Vault Alarm Turns Out to Be False

The clanging for more than twenty minutes of the vault alarm outside the Andover National Bank shortly after one o'clock Tuesday morning was due to no attempt of burglars to break into the vaults, but to some slight defect in the delicate mechanism which operates it, so bank officials said. The piereing clang awoke several people in the neighborhood who poked their heads out to see what was the trouble. However, all that was visible was a police officer with one or two other people near the bank, apparently undisturbed. Finally the alarm ceased its racket. Tuesday afternoon a mechanic repaired the machinery. The vault alarm went off once before at about the same time at night, but it was due to accumulation of moisture in its mechanism.

Dorothy Jordon Richard Alren

Returning to my headquarters at Chaumont December 31, 1917, I was not surprised to receive the following cable from Secretary of War Baker, in view of the numerous suggestions that had come to me regarding various plans for training our troops with the French and British:

"Both English and French are pressing upon the President their desires to have your forces amalgamated with theirs by regiments and companies, and both express the belief in impending heavy drive by Germans somewhere along the lines of the western front. We do not desire loss of identity of our troops, but regard that as secondary to the meeting of any critical situation by the most helpful use possible of the troops at your command. The difficulty of course is to determine where the drive or drives of the enemy will take place; and in advance of some knowledge on that question any redistribution of your forces would be difficult.

"The President, however, desires you to have full authority to use the forces at your command as you deen"

A clemenceau's Reply, translated willing not such the cashe and in advance of some knowledge on that questions that had come to make the good reason exists for us to break up our divisions and scatter regiments for servicing scatter regiments for servicing the state for upon the guest for the guise of instruction."

It thus appeared quite clear that the French were so intent on their flant the Premier Clemenceau presument to cable Washington as to how our units were to be handled. Upon the receipt of the cable from Washington and myself I wrote at once to M. Clemenceau, quoting the cable and diling:

"May I not suggest to you, Mr. Presument to the meeting of any critical situation by the most helpful use possible of the troops at your command. The difficult, the inexpediency of communicating such matters to Washington by cable. These questions must all be defined. The president have the force and prevent and the president prevent and the prevent and prevent and prevent and prevent and prevent and prevent and you to have full authority to use the forces at your command as you deem wise in connection with the French and British commanders in chief. It is suggested for your consideration that possibly places might be selected for your forces nearer the junction of the British and French lines, which would enable you to throw strength in whichever direction seemed most necessary.

"This suggestion is not, however, necessary.

"This suggestion is not, however, pressed beyond whatever merit it has in your judgment, the President's sole purpose being to acquaint you with the representations made here and to authorize you to act with entire freedom to accomplish the main purposes in mind. It is hoped that complete unity and co-ordination of action can be secured in this matter by any conferences you may have with French and British commanders and line of action that may be agreed upon."

French Show Determination.

The following cable also was received from Washington, which showed the determination of the French to carry their point:

"The French ambassador called on the secretary of war today and read him a dispatch from M. Clemencau to the effect that General Pershing and General Petalin had conferred as to the wisdom of seasoning American troops by attaching their regimental units to the French division before committing a part of the line to an American division made up of troops not accustomed to actual front consense.

Apparently some misunderstanding has arisen which the secretary of war will be glad to have General Pershing endeavor to clear up by placing himself in communication with M. Clemenceau and reporting the result of the interview.

"The French urge action as outlined above as being safer for American troops than it would be to give them at once an independent place in the line, and urge very strongly that the secretary of war here accept their view and commend it to you. This the secretary of war is not willing to do, desiring to leave the matter wholly within your discretion after full consideration of the important elements of the matter."

such is not the case. . . ."

Clemenceau's Reply.

M. Clemenceau's reply, translated into English, follows:

"My Dear General: 1 hasten, without losing a moment, to reply to your letter dated January 5, 1918. I found myself in the position of cabling to the ambassador of France at Washington because the two contradictory responses which I had received from General Petain and from yourself.

However, at later meetings with Clemenceau and Petain the alleged differences were seemingly settled amicably, as indicated in my cable of January 14, which follows:

"For chief of staff: Have now definite understanding with French satisfactory to them and to me that our divisions now in France shall complete their training as already begun. In the future divisions arriving in zone of French armies are to have period of training with French, each regiment in a French division. When sufficiently experienced by training in a quiet sector with French our divisions are to be unfield under their away commander and will be placed in the line in our own sector."

Seek More Chapiains.

My diary notes the following:

Paris, Thursday, Jan. 10, 1918.

Have appointed Maj. Robert Bacon to be colonel and A. D. C. on my staff. Bishop Gwynne, deputy chapiain general, British army, and Bishop Brent were my guests at Chaumont on Monday.

