Old Andover Club Passes into History

Ancient Organization Disbands and Veterans of Foreign Wars Take Over its Quarters in Musgrove Building

Engineers Study Scenic Highway Bill

The eyes of Frank S. Mills and J. C. Campion are twinkling with the thoughts of days gone by today—thoughts of Andover ten and more years ago, when the old Andover club, spoken of now with reverence and respect by a younger generation, of which these two men are the only surviving charter members, was in its glory. For they remember the days when that club was the social center of the town's life, when intellectual and social life in Andover sprang from its members.

And though they may lament the passing of this honorable organization from the town, the going of "those good old days", the good times, the gaiety and the atmosphere of their club, they feel satisfied that it passes into competent hands. The Veterans of Foreign Wars have come to stay and they have taken over the old Andover club quarters. The same billiard tables, the same soft comfortable chairs which speak of by-gone hours of joy and pleasure in the company of one's fellow townsmen are there, and, better still, all the Andover boys who are members of the veterans are sons of these men who helped to make the Andover club what it was.

So Mr. Campion and Mr. Mills will not feel badly over the passing of the Andover club, knowing into whose hands its rooms have fallen. Last Monday night attested to the truth of this when the veterans were given the keys to the clubrooms in the Musgrove building, and prepared to carry on old Andover traditions.

The Andover club was incorporated on December 9th, 1895. The charter, still hanging on the wall of the former club quarters, was granted by William M. Odlin, then secretary of Massachusetts. Reading over the names of the charter members is much like reading a Who's Who of Andover life in the early years of the present century. Frank E. Gleason, Frank S. Mills, J. Newton Cole, Albert S. Manning, George Harris, John N. (Continued on page 5, column 4)

Restraint of Dogs Law Expires Soon

The nineteenth day of the ninety-day restraint on dogs in Andover ends next Tuesday, September 29, and the law passes out of existence on Wednesday, September 30, it was announced by George H. Winslow, town clerk, today. The law, passed by the town of Andover in accordance with the suggestion of the State Department of Public Health as a measure to prevent the spread of rabies, specified that dogs be restrained for the period mentioned. After Tuesday, it will no longer be required to keep a dog penned in, on a leash, or in any other way restrained.

Historical Group Will Be Hosts

The Bay State Historical League will hold its autumn meeting at the home of the Andover Historical Society, 97 Main street, on Saturday afternoon, October 3, at 2 o'clock. The local society is a member of the league and its directors and members are cordially invited to be present. A word of welcome will be expressed by President John V. Holt, and a talk on historical Andover will be given by Mr. H. Paradise of Phillips Academy and a member of the local society.

There will be an opportunity to inspect the house and premises of the Andover Historical Society and other places of historical interest. Saturday, October 10, is the date set for the annual meeting of the Andover Historical Society, for which more complete details will be announced shortly.

Lions Welfare Group Reports Its Activities

Club Meets Last Night and Also Hears Address by State Utilities Official

Discussing international affairs and Americanism, William H. O'Brien, director of the telephone and telegraph division of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities addressed the Lions club meeting at the Square and Compass club last night.

Previous to his talk Thaxter Eaton reported on the activities of the Educational Committee and Dr. Nathaniel Stowers reported for the Child Welfare committee. He embodied the following suggestions in his report which have not yet been passed upon:

Report of Child Welfare Committee
President Henry and fellow Reporters:
Your Child Welfare committee met on September 17th to consider needs and outline tentative activities for the coming year. No regular conference of local welfare agencies was held, but information as to the needs of various organizations was obtained before hand, and we were well fortified with an abundance of suggestions which took several hours for Lions Jurne, Dannels, Gahan and Stowers to digest. Dr. Walker and Kirk Temple being unavoidably absent. After careful consideration your committee respectfully suggests the following activities, it being understood that each item is dependent on your vote and the Finance Committee's approval.

1. The committee wishes to commend the fine work of the Guild in supervising the summer playground activities and to remind you that an equally fine piece of welfare work is carried on indoors through the winter season. The matter of gymnastic apparatus which they needed last year has been provided for by various entertainers run by the Guild itself; but they are at present in need of a set of scales, a new felt covering for the billiard table, a piano, and several odd leathers to conduct a howling league or to carry on some kind of a craftwork class. Your committee hopes that some of you may know where a second hand piano or a leader may be found; and we recommend that the Lions club present the Guild with a suitable set of scales, the probable cost being about forty dollars.

2. The Boy Scout cabin which has been in process for some time is now almost completed. This cabin is wonderfully situated on the south side of Prospect Hill where it commands a marvelous view of the whole country between there and the Blue Hills, forty miles away. The committee in charge of building the cabin is about $100 in debt, and they still need miscellaneous hardware, dishes, and lumber for flooring. Certain parties have promised a piano, table, stove and sink; and your committee recommends that the Lions club supply material for the floor, which would cost about $40.

3. The subject of playgrounds and allied activities received considerable attention. The opening of additional playgrounds in Abbott village and Shawheen seemed impractical, since it is doubtful if proper leadership could be supplied at the present time. The suggestion of a wading pool at the central grounds likewise seemed impractical, for the same reason. The committee does however recommend that steps be taken (preferably by an article in the town warrant) to secure at least four tennis courts on the playground. These items all come under the supervision of the Board of Public Works and it may be that they have already considered them. We have not conferred with them as yet.

Board Calls in Experts on Water

As a result of a special meeting Tuesday night of the Board of Public Works, the engineers of Weston and Sampson, 14 Beacon street, Boston, have been hired to study the problems of sewage and water supply for the new school for feeble-minded proposed on a site in West Andover by the State Department of Mental Diseases. They will determine just what changes will have to be made in the present system supplying Andover, if any, for a school of such proportions, and will report their findings both to the town and the state.

Selectmen Act to Eradicate Whistle Signal

Send Letter to Utilities Commission Requesting They Reconsider Decision

A request that the Public Utilities Commission at the State House reconsider their previous decision which opposed the restriction of train whistling at the Essex street grade crossing in Andover, was sent to them yesterday by the Andover Board of Selectmen. It was understood that the commission would be willing to reconsider the matter should the town fathers ask, but it was also understood that the commission would not care to grant another hearing.

The decision of the group of men in the State House who have the power to say whether a train should or should not whistle at the grade crossing will be awaited by Andover people with great interest although no date is known when the commission will reply.

What Will Happen

If the commission revises its previous decision, it will mean that whistle signals at Essex street, doubly aggravating to the town since the new long signals were put into effect a month ago, will be restricted on locomotives except in case of emergency. If the commission maintains its previous opinion, the town will have to tolerate whistling unless drastic measures are taken by the townspeople.

The new whistling methods, which call for signals to begin a quarter of a mile away from the crossing and to continue until that is reached, have aroused the people of other communities besides Andover. Officials and residents of Concord, Acton, Littleton, Lincoln and Haverhill, no sooner had they heard the results of the citizens' descent upon the commission this week for a hearing and registered a strong protest against the noise. The speakers told the board that the cities and towns are "up in arms" over the "excessive whistling", which was inaugurated August 15. Demonstrating the public interest in the subject, one speaker declared that "It ranks with prohibition and the weather as a topic of conversation."

It was contended that the whistling prevents persons from sleeping, interrupts church services and school-room activities, prevents telephone conversation and is a "general source of annoyance to the people of the towns." Colonel Robert E. Goodwin, representing the Concord selectmen, told the

Punchard Expects to Win Opener

Team Primed for Victory over Manning Tomorrow—Line-up Announced

When the opening whistle blows tomorrow at Ipswich for the game between Punchard high school and Manning high, Coach E. V. Lovely and Assistant Coach William McDonald will send in a team, captained by Harry Gouck, which is expected not only to beat the Manning boys, but beat them decisively. This game will put the fighting edge on the Punchard high eleven, and today they are all primed after a light work-out to travel from home tomorrow and start the season off with a victory.

Those who claim to be "on the inside" are backing Punchard over Manning, mainly because Coaches Lovely and McDonald have developed since practice began a machine which is in excellent condition for this stage of the season. Only two accidents are reported: Francis McCarthy, second team left halfback, hurt his hip scrimmaging this week, and his berth has been filled by Johnny Twigg, Roger Whitcomb, second team fullback, is suffering from trouble with an ankle, which he broke four years ago and which, apparently, has not properly healed.

This, however, still leaves the first team intact and enough reserve material to defeat Manning. Manning groveled in the dust last week before Haverhill high in the opening game of the season, the score being 26-0, but that is no indication of Manning's strength because Haverhill is way above.

The coaches drilled their boys rather strenuously this year in team work and signal practice, and they have announced that in the game Saturday, the boys will use the huddle system. They also announced that Howe high

Two Local Schools Face Difficulties As Enrollments Increase

Punchard High and Stowe Junior High Find Selves Unable to Carry On at Maximum Efficiency Under Present Conditions

Serious problems because of lack of facilities face Punchard high school and the Stowe junior high school this year and an attempt to partially alleviate them will be made at the next meeting of the Andover school committee, the first of next month.

Both schools are finding it difficult this year to handle their student bodies, not because every seat in them are taken, but because the number of rooms are not sufficient, teachers are overburdened with work, and rooms which never before have been used and ordinarily would not be used but for special purposes, have had to be remodelled and made into classrooms.

