FIVE-DAY FLIGHT WITH LINDBERGH

Dr. Alfred V. Kidder Tells of Thrilling Experiences in Search by Airplane of Evidences of Mayan Indians—Record Trip from Andover to Belize

"Some persons think that the age of romance ended with the days when knights in shining armor roamed the world, others believe it ceased with the passing of clipper ships but this is still the age of romance," said Dr. Claude M. Fuess, as he introduced Dr. Alfred V. Kidder to the large audience assembled in George Washington hall on Tuesday evening to hear how the archeologist was piloted in a five-day flight over Central America in search of the ruins of the ancient Mayan civilization.

With his usual facility Dr. Kidder made archeology a live and absorbing study and with the aid of many pictures, shared with his audience the thrill of flight over uncharted jungles. Pictures taken from the air furnished records of ruins indicated by white masonry rising above the tree tops or even wells of darker green showing a different variety of vegetation. Hours of fruitless flight where a mishap to the plane would have resulted in complications, probably without solution, were made tolerable by confidence in the resourcefulness of the pilot. In case it became necessary to parachute the plane against a tree, ropes were provided for the descent of the passengers as well as guns and ammunition for shooting game or protection from hostile natives. Fortunately none of this emergency equipment was needed. A small rubber boat furnished transportation of a sort, when the hydroplane landed upon the water, and radio kept the party in communication with the outside world. Dr. Kidder, who has traveled by air only once before taking off from Miami gave a lively description of his sensations as the plane was tipped to give the photographer a favorable shot, as it swooped toward the earth for a closer view, or the motors were stopped for a moment's conversation.

The facility with which the territory was surveyed from the air was a source of special satisfaction to Dr. Kidder, who has experienced the difficulty of travel through the country both by land and water. Native boats, donkeys, and paths cut by chicle gatherers, offer little encouragement to travel through a jungle inhabited by squawking birds, roaring monkeys, treacherous wild cats and annoying insects without number. In spite of these difficulties some ruins have been cleared, disclosing pyramids ornamented by gigantic human masks and supporting temples.

Dr. Kidder likened the problem of creating a history of the Mayan civilization from the available bits of civilization to putting together the pieces of a puzzle especially since the American Indian has left no written records. His progenitors crossed over from Asia at the end of the glacial period probably while communication by land existed, where now the continents are separated by Bering straits. From this point they eventually spread out over the entire American continent. In the course of thousands of years it was discovered that seeds of certain heavy-seeded grasses yielded a crop which could be stored from year to year thereby ensuring subsistence. Thus Indian corn laid the foundation of civilization about 3000 B.C. The height of the

Abbott Academy Commemorates Vergil

On the evening of Thursday, November 7, at 8:15 o'clock, in Davis Hall, R. Seymour Conway, Litt. D. (Cantab) professor of Latin and Indo-European philology and dean of the faculty of arts in the Victoria University of Manchester, England, will speak on Vergil. His lecture, "Vergil's School Days", will give an introduction to all of Vergil's works, of a kind which it is not easy to find elsewhere.

Nineteen thirty marks the two thousandth anniversary of the birth of Vergil, whom Tennyson has called the greatest poet of all the ages. Vergil's vivid word pictures, his fascinating stories, his familiar phrases, his deep knowledge of the joys and sorrows of mankind, make him dearly loved by those who read his poems, and a never-ending source of inspiration for the many writers who borrow so constantly from his works.

Dr. Conway was a lecturer in classics at Harvard University in 1927. He is the author of numerous publications on classical subjects, and his "Harvard Lectures on the Vergilian Age", published by the Harvard University Press, is dedicated to Clifford H. Moore, a Harvard professor, and trustee of Phillips Academy.

Friends of the school are invited to attend Dr. Conway's lecture.

History of House

The house was built in 1819 by Deacon Amos Blanchard on land bought the previous year. One parcel of land, bought from "the parish" containing one acre and 24 rods, cost $440, and another bought from Rev. Justin Edwards, containing 60 rods, cost $90, making the total expense of the land $530. Items of expense for the barn entered in a neat notebook by the precise hand of the new owner amount to $320, and those of the house to $3,250, including an item of $7.93 for thirteen gallons of New England rum.

Andover's original Blanchards settled in the vicinity of Haggitt's pond, then called Blanchard's pond. One Joshua Blanchard removed to Tilton where his son, Amos, was born in 1773. He came to Andover at the age of fourteen to make his home with his uncle John Blanchard who lived in the house then located on the north side of Salem street opposite the Training field but now removed to Hidden field and occupied by Scott T. Paradise. That house was sold in 1812. What he lived between that time and the building of the present house is an unsolved mystery.

He was married to Elizabeth Jenkins together with whom he united with the South church in 1802.

He was listed as moderator of the annual meeting of the parish in 1810, 1815, and 1817, as a member of Board of Trustees of the Ministerial fund in 1812 and 1847, treasurer of Ministerial fund 1812-1832 and 1844-1847, member of the "standing committee" of the church 1817-1825, deacon 1825-1845. He died August 17, 1847, aged 74 years, leaving the house to his widow, who in turn

SHUBERT THEATRE

Jack Donahue, America's most popular dancing comedian, will be presented by Bobby Connolly and Arthur Swanson in a new musical comedy entitled "Carry On," at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, commencing Monday, November 4th.

That famous French motion picture star, Lily Damita, by special arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn, in all her radiant blonde beauty and vivaciousness, will be Mr. Donahue's leading lady. This bit of news is bound to excite to the highest degree the curiosity of countless thousands, who not only have admired but adored Miss Damita in such motion picture masterpieces as "The Cock-Eyed World," "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "The Rescue." From all information she will prove a delight and ecstasy to the eye and ear.

The supporting cast of players will include William Frawley, Shirley Vernon, Milton Watson, David Hutcheson, Mary Horan, Richard Temple, Rene Davis, Gwendolyn Milne, Frances Markey, Isobel Zehner, the Albertina Kasch girls and a singing and dancing ensemble of 125.

The book of "Carry On" was written by Thompson and Jack Donahue; while the many songs and lyrics were written and composed by Arthur Swanson, J. Fred Coots and Benny Davis. Charles LeMaire, who undoubtedly is the most famous of theatrical costumers, has furnished striking and startling designs, while Joseph Urban, that master of all scenic designers, is responsible for the massive and unique settings. Bobby Connolly, co-producer, and who personally directed the staging of "Carry On" was largely responsible in the past as a stage director of the success of many Ziegfeld productions, "The New Moon," "Follow Thru," "The Desert Song," "Good News," and many others too numerous to mention.

We have learned on excellent authority that over $250,000 has been expended on "Carry On" in costumes, properties, and general scenic investiture.

WILBUR THEATRE

"Journey's End," which comes to the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, on Monday, Nov. 4th, was the dramatic advance agent of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in his mission, to consult the President of the United States on an agreement to limit the naval armament of nations in the hope of ending the horrors of war. The British premier was presented fully six months by "Journey's End"—the plain, blunt unpretentious play, written by an English soldier to recall to his surviving comrades the brotherly but bitter days they spent together in the British trenches before St. Quentin in March, 1918.

This powerful play, while not intended to be a preaching and containing no verbal moralizing, presents the most complete and convincing picture of the brutality—and futility of the old "arbitration of battle."

While the entire action is confined to a dugout on a comparatively small sector of that far-flung battle line, "Journey's End," gives a microscopic section of soldier life which, enlarged and multiplied envisions the war. The psychology of each of the ten characters differs in detail, and yet the composite picture of all from the enthusiastic young recruit, the pedagogic slave to duty, the frankly fleshy major, the cocky Cockney mess cook, the stolid old top-sergeant, the conscientious Colonel, the coward and the Captain who drinks deep to drown his own fears, and even the betrayed German prisoner captured in the fatal trench raid, spells "War is Hell."

"Journey's End" was first produced in this country late last season at the Miller New York theatre, where it is still running to capacity. Chicago started another company on another interminable run early in the Fall, while a Canadian company is making a comprehensive tour to the Coast and the company which will appear here was organized for Philadelphia, but took to the road instead, because of labor troubles in the Quaker City theatres.

From all these various staged and to audiences limited only by the capacity of the houses, "Journey's End" has delivered its unobtrusive but no less powerful and impressive sermon on the "pomp and circumstance" of war, illustrating how "the path of glory leads but to the grave" and declaring: "War's a game which, were their subjects wise, kings would not play at."

"Journey's End" is not propaganda or preaching, but a play—simple and powerful—written by an untrained playwright who knew his subject so thoroughly and felt his theme so deeply that he unconsciously triumphed over all but the cut-and-dried tricks of dramaturgy—producing unexpected results to himself and the little company of comrades which originally played it the outstanding dramatic success of the decade which has transpired since the World War—and witnessed the comparative failure of so many war plays.

