PRESENT "POWDER AND PATCHES"

Tuesday Club Sponsors Unique Musical Entertainment Patron-ized by Large Audience — Proceeds to Be Used for Relief Work During Winter

A series of charming pictures with a delightful accompaniment of vocal and instrumental music left an impression that will often be recalled with pleasure by those who heard the program given by Miss Irma Watson, Howard Harrington and Mrs. Gertrude Pearce Page in the town hall last Tuesday evening. Accustomed as Andover audiences are to having the world's best in the way of music there is a special pleasure in hearing musicians who make Andover their home, and who have in their less than a year of ensemble work won favorable comment in a wider field. A transformation of the stage with hangings and lighting effects helped to contribute to an artistic performance.

From the moment the curtain parted on the picturesque couple who dramatically ang Old London folk songs the music of the program and songs of the Chinese to the final group of "Powder and Patches", the program was one of rhythm and color. Cost messwhich helped to give expression to the songs of many lands, and two dances one in "Chin Chin, Chinaman" and "Some Day" were a pleasant surprise. The young entertainers entered with an enthusiasm which was contagious into the presentation of the program. A careful attention to detail achieved a moothness of performance which left the audience free to enjoy the artistic effects. Miss Watson was heard for the first time in Andover and her rich contralto voice and pleasing personality at once won the audience free to enjoy the artistic effects. A "well-educated" person would scor a fellow-man who displayed ignorance of the latter beast, but more likely than quite unable to distinguish between a weasel an a ferret, or a junco and a chickade himself. The remedy for this faulty education lie primarily in the hands of parents. The fathe can, if he will, easily train his children thabits of reference in taking life both be example and instruction. aged in the public schools.

Freedom of the Fields

mer who treated hunters as intruders and trespassers was himself quite likely to be criticized.

The farmer of pioneer days whose lands were hunted over had no reason to interpret the "booming" of shotguns in his fields as so many signals that his property was being ruined and ransacked. He knew that the hunters neighbors were—friends of his—and his property would not be damaged and they could be trusted.

In some sections of this country—though extremely limited—these old conditions still exist; but in most sections a decided change of sentiment and of practice has been wrought. It was inevitable that this should eventually come. The number of hunters in the field has been multiplied by tens of thousands the past fifty years. They constitute an army of invasion. They are no longer one's neighbors. They come from distant towns, cities and States. The "booming" of shotguns, instead of being an incident of autumn days, is continuous for weeks and months. And when the modern farmer hears the reports, he may no longer recognize them as guns of his neighbors. He now recognizes then as guns of his neighbors. He now recognizes the "boom" as that from the gun of an entire stranger, devoid of the courtesy which should prompt him to make a polite request for pernission to shoot, and one who, having invaded the fields without so much as "with your leave," assumes to ahve a natural right to be there, and resents any interference or protest from the land owner as a manifestation of "superior authority."

There are two sides to most questions. This one of hunting privileges and trespass laws will never be settled by denouncing the farmer as unreasonable when he seeks by statute to control his own property and to forbid or permit entrance for shooting the farmer as unreasonable when he seeks by statute to control his own property and to forbid or permit entrance for shooting the farmer as unreasonable when he seeks have a natural to forbid or permit entrance for shooting the farmer as unreasonable when he seeks have a natural

Original Idea Leads to 30 Years of Forestry

A lumberman, who had been in the habit of slashing his white pine and moving on to the next piece, conceived the idea, about 30 Years ago, of growing his trees as a permanent crop. To-day he ranks as one of the authorities on growing this valuable timber, according to J. C. Kircher, regional forester of the United States Forest Service. He is O. M. Pratt of Holderness, N. H., who how has 1,800 acres of timber which he is managing for continuous production.

Thirty years ago technical forestry was in its infancy in America. But one day Mr. Pratt loked on the cut-over wreck of a forest and reasoned out a plan of logging. He would take out only the mature trees first, and come back later for other trees, which would grow more rapidly under his plan of culture than they had before.

Desiring the best counsel, he wrote to Washington a few years later and requested the new Federal Forest Service to send a man to look over his holdings. The Government Forester, after studying Mr. Pratt's methods for a day, acknowledged that the practical woodsman had already developed the best methods of timber culture for his white-pine holdings. Mr. Pratt has kept abreast of the foremost in forestry ever since.

At his little sawmill he recently showed Federal foresters how pruning converted the butt log from knotty lumber worth $20 per thousand to clear lumber worth $60. He has also found that his hardwoods mixed in with the pines yields a good profit when cut into Apple-barrel staves.

He has a stand of white pine about 40 years old, which he thinned some years ago. The trees are 8 to 12 inches in diameter. They have been prunes for 16 feet up, and clear butt logs are forming. In 20 years more a cutting can be made. In contrast, he shows a plot of the same age which had been left without thinning or pruning. The trees are badly crowded, only about one-half the size of the others, and it will be a great many years before they will make even knotty lumber.

The water float or elepsydra in Canton dates back some 500 years and has been destroyed and rebuilt many fills the lower vessel, rises and shows the time.

A French engineer has invented an electric dog that jumps, barks flercely, and even tries to bite when—theoretiand even tries to bite when—theoreti-cally—a burglar throws the light of a torch in its face. The invention works on the principle of electric cells which set up a current when a ray of light reaches them. This in turn starts the motor that makes the dog act like a real animal.

Miss Mary Bell of School was selected as "Miss Charming" at the weekly dane held in the Knights of Columbus hall last Friday evening under the auspices of St. Augustine's Dramatic club. Music for daning was provided by Billy Casey's Merrymakers. A new stage setting, painted and placed on the stage under the direction of James E. It makes a fine background for the orchestra and is a wortly addition to the many Mr. Flannery has painted in the past years for various shows. He is receiving much praise as a scene artist.

The oldest oratorio society in America will sing Handel's "Messiah" in Symphony hall, Boston on Sunday afternoon, December 21, at haif past three o'clock. The solosits will be Ruth Rogers, soprano, Abbie on Conley Rice, contralto, George Boynton, tenor, and Walter Kidder, bass.

The debt musicians in this country owe to the Handel and Haydu society is a heavy to mee. The orchestral version of Handel's "Messiah," used wherever the oratorio is sung, is the one the Society commissioned Robert Franza to write in 1876. Through the Society is publications, the great oratorios became known to a large part of the American music-loving public. The fame of the Society encouraged and gave impetus to the formation of music clubs and singing societies. And popular taste was powerfully influenced thereby.

No member of the society is paid for any service. The chorus practices from fifty to sixty hours for its series of concerts, to say nothing of the time devoted to study of parts at home. The society is not dependent upon public to know and be interested in what it is doing for music in Boston, that it may bring to its concert at the public to know and be interested in what it is doing for music in Boston, that it may bring to it, and that it may bring to its concert platforms famous singers that all music lovers are eager to hear.