At Odds with Standards

That the situation is acute is indicated by the reconstruction of two basement cloak quarters at Punchard, where plasterwork work intermittently between classes and where sunlight seldom penetrates and dampness pervades the atmosphere; the oversized classes which, while they recite, interrupt the study periods of other students who have to occupy the same room; and the ordering of four teachers to carry six full periods a day, without any rest in between.

The Massachusetts standards for high schools says that the high school class shall consist of 23 pupils, and a teacher should instruct five out of six periods in the day. At Punchard one teacher teaches 160 pupils a day, 45 over the quota, and six periods, instead of five. The four instructors who are carrying six periods are William McDonald, Miss Marjorie Smith, Miss Helen Dunn and Mrs. J. A. Barnes. They have no free period at all during the day to do the routine work teachers find necessary to carry on in connection with the running of a school.

Officials say that the state expects one teacher for every 23 pupils. The high school has one for every 28. If the population of the school grows, as is expected, another year, and the school gets on its staff another teacher which Principal Nathan C. Hamblin has

Andover Will Get Four-Lane Road

The answer to the question in the mind of many Andover people as to whether the Andover-Keating road, from the junction of the by-pass to Andover Hill, will be a three-lane or four-lane road was definitely given yesterday by the Townsman by the State Department of Public Works when it was stated that the road will be four lanes wide, just like the rest of the road. The construction job is on the program for 1932 by the State and bids will be called for early in December, construction starting as soon as weather permits next year.

Abbot Academy Begins Its Year

Tuesday the fifteenth of September saw the "new" girls registering at Abbot academy, meeting their room mates and the reception committee of "old" girls, and finally gathering in the dining room—most attractively redecorated—for the evening meal. On Wednesday the "old" girls arrived, on Thursday morning came the first chapel of the year, and afterwards the teachers met their pupils briefly.

Miss Bailey conducted hall exercises on Saturday afternoon, September 19, and the evening service on Sunday evening, the twentieth.

Dr. Faith L. Meserve of Weston and Miss Mary Carpenter, Physical Director of Abbot, have been busily engaged in giving physical examinations and in taking measurements and weights.

The annual dance given by the old girls to the new girls took place on Tuesday evening, September 22. Among the "babies" at this baby-party, some were so supple that they received prizes of lollipops.

Many girls have signed up for riding this fall, and the first party went out on Wednesday. Riding is one of the sports in which the participant can earn points for her club. The Gargoyles and the Griffins are becoming organized under their captains, Dorothy Rockwell and Cynthia James, while Virginia Brown, as president of the Abbot Athletic association, is consulting with Miss Carpenter in preparation for sports.

Miss Bailey will conduct the evening service on Sunday, September 27.

Elwot Pupils to Dance Next Week

"Klever Kiddie Kut-Ups", a group of child entertainers, pupils of the Elwot Dance Studio, will present their entertainment at the Andover Square and Compass club next Saturday, October 3, instead of on tomorrow as mistakenly announced last week in the Townsman. They will demonstrate the different types of dancing taught by Miss Olive L. Towle, of Arlington, director of the studio.

Miss Towle will open her Andover studio, at the Square and Compass club, Saturday October 3, at 3:00 p.m. This is the day of the recital. Registration may be made at the close of the entertainment. Invitations to the dance may be obtained on application, free at the Square and Compass club.

CHAPTER XLIII

The sixth session of the supreme war council was convened June 1, 1918. The important matter of further shipment of American troops was taken up.

As already indicated, it was my opinion that neither the character of the troops to be sent over nor their disposition was within the province of the council to decide, but that those questions should be determined according to circumstances and after discussion with the allies.

So I objected to their consideration by the council, as such, and suggested a meeting outside the council, which was approved.

Accordingly, in the late afternoon, General Foch, Lord Milner, British war minister, General Weyand and I, with Colonels Conner and Boyd, met in the premier's room. General Foch began by stating the serious condition of the allies and proposed the continued shipment from America of nothing but infantry and machine-gun units in June and July, in effect 250,000 in each month. Every one realized the gravity of the allied situation as strongly as he did, but, as previously and persistently contended by me, there were two sides to the question.

Foch becomes excited.

I was prepared to make some concessions and stated my views, but neither facts nor arguments seemed to make any impression. General Foch especially was very positive and earnest, and, in fact, became quite ex-

Mr. Lloyd George asked if that could be cleared up, to which General Foch replied that it was because the enemy managed better, and he went on to say that Germany, with a population of 68,000,000 could maintain 294 divisions, while Great Britain, with 46,000,000 inhabitants, could keep up only 43. It had been stated that the British counted on keeping up 53 divisions, but that ten of them would be practically American.

Then, in response to a further question by Mr. Lloyd George, General Foch said he could not pretend to say where Germany procured her replacements; possibly it might be from prisoners returned from Russia.

Three Map Program.

After further argument on discrepancies of various figures, and insistence by General Foch that the number of divisions be maintained, the consideration of the transportation of American troops in June and July was resumed. The discussion having reached an impasse, it was suggested that Lord Milner, British war minister, General Foch and I should undertake to draw up a program.

In the consideration of the question by us the point of my contention was won when General Weyand, who was Foch's principal adviser, remarked that it would be as well to leave the new drafts to be trained at home a month or so longer.

Although my arguments had failed to make any impression on General Foch, he at once approved Weyand's suggestion.

Agreement on U. S. Troops.

With this out of the way we soon drew up the agreement embodied in the following cablegram sent to Washington June 2:

(a) For June: First, absolute priority shall be given the transportation of 170,000 combatant troops (viz., six divisions without artillery, ammunition trains or supply trains amounting to 120,000 men and 44,000 replacements for combat troops); second, 25,400 men for the service of railway, of which 13,400 have been asked by the French minister of transportation; third, the balance of the troops of categories to be determined by the commander in chief, American expeditionary forces.

(b) For July: First, absolute priority for the shipment of 140,000 combatant troops of the nature defined above, four divisions minus artillery, etc., amounting to 84,000 men plus 56,000 replacements; second, the balance of the 250,000 to consist of troops to be designated by the commander in chief, American expeditionary forces.

(c) It is agreed that if available tonnage in either month allows the transportation of a larger number of men than 250,000 the excess tonnage will be employed in the transportation of combat troops as defined above.

(d) We recognize that the combatant troops to be dispatched in July may have to include troops with insufficient training, but we consider the present emergency to justify a temporary and exceptional departure by the United States from sound principles of training, especially as a similar course is being followed by France and Great Britain. (Signed)

"FOCH, MILNER, PERSHING."

The prime ministers called President Wilson expressing their thanks for the promptness of American aid in the present emergency.

Yanks at Chateau Thierry.

The Second and Third divisions, facing the Germans near Chateau Thierry, had made their places in the secure, giving heart to the French, who were trying to stabilize their own positions around the newly formed salient. We shall hear more of these two divisions later. Although fully taken for granted by all of us, it was none the less gratifying to see these divisions, for the first time in the line, acquit themselves so well.

En route to Chaumont we motored eastward through Montmirail, passing long columns of French refugees fleeing from their homes, many on foot, men and women with bundles on their backs, leading the smaller children, driving their stock before them and hauling in various types of conveyance the few remaining worldly goods they were able to take with them. Almost indescribable were many similar scenes as reported by our troops as they came up to reinforce the retiring French.

It seemed to me then that if this picture of civilization engaged in the "onsetment" of innocent and unarmed combatants, mostly women and children, could be brought home to all peoples, reason would be forced upon rulers and governments where too often their passions and ambitions as same control.

As a result of the German successes against the French something akin to a panic prevailed in Paris. Probably a million people left during the spring and there was grave apprehension among the officials lest the city be taken. Plans were made to remove the government to Bordeaux and we ourselves were prepared to remove our offices.

Stickney Girl Will Recover

Word from New York Says Fall Will Not Prove Fatal to Her

The recovery of Mary Polly Stickney of Ballardsville from the injuries she received when she fell last Friday from a window on the 24th floor of the Hotel New Yorker to a terrace on the 22nd floor was assured, according to dispatches received here by members of her family. Miss Stickney landed on the high terrace of the New York hostelry, suffering fractures of the right leg and shoulder and a number of body injuries. She had registered at the hotel two days before, Wednesday, September 16.

Miss Stickney has many friends in Ballardsville, besides her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stickney of Wolburn street and her sister, Mrs. John Lottian of the same address. When word was received by her parents that their daughter had been in this accident, they found it impossible to leave town to go to New York. However, telegraphic communication soon established that their daughter would recover.

Miss Stickney attended Bradley school when a girl and in the past several years has been a practical nurse. For four years she did settlement work in the Kentucky Mountains at the colony founded by Mrs. Alice Goddard Lloyd, known as Tiptopas, a settlement about 12 miles from Ashland, Kentucky.

Here she worked under hardship and many times had to travel great distances to administer to the sick. The trips were often made by mule over the mountain roads as no other means of transportation was available. Although Tiptopas was only 12 miles from Ashland, it took from one o'clock in the afternoon until 12 midnight to cover that distance. It was impossible to leave the mountains before summer as all the creeks met at the bottom of the mountain and formed ice blocks sometimes 12 feet high.

Miss Stickney is known as an excellent nurse, having gained much experience in the wild and rugged country of the mountains. Mrs. Lloyd and the mountain-folk were greatly distressed when Miss Stickney decided to return north. While at the settlement she met and married a man named Jones, whom she later divorced.

Her last visit home was hardly a month ago. Her folks said that she did considerable traveling and that they did not know she was in New York until they received word of her fall. Miss Stickney is at the Bellevue hospital. It is not yet known whether she will come home to rest after she is discharged from the hospital.

