"Old Fire-Eater" Goes On Exhibition Here

Piece of Apparatus Which Formed Sole Protection for Ballardvale Is at Andover Historical Society—Needs Missing Bell, Buckets

Mail Accident

A part of the mail delivery to Andover people Tuesday afternoon of this week was somewhat mutilated and caused many townspeople to inquire as to why the letters were in such a bad condition. The mutilation was the result of a strange accident to a mail pouch. It was tossed off a train about 100 yards below the Andover station as a train sped through the town, but it apparently was not tossed off carefully, for the pouch was dragged beneath the wheels of a car and chewed to pieces. As a result, some of the mail was thrown about under the wheels and on the tracks at that spot, but a good part of it, on account of the suction created as the train sped along the rails, remained beneath the cars until the train stopped at South Lawrence. The disaster made it necessary for some of the Andover post office employees to walk the railroad tracks from South Lawrence station to Andover, about four miles. Many pieces of mail, some badly and some not so badly damaged, were picked up on the way, and it is believed by post office officials that all of the mail in the pouch has been recovered. What was left of the pouch was just some rags with an iron lock.

Attend Amherst Club Conference

The reception in honor of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, first vice-president General Federation of Women's Clubs and a Mother Craft Conference, held in Amherst September 25, was attended by nine members of the Shawsheen Village Woman's club.

Arriving in Amherst at 11.30 a.m. the Dickinson-Baggs tavern was visited, followed by luncheon served in the garden.

In the afternoon the Conference was held in the Second Congregational church. Mrs. May Dickinson Kimball, hostess of the day, welcomed the club delegations. Mrs. Poole and other speakers of the General and State Federation and visiting clubs were heard.

Carl S. Shadrer, Superintendent of Physical Education of Massachusetts, and Dr. Payson Smith, Massachusetts Commissioner of Education, also spoke to the women.

Following the conference exercises were held on the Village Green where a beautiful evergreen was planted in honor of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole.

Those making the trip to Amherst were Mrs. Clinton Stevens, Mrs. Frederick Smith, Mrs. Frank Bartlett, Mrs. J. Everett Collins, Mrs. Dana Kirkland, Mrs. Albert Curtis, Mrs. Harvey Sprague, Mrs. Edward R. Lawson and Mrs. James P. Christie.

Although "Old Fire-eater" has answered her last alarm and uttered her last wheeze pumping water to put out a conflagration, although she now stands proudly withal somewhat shabbily in the old barn of the Andover Historical Society on Main street, her guardians have sent out the cry through Andover streets and over Andover's hills and dales to bring back her former glory. For even if she may be quite intact after all these years, she has some paraphernalia missing, and she wants to put them on again so that all may see what a glorious piece of apparatus she was in the days of her youth when she constituted the sole protection against fires in Ballardvale.

"Old Fire-eater", as you may suspect, is a piece of fire apparatus. She bears the date of 1859 on her side and the name Ballardvale. The Andover Historical Society has her now, in a rare state of preservation, in its barn, and it goes on exhibition next week. But "Old Fire-eater" is missing some parts, namely, her shining bell, her brass ornaments, and those wonderful aids to fire-fighting, her fire buckets. Officials at the society home believe that these parts must be resting in some Andover person's attic, buried perhaps, under some other old material, and forgotten during these busy days when fire apparatus runs by motor and the engines are big and powerful and make a terrible racket when they run down the street.

This fire engine was the sole piece of apparatus in Ballardvale for some years. She was, of course, discontinued a number of years ago, but through the foresight of Philip French, was preserved and finally turned over to the historical society. She has not been reconditioned yet, and needs paint and the missing parts to restore her to past glory.

In her day, "Old Fire-eater" wore a gaudy red coat of paint. When Mr. French had her removed to the historical society, she took a last look at the streets of Andover from the last lock.