Once in a century comes such a play as "Journey's End."

METROPOLITAN THEATRE

What has been termed by the Metropolitan theatre management as "the greatest collection of stage and screen entertainment ever presented in New England," has been gathered together to celebrate the Fourth Biennial Anniversary of the Metropolitan Theatre, which begins Thursday, October 31st.

"Sweetie", a farouchest, happiest, merriest musical comedy, called the "Good News" of the talking screen, will be the feature picture presented. It may be said parenthetically that no stage ever produced a more glorious musical comedy. Nancy Carroll, the head-bedecked fascinating star of "Illusion" and "Close Harmony" is cast as the adorable chorus girl who inherits a boy's school. She sings sweet—and looks sweeter! Jack Oakie, the "wise-cracking" happiness boy of "Fast Company" spreads joy with his grin and best-known "weakness" "loophole padlocks" all over the script as the wistful young "dumbell" who must have someone to love. Stanley Smith, a recent discovery of Lenore Ulric, who was trained by David Belasco, is cast in this picture as the boy friend who turned Nancy down in loyalty to his school's approaching football season. The show hits the road in a whirlwind, and dancing feet for months to come.

Rubino, whose personality and verve conducting, as well as his artistry with the violin, will be on the stage as master of ceremonies.

Barto & Mann, riotous comedians, and A. Robins, "A Walking Music Store," are featured in this stellar program. The Stone and Vernon foursome, sensational athletic dancers, have an entirely new act. Helen Yorke and Virginia Johnston, who have appeared as singing stars in their own right will be heard in a double singing offering, Virginia Fay, of the "ten twinkling toes," the Lee Brothers, a duo of comedy kings, as well as Stevens and West, known as the "human pianola," direct from radioland, will augment this all-star ensemble. The Six Scintillating Syncopators have their own and novel arrangements of today's most popular melodies, and in addition to their own specialties will be added to the stage play band. The Fred Evans Ensemble of sixteen American dancing beauties complete this great stage program.

Orchestra will conduct the Greater Orchestra in a novel arrangement of modern songs especially dedicated to this glorified program, called "Publiciana."

Sid Reinherz and George Harris, recent additions to the Metropolitan entertainment staff, as a team of pianists will entertain in the lobby of the theatre.

The week of November 7th brings Harold Lloyd, to the Metropolitan screen in his first talking laugh-riot, "Welcome Danger," a screamingly funny comedy masterpiece marks the return of Harold Lloyd to the screen after an absence of a year and a half. He is supported by Barbara Kent, who made a recent appearance with John Gilbert as the ingenue in "Flesh and the Devil."

REPERTORY THEATRE

"Julius Caesar" is continuing at The Repertory theatre for a third week as the ever growing demand for it has made it necessary. This play is the second of a series of Shakespearean revivals being given at this theatre under the direction of Henry Jowett. These plays, of the rarer acted pieces of Shakespeare, are receiving more than an enthusiastic response and are being acclaimed in all quarters. In these much talked of days of jazz and vulgarities the scenes of these productions can be taken as a direct answer to those critics who decry the fall of the drama and of culture, and the praises that arise are for the finish of the productions, for the Theatre in daring to supply this much needed field, presented by a trained company of Shakespearean artists, known on both sides of the Atlantic; for the fitting of these productions to the needs of a man of outstanding rank, both as a scholar and director. Every man, woman and child has heard, or declaimed, at some time or other the famous orations of this play, however when seen and heard upon the stage they take on a new significance and heretofore hidden beauties are brought out. The settings for this production follow the decorative style, which is being developed at the Repertory whereby Shakespeare can be given more fully, but still within the playing time we have grown accustomed to in the modern theatre. There are unusual effects as the reflection of burning Rome, after the mob is turned to nuttiness by Antony, also the Caesar illusion which closes the play; Caesar the dominant spirit moving throughout, victorious in the end, delivering the final benediction. The cast includes Howard Kyles as Caesar, Lark Taylor as Brutus, Curtis Rhea as Cassius, John B. Ryno as Casca, Allen Nourse as Antony, Cynthia Latham as Calpurnia, Cynthia Brooks as Portia, and the rest of the company filling up the large cast.

Abandon Stolen Car at Andover

A stolen Chrysler roadster, the property of Lester O'Neill of 88 Main street, Concord, N. H., was recovered early Sunday night by Andover police after two boys abandoned it having lost control of the car.

The roadster was stolen from Lowell street near Broadway between seven and eight o'clock Sunday night, and Lawrence police on being notified, broadcast its description to police of surrounding towns. A little later they were informed by the police of Andover that two boys had been seen to run from the car after it had crashed into a telephone pole on Lowell street. The car was but slightly damaged.

The Andover Brass band at the head of the Roosevelt Rough Riders led a procession to the line of march being Main to School to Locke, to Main. On entering the hall, the band played lively airs and the campaign club marched in and occupied seats at the right of the hall.

Among those who occupied positions on the platform were Postmaster Arthur Bliss, Frank E. Gleason, Charles L. White, Superintendent of Schools Corwin F. Palmer, J. H. Campion, Alonzo Lamont, Frank T. Punchard 0—Gloucester 21

Punchard High met its first defeat of the season Saturday afternoon at the Andover playstand, the Gloucester eleven winning 21 to 0. The visiting team displayed a superior passing and running offensive twice scoring on triple passes and the other on a line rush.

The Punchard players, though evidently saddened by the death of their captain, showed a fighting spirit throughout the contest which augurs well for future successes.

Punchard threatened in the second quarter, after Gloucester had scored its first touchdown. Simpson fumbled the kick-off by Enos on his own 27-yard line, but Cole recovered to run the ball back five yards. A lateral, Simpson to Gouck, sent the latter around the left end, and dodging the interference, ran for a gain of 54 yards, and unaided, headed for a touchdown, when he stumbled and fell on his own 14-yard line. Punchard failed to gain at this stage, however, losing the ball on downs.

Howard Walker and Harry Gouck starred for Punchard, but the former was lost to the team for the greater part of the first half, when he was knocked out following a gain of 18 yards on a deceptive pass from Gouck. He did not return to the game until the third period was underway, and Gloucester had scored its second touchdown. Punchard was considerably weakened with him out of the line-up.

Captain Paul Bohn of Gloucester featured for the visitors, his kicking being the high light of the game. He scored two points after touchdowns by perfect drop kicks, the ball sailing neatly between the uprights. He received the oval behind the Punchard line for the final touchdown in the fourth period on a triple pass from Dennis B. Davis, the ball landing on Punchard's 17-yard line at the start of the play. Gloucester opened the scoring in the second period on a triple pass, Dennis to Davis to Hagstrum, the latter being over Punchard's goal line, Dennis starting the oval from the 16-yard line.

Vitality of the Goose

It is remarkable the cases of vitality displayed by members of animal and bird life. No human could possibly endure some of the suffering experienced by Nature's inhabitants without losing life itself.

Among the many records that come to the attention of the National Headquarters of the Izaak Walton League of America is found an exceptional occurrence relative to the vitality of a Canadian goose. The following episode came to light many years ago and was enacted by a farmer named H. N. Clement, living near Lowell, Indiana.

This gentleman was gunning in the once famous waterfowl shooting grounds of the Kankakee marsh and came upon a flock of geese. He succeeded in bagging several nice birds, one of which astonished him by having as a breastpin an arrow nine inches long. That goose became the wonder of the neighborhood and the study of scientists, the only conclusion reached being that wherever the wild bird came from, there he got the arrow, so unique in formation that it could be assigned to no tribe of Indians in the United States or any other known country. Finally a member of the National Museum said the bird and arrow could have come from no other place on the globe than the Yukon Valley, for except that region no such arrows are made.

Science does not pretend to say how long the goose carried the arrow of a Yukon tribesman until it met its death from a shot fired by a civilized gunner down on an Indiana marsh. The bird disdained the weapon of a savage, but turned up its toes to the marksmanship of the Hoosier farmer years afterward, and thousands of miles from its summer home in the arctic desolation, as it was journeying southward.

Federal, State and private refuges reveal many interesting occurrences in the life of our bird family. The Izaak Walton League has been instrumental in establishing extensive refuges throughout the nation and its 3000 chapters have gathered much valuable data on bird life that has helped further the scientific conservation and propagation of migratory and upland game birds.

Several young friends of Garrett and Billie Burke attended a birthday party held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael A. Burke on North Main street in honor of Garrett's 12th and Billie's 5th birthdays. Games were played and refreshments were served. The home was prettily decorated with Halloween colors. They both received several birthday gifts.