CHAPTER XLIV

Further conversation at the session of the supreme war council showed the uncertainty in the minds of the allies. Prime Minister Lloyd George, reverting to losses, said that before the great German attack in May he had been informed positively the Germans had only 400,000 replacements left, and that now, after the most violent fighting, in which it was reported the Germans had suffered very heavy losses, they still had more than 300,000 replacements.

The allies also had 300,000, but it was now contended, he said, that the British army was on the decline while that of the enemy was not.

The quantity of feed a laying hen eats varies widely. A hen will eat more of one kind of feed than of another. A big hen eats more than a little one. A layer has to eat more than a loafer. Hens will usually eat more of a mixed-grain ration than of a ration made up of only one grain. Leghorns and similar small breeds eat less than birds of the larger breeds. Usually birds bred for high egg production consume slightly less feed than birds of the same size of less productive strains. Records at agricultural experiment stations show that Leghorns laying an average of 150 eggs a year consume about 80 pounds of grain annually, and that general-purpose breeds with the same production eat about 87 pounds. Hens usually eat more grain during seasons of heavy egg production.

Industries Grew Here Through the Centuries

Andover Was One of the Pioneering Manufacturing Towns in the Country—Began, of Course, with the Textile Industry

By John B. Osgood

Andover with its early and interesting history of religion, town government, education and the countless other phases, which have already been treated, has also an interesting industrial history. It is not strange that a town which was inhabited by men as prominent as Governor Phillips, Governor Bradstreet, Colonel Frye, Moody Bridges, and others, should be one of the pioneer manufacturing towns of the country.

Soon after the establishment of Andover in 1636, the proprietors had availed themselves of every opportunity to increase their food supply. In a few years the demand for food, could be abundantly met at their very doors, but they could not exist on food alone. The problem of suitable clothing could not be overlooked and it was in this field that the men of inventive genius, in the town, were put to work.

Began With Textiles

The difficulties confronting the early colonists, in regards to the textile industry, were numerous. First of all, the mill country, for various reasons, did not encourage the manufacture of cloth, on this side of the ocean. Secondly, money was scarce and tools and machinery were expensive. Thirdly, the early settlers had little or no knowledge of the American conditions of the pioneers had brought with them, from their old homes, crude spinning wheels, and hand looms, and these they set up in their homes to manufacture homespun.

The introduction of the woolen industry in this country dates from 1643, when a fulling mill (the process of shrinking cloth to the proper size and density) was established in Rowley, Mass. In that year some twenty families from the cloth manufacturing section of Yorkshire, England, settled in the town and under the direction of William White, Robert Cushman and Richard Masterston established a small cloth mill. Due to the great expense of purchasing and transporting cloth from mother England and the relatively small cost of purchasing locally manufactured cloth, the industry in Rowley flourished. In a few years the increase of home looms and spinning wheels was noticeable and eventually every household kitchen became a workshop where the women spun and wove, turning out the rough serges and woollens of the time.

Wright and Whittington

The introduction of sheep into this country was first made at Jamestown in 1609 and the quarter of a century which followed that year saw only a slight increase in the numbers of the herds. The danger of wolves were great and the conditions of the frontier were inclined to deteriorate the breeds. The introduction of the most important domestic animal into New England did not take place until 1633 when a small herd were kept on an island in Boston harbor. Soon, however, with the growing needs of the colonists, the sheep increased greatly.

Andover's first step in the cloth industry was in 1673, when Walter Wright and Edward Whittington were granted land for the erection of a fulling mill.

"Granted to Edward Whittington and Walter Wright the abovesaid land (by William Ballard) with more adjoining thereto, for the encouragement of erecting a fulling mill, which they promise to set about in ye spring."

Although the grant was made and much encouragement given, the mill was not immediately erected. Whittington was called into military service in the Indian war with the Narragansets in 1675 and this is the probable reason for the postponement of the work.

Mill in 1690

A fulling mill was set into operation in Andover in 1690 and it is generally believed that the capital was furnished for Joseph and John Ballard.

"1699 Voted, that ye twenty acres of Land granted to Joseph and John Ballard and their heirs so long as they shall keep up a grist and fulling mill for ye good and benefit of the Town, and in case ye ye providence of god, sd mills or dam should come to such casualty, then sd land to Revert to the Town."

It was not until 1789 that the era of woolen manufacture really began in New England. With its beginning and its early history, the name of Arthur Scholfield is synonymous. Scholfield came from a manufacturing town in England to this country and brought with him a few smuggled pieces of machinery and here in this country he built a number of carding machines superior to any then already here. He set up a business first, in Byefield and later, with his friend and patron, Samuel Slater, moved to Pittsfield and there made the first fine broadcloth in the country. At the opening of the nineteenth century the Scholfields bought land at North Andover, with mill privileges on the Cochichewick and Shawshin rivers. In 1802, James Scholfield set up one of his brother Arthur's carding machines and carried on a business of making fine woolen goods. It is interesting to note here, that the Davis & Furber Machine Company of North Andover still have in their possession the first carding machine ever put together and operated in America. This machine, said to have been partly smuggled over from England, was completed in Newburyport and was, without doubt, the work of the Scholfield brothers.

More Than a Decade

Scholfield continued his work in the small shop in Cochichewick for more than a decade during which time he did a good business of carding wool for domestic weaving and also manufacturing woolen cloth. In 1812 he sold out his business and was engaged to manage the mills, then being erected, of Capt. Nathaniel Stevens. These mills which were put into operation in 1813, proved to be one of the leading manufacturing enterprises of the day and have continued as such, growing steadily, up to the present time. They mark the beginning to the M. T. Stevens & Sons Company of North Andover, which for more than a century, has been outstanding in the field of woolen manufacture.

Scholfield's mill was bought, together with the land and privileges, by Abel and Paschal Abbot, who lived in the South Parish. They erected a larger mill but were in business for only a year, when they went out to Abrahams Marland and Isaac Osgood. These last mentioned purchasers continued in business for a year and then sold to Samuel Ayer. In 1826 the property fell, by foreclosure of a mortgage, to Mr. William Sutton of Danvers, and has since remained in the Sutton family.

Demand for Better Machinery

With the steady growth of the manufacturing industries in Andover came the urgent need for better machinery and again the inventive powers of the town were called upon. In 1824, John Smith, the founder of the firm of Smith & Dove, with two partners, built a shop for making cotton mill machinery. This shop was 72 feet long and 37 feet wide, being an enormous building for those days. The business was carried on successfully for twelve years, when, owing to the death of two of the partners, it was given up and Mr. Smith, together with his brother Peter and John Dove, turned to the working of flax.

The manufacture of woolen machinery was started in Andover in 1832. Jonathan Sawyer and Russell Phelps came here from a shop in Worcester, and began making machinery in the basement of the mill of Abraham Marland. It appears that the business was not very successful as it became the property of Charles Barnes, George H. Gilbert and Parker Richardson in 1836. They soon moved their shop from the South Parish to the North and set up business of Cochichewick Brook. This business was the seed from which grew the present firm of Davis & Furber.

Thus we see the early growth of a number of the leading textile manufacturing industries of Andover. Andover can well be proud of these industries for they were pioneers in this country. It can also boast of powder mills, paper mills, saw mills, iron works, and a number of other interesting industries. These mills will be the subject of the article, which will appear in next week's Townsman.

Metropolitan Theatre

George Arliss, "The American Disraeli" comes to the Metropolitan in "Alexander Hamilton" beginning today. Greatest character actor of the day, Mr. Arliss presents in this picture one of outstanding hits of his career. This is the second American Mr. Arliss has portrayed on the screen, his first being "The Millionaire". While there is a vast difference between the self-made business man of that picture and the stormy aristocrat, "Alexander Hamilton" Mr. Arliss has made both characters strong and forceful.

The scenes of "Alexander Hamilton" are laid in Philadelphia at the critical period when Hamilton was seeking to establish the credit of this country. And when the site of the new National Capital was a burning question, Reynolds, a malcontent plots the ruin of Hamilton. The fiery champion of the human rights becomes involved in a scandal which involves a woman. The claim is then made that he used government funds, and Jefferson, Munroe and other great statesmen of the day visit him to accuse him of the misdeed. The unexpected way in which he clears himself of the charge, while confessing his human susceptibility to feminine wiles, is one of many brilliantly dramatic scenes.

His excellent support includes Doris Kenyon, Dudley Briggs, Allan Mowbray (as George Washington), June Collyer, Charles Middleton, Montague Love, Morgan Wallace, and others.

On the stage will be seen a gorgeous Metropolitan Revue entitled "Limehouse Nights", in which are featured the Wing Wah Troupe, Armando and Lita, Warren and Inman, Don Carrol, Five Double Dance teams, and the Sunkist Ensemble.

Fabien Sevitzyk conducts the Metropolitan Grand Orchestra in the Overture, "Il Guarany", while Arthur Martel at the organ presents, "The Martel Organ club." Paramount Sound News is a feature of each program.

Telephone Referendum Again

The new telephone referendum which the Selectmen (and why they?) will send out within the fortnight to determine whether Andover telephone subscribers are willing to give up the Andover exchange and consolidate with the Lawrence one revives an old issue. The change would involve an increase in the basic telephone service rate for both this area and Lawrence but eliminate the toll charge for calls between Andover and Lawrence.