Soccer Men Work Out at Phillips

James Ryley, coach of soccer at the academy the past twenty years, has turned out several undefeated teams during that time, and judging from the material he is working with will have another strong eleven. Jim has six veterans of a year ago, and thirty other candidates striving for places on the eleven, which opens its season on October 17. Labor academy will be the opening opponent and usually has a strong soccer team, but they have yet to win a victory over Andover. The blue booters will endeavor to keep that record clean. The probable starting Andover team will be: Forwards, Captain Upton, Vincent, Darling, Dorman and Badger; halfbacks, Paine, Fawcett, Preston; fullbacks, Ward and Washburn; goal, Walker.

Famous Trio Return Here for a Visit

Morgan Sisters, Who Played at Phillips Last Year, Renew Old Friendships

Accompanied by two sedate Siamese cats and a little dog, "Le Trio Morgan", known to Andover as those three Morgan sisters, Frances, Virginia and Marguerite, who now have played before royal and high-class audiences throughout America and Europe, came to Andover Monday for a short visit and to renew some old friendships.

The three girls, who used to live here, left for New York Tuesday over the road to make preparations for their winter season of concerts, for which they are well booked. They may return to play here again but they came back here to see how the town looked, how their old friends were, and to reminisce about the days when they were all little girls who ran about with the other children, never for a moment suspecting that they would attain international fame because of their remarkable talents in music.

New Possibilities
Frances plays the violin, Virginia the harp and Marguerite the piano. Not so many days ago they returned from a summer season in Europe, where "Le Trio Morgan" completed a series of musicales in England, France, Germany and Belgium, and in addition to concerts, collected a great deal of manuscript music which hasn't been played for nearly 200 years.

Alfred Cortot, in Paris, one of the greatest pianists in France, approved of their unusual combination of harp, piano and violin so much that he is having some of his music copied for them and arranged, as the combination of instruments offered new possibilities in the musical field. The sisters brought back several manuscripts to add to their large collection in New York, where they now make their home, and in addition to concerts, will broadcast over the radio.

This summer the sisters broadcast to America twice from Paris and were heard on a nationwide chain. They played six times before the American Commission in Paris, and broadcast from Leipzig and London while abroad. It will be recalled that the sisters gave a beautiful concert last season in Washington Hall at Phillips academy.

Their mother, Mrs. H. P. Morgan, who maintained a residence on Main street when the girls were small, travels with them all time. Marguerite, the pianist, went for a time to Abbot.

Their career is summarized in the following story:

Where They Played
Le Trio Morgan have received unanimous praise at their concerts in Paris, London, Cairo, Alexandria, St. Jean de Luz, Biarritz, Florence, Rome, Nice, Menton, Cannes, Beaulieu, Monte Carlo, etc., and in performances before the King of Sweden, King of Denmark, Princess Mary, Duke of Connaught, Princess Louise, Princess Beatrice at Kensington Palace, President Doumergue, Premier Mussolini, American Embassy in Rome, Argentine Embassy in Paris, etc.

Phillips Begins Its Grid Season

Plays New Hampton Tomorrow in Home Game at Brothers Field on Hill

Ray Shepard starting his seventh season as coach of the Phillips academy football squad will trot out his 1931 edition Saturday afternoon at two o'clock with the New Hampton school eleven of New Hampton, N. H., as opponents.

Mr. Shepard, assisted by Vernon Hagenbuckle, Frank M. Benton, Karl Billhardt and Roscoe Dake, all of the P. A. faculty has had more than sixty boys drilling daily in the fundamentals of the great fall sport for the past two weeks.

Though there are fourteen lettermen available, six of whom were in the starting lineup against Exeter a year ago, there is no "Eddie" King in the squad. Shepard built his eleven around King last fall, and the remarkable passing ability of that lad will never be forgotten by those who attended the final game last fall. His uncanny ability to gain ground on sweeping end runs, which usually brought him to the side lines without being tackled, thus saving himself for the many duties expected from him, enabled the blue coach to have King punt, pass and direct the game as well.