HISTORICAL SERMON

"Hands Across to Methuen" Subject Chosen by Rev. F. R. Shipman, D.D., for Sermon on October 13th

To the angel of the church in Philadelphia write; I know thy works, behold, I have set before thee an open door.

Revelation 3: 7, 8. Eighteen years ago this week the South Church celebrated its 200th anniversary. Here the present October is out, another 200th anniversary will occur—the time for a church so closely akin to ours that it may well be called a niece if not a daughter, the First Church in Methuen.

The early settlements of Massachusetts did not proceed by way of the Boston and Maine and Boston and Albany railroads, as some might think. They developed by way of the harbors, the rivers and the ponds. Our Andover predecessors started from Newbury and worked up the Merrimack. By 1640 they had begun to settle at Haverhill on the left bank, and from the right bank had leaped to the first Andover around Lake Cochichewick. From those two standpoints they spread the Spicket River, the Merrimack, the left bank, and the Shawheen River. In 1708 the homes bordering the Shawheen were numerous enough to form the South Parish of Andover, and the western part of Haverhill followed suit thirteen years later, with this difference that it was made by the separation of the town of Methuen. Everything advanced with the growth of a tree, with the Merrimack as the main stem, and the towns on each side as the shooting branches. The homes of men were the fruit of the tree. But our ancestors desired each branch to bear one most precious specimen of its fruit, and that supreme and golden fruit was the church. Haverhill had long possessed its church, and Andover its North Parish church and from 1711 its South Parish church, when Methuen in the autumn of 1729 obtained a similar satisfaction. For several years the people had good practice in the quiet of their place, they succeeded in getting loose from Haverhill, and they had won the habit; and so, once by themselves, they quarreled as to what part of the bough they should locate their church upon. Three years had been spent in this wrangle before they finally settled upon Meeting-house Hill, which you may find if you go out Lawrence Street and Lawrence for quite a distance and then turn east up a long hill.

To look upon, this last piece of ecclesiastical fruit was not impressive,—at least, we should not think so. It was a plain wooden box, 40 feet by 35. It was without bell, organ or fire. It had bare rafters, and rain could drive in and snow sit in. There was one pew for the minister's family; everybody else sat on benches. Nevertheless to the ancestors of those people whose present building possesses Lafarge's costly and lovely masterpiece, clear and venerable to a few, may lose their usefulness to the many.

My last thought comes closer to this day's anniversary. Hands across to Methuen. But our hands as they stretch out to meet clasp at the city of Lawrence. Looking steadily and clearly at our changed community, we have to acknowledge that for certain purposes we are no longer a cluster of little independent towns but an inter-related district with Lawrence at the heart of it. Practically Methuen is now a part of Lawrence. Andover, two or three miles farther away, still maintains a much more separate life and individuality.

So much so that we rebel against being called a part of Greater Lawrence, and propositions made now and then for movements in union with Lawrence people are sure to fail. For instance, a proposal that our church young people's societies should merge with the Lawrence Christian Endeavor Union would meet a chilly reception. Lawrence would gain nothing and Andover would lose much. Whenever a union enterprise is such that we can effectively support it ourselves, it is useless to try to make us part of a Greater Lawrence organization.

But there are other union movements which are natural and fundamentally valuable and call for a recognition of duty to help. Let me give an example,—the Lawrence General Hospital. Methuen has no hospital, neither has Andover a hospital with free beds and free nursing. Both towns make large use of the Lawrence hospital. Hands across but only to meet in the middle. I believe that our church, like the Lawrence churches, should admit an obligation to the Lawrence hospital, struggling along in the midst of its far from affluent city and yet with annual expenses of $70,000. Should not the South Church of Lawrence contribute to the support of the hospital in its annual benevolence budget? I hope that next year we may do so. Of the four churches which came into our story of the morning, ours has flourished and attained strength to a far greater degree than any of the others, and that means—responsibility.

There is an old story of a Roman pope who was showing St. Thomas Aquinas through the Vatican treasury with its bags and piles of coin. "You see," he said, "the time has past when Peter can say, Silver and gold have I none." "Yes, holy father," responded the saint, "and the time is also past when Peter can say to the lame man, Arise and walk." I hope that we may say, more perhaps than we have said in the past, "Take of our silver and our gold, and then also some Andover or Methuen or Lawrence lame man may arise and walk."

PICK: "So your brother tried to get a government job. What is he doing now?" WICK: "Nothing. He got the job."

Convulsions." It survived the controversies of 100 years ago, and then became definitely a Unitarian church. But a later wrangle, as to whether it should be Unitarian or Universalist, weakened it so greatly that it afterwards died—I do not know just when. The First Church in Andover—now the North Andover Unitarian church—still lives. Most of us are familiar with its pleasant white building, gleaming through the trees at the head of North Andover Common. Geographically North Andover has grown away from it, and the present members—125—though forming a truly honorable body are fewer than the members of 200 years ago. The First Church in Methuen has also been ill-treated geographically. A prophet was not required to foresee that the growth of Methuen would be around the Spicket River; but the church lingered much too long upon its fine hill; and when it moved, it fixed upon another hill still a bit removed from the common life. When you have traversed the rather mean length of North Broadway to the trolley, and leave it, and walk up Pleasant Street, and come to the quiet little, tree-embowered square with the gray stone church in its centre, you may exclaim with pleasure. It seems as if you had stumbled upon a piece of England. But in England is not the best place for a Methuen church, for for 75 years the Methuen church has been growing very slowly, and its members still number less than 300; but the character of its membership gives it weight and influence. Our own church is also held by its building aside from the Methuen church, for for 75 years the Methuen church has been growing very slowly, and its members still number less than 300; but the character of its membership gives it weight and influence.

These stories suggest three thoughts. 1. And the first is that a church may die. Some of you have seen a human being die. It was a narrowing experience. You had not realized that the life of one like yourself could end here, and only cold clay be left. It is also tragic—an upsetting of all that seems right—to discover that a Christian church may die. It certainly may. A church does not bear a charmed life. The fault of its dissolution may not be its own, and leave it stranded and forlorn. Or, on the other hand, by some deep fault of its own it may prove worthless to the community which it is set to serve.

2. Our second thought is that a church, in order to live abundantly, must adjust itself to the changing community. I stand, no doubt, for the unchangeable fact of fellowship between God and man; but God asks His churches to be responsive to human needs, and the needs of a factory community may not be the same as those of a farming community, and certain church customs, though clear and venerable to a few, may lose their usefulness to the many.

3. My last thought comes closer to this day's anniversary. Hands across to Methuen. But our hands as they stretch out to meet clasp at the city of Lawrence. Looking steadily and clearly at our changed community, we have to acknowledge that for certain purposes we are no longer a cluster of little independent towns but an inter-related district with Lawrence at the heart of it. Practically Methuen is now a part of Lawrence. Andover, two or three miles farther away, still maintains a much more separate life and individuality.

There is an old story of a Roman pope who was showing St. Thomas Aquinas through the Vatican treasury with its bags and piles of coin. "You see," he said, "the time has past when Peter can say, Silver and gold have I none." "Yes, holy father," responded the saint, "and the time is also past when Peter can say to the lame man, Arise and walk." I hope that we may say, more perhaps than we have said in the past, "Take of our silver and our gold, and then also some Andover or Methuen or Lawrence lame man may arise and walk."

FLIGHT WITH LINDBERG

culture of the people living in the highlands of Central America was attained in 600 A.D. at which time they were the most cultivated people in the world. Colonel Lindbergh's attention was first attracted to the ruins when he was returning from South America. Reporting his observations in Washington he was eventually referred to Dr. Kidder. This spring he "dropped in" on the Phillips academy camp in New Mexico and took many valuable photographs of the Pecos country. The hydroplane in which the expedition to Central America was made early this month was provided by the Pan American Airways with the condition that Colonel Lindbergh act as pilot. A sudden change in the date of starting necessitated Dr. Kidder's leaving Andover within the hour after he received his notification. An automobile from Boston, express trains, and airplane from Miami enable him to reach Belize, in fifty hours and keep his appointment.

To Automobile Drivers, Good and Bad

This is not another of those editorials, endless in this state, commending the "new" and "drastic" motor regulations. It would be unfair to tax our readers' patience with another.

The rising number of deaths due to motor vehicles in Massachusetts has produced a state of hysteria in certain quarters. Hysteria may be defined as an emotion which poisons or paralyzes men's judgment. An example of this may be seen in the recent newspaper account of a nearby town which arrested and fined drivers charged with going thirty-one miles an hour. The officer and judge involved both deserve instant promotion for their good work in so preventing a horrible carnage.

The deplorable mortality has also brought forth a set of rules applying to all state highways. There is little that is new about these regulations except to thick-skulled drivers who do not know and who may never learn the elementary practices of good driving. All skillful operators have been practicing these rules regularly and the only difference for them is that their methods now become legal.