On Tuesday Brent and I discussed increase in number of cussed increase in number of chaplains, which we both favor. Bishop Brent had been selected by Bishop Brent had been selected by me for appointment as chaplain with a view to his being the chief of the chaplain corps which it was planned to organize. The bishop did not approve of this idea and in deference to his opinion, and upon his suggestion, a permanent executive committee of chaplains was appointed to study the problems involved and make recommendations direct to me from time to time. Bishop Gwynne of the British forces explained their system, the methods of administration and the control and direction of chaplain's control and direction of chaplain's work, from which we adopted such features as were applicable to our service.

Custom in our army, arising from lack of appreciation of the usefulness of chaplains, had relegated them as a class to the status of handy men who were detailed to write up boards of survey or run libraries.

Aviation Problem. Serious.

Aviation questions demanded unremitting attention, for in no other service was unpreparedness so evident and so difficult to overcome. Apparently there was earnest effort at home, but it was too often misdirected.

Pershing Replies to Baker.

The following extract from my cable of January 8 conveys the main points of my reply:

". The French have not been entirely frank, as unofficial information indicates they really want to indicates they really want to incorporate our regiments into their divisions for such service in the trenches as they desire. As to our instruction, a certain amount of work with French troops is beneficial, and this we are having and expect to involved. In other words, the British a quiet sector with French our divisions are to be unit-al under their own commander and will be placed in the line in our own sector."

**CHAPTER XXVI**

The necessity for controlling the use of strong drink among our troops had been brought forcibly to my attention through the ease with which alcoholic beverages could be obtained. The use of light wines as a part of the French ration was simply the continuance in the army of the universal custom of the people of having wine with their meals. The wines and beer were not so objectionable, but strong alcoholic spirits were regarded by the French themselves as dangerous and were prohibited for their troops, but the prohibition was not well enforced outside the zone of the armies.

The problem of preventing our troops from drinking the stronger ilquors was difficult, especially at the ports of entry. Efforts to obtain enforcement through conferences with local authorities and through agreements with the port and district officials were made from time to time, but with little result.

I finally appealed to Prime Minister Clemenceau for support, but he would only counsel local officials, as he did not wish to declare a "state of slege" (martial law). In the end it was necessary to take the matter in our own hands and declare every bar and restaurant where the heavy liquor was soid as "off linits" for our troops. Our offeers were directed to give their personal attention to the enforcement of this order.

Vice in Army Denied.

About this time a cable was received from Washington that some publication at home had made a sweeping charge of both immorality and drunkenness against our men. No such statement could be based on fact. For our troops of the proposition of the p ourselves. Due to the nonshipment of air personnel from home we lacked 4,500 of reaching the number specified, and later the need for line troops prevented our completing the number.

British Wanted U. S. Men.

When General Robertson came for the conference regarding the shipment of troops for training with the British as mentioned in my diary, we began to discuss the details of the disposition to be made of our forces which might be brought over in British shipping. It was found that General Robertson's proposal was practically the same as the one submitted to E. M. House through Mr. Lloyd George. He wanted to bring our infantry and machine-gun units by bat tailons only, and pointed out how much more expeditiously this would meet the shoringe of men in the British army than to ship whole divisions with all their equipment and stores.

He believed that the British government would take the task of releasing temperarily some shipping engaged in energying food and raw mate rials if America could see her way to provide the men, although, he said, it could not well undertake the trans-portation of complete divisions as not enough men would be brought over in this manner to justify the great risks

About a mile north of West Point in a little vale now known as Washington's Valley General George Washington established his headquarters July 21, 1779. Here he lived until the following winter in a huge mansion known as Moore's House—a structure which had been built prior to 1749 by John Moore, romminent New York merchant. The house, because of its size and costliness was some times referred to as "Moore's Folly," a title by which it was designated in some of the literature of the day.

Despite these misfortunes, however, there were some bright spots for the Americans such as the brilliant exploit by which Wayne captured Stony Point and the equally daring attack on Paulus Hooks successfully carried out by young Major Lee. ## Andover Settlers Had Trouble with Indians

Had to Organize Foot Soldiers to Protect Lives and Property from Marauding Savages-Incidents of Attacks and Relations with the Indians

By John B. Osgood

When the settlers of Andover first came to this region they encountered large bands of Indians, who for the most part were friendly towards these strange white men. Although few records remain concerning these early days about Cochichewick, it is a well established records remain concerning these early days about Cochichewick, it is a well established records remain concerning these early days about Cochichewick, it is a well established restricted to the pioneers were not greatly troubled by the 'red men'. There is no doubt, however, that Andover's forefathers paid heavily for their friendly relations and that the tribesmen were greatly benefited by each transaction.