This is another year, however. After watching the boys scrimmage and in a practice game with Lawrence high, Wednesday afternoon, the writer believes the blue coaching staff have a tremendous lot of work ahead (Continued on page 5, column 3)

As the Board of Selectmen in Andover prepare this week to send out the referendum ballots on the telephone situation to determine once and for all whether Andover telephone subscribers wish to remain outside of the Lawrence exchange or join it, developments of the past week show that a steering committee of citizens met in the town hall Monday to arrange for "missionaries" to go out among the people of Andover to convince them that Andover phone users will be better off within the Lawrence exchange.

At the same time, in an interview with Joseph Cassidy of Shawsheen village, who is manager of the Lawrence and Andover exchange, it was brought out that the telephone company's stand is neutral in the matter, that this utilities organization is not interested one way or the other in the situation except to satisfy Andover subscribers, that, despite what many townspeople believe and say, the telephone company "is not contemplating installing a dial system in Andover or firing the 15 operators which serve the town now."

Raise Rates $2.50

Mr. Cassidy also turned over to the Townsman a copy of the referendum which all telephone subscribers will receive in the mail shortly. This referendum tells the rates in effect now and the rates as they will be if Andover subscribers vote to consolidate with Lawrence. The most startling change in the rates affects Andover business men who have now a one-party unlimited phone, costing $4.50 a month, with additional charges for toll calls to Lawrence. The new rate for these business men, if Andover consolidates its phone system with Lawrence, will be $7.00, an increase of $2.50 over the present rate for Andover, with no extra charge or toll for calls to Lawrence. At the same time, business men in Lawrence who have the one-party unlimited service will have an increase in rate, too, if the consolidation is effected, for they will have to pay $7.00, an increase of fifty cents over the rate they pay monthly now.

For residents of Andover, if they vote to consolidate with Lawrence, the average increase in the base rate will be fifty cents. The ballot that subscribers will receive is printed elsewhere in the Townsman.

The meeting Monday night in the town hall of the steering committee was attended by scarcely forty people, as invitations to attend have been sent out to those who were wanted at the meeting. No previous or public announcement had been made of the meeting so the majority of the subscribers, although vitally interested in any discussion on a consolidation, were absent.

Orchard Soils

Many orchard soils have become unproductive because of lack of organic matter. Fruit and terminal growth on the trees are short; the bark becomes tight; the fruit doesn't size up; fruit may crack in summer following rainy periods which come after severe dry spells; die-back or rosette may appear on the terminals; top and root injuries may occur in winter; and sometimes there is no response from nitrogen fertilizer. Supply organic matter either by growing heavy sod in sod orchards or by turning under heavy cover crops in cultivated orchards, advise horticulturists.

CHAPTER XLV

The Second division assumed the offensive June 6, 1918, and began a series of attacks which culminated some three weeks later in the capture of the last German positions in the Bois de Belleau by its marine brigade and of Vaux by its regular brigade.

The fighting during most of this period was of peculiar intensity. The German lines were favorably located on commanding ground and were made more formidable by the extensive use of machine guns, especially in Belleau wood.

In the initial advance Harbord's marine brigade captured Boresches, and Lewis' regular brigade took Triangle farm and Bois de la Barrette. During the next few days our troops progressed piecemeal. June 15 the Seventh infantry, Third division, arrived to reinforce the marine brigade engaged in the wood. This regiment relieved the brigade on that date and the marines were rested for a week, when they again entered the line. Against stubborn resistance, they drove the enemy from the wood June 25.

Regulars Capture Vaux.

Meanwhile the regular brigade continued its attacks intermittently, and July 1, with great dash, captured Vaux and the Bois de la Roche. The operations of the division in this vicinity were practically at an end when the new lines were stabilized on the high ground captured from the enemy. The casualties in the division were about 9,500. More than 1,000 prisoners were captured from the enemy. The gains by the Second division were won with little aid on either flank by the French units, which were still in poor shape, and were made against an enemy determined to crush this early American effort. The success of this division and of the First at Cantigny and the Third on the Marne, following as they did the crisis of May 27, were loudly acclaimed by the French, and for the time being had a very stimulating effect upon French morale.

