women from all parts of the county with their friends meet to set her results of the year's work done by the Extension Department. Last year over 700 women attended. The program will be full of interest to all homemakers from the demonstrations in the morning to the lecture women attended. The program will be full of interest to all homemakers from the demonstrations in the morning to the lecture in the afternoon by Margaret Slattery.

Twenty county women will conduct demonstrations that will illustrate features of work carried by the Extension Department. Some of the demonstrations will include salad making, use of machine attachments, chair caning, bandaging and suggestions for making more attractive kitchens.

In the morning a group of women from West Boxford will give a playlet called "Who'd a Believed It!" They will be assisted by 4-H Club members of the Morse School.

The lecture by Margaret Slattery will so no of the big features of the day. She speaks on "Sons of Women and Daughters of Men." Margaret Slattery needs no introduction to Essex County women as a writer and lecturer. She has many helpful suggestions for fathers and mothers who are trying to make true homes and to develop character in their children.

The program opens at 10:00 a.m., with a basket lunch from 12:00 to 1:15. Miss Slattery will lecture from 2:30 to 3:30.

Children will be cared for by students from the Homemaking Department.

English as She Is Written

English as She is written is a sorry mess. We say one thing, and generally write something else. There is no close correlation between the spoken and written word. Since our ancestors spoke before they ever thought of using the alphabet, it is hard to understand or account for the flagrant inconsistencies in spelling. As a result, we spend many years in school trying to learn how Webster says the words sought to be spelled and many of us go to our graves without ever learning. Of course words really ought not to be spelled that way anaway. The "right" way is frequently wrong; thousands of words in the dictionary are, from a common-sense point of view, misspelled.

The existence of a dictionary tends to standardize spelling. Not only are new words added to it, but old words are being changed. This change should make spelling more simple, and closer phonetically to the spoken word.

There is probably no other extensively used language where so much discrepancy exists. French is fairly phonetic. And so are German. Russian duty beside Combination 3, the big 1000 gallon pumper purchased this year. The old apparatus is a 750 gallon pump.

Combination 1, hose and chemical apparatus, purchased in 1912, the first piece of motor fire apparatus to be purchased in this section, was removed Monday afternoon from its place in the Central fire station where it has been ready for duty for the sast sixteen years and taken to Ballardvale.
It will replace Hose 1. Old "Jerry," the last

Swimming Beach Patronized Over Week-End

Pomp's pond was a busy spot Sunday. It is estimated that over 200 went in swimming there Sunday and 50 more Sunday night. Frank McBride, recently reappointed life guard at the pond, was there all day Sunday. The pond will not be officially opened until June 11. Mr. McBride will be busy all this week in making the necessary preparations.

Gordon Coutts, son of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Coutts of Elm street has been appointed assistant life guard at the public swimming beach at Pomp's pond for the coming season. He will start officially in his new duties Monday, June 18. The appointment was made Wednesday afternoon by Frank McBride, who was recently appointed life guard in charge, by the Pomp's pond committee with authority to appoint his own assistant. The annual baseball battle between Andover and Exeter will be held Saturday afternoon at Exeter. The Blue has not won a game from Exeter since 1924 and will be out to break its losing streak.

won a game from Exeter since 1924 and will be out to break its losing streak.

The series at the present time stands at 26 games for Andover and 20 for Exeter. The game Saturday will also decide the major sport championship of the schools for the year. Andover has won the track meet, while the football game ended in a tie.

Both schools have won but three games each so far this season. Andover had played in the games, while Exeter has played but eight. Although Andover has dropped six of their games they have outscored their opponents.

Saturday's game will be one of the most colorful in Prep school circles. Although there will be no championship title at stake the game will be the big event for the members of both schools. Many of the players will be bringing their Prep school careers to a close and they will be out to make a final grand showing. The game, with fair weather, should attract thousands of fans and students from the two schools.

Coach Gerald Woodruff of the Blue and Coach "Simmie" Murch of the Exeter team will understood the state of the schools.

The smile was much in evidence as they made their tour of the zoo. More than one animal provoked the child's laughter.

But when they got to the llon's cage the beast was carrying on so angrily that Mrs. Jones expected her nephew to be frightened. Up and down paced the tawny animal, shaking his head from side to side, swishing his tail against the iron bars of the cage. And suddenly he let out a bellowing roar that shook the building. The aunt was terrified.

"Nice kitty," gurgled Donald, his sunny smile breaking forth again.