Bought from Indians

The town of Andover was bought from the Hodians, about 1642 or 1643, by John Woodbridge and Edmond Faulkner. Record has it that the sale was made by Cutshamache or Cutshamakin who acted as chief of the sachem, yet it is not known what special right he had to this property, or from whence he received his authority to make the sachem, see the sale was made, nevertheless, for six English pounds and a coat and the territory was acknowledged before the General Court in 1646.

The territory of Andover was well adapted to the needs of the Indians, being situated to the needs of the Indians, the same proper indians attacked his house in this town and killed both him and his wife. This act of vengence probably afforded the savages more proper to the proper indians attacked his house in this town and killed both him and his wife. This act of

A Word

By YVONNE RAMAUT

A most pleasing variation for the flavor of mayonnaise dressing can be obtained by mixing a little sweet pickle relish with it. You will find this mixture a good substitute for tarter sauce.

To remove a grass stain from an unwash-able material, sponge the stain with ether on the wrong side of the material, using a soft loth. Rub until the stain disappears. William B. Cheever attended the annual meeting of the Jury Club which was held at Salem Willows yesterday. Mr. Cheever is secretary of the organization.

The berry season has arrived. Do re-member that fresh berries keep better if they are carefully picked over and spread out on a shallow dish in the refrigerator.

Salt may be used to set any color—two cups to one gallon of water. The setting of the color, however, is not always permanent, so it is wise to set the color before each washing.

When making the gravy from your roast this week, try adding a little milk instead of water. You will find the flavor greatly improved.

And of course, with the berry season here our first thoughts are of berry pies. To prevent juice oozing out, cover the bottom layer of pie crust with creater crumbs.

Salt all meats after the surface has been seared and the meat partly cooked. Never salt before cooking. All green vegetables, with the exception of binach should be cooked with the lid off the

Use a wooden spoon for stirring preserves, and a stainless paring knife for preparing fruits, like quinces and peaches, for canning or preserving.

A bit of garlic rubbed around the salad bowl, or cooked with stewed chicken or meat—just enough to give a mere suggestion of flavor—makes for many people an acceptable improvement in flavor. Remove the garlic "clove" before serving the dish.

Tuesday is better than Monday for a wash day. A day is needed in most homes to straighten up the house after Sunday's reaxation, to look over the clothes, mend them when necessary to prevent larger tears, remove unusual stains, and put the white clothes to soak. Then an early start can be made on the work on Tuesday.

Combustion Blamed for Laundry Fire

Spontaneous combustion was believed by Andover fire officials to have been the cause of a fire which developed in a clothes washed on the street floor of the Shawsheen Laundry, Haverhill street, Shawsheen village, last Friday evening, July 17, about 10.15 o'clock. Silk material was thought to have become overheated and caused the blaze. A nearby resident noticed the smoke and notified Officer James Walker at the square, who sounded box 05 by telephoning. New England States.

New England States.

Invented by a New Englander, and perfected in New England eratorotores, a unique food percodes, including meats, are making their appearance only in New England Cities and towns.

Although Polar explorers for many years have known that extreme cold keeps perishable foods fresh-tasting and fresh-textured for months in a hard-frozen state, it remained for Clarence Birdseye, a Massachusetts scientist, to devise a process that would duplicate Are tier efrigeration conditions.

The secret of Nature's refrigeration method, he found, is the importance only in the secret of Nature's refrigeration of the quick-frozen foods processed six months previously were the same as in fresh unfrozen foods, a number of the new prodictions.

The secret of Nature's refrigeration method, he found, is the lating the freezes foods. He learned that 50-below-zero cold freezes foods so quickly that large ice crystals cannot provable to place the learned that 50-below-zero cold freezes foods so quickly that large ice crystals cannot provable to prove a least fight temperature does.

This fact of Nature is the basic principle of the Birdseye quick-freezing process, which was acquired about two years ago by a large food corporation. Radio's Noted Yankee

"UNCLE DAN'L DICKEY" as his radio admirers picture him. This sketch of Arthur Allen, who created the role of "Uncle Dan'l" in the Soconyland "Snow Village" series, shows the popular radio actor in his most famous role, It is an impressionistic linoleum block print by Lowell L. Balcom, noted New York artist, and shows the grizzled old New Englander as many radio listeners have come to know him—a hard bargainer, a lovable character who argues with "Aunt Hattie", his wife, and "Margie", his ward, but usually ends up by yielding to their wishes. His determination never to be bested in a trade with "Old Neville", his "Snow Village" rival, is well known to those who hear them fight it out in the weekly playlets.*