With the transfer of activities to the French front northeast of Paris, our plan to build up an American corps near Amiens had become impracticable, and as I had offered General Petain the services of our divisions wherever they might be needed it now appeared possible to form at least a corps and possibly an army somewhere along the Marne salient.

U. S. Divisions Relieve French.

I had suggested that we should bring other divisions to join the Second and Third for that purpose, and accordingly the Twenty-sixth and Forty-second were relieved from the inactive Vosges front, and five American divisions from the British area were designated to be sent to that quiet sector to relieve French divisions. The assembly of four American divisions in aid of the French on that front would more than offset their recent losses.

General Petain, in his letter accepting my offer, said in part: "I must express my deep gratitude for the prompt and very important aid you are bringing in the present crisis. The American troops already engaged in the battle are the unanimous admiration of the whole French army. The power of the effort which your country is at present showing, as well as the resolute and generous spirit with which you enter the struggle, is for the allies—and above all for France—a comfort in the grave times through which we are passing, and a pledge of hope for the future."

What if Paris Should Fall?

Leaving the suggestion with General Petain, without further discussion, I returned to Paris, arriving June 8. The next morning I called on President Clemenceau, and on that morning the fourth phase of the great German offensive started between Montdidier and the Oise. Reports indicated that it was meeting considerable success. Mentioning this to M. Clemenceau I asked him what he thought would be the result if Paris should fall.

M. Clemenceau replied that he and Mr. Lloyd George had considered that possibility, and had reached the conclusion they would do everything in their power to save Paris, but if it should be lost they would go on fighting.

"Above Paris is France," he added, "and above France is civilization." As I was leaving he came to the door with me, and I said: "It may not look encouraging just now but we are certain to win in the end." He clung to my hand and in a tone that showed the utmost solicitude he replied: "Do you really think that? I am glad to hear you say it."

This was the first and only time that I ever sensed any misgiving in the mind of this resolute man. Notwithstanding our occasional rather heated discussions on the use to be made of American troops, I admired him greatly. It always seemed to me he represented the true spirit of confidence and courage of the French people.

I then motored to General Foch's headquarters at Bombon. We considered my proposal to form an American corps near Chateau Thierry, to which he readily agreed. He spoke especially of the fine work of our troops.

I asked how a German drive which threatened or perhaps captured Paris would affect the army and the people. His reply was almost word for word like M. Clemenceau's. They had evidently discussed the possibility of losing Paris. He, too, was certain the armies would go on with the war. Foch spoke so positively and with such evident feeling that I was moved to get up and shake his hand.

Explains Prevention of Fires

Chief Emerson Asks Cooperation of Andover in Fire Prevention Week

Calling attention to Fire Prevention Week, beginning tomorrow, October 4, and lasting until October 10, Chief Charles F. Emerson of the Andover Fire Department has issued a request to all Andover citizens this week to clean up their yards and cellars of all rubbish and to examine their chimneys and if necessary, have them swept so that the fire hazard will be cut down. The week is being observed throughout the state and Chief Emerson has asked the schools to cooperate with him to inform school children of the meaning of the week and its purposes.

Chief Emerson, at the request of the State Fire Marshal's office, will get his men together at two separate conferences during the week, one conference to be on "Fire prevention rules and regulations" and the other on "Fire fighting and fire drills."

Governor Joseph B. Ely has issued the following proclamation for the week: At the approach of Fire Prevention Week, I deem it my duty to call the attention of the people of the Commonwealth to the great economic loss representing the destruction of created wealth and property by fire during the past year 1930. The figures I give you as a matter of fact represent but a small proportion of the total cost of fires. Millions of dollars are expended each year by the cities and towns of the state in maintenance of fire departments for public fire protection. To this cost must be added the expense of water supply, hydrant service, fire protection provided at private plants and factories, private fire alarm systems, premiums paid for fire hazards, all estimated at not less than seventy millions of dollars. Of course, the loss to communities of taxable property, the loss to employers by reason of interruption of business due to fires, and the loss to employees in wages add very materially to the losses our citizens are called upon to bear.