CARRIES DEAD WIFE ON 30-MILE DRIVE

Frightened Mate Brings Body of Bride to Mother.

Body of Bride to Mother.

Ottawa, Ill.—With the body of his girl-bride on the automobile seat beside him a few evenings ago, Louis Groves of Scuth Ottawa, stunned with fear and grief, sped to the home of his parents at Granville, 30 miles away. Time and again as the car would swing around curves on the road that led through Peru and Spring Valley the body would roll off to the floor of the car. Without slackening the pace he would lift it back on the seat with his left hand, continuing to steer with his left hand, continuing to steer with his right.

Through the towns and villages through which he passed he narrowly missed running into pedestrians and vehicles, but he didn't even slow up. Only one thing was on his mind—to get to his mother as quickly as he could with his wife whom he was convinced had suffered some attack or stroke and was merely unconscious.

Townsfolk Suspicious.

Townsfolk Suspicious.

Townsfolk Suspicious.

Townsfolk Suspicious.

He didn't know his wife was dead and that for the next 24 hours the townspeople would hold suspicions that he might have been responsible for her death and that it would take an autopsy and a coroner's jury to free him of that suspicion.

Late in summer Groves, who formerly lived with his mother at Granwille, and Miss Julia Bell Hill of Seneca, Ill., were married and took up their residence at South Ottawa. where the groom was employed by a furniture firm. The bride, a beautiful young woman, had just passed her eighteenth birthday a week before the wedding. She was a June graduate of the high school in her home town. The few months the couple lived in their cozy apartments was a real honeymoon, according to the neighbors.

A few evenings age, Louis came.

A few evenings ago Louis came home from the store, ate supper with his wife, and then helped her with the dishes. He then went out to the ga rage to clean his car and was gone about twenty-five minutes.

rage to clean his car and was gone about twenty-five minutes.

When he returned to the house he found Mrs. Groves lying on the bed. He spoke to her and received no reply. Then he shook her gently and still there was no response. Her eyes were open but did not look at him. He became panic stricken. There was another family in the next apartment but his first thought and impulse was to go to his mother's home. He grabbed his overcoat and threw it about his wife and carried her to the car and was off for Granville.

It was nearly eight o'clock when he left South Ottawa and nine when he reached Granville. He was bewildered when he staggered into his mother's home, bearing his wife in his arms. He thought she was only unconscious as her body was still warm. His father immediately called a physician who pronounced her dead for more than an hour and a half.

The news of the woman's death quickly spread through Granville and many began to talk of suicide or murder. There was no sign of violence on her body, although her dress became solled when she slipped dewn to the floor of the car. No evidence of the car.

came solled when she slipped down to the floor of the car. No evidence of acids or poison, but the story of such a sudden and mysterior that caused the state's attorney: coroner to take action.

Decide on Autopsy.

An autopsy was decided upon and this was held next day. Groves was questioned closely by the state's attorney, but stuck to his story. The autopsy, however, cleared the young man of suspicion, as the surgeon who performed it decided the young wom an died from natural causes. All vital organs of the body were found normal except the thymus gland, which was enlarged to the size of an ordinary hand, and its action, called status jumphaticus, had pressed down on us lymphaticus, had pressed down on the heart until that organ ceased to

The coroner's Jury brought in a verdict according to the finding of the surgeon who performed the autopsy. The only doubt that was in their minds was why the husband did not call a Scuth Ottawa physician instead of making the mad 30-mile drive to Granville. His own actions, when questioned, convinced the members that the finding of his wife, as he thought, unconscious, was such a shock to him that he was unable to act normally.

Baboons May Be Bred for Domestic Servants

London,—In case anyone should want a baboon to ald in certain household duties, such as dusting, sweeping and other simple tasks, it sweeping and other simple tasks, it sweeping and other simple tasks, it would take only 20 years of scientific breeding to render the animal sufficiently intelligent for this purpose.

This is the theory of Prof. Frederick Alexander Lindemann, professor of experimental philosophy at Oxford, as quoted by the marquis of Donegal, writing in the Sunday News. Regarding world progress in the next 50 years, Professor Lindemann believes that science will make the greatest strides on the physical and biological, rather than on the mechanical, side.

HUDSON STRAITS FOUND ICE-FREE

Airmen Discover Outlet of Bay Blocked by Floes From North.