In a notice enclosed in its current bills to subscribers on this town, the company states that its stand in the matter is neutral. It simply wishes, the statement goes on, "that Andover shall have good telephone service under whichever plan it wants."

Why a plan at all? It has been demonstrated twice in the past that those who pay the telephone company the most money from this area are disposed to reject any consolidation with Lawrence on the telephone. Yet a known number of subscribers would prefer to be included in the Lawrence area, for this group does most of its telephoning to Lawrence. With this as an argument, these subscribers ask to have the toll charge from Andover eliminated. The argument is about as righteous and as sensible as the one the Andover man might make to be included in the Boston area because he makes most of his calls to that city.

The telephone company does not need to enlist the aid of our Selectmen and referendums to determine a solution for the so-called "local telephone problem." It would be an easy matter for the company to satisfy some of its subscribers in the Andover area by giving them, if they insist, inclusion in the Lawrence exchange, adding with it an elimination of the toll charge and the addition of a higher base rate. On the other hand, for those of Andover who prefer to remain outside the Lawrence consolidation, the company could, in keeping with its advertised policy of service to its customers, permit them to stay in the present area with the toll charge maintained.

This system of satisfying all in Andover was maintained by the company up to some years ago, but from current reports the company, "wouldn't consider such a thing now. Why, we just don't do it, that's all." Since it is expected that the consolidation idea will be decisively defeated again in the current referendum, perhaps the telephone company will decide to suit all of the town by returning to the old system which they regard today so coldly.

Action Finally

It is with great satisfaction that the people of Andover will receive the news that the Public Utilities Commission at the State House is amenable to reconsidering abolishing train whistles at the Essex street grade crossing in Andover. Since the introduction of the longer blast, as announced in last week's Townsman, public opinion throughout the state, as well as in Andover, has been objecting more vigorously against the whistle signals which constitute such a disturbance to the quiet of the town at night. Andover had never been satisfied with the refusal of their request for abolishing train whistles at an earlier date and the continued shrieking of opinion in this town so that action is at last in the offing.

The Board of Selectmen yesterday wrote the Public Utilities Commission for reconsideration of their previous decision which has proved so unsatisfactory to the town. Townspeople have every right, as it has been pointed out several times in the past few weeks in these columns, to sleep peacefully at night without whistle signals racking the slumber of the healthy as well as the sick. A grade-crossing tender on duty twenty-four hours a day, a strong pair of gates, and the common sense of most of our motorists in slowing down as they approach the crossing, are reasons enough why the trains should stop whistling in Andover. As it stands now, our protected crossing is placed in the same category as crossings like those on the Newburyport turnpike which have no gates or watchmen, while on the other hand, we are not given equal footing with crossings identical with ours at which whistles are restricted from blowing. This obvious partiality, due on no part to the railroad whistle, instituted whistling in the beginning of every crossing but was forced to restrict it at certain points through indignant public opinion, can and must be done away with at Essex street.

There will be new uniforms on the Punchard team tomorrow, despite previous announcements. Coach Lovely hasn't bought them because there is no money to buy them with.

The Utilities Commission only this week, you may have read, heard a petition from several towns protesting against the prolonged whistling. These towns did not protest against the familiar "two long and two short" before it was abandoned for the newer long signals, but now that they have appeared with their demands before the commission, even going so far as to say that the whistles have aroused the citizens more than the dry law, it is not too speculative to say that these petitioners will probably have the signals in their towns abolished altogether.

Andover has the men who can fight for what the town wants in this matter, it has, what is more important, the right side of the battle; and it has the public sufficiently interested in the matter to achieve a victory in the matter. The Boston & Maine will not and does not oppose the restriction of whistling, and nothing remains but for the commission to be impressed by these facts.

Editorial Cinders

The organization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has been given a decided boost by its acquisition of the old Andover club quarters in the Musgrave building. Here is an old and nationally known as well as nationally honored organization of fighting men, who have served in foreign lands, adding a post in Andover which, we hope, soon will join our leading organizations in power and prestige. They have made a commendable move in getting the clubrooms and are in a position now to build themselves into an organization which should not only reflect credit upon themselves but upon the town from which they draw membership. There are fine men in the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Townsman feels that it is expressing the sentiment of the townspeople in saying that it knows the organization will become an important civic factor in Andover, remaining long among us to work for both the town and themselves.

Andover police still have their troubles at Hargett's pond. Out-of-towners seem to persist in making nuisances of themselves by parking in its vicinity, throwing things into it, and during the summer, enjoying the rather dubious distinction of bathing in the water which is the Andover water supply. The police have not let up their watch around the pond and scour it constantly for these stupid and malicious people who violate the common decency of leaving people's drinking water alone, or who have a perverted sense of personal rights and humor, but the police could accomplish a great deal more if "No Trespassing" signs were erected all around the pond. These signs have a definite effect upon people, making them conscious that they are violating the law by going in or near the water, and like "Stop" signs and traffic lights, which are seldom policed, producing results without the limb of the law being present. Those signs should go up immediately to end for all time a most aggravating nuisance.

There has never been a time when it was more important to keep governmental expenses down, and reasonable levels than now. Businesses and individuals are striving to make both ends meet. Authorities, public and private, are working on plans to stimulate industrial activity, and thus provide employment for those who are out of work. And rising taxes are one of the principal barriers in the way of success of such plans. Extravagance and waste on the part of officials are enemies of prosperity and result from "government in business" in competition with its private citizens and taxpayers.

Unique Service at Baptist Church

"The Lost Chord" will be the central theme of the service at the Andover Baptist church next Sunday. It will be played as a part of the service. It will be sung by Carl Wetterberg. The pastor will use it as the central theme of his service. Do you know its story? Do you know what it means? Where does it fit into my life? The pastor invites you to enjoy its service, if you are not elsewhere obligated.

To Present Fall Models

A showing of autumn fashions will be held at Shawheen next Friday when Cherry and Webb company, of Lawrence, will present their new models under the auspices of the Shawheen Village Women's club. The chairman of the committee in charge is Mrs. John Baid. Tickets for the style show, which is to be held in the Administration building of the American Woolen company at two-thirty, may be obtained at the door or from members of the committee.

The Department of Agriculture is planning experiments in crossing hardy Afrikaner cattle from southern Africa with native beef breeds, hoping to develop a breed that can endure drought and heat.

MAN'S SOCIAL LIFE WITH GOD
By Rev. Lorentz I. Hansen, Pastor Andover Baptist Church

L. I. Hansen

Prayer has been called "Man's Social Life with God." In man's relation to his creator, so this statement suggests, each can hear the other's call. To some, this conversation with God, appears to be a man's enjoying talking to himself. And he enjoys it (in the words of one who habitually talked to himself) because "he likes to talk to a good man, and likes to hear a good man talk." But, in truth, God is near the heart of every man, and through the lofty stimulation of his mind. From the power of prayer in strengthening the body of the pray-er, quickening his mind, energizing his will and comforting his heart, we may well reason the further outreaches of prayer in objective power.

Welfare Committee Reports to Lions

You may be pleased to know that two boys were sent for one week each to the Boy Scout camp in Raymond this summer, by this club. The cost was sixteen dollars. The committee feels that this activity should be extended and we therefore recommend that the sum of $50 be set aside for this purpose next season.

In talking with the Head Big Chief of the local fire department, we found that up-to-date gas masks were a regular item of equipment, but we were rather surprised to find that no provision was made for emergency resuscitation apparatus. It would seem that a town of our size with its various mills, chemical plants and swimming holes should be equipped with such apparatus, and we recommend that it be obtained, either by gift from the Lions club or by a special article in the Warrant, or by action of the Selectmen. Probable cost $200.

Your committee again considered the advisability of maintaining a Free Bed for children in the Lawrence General hospital. The cost for such a bed would be $500 a year or $200 for a proportionate part thereof. The hospital loses money every year, and there is need of several free beds, but your committee came to the conclusion that it might be more advisable to put a certain sum (say $200 maximum) at the disposal of Miss Campbell, for her to use at her discretion for medical or hospital aid to needy children in Andover.

A Mr. Grant has requested financial assistance for a local baseball club which plays in the Greater Lawrence league. Your committee hesitating to establish a precedent, at first refused, but on second thought decided to recommend that the sum of $5 be contributed, which leads to the next item.

Requests for small sums to help various temporary activities are quite frequent and the usual procedure of presenting them for approval to the Finance committee rather than the Selectmen, often causes considerable delay. We therefore suggest that the sum of $50 be set aside for the use of the committee at its discretion, in making such minor contributions.

In conclusion we would again remind you of these are tentative recommendations. We realize that the total expense would be quite large. But we feel sure that the amount is not any larger than this club can and should afford, and we sincerely hope that such individuals as are brought up in the future you will give your wholehearted approval and backing.

At present we ask your approval of the expenditure of five dollars for the ball club and approximately forty dollars for the Scout club, and for the purchase of equipment for the last amount let us at least pledge ourselves to do so, in order that the club may be completed this fall.

Respectfully submitted,
CHILD WELFARE COMMITTEE

Andover Garden Club Has Meeting

The Andover Garden club held its annual meeting at Phillips Inn, Tuesday morning, the twenty-second of ten-thirty. The meeting, which was held in the parlor of the Inn, was called to order by Mrs. John Stewart, president of the club for the past three years. The secretary, Mrs. W. Dacre Walker read the annual report which was followed by the report of the treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Sweaney. The retiring president, Mrs. John Stewart spoke a few words to the members praising their for their splendid co-operation during her tenure of office. It was announced that the flower display of the club at the Garden club show was awarded the second prize.