The total number of fires causing loss or damage to property in this state during the year 1930 was 9,276, an increase of 362 over the number occurring in 1929. The assessors' valuation of the property involved in these fires was approximately $273,000,000, the amount of insurance in force on the property, $310,000,000. The total estimated loss to property by fire in 1930 was $18,000,000, of which the insurance companies paid $16,000,000. The fire loss of 1930 was nearly two millions of dollars more than in 1929. The number of deaths actually occurring from fires during 1930 was 63: 27 men, 18 women and 18 children. In 1929 the total fatalities were 36, which indicates an increase of 75 per cent in accidental deaths by fire in 1930.

With the thought of this appalling economic loss in my mind and with a desire to impress it upon every citizen, I hereby designate and set apart the week beginning October fourth as Fire Prevention Week and I earnestly request that all, both individually and through civic organizations, through the churches, schools, and the press renew and increase the effort to minimize in Massachusetts this great burden of loss and sorrow.

Given at the Executive Chamber, in Boston, this twenty-first day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-sixth.

JOSEPH B. ELY

Hens lay well when they are kept in confinement during the fall and winter, provided the poultry house is well ventilated and well lighted and the hens get a well-balanced ration. Hens that do not get direct sunlight need 1 1/2 to 1 per cent of cod-liver oil in the mash.

and the necessity of winning the war is so great that there is no limit to which we should not go to carry out the plan I have outlined for the next ten months, and we must be prepared to carry it on still further after that at the same rate or maybe faster."

Vastness of Request Unrealized.

Far short had we fallen of the expectations of the preceding November, when Foch, General Robertson of the British, and I had joined in an urgent appeal for twenty-four trained American divisions by the following June. It is small wonder that the allies were now so insistent in urging increased and continuous shipments of men, trained or untrained.

So serious was the situation regarded that it was no longer a demand for twenty-four divisions but for one hundred. It is probable that the vastness of this request was not fully realized, or else the allies had greatly exaggerated ideas of our power of accomplishment, surprising as it actually proved to be.

A brief calculation of these demands of the prime ministers showed that they were asking more than 2,500,000 combatant troops by the following spring, which, augmented by those required for the services of supply, conservatively calculated for a well-balanced force situated in a foreign country under the circumstances that surrounded us, would amount at least to 4,000,000 men.

The American combatant force would thus have equaled 200 divisions of the allies, and their apprehension may be imagined when we realize that this was greater by one-fourth than the combined allied armies of 162 divisions then on the western front.

Saw 3,000,000 as Limit.

Although no such number as this could have been considered feasible, as it is unlikely that it could have been either transported, equipped or supplied, it was necessary, in view of the situation, to lay plans for bringing over all we could. After giving the question careful study, it seemed to me that 3,000,000 men would be the limit we could hope to reach by the spring of 1919.

This, roughly, would provide at least sixty-six or possibly over seventy combatant divisions, the rest being necessary for the noncombatant service. As we had hitherto made estimates based upon a total force of 2,000,000 men, it was quite imperative that calculations should be made on the increased basis and that work everywhere in the A. E. F. should now have that end in view.

A cable I sent June 21 set forth the reasons for fixing the program for the future definitely at 3,000,000 men as a minimum, and urged upon the War department the utmost effort to meet our immediate requirements for the expansion of port facilities and railroads. A detailed study of the troop shipments and tonnage required was included. My cable closed: "There is nothing so dreadfully important as winning this war, and every possible resource should be made immediately available. Mr. Secretary, the question is so vital to our country

Carving in itself is a most difficult task and its worst feature seems to be the string used to sew the stuffing into the chicken or turkey. At least that can be eliminated. After the stuffing is in, insert toothpicks on either side of opening and lace string back and forth over the picks. When the fowl is roasted, the picks can be removed, and so the string is out of the way without tearing the meat or skin, and saving a lot of trouble in carving.