Toronto, Ont.—Unexpected condi-tions in Hudson straits, the outlet of Hudson bay to the Atlantic and there-fore of the new Hudson Bay railway trade with Europe, have been discov-ered by a Canadian government aerial survey party during the last three months.

months. Hitherto it has been claimed that Hitherto it has been claimed that the straits were not open for navigation for more than three months in the year. Some authorities placed the period at one month—late August and early September. Two months was generally accepted as about the limit. The most favorable estimates never placed the closing date for navigation later than mid-October. Yet October 15, 1927, in the straits, dawned fair and warm. Airmen climbed into their machines and soared out over the lonely Arctic waters. No ice was in sight. Not only were the straits free of it, but none could be discerned in the southern reaches of Fox channel. November came and still there were

November came and still there were no signs of ice. The weeks passed and late in November a patrol north-ward into Fox channel returned with ward into Fox channel returned with the information that an ice pan was slowly drifting southward. Not till the first week in December did it reach the straits. By December 10, the airman reported that a huge ice pan blocked the western entrance to the straits, stretching from Notting-ham island to the coast of Labrador.

Straits Never Freeze.

Straits Never Freeze.

It is believed the straits never freeze over. The current is too fast. However, each autumn, ice drifts down from Fox channel into the western end of the straits and through the straits, to the Atlantic. Green, tough Arctic ice, which the summer sun could not melt, but only reduce to great irregular chunks. Vast fields of this ice drift into the straits. ular chunks. Vast fledrift into the straits.

The straits, however, are from 50 to 100 miles in width and the range of to 100 miles in width and the range of vicion of a man on board ship does not exceed 12 miles. Hence the government has thought it possible that there might be open water in the straits the year around if a ship's captain knew where to find it.

That is a question yet to be determined. But whether an open chantel through the winter exists or not, the fact was established that this year the straits were free of ice until December 10.

The aerial survey party has established three bases, at Nottingham island at the Hudson buy end of the straits, at Wakeham buy midway through, and at Cape Burwell on the Atlantic. The distance from Nottingham island to Cape Burwell, that is, the length of the straits, is 450 miles.

The expedition left Sydney, N. S., July 15 last, arrived in the straits in September, had its bases established and was ready for flying October 15. It is in almost daily communication with Ottawa by low wave wireless. Since October 15 the straits have been under daily observation of these pilots, aloft in their cockpits. Air patrols have been carried out in three directions from each base—east, north and west, so that an area 100 miles wide and 1,000 miles long has been flown over almost every day.

The Hudson Bay railway, it is expected, will be complete by 1929. The Hudson straits aerial survey will remain at work until the spring of that year, by which time it will have compiled detailed information respecting conditions on Hudson straits that will facilitate the new stream of navigation expected to develop. Quite possibly a permanent air patrol will be maintained to reduce the hazards of this bottle neck. this bottle neck no statistical data available at present, would bear investigation. I refer to the effect which instalment accounts may be having upon open charge account. My observation leads to the belief that there are a very considerable number of people who are buying both on the charge account and on the instalment plan. The instalment account seems to be getting first consideration for payment and the open account is being let slide. To what extent this is prevalent is not definitely known, but I believe a survey of the situation would throw some light on the extrme slowness of open account collections at the present time.

Relation of Sales to Past Due Accounts

There is a direct ratio between the increasing number of past due accounts and diminishing sales volume. To some extent of course, both of these are the effects of general business conditions, and one may not necessarily be the cause of the other. In this period of intense competition, however, the salesman's temptation is to get the business regardless of the credit standing of the customer. The sales department should get the point of view of the credit department and the credit department should work in harmony with and not as distinct and often antagonistic units independent of each other. If salesmen were paid on collections rather than sales the business firms of this country would soon have a much more permanent and higher grade of credit customers. On the other hand, credit men by using indiscriminate methods can very easily alienate many of the firm's best customers. Both departments should work in close harmony. The costllest Christmas card ever made was prepared at the order of an Indian prince. Although the card measured only 12 by 10 inches, it involved six months' incessant work for the artist who produced it. Forty elephants were killed before tusks of exactly the right quality were obtained to yield the thin ivory card. On it four of the talented Indian artists reproduced 100 scenes from the life of Buddha. Around the edge of the masterplece, to form a frame for the pictures, 44 of the finest diamonds were set.

Penetrated Secret of Statue's Golden Head Hannibal Tosci, a wealthy Italian who died recently, is said to have ac-quired his wealth in a most romantic way.

Years and years ago there was erected on a highway near Naples a stone which bore this inscription in French: "On the first of May in every year at six o'clock in the morning I have a golden head." For many years persons flocked to the scene at the appointed hour for the purpose of witnessing some miracle, until finally, as nothing ever happened, they concluded it was a fraud and no attention was paid to it.