What may prove to be the only important innovation is to be found in Section 9 on obstructing traffic. The wording here is very vague and non-committal but if it is the intention of the state to eliminate the so-called road mope, this is the wisest rule of them all. For if there is any one factor which directly or indirectly is more the cause of accidents than any other, this is it.

Most of the cases of dangerous cutting out and passing, and not a little of the speeding, are caused by him. Let us suppose that 20 percent of the men and fifty percent of the women drivers obstruct the normal flow of traffic. Most of these people are distinctly inferior drivers; many should tear up their licenses of their own accord, and all should be either speeded up by the police or should have their operating rights revoked. What right have ten such drivers to hold up a hundred or more normally moving cars on our highways during "rush" hours and every week-end? This forced slowing down of cars which want to move along at a moderately fast rate is what makes the average driver, impatient at poking along like a snail, take chances in the line which at times prove disastrous, and drive faster than reasonable where they can in order to make up for lost time. To date the authorities have, stupidly enough, contented themselves with treating the symptoms of the disease. If, at last, they remove the cause, a great deal of the reckless driving will automatically be eliminated. Not everywhere have state officials been so slow in seeing the wisdom of this move.

In Connecticut the state police have been known to move all traffic that could go, at rates of speed well in the "forties." It is still doubtful, because of the overcautious wording of this regulation, whether this is the intention of the law, but let us hope that it is. If vigorously applied there is hope here not only of relieving unnecessary congestion on our roads, but of materially reducing the chances of careless driving and therefore of accidents caused by the unfair pace set by our all-too-numeric road mopes.

Although this recently adopted code, applying, it should be remembered, only to state highways, is admirable enough, if obvious, several other sections stimulate comment.

Section 1a says that vehicles shall drive to the right except on one-way streets but it does not make clear whether it is legal to drive to the left, or to pass on the right, on a one-way street. It is not an uncommon practice to do this and the point needs to be cleared up.

Section 1b reads, according to the

When overtaking another car out in the country operators must not warn the car being passed. This is not generally done and, although usually unnecessary if the car being passed is well over on its right, takes but little effort and may prevent accidents. If drivers continued in a direct line as provided in Section 7a, no warnings would be necessary.

One of the worst examples of stupidity to be seen on the road is the driver who pulls out into the middle of the street from a parked position alongside a curb, without looking back to see whether other cars are approaching in the same direction. Section 7a provides that a driver must ascertain whether his starting movements can be made in safety.

The official state hand and arm signals are badly chosen in 7c. The stopping signal is, according to the Boston Herald version, an extended arm with the index finger pointing left. Hitherto this has been the accepted signal for a left turn. Why point left unless one goes into the case of a right turn, thus indicating to those behind that they may pass.

It is difficult to understand why a right turn is not permitted when traffic lights are red. In New York City an operator may take any turn joining the nearest stream of traffic when the lights are against him. Boston traffic officers generally permit a right turn when traffic is normally moving in the opposite direction. Why should the State forbid this?

A beginner reports to an examiner who makes him start his car, drive around a block or two, possibly up a hill, frequently in light traffic, and if he makes no terrible blunders, is granted a license. Does this mean that he knows how to drive a car? At no time, no. The state should take the pains to apply more rigorous examinations if it wants judicious operators on its highways.

A driver has his license suspended or revoked for a serious infraction of the law. Since he is unlikely to be checked up what is to prevent him, possibly a dangerous driver, from continuing to operate? The State must see to it that unfit drivers don't take the wheel again.

Motor deaths are increasing throughout the country. In all probability they will continue to do so, and many of us are destined to be injured in an automobile accident. But there are ways and ways of dying or being hurt. Without joining that large chorus of citizens who are forever demanding that a law be passed to prohibit this and that, we believe that pointed radiator caps ought to be legislated out of existence. Without causing anyone inconvenience, this would prevent many pedestrians from having a spear-like ornament driven through their chests or backs. If we had our choice we would rather not be struck down by a machine sporting such an embellishment.

Although accidents are increasing, they are bound to decrease during the next few months for obvious and inescapable reasons. We worry about the state behind the present safety drive—well meant but limited in its scope as it now is—come forward in a little while to claim the applause of the populace for having saved a goodly number of lives? We shall wait with interest, and see.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. Burrows, of Wright street, North Reading, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Madelyn, to Kenneth Warren Livingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Livingston, of 3 Temple Place, Andover.

Officials for Punched—Exeter Game

Coach Eugene V. Lovely has announced the following officials for the game with Exeter high Andover played Saturday: W. F. Lane of Leominster, referee; James H. Murphy of Peabody, umpire; and C. D. Holden of Lowell, head linesman. The annual conflict will start at two o'clock.

Tuesday's session consisted of signal drill with the working of several new plays in preparation for the invasion of the New Hampshire schoolboys. Page filled in at a tackle berth in the absence of Lafayette Stickney. Practice lasted but three-quarters of an hour due to the Junior high having the use of the gridiron.

No changes are expected in the line-up that will start against Exeter on Saturday. Six of the boys to start will be playing for at least the second time in an Exeter game. Stickney, right tackle; Rondeau, left guard; Howe, right guard; Greene, left end; Walker, quarter back and Gouck, halfback, were all in last year's game. The team that starts is expected to be the same as that which lined up against Gloucester last week.

To Be Married in California

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Florence Buckingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hale Buckingham and Douglas Hull McLellan which will take place in the Congregational church, La Jolla, California, on Friday, November 15. Mr. McLellan was formerly manager of the Homestead Association in Shawsheen village.

The Red Cross in Andover

The 2403 members of the Red Cross in Andover, who will presently be again asked to enroll in its ranks, will be interested to read the annual report of the treasurer, C. Carleton Kimball. The goal of the Roll Call workers will be to exceed, if possible, the high water mark of 2475 members achieved in 1927. The Red Cross has been called "the great plus sign of civilization" and "the great plus sign of self in service for others." As was said at the recent Regional Conference at Phillips Academy, "it doesn't just talk about human needs, it goes out to meet them." Last year the Red Cross came to the assistance of the sufferers from 131 disasters, 14 of which were outside of the United States.

The King's Daughters and Sons to Hold Annual State Convention

November, to the loyal King's Daughters or Sons, means "Shift" Convention, just as truly and sincerely as November means Thanksgiving and turkey to every individual keenly alive. So a clarion call is sounded for each Circle to make all plans for attendance at the thirty-fifth Annual Convention to be held in the Church New Jerusalem on Bowdoin St., Boston, Mass. The dates to be recorded are November 6th and 7th. Besides the keynote—Service, In His Name—which always makes an special appeal, now is added the splendid program provided entirely by Junior Circles on Thursday evening, November 6th.

If there is any King's Daughter who has been hesitant on the sincerity which Juniors can bring to the Service rendered by King's Daughters, she should have felt the thrill from the ceremonies when two Junior Circles were presented at the Essex County Convention in Groveland, and when the pictures of daily life at Camp Wampatuck aroused the youth in each one present. At the State Convention each King's Daughter can receive that thrill along with the inspiration which comes from hearing of all the international activities as well as those of the state.

Mrs. Harry Thurlow, Treasurer of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons, Central Council Member, and president of The Rhode Island Branch will be the Convention Guest. Mr. and Mrs. Blair of Korea will be Convention Speakers—and altogether it will be the finest Convention ever held.

At the State Convention each King's Daughter can receive that thrill along.

To Remind You

The rummage sale which the Andover Guild is arranging will be held in the Guild house on Brook street tomorrow, Saturday, November 2nd, from nine to four thirty o'clock.

There will be special bargains in clothing, stoves, chairs, pictures and ornaments so that it will be worth anyone's time to step in and make an early selection.

Some kitchen ware in good condition is expected, for since household decoration has become a study, an unharmonious color scheme in the kitchens of some women has caused them to almost have blind staggers so the handles of all their kettles must be a baby blue or flaming yellow. Fortunately there are a few women left who can cheerfully stir the curried lamb in a grey kettle while the spinach steams in a blue. Yes, fashions have changed even in wire dish drainers. The housewife who disdain the lowly dish drainer should put it into the rummage sale together with her misfit kettle. But if she but knew it, a dish drainer, isn't always a dish drainer. In a certain hospital we have seen rows of dish drainers sitting on shelves, each containing a nice, new, pink baby wrapped up in a plump blanket.

So here is an article for anyone acquainted with a new arrival. Use first for the cherub, and then for the china.

A corporation efficiency man couldn't plan better. With the aid of a little imagination or some muscle or paint, one should be able to convert many of the Guild bargains into household treasures.

Remember this opportunity to help the Guild as well as yourself.

Mrs. W. D. Walker, Mrs. C. C. Kimball and Miss Kuhn are on the committee.