Edward M. Rickard Addresses Club in Evening at Banquet—Two Tournaments Feature Annual Event Despite Drizzle—Ten Prizes Awarded

Despite the inclement weather with a drizzle of rain that fell throughout the occasion the golfers went through with the affair.

During the afternoon ten prizes were won. There was an 18-hole tournament for those who had not won a prize during the season and another 18-hole open tournament. In the former James H. Eaton former club champion, won low gross with a 77. Kellogg Boynton copped best net with a 63 and O. B. Benson second net with 65, in Class A. In class B the winner was F. D. Manning with a gross of 94 and A. W. Sargent with a net of 65. For second best net, F. C. Nichols and M. E. Hoffman were tied with 69 with the former winning the draw for the prize.

THE ANDOVER TOWNSMAN ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY AT THE PRESS BUILDING BY THE ANDOVER PRESS DAVID BRICKMAN, Managing Editor

TOWNSMAN Telephone 1324 BOOKSTORE Telephone 1324 PRESS Telephone 143 Entered at Andover Postoffice as Second Class Matter

Notes That Don't Count

It will take more than referendums, oratory, hearings, requests, complaints, charges and counter-charges, and any other devious method known to man, to appease all the people of Andover on this telephone matter.

There has been every kind of indication in the past that the town is quite evenly divided on the telephone consolidation question, and whichever side wins this time, regardless of the statement by the telephone company to the Townsman this week that this new ballot will decide for all time the kind of service Andover will get, there is no evidence to show from the high feeling about town that the other side will be satisfied with the decision.

Suppose that the opposition to the consolidation wins in the forthcoming balloting, as is quite likely. Will those people of Andover who want to eliminate the toll charge to Lawrence from here be satisfied? Not for a moment. They will continue to protest against the present system and will continue to find means to forward their desires. The result will be a never-ending combat between two factions in Andover, and nobody can venture to forecast the outcome of such a combat.

As far as the telephone problem is concerned, Andover has two classes of people. One class will not countenance a union with the Lawrence telephone area and an increase in rates because it does not call Lawrence but little during the course of the month. The other, doing much of its business and social phoning to that city, demands the elimination of toll rate between the two communities and a proportionate rise in the base rate to cover the change. One group is

Phillips Exeter Begins Its Year

Phillips Exeter academy began a new year with the customary chapel service on Wednesday noon of last week for devotions, well coming remarks and announcements. Recitations began Thursday morning.

Of the faculty of last year Messrs. Joseph S. Ford and Norman S. McKendrick are on leaves of absence. Rev. Victor M. Haughton, recently died; Spencer R. Humby, a visiting instructor, has returned to his English school, and Eric D. Bovey has withdrawn. The following ten additional instructors have been appointed to meet the requirements of the Harkness plan:

New Members John Clarkson Hoeg, M.C., M.A., F.C.S., is a graduate of Queen's college, Cambridge University, and has studied in Harvard's Graduate school. His teaching, following brief service at the English Rugby, has been at St. Johns, Newfoundland, for seven years at United Church College and since 1929 at Memorial University college as professor of chemistry with direction of the work in physics. He was a member of Newfoundland's Council of Higher Education and is a member of various learned societies. During the World War he was captain of a British machine gun company and won the military cross, also commendation by General Gough. He will be teaching with direction of the work in French in an English school and at the United Church college in St. Johns.

Claude B. Lloyd, instructor in English, graduated from Simmons, a Texas college, in 1917, in 1925 received his Ph.D. at Yale and since 1924 has been an assistant professor at the University of New Hampshire. He is married and has two children. George S. Carhart, English, was graduated from the University of Rochester in 1923 and has taken post-graduate courses at Princeton. His teaching has been at the Rochester, N. Y. high school.

John Mayher, English, graduated from Amherst in 1926 and has since taught at St. Paul's school. Zenas Franklin Neumeister, one of two new French instructors, graduated from Wesleyan in 1925 and has studied in France and at Harvard. He comes from Brookline high. Harris H. Thomas, French, was graduated from Trinity in 1924 and since 1925 has taught at St. Paul's school, save for leaves of absence for study in France.