Moser, Mrs. Margaret Curran, and Miss Fannie E. Davis.

Publicity committee, Mrs. John M. Stewart. The retiring president turned over the meeting to the incoming president, Mrs. James Sawyer. A rising vote of thanks was given to the retiring president, Mrs. John Stewart. The incoming president spoke a few words of welcome to the members before announcing the rules of a flower-guessing contest which took place in the lounge of the Inn after three new applicants for membership. Mrs. James Eaton, Mrs. Frank Mills, and Mrs. Weaver of North Andover had, been voted into the club.

Mrs. Joseph Rand, the treasurer of the club, won a beautiful vase for having named correctly within the time limit of twenty minutes sixty out of seventy flowers which had been stripped of all identifying foliage. The gay multi-colored flowers among which were asters, poppies, phlox, carnations, and chrysanthemums came from the gardens of the members who derive much pleasure from horticulture.

Communications

To the Editor of Andover Townsman:
I have received through the mail several requests for more poetry. Poets are born, not made, but as I always aim to please I shall (with the Editor's consent) try just once more. Let's go.

LOCKING THE STABLE DOOR
After the horse has gone
A citizen bold, so I am told,
Captured a bad, bad man,
He handed him over to the Town Police
And they locked him in the can.

But when they went to get their man
They found the bird had flown.
The prisoner had used his own latch key
And quietly beat it for home.

At the Captain's command the locks came off,
Brand new ones took their place.
Never again will we lose a man
And bring on this force disgrace.

New locks installed, they spoke with pride
Of the strength of the Town Cell door,
Until the coalman opened it with the coal shed key.

Lately they told us through the press
That the latest locks had the test
The body, sugar dulls the appetite. If a child is allowed to eat candy before he sits down to dinner, he has no appetite for the other foods he needs to build his body and keep it in good running order.

After he has eaten the required amount of other food, a child may have a piece of candy, a few dates or figs, a plain cookie, or a piece of cake, for dessert.

Good ventilation and plenty of sunlight are two good preventives of mildew which makes its appearance simultaneously with hot weather. Bad stains are almost hopeless but slight fresh ones usually answer to treatment.
A slight stain usually washes out in the laundry and if it does not, several bleaching agents are available for white clothes. These include lemon juice, javelle water, potassium permanganate, oxalic acid, and sour milk.
The method of applying these is described in the Department of Agriculture's bulletin on stain removal.

To make good fried oysters, dip them in egg and bread crumbs some time before they are to be fried. This gives the coating a chance to harden and the oysters will fry better.

Use cold water first on egg stains, then hot water and soap. If the yolk leaves a greasy spot use carbon tetrachloride or some other grease solvent after sponging with cold water and allowing the stained place to dry.

Paked pears are good. Wash them, cut in halves and core. Place in a baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar and a little salt; add a dot of butter and a very little water. Cover at first, until the fruit is soft. Bake once or twice, with the liquid in the pan. Add more water if necessary to keep the pears from burning.

The wood-working shop needs a bandsaw, for they are now using one 35 years old, and since a bandsaw has been made for the committee for it, it is expected that the machine will be bought presently. At present the children are using the old one operated by a foot pedal, and the factor of safety on it is not high, according to those who are qualified to speak on the matter.

Sixth grade children have some redecorated basement rooms in the old high school, so pressed is the Central plant. Further complications are added to the old school by the fact that the wood-working training, sewing, and the Stowe junior high school and the Punchard high school.

Austria has a revolt, but flattens it out in twenty-four hours. In the War of the Revolution, England brought over some Hessians to put down the revolt then in progress, but they did not succeed so well. Europe has had a good deal of training in handling hard situations since 1776, and might do better now. America, on the other hand, does not seem to be able to lick gangsters as easily as she did the Hessians. Everything considered, it might be a good idea to sign up a few regiments of twenty-four-hour-operating Austrians, and let them try their hand on the two-gun men of New York, Chicago, and some other large cities.

A chap who got his training as a rabbit fact that it was an army of hunters that cleared up the British at the battle of New Orleans. A law-down in the law against owning and carrying fire arms might be a wise move.

As things now stand the thugs carry guns anyhow, and the law-shifting go unarmed, forgetting each year a few more of the principles of the elective shooting for which America was once noted.

Mahatma Gandhi, on his way to a conference, says that he is impelled to her only by his "irrepressible optimism." He adds that he will not come to America, because he feels that he is not wanted there. Wanted or not, perhaps it is his plain duty to come. We are certainly in need of a prophet whose message is irrepressible optimism.

England is thinking of adopting a protective tariff. The United States is not so insistent on a protective tariff as it was in the days of Baline and McKinley. The views of nations, as well as those of individuals, are constantly shifting. Democratic stand-patters as well as Republican stand-patters, do not represent the real spirit of their respective parties. Lowell had the situation well in hand when he said: "Time makes ancient good

England has decreed a heavy boost in taxes, apparently believing that there is money in a turnip, the proverb to the contrary notwithstanding, and certain senators in our own country think that a similar step may be necessary here. No one seems to suspect that the federal government may be conducting hundreds of activities that are not worth the money which the people put into them, or to suggest that the bold step of a wholesale house cleaning would make increased taxation unnecessary. Private persons are taught ments go right ahead with their tailoring, and holer for more cloth.

A Word to the Wives

By YVONNE RAMAUT

Tomato catsup or chili sauce and thick mayonnaise mixed half and half, make a delicious dressing for plain lettuce and some other salads.

Make bluing water just before using.
If it stands it is likely to streak the clothes. Stir occasionally and blue only a few pieces at a time. Dip them in and out, one at a time.

In choosing curtains for the living room, select a fabric that will stand light and laundering. The colors should tone in with the other furnishings in the room without making the children too conspicuous.

Children should eat sweets only at the end of a meal, because sugar is a very engaged to teach the department of music and speaking and to assist in the English department. The illness of Mr. McCurdy who has taught steadily in the academy for thirty years, has made necessary the appointment of a new instructor in mathematics, and Mr. H. F. Houghton, Amherst '96, who has taught during recent years in Buckley school, at Providence, R. I., has been chosen to fill

Largest Enrollment in the History of the Academy Is Achieved

Phillips academy opened last week its 154th year, with a registration of approximately 670 students,—a few more than were registered last year, and probably the largest registration in the history of the school.

Dr. Carl F. Mattlicher, who has been spending a year in Germany, and Laurence V. Roth, who has been studying and traveling in Europe, have returned from their sabbatical years. Leave of absence for a year has been granted to Arthur W. Leonard, instructor in English, and to Roy E. Spencer, also of the English department. Two new teachers have been added to the faculty.—Theodore K. Noss, a graduate of Princeton in the class of 1925, later taking a degree of Bachelor of Divinity at Union Theological seminary, who comes to Andover as instructor in English, and Robert E. Maynard, who graduated last June from Bowdoin, who will take a position in the department of Mathematics.

V.F.W. Take Over Old Andover Club

When the charter members first organized John H. Flint, then owner of the Musgrave building, offered the spacious three rooms on the second floor as the club quarters. The membership grew in leaps and bounds. The best known name in Andover history were listed on the roster of the club.

When a tournament with the North Andover club was suggested in 1911, it was received by the members of the local organization with great acclaim. The rivalry, though at times heated, was always friendly and on the occasions of the meetings, a real genuine feeling was promoted between Andoverites and our neighboring townsmen.

The last roster of the Andover club listed but fifteen names. Of these, but four or five ever made their appearance at the old rooms. A meeting was next to impossible. And so, with the lack of interest and the resulting decreased membership, the Andover club has faded into a memory, leaving its members a bitter memory. The old days are recalled on many occasions when a group of the former members got together. The hey-day of the Andover club is discussed with interrupting hilarity. An interesting note is that the good old days could again be lived over again, if only a reality. But, repeating, they are but memories, memories that will live as long as the former members themselves.

With the passing of the Andover club, a new organization has made its appearance in Andover—the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The local post of Veterans of Foreign Wars was organized last May with twenty charter members. At present it boasts of sixty odd members, and all actively interested in the post's welfare.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars was the first organization made up of service men to be granted a charter in this country. Its work is national, with charity playing a big part in its operation. Deacons were present at its triotic demonstrations, unemployment relief, disproving of red propaganda—all are the work of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and all are dutifully done. One of the recent projects of the work for the post was the sponsoring of the bill in last Congress to adopt the Star Spangled Banner as the national anthem. The bill was passed.

The officers of the local post, V. F. W., are: Commander, James J. Dugan; senior vice-commander, Carl N. Madsen; junior vice-commander, Peter D. Quinn; adjutant, John M. Erving; quartermaster, Harold S. Cates; post advocate, George A. Abbott; chaplain, William D. Miller; surgeon, Alexander Forsythe; officer of the day, William J. Snyder; trustee for twelve months, Earl D. Batcheller; trustee for six months, Clarence B. Eastwood; patriotic instructor, Charles W. Bowman; post historian, Arthur W. Cates; sergeant-major, Everett Collins; quartermaster-sergeant, Walter C. Ripley; guard, James H. Buss; sentinel, Clarence S. Wormwood; color bearers, John P. Hart and Walter R. Shorten; color guards, Clarence B. Eastwood and Timothy F. Daley.

virtually completed, is not yet ready for use. During the period while it is unavailable the chapel and church services are being held in the Meeting Room of George Washington Hall. Extensive grading on the site of the old Stone Chapel, and in front of the new Chapel on the campus, has done much to alter the landscape of Andover Hill. The Armillary Sphere has been moved from its former location in front of Samuel Phillips Hall to a new site on the Theological Campus, in front of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Library.