One morning in 1841, Tosci, then a lad, happened along and an idea occurred to him. So, on the succeeding May day he was on the spot at six o'clock in the morning and dug a hole at the point where the shadow of the head of the monument fell. Soon he discovered an old leather knapsack which was filled with gold amounting in value to 80,000 francs.

Old Belief a Myth

There is a popular belief that a dog is not permitted to cross large bridges such as the Brooklyn bridge, because of the vibration and consequent dan ger to the bridge that its regular and ger to the bridge that its regular and even tread would cause. Of course it is a myth, it is based on the same theory that one soldier walking over such a bridge in regular step would produce more vibration than a regiment of soldiers marching "rout step." For the reason when troops march over a bridge the officer gives the order "rout step." If all the men kept step on a long bridge the vibration would be considerable and might cause danger. But a cat or dog would have no appreciable effect on a large modern bridge.

State Open Tournament Disastrous to Leading Golfers—Record Number of No Cards Returned

COURSE BAFFLES GOLFERS

Out of a field of more than 80 starters in the two-day medal play open tournament last Friday and Saturday at the Andover Country club, none could break 80 and the best gross was won by Leo Mawn of Woburn, who missed a putt on the home green to gain the distinction of being the only one in the 70's. His 80 not only was the best, but it led by two shots over Charles Eaton of Winchester, the Phillips academy champion. Andover always has had the reputation of being a disciplinary course, but a record of only 14 cards turned in, out of so great a group of starters is one of the surprises of the season. Offhand it sounds as if there was no quality to the entry list, but it included golfers like "Chick" Grasse, Clark Hodder, Jinny Conroy, Eddie Murphy and Jinny Eaton, a group from which one naturally would expect one good medal.

The net went to W. A. Dermon of Marlboro with 88-17-71, while Walter M. Lamont of the Andover club, was second with 91-19-72. The chances are the prize-winners were surprised to learn of their good fortune because none expected to figure in the idistribution when he returned his card. Undoubtedly a number of others would have overcome the temptation to pick up over the last few holes had they expected the scores to be so high.

The low gross winner's card was:

Junior's Discovery

Walter, Junior, persisted in sucking his thumb. His mother had made small progress in breaking the habit, when his grandmother decided to take a hand.

One night, as she prepared him for bed, she surrepititiously annointed his thumb with a harmless, ill-tasting drug. She tucked him into bed and returned to the living room.

STORY OF SORCERY UPSETS PLACID LIFE OF NAPLES

Gossips Declare Mysterious Cure Was Used by Sexton to End

Rome.—The placid life of Naples has been upset for some time by a particularly grewsome case of sorcery which has just taken place at Monti-which has just taken place at Monti-celli, not far from Naples. In the little town of Monticelli, a woman named Annunziatta Scogna-niglio, had for a long time tried all means known to medical science to cure her niece, a little girl named Gazzolino, who was suffering from arthritism, and whose sufferings were intense.

"He's a bit of a sorcerer," the neigh-

"He's a bit of a sorcerer," the neighbors said, "but his secrets are exceptionally efficacious."

Fear of secrety was not sufficient to prevent Signora Scognamigilo from trying to end the sufferings of her niece Accompanied by her sister, she took the child to see the graveyard keeper. Tasti understood what was wanted immediately.

"Follow me," he said simply.

All three went into the cemetery with their guide, who took them to a bier where reposed the body of a child named Andreeti, who had just recently died.

Early English Coinage

A penny of gold, struck during the reign of Henry II, was England's first gold coin. Edward I followed with silver half-penniles and farthings, for the first time made round instead of square. Then, in succeeding reigns followed the gold florin and noble, the silver groat and half-groat. Edward IV added the gold angel and half-groat angel and in Henry VII's reign came the sovereign, double and half-sovereign and the testoon, or shilling, of silver.

PUNCHARD BEATS EXETER

Frails New Hampshire Team but Wins 6-5. Mahoney Starts Rally, Low Wins Game in Ninth Trailing 5 to 3 in the final inning, the Punchard high ball team batted its way to a 6 to 5 victory over its rivals from Exeter, N. H., last Saturday aftermoon, on Balmora Field. Coach Lovely's boys put up a great up-hill fight from beginning to end and although trailing by two runs and with two out in the last of the ninth they came together and by heady base-running scored a well-earned victory.
