The supper and entertainment given by the Ladies' Aid society and the R. P. C. Girls' club was a most successful affair. The supper was an unusual one and was enjoyed all the more because it was different. The program was a real fun-maker and merriment ruled from beginning to end.

Saturday is Junior High Field Day at Hathorne. A most interesting program for the day is planned. Should the weatherman refuse to smile, the exercises will be held indoors, there being plenty of room in the buildings available. Our County school is growing fast and each year's visit shows many improvements.

Andover Grange will entertain Billerica and Lowell Granges on Tuesday evening with State Officer Burton T. Mowry in attendance and Billerica officers in charge. Attend New England Bowling League Banquet

Messrs. Clifford Thompson, Charles Skea, John Sutcliffe, James Davidson and David Strachan attended the New England bowling league banquet which was held Tuesday evening at the Alabama farm at Westfield.

The Messrs. Thompson, Skea, Sutcliffe, Davidson and Strachan are members of the Andover bowling team of the New England league.

Henry Kalis' Band at Roseland Ballroom

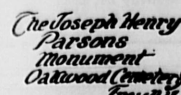

Henry Kalis' Lido Venice orchestra, unquestionably the most successful and popular radio broadcasting organization in New England, will make its first appearance at Roseland on the Merriamack this evening.

This great band, known to millions of WEEI and WNAC listeners and beloved by all, will play under the personal direction of Frankie Ward, whose name has for many years ranked at the top of the list among New England's great musical leaders and entertainers.

This is the band which has been the chief factor in the gigantic success of the Lido Venice night club of Boston and of Spanish Gables. It is a band which possesses everything that the dance enthusiast demands—pep, exceptional smoothness of performance and the ability to anticipate the wishes of its audience.

Next week, a holiday week, will bring four successive dance parties to Roseland. There will be check dancing on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings, while Mal Hallett will draw another capacity gathering on Friday evening, May 31.

And Roseland continues to draw the greatest ballroom crowds in the Merrimack Valley.

The Joseph Henry Parsons Monument erected in Oakwood Cemetery, Troy, New York, while copied from the St. Martin's Cross in Scotland, shows modern improvements in its design.

The cross is coming into use in this country and is without a doubt one of the most impressive monuments ever erected to commemorate the life of a loved one or friend. We will be pleased to discuss the monument problem over with you and will submit designs and prices.

PRESENT SITUATION OFFERS EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITIES FOR BOND PURCHASES

The Yield Obtainable on Short-Term Issues Contrasted with Long-Term Indicates Investors Anticipate Lower Interest Rates—Major Portion of Investment Capital Should Now Be in Bonds

Babson Park, Massachusetts, May 24, 1929. An old axiom among bond men is that when high-grade short-term bonds begin to sell on a higher yield basis (i.e. at a lower price) than high-grade long-term bonds, that fact usually foreshadows a period of lower interest rates. This does not mean that interest rates immediately reverse their upward trend. A period of months may be required before any decline is noted. It is, however, very interesting and probably significant that the best short-term bonds have now begun to yield considerably more than long-term bonds of similar grade. High-grade investment issues, either of early or distant maturities, are not now in general demand. The relatively better demand for long-term issues than short-term, however, indicates that the large investors, who are buying any bonds at all do not expect present high money rates to continue indefinitely. Hence, they are seeking to tie up strictly investment funds in the longer maturities in order to take full advantage of the present yields. In spite of the highly attractive yield on short-term issues of unquestioned security, they are not in demand. Investors feel that the situation is temporary, and that they may not be able to invest funds coming in from short-term maturities a year or two hence to the same advantage that they now can invest in the longer maturities. A striking example of this was brought to my attention recently. A large investment house offered for sale for one of its customers some four per cent bonds maturing in about six weeks. These are bonds of the largest and strongest public utility enterprise in the United States. They are as good as gold. Still the best bid that could be obtained was 99-1/2. In other words, no one would buy those absolutely safe bonds for six weeks maturity at a yield, for this brief period, which figures out approximately 11 per cent. On the other hand, good long-term bonds are being bought on a 4.80 to five per cent basis. Obviously, the expectation is for lower interest rates and higher bond prices in the future. Composite Investment Opinion Correct in the Past Whether this period of intense money strain and very high interest rates is to be temporary or of longer duration is of vital importance to the bond market, the stock market, and to business. If the present phenomenon of short-term notes yielding higher than long-term bonds means anything regarding the future of interest rates, it is worth careful study, because it reflects the composite opinion of large investors. As I have said, when in the past short-term yields have exceeded those of longer maturity, the occurrence has been followed by a period of declining interest rates and increasing bond prices. For illustration, in the critical money situation of June, 1920, interest rates on the four to six months commercial paper were around 7.95 per cent. Ten high-grade long-term bonds were yielding 4.97 and a list of short-term bonds of the same grade was yielding 7.18. Normally long-term yields are higher than short-term, but in that critical period, as in the present, the situation was reversed. Interest rates continued up for three months following this occurrence, reaching their peak of 8.25 per cent in the latter part of August, 1920. Then began a continued decline in rates to July, 1922, when a low point of 4.25 per cent was reached. During this time the yields of both long-term and short-term bonds declined, and their prices advanced. Short-term issues by 1922 were once more selling on a lower yield basis than the longer maturities—the normal relationship. In this case, clearly, the decline in interest rates was forecast by the rise in short-term bond yields above the yields of long-term bonds. Again in April, 1923, money rates reached a critical period. High-grade long-term bonds advanced to a 4.90 per cent basis. Short-term bonds, of one to three year maturities, began to exceed that yield, reaching approximately 5.40 per cent. In September, 1923, interest rates started downward and reached a low in September, 1924 of 3.40 per cent. Bond yields also declined, as prices advanced, and again the normal relationship was established under which long-term issues sold on a higher yield basis than short-term. In these two periods of 1920 and 1923, the crossing of short-term yields above the yields of long-term issues preceding a declining movement in interest rates by from three to six months. Proper Investment Policy Observation leads me to the conclusion that, in this changing area of business and Punchard 11—Johnson 0 Punchard High swamped Johnson High at Grogan's field, North Andover Wednesday afternoon 11 to 0. Misplays by the Johnson infield accounted for the greater part of the runs scored by Punchard, but few of them were earned. The bright spot of the game was the spectacular fielding of Howard Walker at second base for Punchard. This youngster was here, there and everywhere around his designated position, accounting for five put-outs and assists. He started his brilliant work in the first catching a low fly from Donald Neville's bat, a foul from Ralph Stork in the second, and a fly from Thomas Donlon in the seventh, besides assisting in other plays. Edwin Russell was on the mound for Punchard, and held the Johnson team to four hits in the eight innings play. Wilbur Lyons opened in the box for Johnson, but was accorded ragged support by his teammates. Punchard scored single runs in the first and in the third, but the Johnson infield blew up in the fifth, Punchard sending over eight runs. Coach Alvah G. Hayes made a radical sweep of the lineup for Johnson and the game continued in a more even tenor, but the damage inflicted was irreparable. Although Edward Curley, who replaced Lyons in the box in the sixth, was touched for five hits, but one run was scored that being in the sixth, with a brace of singles and a steal. The game was called at the end of the eighth by mutual agreement.