Many light-frame farm buildings develop sway-backed roofs, bulging walls, or sagging doors, or they may lean over or collapse completely because they are not properly built in the first place. Most failures of farm buildings are caused by improper foundations, insufficient anchorage of the frame to the foundations, or insufficient bracing of the frame. You can get a big page booklet on Bracing Farm Buildings, Leaflet 77-L, from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Addison Gallery Starts Third Loan Exhibition

Present Synopsis of Work Done in the Summer Colonies During the Past Season—Work by Manchester, Vt., Group Stands Out

Epitomizing a summer of art in New England, the Addison Gallery of American Art at Phillips Academy has brought together for its current exhibition fifty-nine paintings, in all water color, which include works destined both for greatness and oblivion. The work of collecting this exhibit was considerable, for it made necessary the travelling about to the various summer art colonies by the staff of the gallery, observing, and then making arrangements for shipping them to Andover.

Some of the finest creations of the summer adorn the walls of the gallery now, and it is expected that a great number of people from the vicinity will come to Phillips to view this is the third loan exhibition of the gallery, and it runs from September 20 to October 13. Following this exhibit, the noted Bliss exhibition will come to Andover, thus bringing the year to a close with probably the best exhibition there is today.

Manchester School Outstanding

The public, of course, is cordially invited to visit the gallery, and among the students but for outsiders. New hours of visiting are from 9 to 5 on weekdays and from 2:30 to 5 on Sundays.

Among the water colors in this new exhibition may be found striking contrasts, yet excellent representation of the art work done by the several colonies. The same holds true for the oils, but after examining the 59 paintings, it becomes obvious that if any school deserves credit for making worthwhile contributions in the field of painting, it is the Manchester, Vt. school. This group of artists exhibits a surprising and wholesome individuality in its execution, giving to patrons of the art a renewed faith in the efforts of painters who trek off to the beautiful New England sections for summer inspiration. Critics all over the country have hailed the Manchester school as one that is making a distinct contribution to American art, and for this reason, if for no other, it is worthwhile to see the exhibition.

The water colors are large New England subjects, having been painted in the vicinity of the artists' summer colonies. A rather fine one is "Wash Day", by L. C. Wilford, who won honorable mention with it at the annual exhibition of the Ogunquit Art Center, Ogunquit, Maine, Charles C. Taylor, with his "Bathers" and "Ogunquit Beach", conventional paintings in the hand of those who aspire, has made them distinctive by his skill in painting water. He splashes his colors on, yet still they become real. His sea is in sharp contrast with that painted by Amy Cabot, of the Ogunquit Art Center, whose "Canal" and "Quimper" hang nearby. These two are quite subdued.

Monday's Wash

Wilford's "Wash Day" has a companion subject in Charles R. Knapp's "Monday Morning", as the titles indicate, but their work is more to be contrasted than compared. Knapp paints in pure colors and a high key without producing harsh results. Wilford paints in a medium key and has, in a sense, used unreal colors to create a most vivid impression.

John C. Taylor, of the Gloucester Society of Artists, with his "Cod Fishing Boats" and "Inner Harbor", exhibits among the water colors the most careful work of all. No detail does he ignore and one of his characteristics is the deep reflective water he expertly does. It is almost as if he were painting with oil rather than water color.

J. Randolph Brown's "Winter—Marblehead", from the Marblehead Arts Association, is an example of simplicity in handling water colors. His work is almost at right angles and flat primary colors, yet the effect is vivid. Charles O. Golden, of the Mystic Art Association, has in his "Still Life" done an exquisite thing, having taken the conventional and made it unusual against a delicately patterned background.

Work of Schnakenberg

"By Lake Champlain" and "Towards Camel's Hump" are the two works of a painter who should be given things in the future. H. E. Schnakenberg, of the Manchester, Vt., Art Association. He has delighted the critics, showing a marked tendency toward individuality, a sombre strength and vigor. Charles Curtis Allen, of the Ogunquit Art Association, with his "Wild Cat Valley" and "Wild Cat Valley", brings a definite feeling of starkness and loneliness with these winter landscapes. He is distinctive in his coloring, using only one or two colors to gain the complete effect.

Ethel G. Holmes' "Lee Street" is decorative but not trite because she stands out through her good composition.

In the oils, Manchester is the predominating factor of the exhibition. Schnakenberg has created a sensation with "Vermont" a vivid landscape toned with a green that is strong and real. It is a revelation seldom encountered. Herbert Meyer, also of the Manchester group, exhibits in his "View of Paulet" fine individual work as well as good composition and a fine sense of opportunity for study and reflection. They are crowded with symbolism, but whether the observer understands them or not, he may appreciate their excellent color work and delicacy.

John C. Taylor, of the Rockport Art Association, in his "Still Life" accomplishes the unusual by his delicate texture, and the excellent reflection of a banana through a pitcher filled with water.

Robert S. Woodward, of the Stockbridge Art Association, will warm the heart of many a Bostonian with his painting of "Old Boston" "Portrait in Black", by Howard F. Smith of the Marblehead Arts Association, which won the Isaac N. Maynard Portrait Prize at the National Academy of Design, is an interesting study, the face work on the neck, woman being very delicate, and the expression in her eyes and around her mouth enigmatic.

Effective Lighting

"Portrait of the Artist's Family" by John C. Johansen of the Stockbridge group is an example of effective lighting. He has made the light in the room show up the figures, which are all in the shadows, and the whole portrait has an air of serenity, of evening peace about it.

The lay-out of this third loan exhibition is most excellent—the combination of groups of pictures being most attractive. A new member has been added to the staff of the gallery, Miss Elizabeth Robinson, who is a museum assistant.

Among the ship models is a new addition. It is the "Savannah", designed by Joseph Dyer and built by David Clark at Kennebunkport, Maine, in 1901. Its original dimensions were: length, 181 feet; breadth, 35 feet, two inches; depth 13 feet, six inches; gross tonnage, 484; net tonnage, 496. The model was made for Phillips Academy by Frederic W. Snow, of Kennebunkport, and is in accord with the scale used on the remainder of the models.

The complete list of paintings in the third loan exhibition follows:

Elect Officers

The Senior Christian Endeavor society held their weekly meeting on Sunday evening in the Congregational church vestry at six o'clock with a large attendance. "Happiness" was the topic used by Rev. M. R. Phelps which proved to be very interesting.

Since the re-organization of this society the young people have taken a keen interest in the society and everything points to an organization that will do things during the coming winter months.

At the business session the following officers were elected: President, Margaret Mitchell; vice-president, Ernest Stein; secretary, Frances Baker; treasurer, Russell Hall; social committee: chairman, Richard Cooper; assistants: Agnes Stein, Fred Kidd, Marion Ormsby; membership committee: Eva Kidd, Eva Thornton, Gordon Hall.

Devotional services are held each Sunday evening at 6:00 p.m. in the church vestry at which time a member of the society is the leader. A subject that will be of interest to all is chosen and after the prayer the meeting is open for discussion.

The officers of the Senior Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church met on Tuesday evening in the church parlors to formulate plans for the future. All the officers were present and a program was drawn up that will be followed out during the fall and winter months.

Junior Endeavor Notes

Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. members of the Junior Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church will go on a hike to Rattle Snake Hill, where they will have a "weenie roast" and then have a general good time about this noted hill that overlooks Foster's pond. For years this place has been visited by the various organizations of this town including Boy Scouts, Epworth Leagues, Endeavor societies, etc., and has proven to be an ideal place for an outing. At one time there was a camp on the peak of this gigantic rock, which later burned down under peculiar circumstances.

The above organization was recently formed under the direction of Rev. and Mrs. M. R. Phelps, officers were elected and plans drawn up for the coming fall and winter months. Devotional services will be held on Sunday afternoon at 4:00 p.m. and once a month a social will be held.

It has been decided by those in charge of the Volley ball league to finish out the first half of the schedule, this week and the two leaders will play a series of three games for the championship of the town. To date it looks as if the B. A. A. and the Congregational teams will have to compete for the honors.

B. P. W. Begins Construction on Biggest Job of the Year

Relocation of River Road in West Andover Proves Unusual Piece of Construction for Andover—Will Make Highway Much Safer for Autoists

Crash Throws Child Through Car Window

Machine Driven by Her Mother Hits Long Truck Which Blocked Road

The most unusual, as well as the biggest, piece of construction supervised and done by the Andover Board of Public Works this year was begun late last week when 23 men reported for work to relocate River road in West Andover, in the neighborhood of Chandler road. The job, costing $13,500, a third of which is being paid by the state, county and town, each, will probably be completed within a month and when it is finished, will offer the motorist a stretch of two-line bituminous macadam to make riding easier and safer from Lawrence to Tewksbury along this highway.

Superintendent Charles T. Gilliard of the board is in charge of the work. The construction is a part of the project, forwarded by the state, to resurface and rebuild the whole of River road in order that it become a better artery for the many cars that use it.

The construction being carried on now involves a stretch of the road 1800 feet long. The most unusual part of the job is the relocating of a large piece of it, making necessary the abandonment of one piece of highway and building another across what was private property. The town found it necessary to cut into the land of three different Andover citizens, and they—Newton S. Abbot, John W. Henderson, and George W. Disbrow, the first two on River road, and the last on Chandler road—without asking any money in the matter, public-spiritedly gave the town permission to cross their property and build, if necessary on their land.