Founder of Mothers' Club Will Be Feted

The 30th anniversary of the Andover Mothers' club will be observed Wednesday afternoon, November six, at the Andover Guild. A reception will be given beginning at half past two, to the founder of the organization, Mrs. John Maurice Abernethy of England, who will be present and tell what women are doing in England. The guest of honor was formerly Miss Evelyn Reed of Andover.

An invitation is extended to all former members and friends to attend this meeting and renew acquaintance with the founder. Those planning to attend should notify the secretary, Mrs. Walter S. Downs of South Main street, Telephone 172-M.

Entertain at Halloween Party

Misses Betty and Agnes Deyerdmond, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Deyerdmond of High street, entertained a number of their friends at a Halloween party at their home Wednesday evening. Halloween games were played and refreshments were served.

Those present were: Ruby Laurie, Helen McDonald, Helen MacDonald, Frances McTernan, Dorothy Boyce, Betty Manning, Margaret Mitchell, Thelma Beck, Lucy Beck, Jeannette, Betty and Agnes Deyerdmond, Mrs. William Deyerdmond and Mrs. David Anderson.

A Tribute

FREDERICK H. LADD

By the death of Capt. Fred H. Ladd, Jr., of the Punched High school loses an outstanding athlete who was, according to Coach Eugene V. Lovely of the football team, one of the best tackles developed at the school in twenty years. Ladd was a backfield player on the Stowe Junior high football team in 1925 and won his letter at Punched in his freshman year. He was in the regular Punched line up all through his sophomore year, playing at right tackle and he played every minute of every game that year. Last season he played at right tackle on defense and in the backfield on offense. Throughout that season he again played every minute of every game in which he participated, but was unable to play at all in the Exeter and Amesbury high games, because of being quarantined with chicken pox. The present season he had played through every game without substitution till the contest with Howe high, when an entire second string eleven was sent in during a part of one period, on account of the weakness of the opposing team. It was in this game which was his last, that Ladd received a forwarding pass from mid-field and raced 25 yards for the last touchdown in a 39 to 0 contest.

Ladd was also a member of the track team at Punched and as a member of the relay team had participated in two victories over the Methuen high team on the indoor track in the Case Memorial cage at Phillips Academy. He had never been a candidate for the baseball team, but had shown batting and fielding ability in the few scrub games in which he had participated. He was an enthusiastic tennis player and was making rapid improvement in his game under the tutelage of his father. In all his athletic activities he gave great promise.

Coach Lovely says of Captain Ladd: "No boy that I have worked with gave me more comfort for reliability, earnestness and playing ability. He had developed into one of the best tackles Punched has had in a score of years. He showed himself to be a real captain, courageous, reliable and heady; his captaincy did not weaken his own game as is often the case even with college men."—The Evening Tribune.

Local Breeder Selects Trade Name for Purebred Holstein Herd

Harvey G. Turner, whose herd of purebred Holstein dairy cattle is well known in Andover, Massachusetts, has recently chosen a trade mark name to identify his herd, according to an announcement made by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America which registered the name for the breeder. The name chosen as a part of the name of each individual animal in the herd is, "Sheltered Brook."

All registered Holsteins have a name and number, the name usually indicating the ancestral blood lines.

This prefix trade mark will be used by the breeder as a further means of identifying individual animals by indicating the farm where the animal was bred. More than 7800 of these trade mark names are now in regular use by Holstein breeders.

Verses Read at Meeting of Woman's Union

At the opening meeting of the Woman's Union held September 26, at the South church the following verses were read by Miss Ada an amateur who conducted the devotional service and are reprinted here by request:

Trust in the Lord.
In His power and His might,
For He is our God
He doeth all things right.
He will never leave us,
He never will forsake us,
But ever be our guide
By day and by night.

Trust in the Lord.
In His mercy and His love,
His Spirit near us,
Will draw us above,
Away from the sorrow,
From the cares of tomorrow,
Into the vast
And boundless regions of His love.

He gives us all our blessings,
His gifts are very free
And though the path before us,
We cannot see
He'll take us by the hand,
And lead us through the land,
And never leave us
Through all eternity.

REV. E. VICTOR BIGELOW, D.D.

True greatness in any man is measured by his degree of responsiveness to the best—in literature, in art, in science, in architecture, in morality and religion and in human character.

And when, coupled with this responsiveness to the best, is the disposition and the power to awaken in others a like response, he then takes rank among the world's chief benefactors.

Just how one soul can transmute the soul of another and inspire that other to live a higher, fuller and cleaner life is a problem not yet solved; but the fact that it can and does do this is written large in our personal experience.

My own personal experience bears grateful witness to the help I have received from my long and intimate contact with the rich personality of Dr. Bigelow.

For fifteen years I sat under his preaching. Frequently have I accompanied him to various conventions and alumni gatherings, and there listened to his addresses, and on all of these occasions I have never ceased to be impressed with the profundity and lucidity of his thought. Behind his utterances, there was disclosed always some universal law, or fundamental principle on which his argument rested. He sought always to get at the pith of any debatable problem whether the problem was philosophical, scientific, social or religious. Hence his sermons and addresses were never tinged with the superficial nor did he ever resort to the employment of catchy phrases or mannerisms to win attention. Genuine emotion had her, it swathed his every utterance, but he never allowed his feelings to over-ride his reason, warp his judgment nor to becloud his chosen objective. He utilized the mind but never allowed it to drive him out of his chartered course.

So, from the intellectual side of the man as a scholar, a public speaker and a preacher, there passed into my life a fresh inspiration. But my chief obligation to Dr. Bigelow grows out of his spiritual qualities.

I am a better man today because of my intimate contact with him. Many a Sunday, borne on the wings of his prayer, I have been lifted to a clearer vision of the Christ and felt my soul reformed for life's stern battle.

Totally unlike Luther or Knox as he was, yet, as Carlyle says of them I can say of Dr. Bigelow: "He brought a light from heaven into the daily life of the people."

But more than from his public ministrations I have received stimulation and spiritual benefit from my frequent personal interviews with him. During these prolonged conversations, covering as they did various fields of enquiry, my mind has been quickened and my interest stimulated by a closeness in tussle with an intellect better trained than my own and with a soul more master of itself.

In the department of philosophy we were practically agreed, but in the department of theology a polar distance separated us. This divergence of belief prepared the soil for many a friendly debate, at the same time it disclosed to me new light on many an old path.

But the distinctive spiritual benefit I received from these interviews came from contact with a kindly and tolerant spirit.

At the school assembly this morning, the first this week, there was a unanimous request that I express to you the sympathy of the entire school for you and the rest of the family. Dr. Bigelow's long faithful service as a trustee and his never-failing interest in young people will always be gratefully remembered by those of us here who knew him. Personally I valued his advice and counsel in my work and I always felt a certain pride that so many of our Punched boys and girls grew up to be sincere and I think helpful members of his flock.

Very sincerely, NATHAN C. HAMBLEN

EDWIN VICTOR BIGELOW

The interest and anxiety, with which Andover people for twenty months have followed Dr. Bigelow's conflict with a mysterious malady, ended last Saturday afternoon when he died peacefully in the New England Baptist Hospital in Boston. For seventeen years he has been a famend and gargant figure in our town, and our streets are the poorer for the loss of his manly presence.

The Bigelow line in this country dates from early colonial times and eastern Connecticut. In the 18th century one branch of the family migrated to Nova Scotia. From there Isaac N. and his wife, Emeline D. Bigelow moved to Seattle, and there their second child, Edwin Victor, was born on June 9, 1846.

After passing through the public schools, he was graduated from the University of Washington in 1887. In his senior year he was an assistant instructor in mathematics. Three years later he finished the course of the Yale Divinity School. Somewhat later he received the degree of M.A. from Harvard, and still later the degree of D.D. from Taylor University, Upland, Indiana. A few years after leaving the theological seminary he became pastor of the Congregational Church in Cohasset, where he remained ten years. In 1895 he was married to Miss Carrie T. Hardwick of Quincy.

From his first charge Dr. Bigelow went to the Eliot Church in Lowell for a pastorate of eleven years. In Cohasset he had to recognize in boys' work, organizing the Cohasset Cadets. In Lowell he was quick to active the merits of the Boy Scout movement, and as a pioneer scoutmaster he was influential in drawing up the constitution of the national organization. He was a leader in the effort to have Lowell's liquor laws obeyed, and liquor politicians found this man was not afraid of them. In 1912 he came to the South church as acting pastor. A year later he became full pastor, resigning in September, 1928. He came to a church of 475 members, and left the membership 640. With his wife, he was the genial center of a quickened social life in the church, and the present structure of the church committees and methods of business bear repeated witness to his abilities as an organizer. Out of his accumulated experiences he kept up his special interest in work with boys. These abilities found other and wider fields, as well. For some years he was head of the Isles of Shoals Religious Conference, and he brought new vigor to that association. Four years ago he was elected chairman of the Visitors of Andover Theological Seminary. Although ill health led him to resign his delicate and important position a year ago, he worked on with plans for the school which may yet illustrate anew his skill in devising ways and means.

Dr. Bigelow was a man of much versatility, and he could have been successful in varied callings. He would have made a good business man or an excellent lawyer. Possessed of a keen, analytic mind, he liked the cut and thrust of argument, and he found as much pleasure in fashioning defences for what appeared the weaker side in debate as other men might find in golf. When in earnest, however, he was generally on the conservative side. This was so in his theology, and it was so in the social-economic questions which came to the front during his life as a minister. The college teaching which as a boy he had received in political economy was faithful to the idea that the highest wisdom lies in "a free field and no favors"; and such teaching was congenial to one who had a long line of self-reliant people behind him and who was himself well and vigorous, resourceful, and unafraid. All his instincts approved the religious thought and the economic competition in which America's pioneers, her independent farmers and her eager business men have alike been at home.

He will be most deeply remembered in Andover, however, for the beliefs which his regard to large matters. Rather, gratitude and affection will dwell upon his abounding energy, his stimulating buoyancy, his kindness, his ingenuity in cheering the lives of the sick and the old, his remembrance of the forgotten, his plainness, and his quick appreciativeness of others' deeds. Needless to say, young people rallied to him. There are only twelve hours in each day, but a number of those hours saw him framing some help for a frail parishioner.

Dr. Bigelow was a man of few recreations outside his work. He was often called away for church functions outside Andover, but these were hardly rested. Early in his Andover residence he hired a bit of ground in Holt District, where he threw himself into gardening with characteristic force for a few summers, but his main enjoyments were in the church activities, which he truly enjoyed, and in his home. No fellow townsman needs to be told that his married life and all his home life were rarely happy and the source to him of manifold rest and enlivening. With Mrs. Bigelow, three children survive him: Carita, Mrs. Donald Moore of Wellesley, and Hardwick and Stoddard of this town. There are also three grandchildren, Donald and Hardwick Moore, and Mary, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hardwick Bigelow.

MRS. CATHERINE S. CLARK

Mrs. Catherine S. Clark, widow of the late Justin E. Clark, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Fraser, 50 Library street, Revere. Until ten years ago Mrs. Clark had been a life-long resident of Andover.

She leaves to mourn her loss three daughters, Mrs. G. S. Trott of Andover, Mrs. Hugh Fraser of Revere, and Mrs. C. H. Burnham of Stamford, Conn.; one son, Edward Clark of Bridgewater; a sister, Miss Laura Spence of Andover; and six grandchildren.

Andover, and six grandchildren, Edith Burnham, and Dorothy, Howard, Robert, Allan and James Trott.

Funeral services were conducted at the late home at 1.30 o'clock by Rev. Ambrose Jenkins of the Revere Congregational church where for several years Mrs. Clark was a deaconess. During the services Miss Marion Jenkins sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Abide With Me."

The bearers were G. S. Trott, Robert L. Trott, Howard S. Trott, J. Edward Clark, Chester H. Burnham and Hugh Fraser. Interment was in the family lot in Spring Grove cemetery where services were conducted by Dr. F. A. Wilson.

The following poem written by an old Andover friend and neighbor expresses equally the high esteem in which Mrs. Clark was held by all those who were privileged to know her.

IN MEMORIAM Another link in friendship's chain Is broken, and we mourn, Another friend has journeyed O'er the dark and silent bourne. A well beloved neighbor she, And well beloved by me, Ah, fragrant are the memories That on the past attend. The many kindly deeds she wrought One cannot well forget. Hers was the warm and kindly heart That is more than a coronet. And the early life is closed To us forever more. Perchance we yet may meet again Upon the eternal shore.

MRS. ELIZABETH LAWSON SHATTUCK

Mrs. Elizabeth Lawson Shattuck, aged sixty-four years, widow of Dr. Charles Shattuck, formerly of Ballardvale, died last Friday morning. Mrs. Shattuck was born in Lawrence, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawson. After her marriage to Dr. Shattuck she went to live in Malden. She died at the home of Mrs. Nettie West, 15 Acorn street, Malden, after an illness of two years' duration.

Mrs. Shattuck is survived by two brothers, Walter S., of Brookline and Edward R. Lawson of Wells, Maine; one sister, Mrs. James Mansfield of Salem and a number of nieces and nephews, including John B. Lawson of Methuen, Edward R., and David R. Lawson of Andover.

Funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. West Sunday afternoon and burial was in Forest Vale cemetery, Malden.

MINNA ANNA SOEHRENS

On Thursday afternoon, October 31st, Miss Minna Anna Soehrens died in the house which had been her home through most of her life, 4 Whittier street.

Miss Soehrens was the older daughter of John H., and the late Catherine A. Soehrens. Born in Andover, she received her higher schooling in Punched and Abbot academy, and afterwards graduated from Cannon's Commercial college. After leaving this last school, she became secretary to Prof. Edward H. Williams in his library on Phillips street.

When he died in Andover, she went to the Merrimack Insurance company, and for the last eight years she had been bookkeeper for the Globe Technion company in Reading.

Minna Soehrens was possessed of an unusually clear mind, and of capacity to do quickly and accurately what she set her mind and hands to do. Although she was never strong of body, she had a tenacious will and made her body obey it. In the earlier years of her work Professor Williams realized that he had an uncommon helper, and her latest employers clung to her even when her ability to go to their office or to remain there throughout a whole day became doubtful.

"Seest thou one diligent in her business? She shall stand before kings." Miss Soehrens was a member of Christ church, but was otherwise little interested in organizations. At the end of her work, she went home. The sympathy of the community goes out to her father and her sister Ernestine as well as to her brother, John, who is now a resident of Wallingford, Connecticut.

Funeral services conducted by Rev. Charles W. Henry of Christ church and Rev. Frank R. Shipman of the South church will be held at the late home at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Interment will be in Spring Grove cemetery.

Classic Sarcophagus Subject for Farnum Memorial

A Memorial attracting unusual interest since its erection in Ridgewood cemetery, North Andover, is the tribute recently erected on the Farnum family lot. The Farnum tribute is a Classic Sarcophagus, a very solid and substantial type, considered by many the finest type of Memorial Architecture. In the interest of strength and durability it is composed of two pieces, a broad platform base, supporting a diestone of unusual expression. It is executed in a very fine grained granite, which responds pleasingly to the delicate lines and carvings worked on it. Its setting on the hill in the North Parish is an inspiring site, and perfect for this type of Memorial.

Gothic detail is everywhere evident, and admirers of this order will keenly admire and appreciate this subject. The pilasters on the front are crowned with Gothic arches, and Gothic border panels and frames the family name which is well cut in an Incised Roman Classic letter on the front; the back is devoted to the complete detailed family record. Altogether it is a good specimen of the Monument that will endure and is a product of John Meagher & Company Memorial Manufacturers, of Peabody, Mass.

Tree Warden Busy

Tree Warden Ralph Berry with his assistants have been busy in this town several days, trimming the trees and doing tree surgery on the public highways.

The tree near where the Old Tavern formerly stood, which is one of this town's landmarks, as well as trees on Center street and Marland road, have been put in good condition, the broken branches cut off and painted where the branches have been broken. Not only does this work prolong the life of the tree, but it ensures safety for pedestrians.

Congregationals Defeat Town Team

Saturday evening the Congregational volleyball team upheld their reputation by defeating the Ballardvale town team in two straight games, 21 to 6 and 21 to 16. The games were played in the Lawrence Y.M.C.A. with James Lowe of Andover as referee. In the first game, the church team made a clean sweep of the opposing team by winning by 15 points. Sol Walker and Harry Trout were in good form and Charles Partridge aided towards the well-earned victory. In the second game, the teams were more evenly matched.

Saturday night, the Congregationals will play a team composed of Y.M.C.A. boys at 7 p.m. The lineups: Congregationals—Rev. Herman Van Lunen, Sol Walker, Harry Trout, Charles Partridge and E. W. Grass Fires

Monday at one o'clock the local fire department was summoned by an alarm from Box 22 for a grass and brush fire in the neighborhood of the playstead between Andover and Woburn streets and before the local Andover departments had it under control it had burned over several acres of land in the rear of the residences along Woburn street.

At 4:35 p.m., the department was summoned by an alarm by Box 28, to Tewksbury street where the cab of the town tractor was on fire. This was undoubtedly caused by some oily waste which had become ignited. Little damage was done to the tractor.