The work of relocating was done because at and near the junction of Chandler with River roads, there is a dangerous bend. When construction is finished at this point there will be no bend at all, but a straightaway which will increase the factor of safety tremendously here. The removal of the bend meant, in addition, the construction of a new culvert, granite-walled, cement-topped, over Fish Brook, the outlet for Haggatt's Pond. This cost $1,150.

Because of the work on relocation, it has become necessary for the telephone and light companies to remove their poles to the side of the new road. Several trees had to be replanted also.

Besides the 23 men on the construction, a steam roller and a tractor, and five trucks are being used. The new bituminous macadam will stretch from a point opposite the property owned by Oliver Pike to the point where the bituminous macadam has been laying for many years toward the Lawrence line.

The cutting off of a piece of River road through the relocation leaves quite a piece of the original highway either to be filled in or used. According to Superintendent Gilliard, the piece which meets Chandler road now and goes from that point in the direction of Lawrence, will be used as a right-hand turn-off for cars coming down Chandler and headed for Lawrence via the River road. The piece which goes from Chandler toward Tewksbury on River road will be in part discarded, but approximately half of it will form the outline for the partial reconstruction of a stretch from the end of Chandler to River, in the opposite direction of Lawrence. These sections will form a triangle, and the land enclosed will probably be filled in.

The 1800 feet scheduled for this job is all the town can do this year. The state's intention in the matter is to finish the road all the way down as soon as possible, and the piece amounting to a sum slightly over $50,000, there are 11,980 feet more to be done, two and one-half miles now being completed or nearly so.

England's Big Storm Will Clear the Air

Babson Prepares Special Article on Suspension of Gold Standard and Discusses the Causes of Financial Difficulties of Mother Country

Babson Park, Massachusetts, September 22, 1931. The financial thunderstorm that has just broken in Great Britain will, in the end, do much to clear the business atmosphere throughout the world. We shall feel its reverberations for a while, but ultimately both England and the world at large will be better off because it happened. Anyone who knows British pride realizes that only a great national and international emergency could have forced her to suspend the gold standard.

The pound sterling means more than just British money. It has for centuries been the proud standard of value throughout the world. Therefore the dramatic action of England in finally letting it drift where it will is striking proof to everybody that we have come to grips with fundamentals and must work out our own salvation. No panaceas or short-cuts will do. Moreover, human nature always fights best with its back to the wall.

England's financial troubles are due: First, to stabilizing the pound at par in 1925 in order to uphold traditional British honor—whereas France, Italy, and other countries stabilized their currencies at a tremendous discount from par. France is now being praised for her strong financial position, but it should be remembered that France repudiated three-fourths of her domestic debt by stabilizing the franc at one-fourth of its former value. This England refused to do and should be praised for her courage and good intentions.

Moreover, in the world-wide readjustment England has faltered under the staggering burden of debt. Second, England on the other hand, yielded to certain temptations which have led her astray. English bankers borrowed from us at 4 per cent and loaned the money to Germany at 7 per cent, thus taking a gambler's chance to recoup previous losses. These loans are now frozen, due to Germany's collapse.

Third, English politicians gave labor a dose as the easiest way out, but this dose wrecked British finance and killed industrial initiative. Fourth, Great Britain has lacked the financial statesmanship, judgment, and energy, which characterized her leaders before the War. Much of this leadership, judgment, and energy, was killed off by the War and it will take one or two generations to replace it.

Financial Reforms Needed

Out of this chaos will emerge some constructive reforms in national and international finance that have long been needed. In the first place our bankers are going to realize that pouring more money into Europe does no good so long as Europe spends it for armaments, wastes it on extravagant public improvements, or pays it out in dolars.

If our loans went for purely constructive business enterprise they would help, but the time has come to call a halt on pouring good money after bad. Until foreign nations guarantee that they will reduce armaments, practice domestic economy, and honestly try to balance their budgets, more loans should be refused. England gives evidence that she is sincere in this respect. MacDonald's program of rigid economy, reduction in the debt, and a balanced budget, is one of the most constructive factors in the present world situation.

France, on the other hand, is not playing the game. She wants us to cancel her debts, but she continues to increase her armaments at an alarming rate. Germany seems firmly determined not to pay any more reparations. It is high time that the United States gave more attention to her own domestic finances, reducing expenditures, and avoiding Europe's mistakes. We can help Europe and ourselves best by setting an example of national

Effects on Various Countries

Ultimately the effects of gold suspension should be favorable to world business. However, the immediate effects will vary in different countries. Even though Great Britain's bonds and notes, payable in foreign currencies, are not affected by the suspension, nevertheless, these, and other foreign bonds, will suffer from the shock. Creditor nations such as the United States, France, Sweden, Holland, and Switzerland, will incur losses, whereas debtor nations will find their debt burdens lightened. Holders of sterling exchange in France, the United States, and South America, will lose about $1,300,000,000 assuming that the pound sterling falls approximately one-third, which is now estimated. England, on the other hand, will wipe off perhaps one-third of her domestic debt by the fall in the price of the pound. Also, commodity prices in England should show some rise and this will tend to stimulate business to some extent. Likewise England's exports will be helped.

England will be handicapped in buying goods from gold-standard countries, such as the United States, because of the lower value of the pound in relation to the dollar. Hence, unless the rise in England's domestic prices is sufficient to offset it, the tendency will be to retard American exports to Great Britain. Over-shadowing all these possible early effects, however, are the ultimate benefits to all nations through the stabilization of the confidence as the world realizes England's determination to follow a sane, upright, and straight-forward policy of national economy. Just as England courageously, and at great sacrifice, led the world back onto a gold standard in 1925, so she will encourage the confidence of the world in her determination to follow a sane, upright, and straight-forward policy of national economy.

Roger W. Babson Talks on Unemployment Relief

Is Personally More Optimistic on Outlook for Business than Has Been Any Time During the Depression—Put Young Workers in School

Babson Park, Massachusetts, September 25, 1931. Here at Babson Park we have just held the Eighteenth Annual National Business Conference, at which business men, labor leaders, investors, bankers, and Government officials gathered to discuss the pressing problems of the moment. Labor and unemployment was recognized as the most important issue. I want to say that as a result of the Conference, I personally am more optimistic on the outlook for business and for unemployment than I have been at any time during the depression. I am optimistic because I saw this representative group of American people from all parts of the country were imbued with a new spirit of courage, determination, and unselfishness—a desire to get back to the fundamentals of thinking, living, and working which built up this great country.

Assistant Secretary of Labor, W. W. Hubbard, speaking for Secretary Doak, struck the keynote at the Conference when he said: "We need a rebirth of the spirit that has given this country the foremost place among nations. President Hoover has said: 'Economic depression cannot be cured by legislation or executive pronouncement.' To me, at any rate, this is an axiom. Something else is needed and that something is what is known as the 'I will' spirit." As the discussion progressed, opinion crystallized on this point, namely, that it is not money, commodities, machinery, legislation, or other material things that the world needs today, but rather a renewal of spiritual forces. This alone will give the confidence which all nations so sorely need.

Proceeding on these fundamental principles, the Conference then outlined a practical program whereby these principles may be put into effect.

Put Young Workers in School

Recognizing that what the unemployed worker needs most, while waiting for work, is training for future employment and restoration of his courage, the Conference passed the following resolutions which were forwarded to the Gifford Committee for Unemployment Relief: (1) That the Smith-Hughes bill be revised to permit schools to take the adult worker who is out of employment, and in order that the unemployment situation may be relieved, all workers under 18 be released and kept in school. If this were done all, or a large proportion of adults could be given employment. (2) That any worker under 18 should be permitted to attend school during this period of over-supply of labor and

Fall Color Trees Are Important

Those Who Landscape Homes Should Use Discretion to Make October a Joy

By R. E. Henderson, Jr.
(Andover Tree Expert)

The choice of trees with beautiful fall colors should be important to those who are landscaping their homes. It is possible with discretion, in choice of trees and shrubs to have the home grounds a veritable joy when October comes.

Everyone is familiar with the yellow Norway maple and its brother the Sugar maple whose flaming leaves lead all the rest. Here in Andover will see the elms turn yellow. If you wish to get more yellow in the fall landscape, plant birches, the Paper birch being the best.

There are other trees and shrubs which have beautiful colors, but are not so widely known. It is to this group that I wish to devote a greater part of my article.

The Ginnala maple is a small tree, growing to thirty feet. It is suitable where little space is available, and the orange red of its leaves in the fall is gorgeous. If one has a shady place on their grounds where they wish to plant a low spreading tree with delicate flowers in the spring, shining leaves in summer and glorious red in the fall I would recommend the flowering dog-wood.

Bronze fall color is not common, but the tree Andromeda gives this effect in the fall. Anyone who is interested in seeing this tree will find it in the planting at the side of the Savings Bank building on Main street. There is another tree that is excellent for shady places and which has beautiful yellow leaves in the fall. Purple colored leaves are found on some shrubs and if you watch the California Privet you will see it turn purple and it will last a long time during a semi-evergreen.