Sunday the Wilmington fire department was summoned to a bad brush fire which destroyed a number of cords of wood as well as many young pine trees in the vicinity of the Upton farm near the Ballard Vale-Wilmington line.

Sunday the Tewksbury department kept busy and answered two alarms near the town limits.

Saturday afternoon about 5:45 o'clock the local fire department answered a still alarm among the grass and stumps in the vicinity of the piggery of Freeman Abbott on Dascomb road.

Shortly after their return from the scene the firemen were called to a bad grass fire near N. H. Harwood's on River street. It was necessary to lay a line of hose to combat the blaze.

Box 24 was sounded at 10:15 p.m. for a serious grass fire in the rear of the Good Templar hall and bowling alleys on River street. The reflection from the blaze lighted up the whole town and attracted a large number of people. The Andover fire department also responded. Chemicals were used to extinguish the fire.

At 1:45 a.m., Tuesday morning, the local fire department was summoned to a bad brush fire in the rear of the W. E. Curtis residence on Dascomb road. After extinguishing the blaze, the firemen discovered a second fire in another section, which was extinguished with shovels and chemicals. It took about two hours before the blaze was under control.

About four o'clock the department was again summoned to another fire located off Tewksbury street, near the "dry bridge." The fire had made considerable headway near the road that enters into the camp owned by Elmer Shattuck, when the department arrived, but nevertheless, it was soon under control.

It was stated that an auto passed the scene of the blaze shortly before the fires were discovered.

P. A. ATHLETICS

Andover 29; Huntington 0

Andover easily crushed Huntington school by a score of 29-0 on Brother's field last Saturday. Huntington fought hard and in the last few minutes advanced fifty yards down the field towards a touchdown, but the whistle found them still twenty yards from the line. Andover's second team replaced the varsity men in the second quarter and except for a few substitutions from the first string finished out the game, adding thirteen points to the sixteen scored in the first period by King and Wilson. Treat, of the seconds, showed great ability in the backfield and came to the fore more than once by long runs through a broken field and by spectacular receiving.

Coach Shepard is turning out a winning team this year, and the game with Exeter in Exeter's new stadium on November 9th should live up to the usual excellence of Andover-Exeter contests.

The shaft of the saw broke suddenly hitting Snyder in the arm and also injuring Robert Ross of Boston court in the leg.

Mr. Snyder is the proprietor of the Crystal ice company and Mr. Ross is employed at Phillips academy. At the time of the accident, the men were working for Harry Dyer of 55 Essex street. The injured men were attended by Dr. Philip Blake.

Enjoy This Protection It Goes with Every Bottle

You may have asked yourself "how can Hood's know just what every cow on every farm is producing in the way of quality milk?" It's a big job, nevertheless, we do know, and here's how we manage:

The advance guard in this system are the inspectors. Practical, trained milk experts who drive the roads from farm to farm keeping a watchful eye on everything that affects Hood's Milk. Next come the veterinarians, professional men graduates of the best schools. They look after the cows. Then the Hood laboratory where the milk from every farm is regularly submitted to the most searching scrutiny.

Bacteriologists examine it through powerful microscopes. Chemists weigh the total solids, check up the butter fat content, its purity and its cleanliness. If the first line and the second line have missed anything, here is a guard it cannot pass. The laboratory's "yes" or "no" is final. You may enjoy this protection, without cost, with every bottle of

ROGER W. BABSON WRITES OPTIMISTICALLY FOLLOWING STOCK MARKET CRASH

Explains Conditions Leading to Unloading of Common Stocks — Says a Good Word for Bonds which He Believes Are Coming into Fashion — Employment Is Good and Business Will Go on as Usual

Babson Park, Massachusetts, November 1, 1929. Business men are unnecessarily troubled about the stock market. There is no reason for holding up purchases of merchandise because the stock market has declined. The country is fundamentally sound and there is still a good volume of business. Plenty of money is available for legitimate needs. Employment is good and there is every reason that business should go on as usual.

Of course, a lot of money has changed hands during the past two weeks; but there is just as much money today in the country as there ever was. One person can't make a dollar in the stock market without another losing it, and one cannot lose without another making. Playing with the stock market is like playing poker with chips. There is always the same number of chips whoever wins. Hence, there is no fundamental reason why a break in the stock market should hurt legitimate business. On the other hand, the ultimate effects may be good for business because during the past few months too many business men and employees have been devoting time and thought and money to the stock market which they should have devoted to their legitimate business. Now that they have got their fingers burnt they will settle down again to earn an honest living.

What Makes Prices?

Stock market prices in Wall Street are determined by the same simple law that determined land prices in Florida. When there are more buyers than sellers prices go up, and when there are more sellers than buyers prices go down. The greater the percentage of buyers the more rapidly prices go up, and the greater the percentage of sellers the more rapidly prices go down.

What About Bonds?

So long as first mortgage bonds of companies can be bought to yield double what the common stocks of these companies yield, it is evident that bonds will now be more attractive than stocks to real investors and

But why do people buy and sell? What is the motive actuating purchases and sales in Wall Street stocks? The motive actuating trading in Wall Street stocks is exactly the same as the motive actuating trading in Florida land. A portion of the buying is purely speculative with the idea of selling at a profit, and a portion is for investment. Considering the very low yields of the stocks which have been sky-rocketing the past year, it is evident that about 90 per cent of these purchases were purely speculative. Then people kept buying so long as they could sell at a profit, but when they found they could not sell at a profit they stopped buying. This situation was reached the first of September. For two months there has been almost no speculative buying and gradually forced selling has been necessary and has increased.

These changed conditions have resulted in an entire reversal of sentiment, feelings, and styles in Wall Street. In April more people wanted to buy than to sell and we had increasing prices causing common stocks to be very popular. Today more people want to sell than to buy and we have seen crumbling prices, resulting in common stocks going out of style. Moreover, I believe that the speculative interest in the market is over for some time to come. The market should be dull for a while now with temporary rallies, but tending toward sagging prices until these prices get down to a level where the dividend yields will be attractive to bona-fide investors.

Householders Need Not Pay for Unordered Goods

Many residents of Andover have been greatly disturbed by the packages of unordered merchandise sent to them with directions to return one dollar (or more) or mail back the goods sent.

The practice complained of is one which has grown to such alarming proportions that Congress has before it a measure, known as the House of Representatives Bill No. 743, intended to give relief to those who have been pestered with unordered merchandise. It is hoped that this bill will be passed in such a form that it will do away entirely with this unfair method of selling.

Certainly the buyer has a right to select that which he wishes to buy. Certainly he cannot determine whether to receive a package through the mail when the contents of that package are unknown to him till he does receive it. Even if the postman lays it on his step, or leaves it in his mail box, that constitutes delivery under the rulings of the post office department and the present laws might hold him liable if he used the goods without paying, even though he did not order them.

But for a practical method of stopping this abuse, he need not wait until this proposed law is in force. He need not go to the trouble of wrapping up the goods for return, or affixing stamps for that purpose, even though those stamps are sent him with the unordered goods—which they seldom are. The supplying of a stamped addressed return package by the sender does not obligate the recipient of unordered merchandise to devote his time and effort for its return.

The National Better Business Bureau has secured legal opinions that so long as unordered goods are not used by the recipient, he need neither return them nor pay them. The most that can be asked, according to their advice, is that the recipient hold such unordered merchandise ready for return to a properly accredited representative of the sender when he calls. Further, only a reasonable length of time need be allowed, before the recipient might have a legitimate claim for storage on this unordered merchandise.

come back into style. There also are three other reasons why bonds should not now on gain in attractiveness. One is that money rates should tend to decline; a second is that the equities protecting these issues have become so much greater; and the third is that the purchasing power of the dollar should tend to increase. This latter is a very important matter in connection with bond prices because the bond buyer has a fixed rate of interest. When a man has a 6 per cent $1,000 bond he gets $60 a year, and the more that $60 will buy in food, clothing, and shelter, the more the bond is worth to him.

Readers have seen interviews with Professor Irving Fisher indicating that he believes we are not in a bear market and that common stocks will continue to be very popular. Professor Fisher is one of the greatest economists in the world today and a most useful and unselfish citizen. I love him very dearly. I know of no man connected with any of our colleges to whom America owes more than to Professor Fisher. The only reason that he has been wrong on the stock market is that he thinks the world is ruled by figures instead of feelings, or by theories instead of by styles. An economist might figure out that high shoes and long skirts are better for women in the Winter time than low shoes and tight skirts, but all the economists in the world could not make women change until the style changed. When the style changes, however, women will quickly change their wearing apparel. In the same way styles rule Wall Street. Common stocks may be as intrinsically good today as they were a year ago, but common stocks are now going out of style and bonds are coming into style to take their place.