Evergreens of course furnish us with green color throughout the season; however there is the Bay-herry, one of the delicious shrubs which is a native. It stays green throughout the fall until winter, when it becomes bronze. In New York where it is rare, it is used extensively in landscape work and I would suggest it as a plant worthy of a place in the home planting. And here I wish to digress a moment and say a bit about two other shrubs which are natives and which you should use more. There is the Chokeberry which is found in pastures and which in the fall holds its red berries surrounded by dark red leaves. The other native shrub which, though lacking in fall interest, has white flowers with luxuriant green foliage. This shrub is called Summer Sweet or Clethra. I could go on eulogizing the value of various trees and shrubs which will soon stand in their glory, but as a last word I would advise those who are planting this fall not to forget to lay some stress in their choice of plants with regard to fall color.

Meeting Dates at Christ Church

The Young People's Fellowship will begin the meetings on Sunday night at 6:30 p.m. Miss Ella Larkin is president for the coming year. Those who went to the Concord Conference last June will make reports of that gathering of young people. A cordial invitation is given to all who should be interested.

The Boy Scouts will meet on Tuesday nights this year instead of Friday nights. These meetings will begin at 7:00 o'clock. It is pleasant to recall that, among their recent possessions, this troop holds the Commissioner's flag which was awarded last June at Methuen. New members will be welcome.

The Girls' Friendly society players are rehearsing for the play, "The Climbing Roses", to be given on October 16.

Dwight Meade Opens Season

The Dwight Meade Players who will open at the Colonial theatre, Lawrence, September 28, in Fred Borden's great farce, "Little Miss Bluebeard" is a dramatic stock organization of superior merit. One has to baffle over the names of the players engaged to realize this fact.

Mr. Meade himself needs no introduction to the Lawrence theatre-going public. As a comedian in Malden and Salem, Mass., as well as with Boston and New York productions.

John B. Mack, director of productions is one of the ablest in his field.

Herbert Beutt, the assistant director, is a man with a record of achievement.

Betty Colter, the leading woman, comes to Lawrence fresh from Broadway where she appeared in the support of George M. Cohan and other prominent stars. She is a piquant blonde of personality and charm.

The box office of the Colonial is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Telephone orders will receive prompt, careful and courteous attention.

Byrd Bruce is another member who will win a place in the hearts of the Colonial theatre patrons.

Johnny Galvin, "The Boy with the Million Dollar Personality", will play the comedy part. He has been the star at the head of his own company the past four years in Ottawa, Canada where he received the endorsement of the Governor General, Lord Willington and Lady Willington.

Margaret Selkirk also appeared in Ottawa under the patronage of Lord and Lady Willington.

Spencer Bentley is the business manager of "The Dwight Meade Players".

The box office of the Colonial is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Telephone orders will receive prompt, careful and courteous attention.

Campaign Against Hoarding

I also believe that a national campaign against "hoarding", a campaign based on patriotic grounds such as sold Liberty Bonds during the War, would do much good in starting money back into circulation, speeding up business, and giving men jobs. It is astonishingly true that over $820,000,000 has been taken out of circulation and hoarded away in safe deposit boxes, attics, cellars, and possibly hollowed-out trees. Also people, who have no need to, have cut down necessary expenditures merely because "depression psychology" has frightened them. Those whose incomes have not been lowered ought to pursue their normal living, and to buy those things which they need, thus affording work for their less fortunate brothers. The very life-blood of business is the rapid circulation of money. Hence, this hoarding is a pernicious thing and brands the hoarder as both cowardly and unpatriotic. There is plenty of money in this country, but because of lack of confidence and because of unreasoning terror much of it is temporarily hidden away. Get it out again and business and employment will at once revive.

Furthermore, those well-to-do people, who fear the dole with its increase in this country, let their hand spend money for commodities than have it taken away from them in "dole" taxes. By buying goods now they will help the unemployed more than by any public or private charity, and make the dole unnecessary. I do not mean that there should be extravagance. We are suffering now from the effects of the extravagances of 1928 and 1929. Rather, I mean buying of useful things at present bargain levels, things which they are now refraining from buying for fear of being criticized or because they have become panicky over conditions. Remember that unemployed dollars make unemployed men. For self-protection, for humanity's sake, and for patriotism, every one who can afford to should buy goods now.

Business Must Share Responsibility

Business Must Share Responsibility

On the whole business men have acted nobly in these trying times. They have let workers go only when they were forced to and have tried to maintain wages. However, no really constructive leadership has arisen from the ranks of business to help in solving unemployment. The time has come when business must either take its share of this responsibility or turn the whole question over to the Government.

If business allows the Government to take over the whole burden of the unemployed, then it should not complain if later the Government exercises a more rigid control over business, or, indeed, actually engaged in ownership and operation of business. The best way to forestall Government ownership later, is for business now to assume its share of the unemployment problem and to work out constructive, statesmanlike, and courageous measures for its relief.

Business by the Babsonchart now registers 27 per cent below normal, or 12 per cent below what it was at this time a year ago.

Why My Next Car will be A FORD

When you buy a Ford there are two things you never have to worry about. One is reliability. The other is long life.

Here's an interesting letter from a Ford owner in North Carolina:

"My Ford was purchased May 8, 1928, and has been run 121,767 miles. It has never stopped on the road for repairs of any kind whatsoever except punctures.

"The brakes were relined at 101,000 miles. My gas mileage averaged 21 miles to the gallon, and on tires, 19,000 miles per tire. I travel over all kinds of road conditions—mountainous and flat.

"I consider this a wonderful record and I assure you my next car will also be a Ford."

This is just one of many tributes to the reliability and long life of the Ford. A Ford owner in Iowa tells of driving his Ford 73,000 miles in a single year. Another writes of 120,000 miles of good service.

Think ahead when you are considering the purchase of an automobile and consider what it will be like after thousands of miles of driving. Will you still be satisfied? Will you still say "it's a great car"?

If it's a Ford, you know everything will be O. K. It will be taking you there and back in good style, just as it has always done. And you will have saved many important, worth-while dollars in cost of operation and up-keep and low yearly depreciation.

Phillips Polo Begins Shortly

Lyle Phillips, director of polo at Phillips academy is looking forward to his best season at the local prep school, this year. Already fourteen men have reported for practice and the entire second team of the 1930 season is again among the ranks of riders. Harry Royal, captain of last year's team will again lead the school quartet this year.

Mr. Phillips said that this year is the first year that boys have ever arrived at school prepared to follow the ever-increasing sport of polo. This year a number of new men registered at the school and immediately signified their intentions of joining the polo outfit. This is a most encouraging sign to Mr. Phillips and he feels that already he can gather together a team of boys which will be equal if not better than last year's veteran team.

Abbot Receives Unexpected Gift

Out of the past of Abbot Academy have arisen two stories just embodied in the treasurer's annual report, recently published, which are worth retelling.

Miss Mary Frances Merriam, 1870, deceased 1917, was a most enthusiastic and active alumna in the raising of the "McKeen Fund." She devoted a generous portion of her time to personal interviews with alumnae.

Her sister, Katherine Merriam Dorr, 120 Dickerman road, Newton Highlands, has turned over to the treasurer pass book No. 310623—Suffolk Savings Bank, registered as follows:

"Church Memorial for Abbot Academy"

The stry donations for this fund as of January 2, 1907 amounted to $50.00. The interest accumulation since that date is $80.40.

The purpose of the Memorial was the installation of a Churchill Memorial window in the rear of Davis Hall.

Mrs. Dorr also has presented to the school her sister's library of books. The treasurer conveyed them to Andover and, under the supervision of the principal and the librarian, have found their place in the work of the school.

In the collection was a paper copy of an address delivered in December, 1852 by Daniel Webster to the students of Phillips Academy. It was ascertained that Phillips Academy had no copy of this address. With Mrs. Dorr's consent it was donated to the trustees of Phillips Academy who gratefully received it for their permanent files of valuable records.

Deaths

DALY

The following account of the untimely decease of Dr. John Daly of Lynn, formerly of Andover and well-known and loved by Andover people, is reprinted from a Lynn paper of last week:

Thousands of Greater Lynnners are mourning the loss of Dr. John Daly, one of the best known physicians in this city, whose funeral was held last week from his home on 317 Essex street at 9.15 with a solemn requiem high mass in St. Joseph's church at 10 o'clock.

Legion Band Teacher Gets College Post

D. A. Ives, Known in Town and at Academy, to Instruct at Boston University

D. A. Ives, well-known in Andover as bandmaster at the Phillips academy football games and the instructor on the American Legion, Andover Post, Bugle and Drum corps and who is also one of the best-known and most active bandmasters in Boston, has just been appointed director and instructor of the Boston University R. O. T. C. band. It was announced this week. Mr. Ives is the conductor of his own band and orchestra, also.

Mr. Ives' musical career dates back to the opening of this century. After studying in Boston under such noted teachers as Guillermo, Urquidi, John Hammond, Thomas Leverett, Gustav Strube and James Ecker, he travelled from 1900 to 1906 with the Innes Band of New York. In 1907 he organized Ives Band which was attached to the Massachusetts Naval Militia until 1917. The band was the first in the state to see war service, going to sea on board the U.S.S. Kearsarge, April 7, 1917, the day after the United States entered the war.

In 1918 Mr. Ives was transferred to the Naval Training Station at Newport, R. I., where he was in charge of the musicians' school there. Out of this school, which had a constantly changing personnel but whose members averaged 100 at all times, he trained men sufficient for 25 bands and sent these bands out to ships and training stations. While at Newport he also organized and conducted a bugle and drum corps of 125 men and a station band of 350 pieces.

After the war, in 1920, Conductor Ives was appointed bandmaster of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston, the oldest military organization in the country.