Business by the Babsonchart is now 3 per cent above normal compared with 10 per cent above a year ago.

The second Boston Friendship tour, "Greek Religion and Social Life", to be held on Saturday, November 2, is of special interest to Andover women as the subject of the first missionary meeting of the Woman's Union of the South church has to do with the Greek people, both in their native country and in the United States.

Sixty-six persons participated in the first tour held on October 19, and under the able leadership of Rev. Herbert A. Jump of Newton and Walter B. Lounsbury enjoyed a comprehensive survey of Italian life in the West End. The trips for which a fee of only fifty cents is charged, are planned with the utmost care and intelligence. An idea of their interest may be obtained from the following schedule:

Attend League of Women Voters Meeting in Boston

Seventeen members of the Andover League of Women Voters attended the Fall Business Meeting of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters held in the State Suite of the Copley Plaza Hotel on Wednesday, October 30.

The morning session was devoted to discussion of legislative measures to be sponsored by the League during the coming year.

Howard Noble of the Massachusetts Anti-Steel Trap League made a plea for the abolition of steel traps for the capture of fur-bearing animals. Asserting that there is no incentive for the invention of humane traps as long as the old order stands, Mr. Noble asked the support of the League for this measure designed to protect the 65,000 animals trapped annually in Massachusetts from needless suffering.

Honorable Joseph E. Warner, Attorney General for Massachusetts explained what the repeal of the "Baby Volstead Act" would mean to Massachusetts. Should the Legislature repeal this act it would no longer be an offense to manufacture or transport liquor and we would be back to 1920 conditions.

Mrs. Louis C. Hunter, Chairman of Education reported a real interest in all communities over the proposed legislation to raise the school age requirements, and Mrs. Wenona Pinkham outlined the work to be done by the "Children's Code" Commission so that "all people in the state may be informed and interested in educational advancement."

Demonstrations of methods of work proved the most interesting as well as the most entertaining feature on the morning program. Mrs. George Sloucomb and others staged an impromptu and diverting interview with a legislator (Mrs. Barrows) in behalf of Jury Service. The usual arguments were advanced by the legislator and successfully combated by Mrs. Sloucomb and her colleagues. Former President Taft was quoted as ascribing the basis of crime to our Jury System. Since practically all professional men are exempt from service, the jury is not a cross section of society as intended, therefore the inclusion of women might restore the balance and give the state the type of service it needs.

Mrs. Roland Baker, assisted by Miss Amelia Shapleigh, Mrs. LaRue Brown, Mrs. Pinkham and Mrs. Levine demonstrated the organization of a study group. "Raising The School Age," was the subject of discussion, plans for education of parents were presented, laws regulating educational agencies school studying, and a general agreement reached that unless we want problem children to become juvenile delinquents they must not be turned over to industry until they have acquired through their hands the knowledge they cannot get through their heads.

During luncheon in the Sheraton Room, Alice S. Cheney, Ph.D., who has recently returned from the League of Nations Sessions at Geneva, spoke on "Woman's Work in the World Program."

At the afternoon session Mrs. Ralph Sparks, finance chairman, made a plea for more contributing members, reminding her audience that no such organization as the League of Women Voters can be self-sustaining. The Bulletin "As It Is" was presented by Mrs. Guy Stantial. Mrs. DeNormandie explained how the Bulletin might be "A Smaller Bulletin," and Mrs. Trueworthy White, desirous of maintaining the Bulletin in its present form, reminded the audience that "The Bulletin is the one thing we all share and it should be the most useful service the office gives to the individual members throughout the state."

The Andover members present were: Mrs. Horace Poynter, Mrs. Philip Ripley, Mrs. Amelia Shapleigh, Mrs. John Barsa, Miss Helen Chickering, Mrs. Henry Tyler, Mrs. G. Milton Friese, Mrs. W. Rodney Hill, Mrs. R. N. C. Barnes, Mrs. J. M. Birdsall, Mrs. Alexander Wadsworth, Mrs. James C. Sawyer, Mrs. McClain Reinhart, Mrs. Arthur Bliss, Jr., Mrs. Herbert Merrick, Mrs. Byron Hall, Mrs. Oswald Tower.

will be to their son Rev. Amos Blanchard who held a parish in Lowell from 1829 to about 1850. This was the father of Amos Blanchard, for many years treasurer of the Boston and Maine railroad who died at the Phillips Inn, more than twenty years ago.

In 1849 the house was sold to Deacon Edward Taylor, treasurer of Andover Theological Seminary. On the death of his housekeeper, Ann Woods, his father Jonathan Taylor with his wife, Harmony Brewster Taylor, came to live with him bringing their eight-year-old grandchild, Adelaide Taylor (later Mrs. Selah Merrill).

Deacon Taylor died in 1893 leaving the house to his niece, Mrs. Merrill. She with her husband, occupied the house in the intervals between the times when Mr. Merrill was consul in Jerusalem and South America. When they decided to make their home in California, the house was sold in 1907 to Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Robinson who were occupying it at that time.

Skids and Turns Turtle on Lowell Street

The treacherous bit of road on Lowell street near the corner of Lincoln was again the scene of a near-tragedy on Wednesday afternoon, shortly before six o'clock when a Chandler touring car driven by Miss Keirstead of 20 Demars street, Maynard, skidded, turned over and landed across the stone wall pinning the driver and her brother, Kenneth Keirstead, beneath it.

Nothing short of a miracle saved the occupants of the car from serious injury or death. When the young people were extricated from the car, the driver was found to have a black eye and her brother to have a cut over the ear and an injured thumb. Although the ambulance was summoned, its services were not necessary. The car was registered in the name of their father, Linwood L. Keirstead of 20 Demars street, Maynard.

The fire department had several calls Monday starting at 8.55 a.m. when Combination 3 of the Central station answered a still alarm to extinguish a brush and grass fire on the Peter D. Smith estate off Moraine street.

Box 4 was sounded at 11.35 for a grass and dump fire on Smith and Dove property near Abbott village center.

At 12.30 p.m. Combination 3 of the Central station and Combination 1 of the Ballardvale station answered a still alarm for a brush fire on the plains in Ballardvale. They both responded again when the same fire broke out a second time at 12.55 p.m. Box 22 sounded.

Box 68 was sounded at 12.30 p.m. for a brush fire in Carmel woods. Combination 3 responded.

Box 28 at the Ballardvale engine house was sounded at 4.35 p.m. when the tractor belonging to the board of public works caught fire. Combinations 1 from Ballardvale and 3 from the Central station responded.

Box 4 was sounded at 4.55 p.m. for a fire at Carmel woods reservation and Combination 3 responded.

The Reo truck of the Board of Public Works caught fire early Tuesday afternoon while being filled with gasoline at Shorten Brothers' station. Box 18 was sounded at 1.44 p.m. and Combinations 2 and 3 and Ladder 1 of the Central station responded. No serious damage resulted.

The department had two brush and grass fires later in the afternoon. Box 4 was sounded at 3.35 p.m. for a small grass fire near the railroad bridge at Tewksbury street, Ballardvale and again at 6.15 p.m. for a grass fire off Bannister road, Ballardvale. Abbot Academy Notes

On Saturday afternoon, October 26, Dr. Faith L. Meserve gave her second talk on hygiene.

Miss Bailey conducted the Sunday evening service in Davis Hall on October 27, and Mr. Howe gave a short organ recital after the service.

The school sang enthusiastic salutes to Miss Butterfield and Miss Putnam for the festive Hallowe'en dinner on Tuesday evening. The decorations in the dining room were most effective.

The preparations for Bradford Day go on apace. Play Day is a big undertaking, and the student organization under Cornelia Gould is helping Miss Carpenter in every way possible. The color teams have been chosen, dances and songs and games have been practiced, and if the weather will cooperate, Bradford Day should be most successful. In this connection, it may be well to reprint a paragraph out of which the most important part of one sentence was inadvertently omitted in last week's account of Play Days: "Simultaneously a girl learns a great deal about loyalty. She learns that loyalty to her own immediate group does not preclude loyalty to the wider group. She learns that she can still love best the school circle which she calls her own and at the same time can appreciate the attractiveness and value of another circle not so near and dear to her. She acquires a greater capacity for loyalty and a finer quality of life."

Bradford Day is Saturday, November 2. The guests will arrive in the morning, start in sports and singing, have luncheon, and depart in the afternoon, leaving behind them the annual contribution to the fine feeling that exists between the schools.

Miss Ann Wiggins will speak at the service on Sunday, November 3. Miss Wiggins is a friend who is welcomed almost every year to Abbot, when she brings the news of the Student Friendship movement.

The students will give a Hallowe'en party in Davis Hall on Tuesday evening, November 5.

Attention is called to the paragraph heading of the lecture by Professor Conway on November 7.