James Tellar Schoolcraft, instructor in German, was graduated from Union college, has studied at Heidelberg and received his master's degree at Columbia. He has taught at the University of Manitoba.

Henry L. C. Leighton, mathematics, graduated from Bowdoin in 1925 with distinction and last June received his master's degree at Harvard. He has taught in an Augusta (Me.) high school and at Tufts.

Arthur A. Landers, music, is a graduate of Harvard and has taught at the North Shore Country Day school at Winnetka, Ill.

Plant Improved The school plant has been materially improved. To meet demands of the Harkness plan the academy building has been enlarged by wing extensions, which afford 20 additional recitation or conference rooms for the first time in many years every instructor now has a room for his exclusive use. Appurtenant to the enlargement there is another main entrance on the north side, flanked by ornamental walls and terraces.

The Merrill buildings have been abandoned and the administrative offices now have ideal quarters in the state administration building, the gift of the late Colonel William B. Thompson. As viewed from Main street,

Communications

To the Editor of Andover Townsman:

Will you explain how asking a favor is construed into making a complaint. Having occasion to call at the Town Hall to see one of the Selectmen appointed on a lodge committee with me I found the full board in session. Before leaving I brought up the question of the siren on the engine house. I asked if the system could be changed to repeat but twice instead of four times as at present for example if box 68 is turned in it means no blasts on the siren. On being informed the whole system would have to be changed with considerable expense involved I told them it was not my desire to put the town to any expense. I then asked to have the two blows all out on night alarms eliminated, stating that my brother recently died after a nine months' illness with cancer. The last of his illness being in the winter and early spring when alarms were most frequent he was often pretty badly distressed at times by the alarms. My wife just returned from a serious hospital operation is slowly convalescing. The majority of her patients died after a complaint when I ask to have the all out on all regular night alarms stopped. If a little common sense instead of nonsense is used and the all out signal eliminated from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m., which is eight hours out of the 24 I believe the majority of the residents in the center district will appreciate the change.

Andover's School Problem—An Expansive and Expensive Policy

To the Editor of Andover Townsman: Just so long as our Superintendent of Schools and the Chairman of our School Committee insist upon foisting their advanced new policy of education upon our school system, just so long will we be hampered by articles such as appeared in the Townsman of last week.

The vital question before the taxpayers of Andover touching our schools is very simple. It is this: Either to endorse this new policy and bond the town to pay for a new style school building—a quasi-factory, quasi-domestic type—large enough and equipped enough for the proper functioning of multiple projects, or to refuse to adopt this policy and confine our school system to activities best suited to promote purely mental, physical and moral training.

To adopt their "expansive" policy and at the same time refuse them the enlarged room space which their new system demands, is sheer hypocrisy. This expansive policy and a new quasi-factory school building are vitally joined.

If we adopt the one we must provide the other. Hence, those school officials who insist upon "industrial training" and "vocational guidance" are perfectly consistent in demanding that their new system demands, is adequate for experimentation along these new lines. On the other hand, the intelligent people of Andover who are convinced that our schools were founded and maintained to discipline and develop the minds of our children rather than to guide them into some mechanical job, are equally consistent in refusing these demands.

It was believed that the issue between these two school policies was definitely and finally decided at our Town Meeting when the voters of Andover, by an overwhelming majority, refused to furnish the new school building asked for.

This new building, we were told by the Superintendent in his report, (1929) should be large enough "to contain 14 regular classrooms and 5 special rooms—one for sewing, one for drawing, one for elemental science, and one for music. There should also be a library, a principal's office, teachers' rooms, janitor's room, and stock room. It should have accommodations would meet the needs of the schools, as far as the Committee is able to judge, for a period of not less than ten years."

It is well to remind our citizens that Reading built such a school building (only much larger) at an expense of nearly $400,000. This was a three or four years ago and what is the result? Their yearly school cost has reached the enormous sum of $225,000 and yet this sum is declared by its Superintendent to be wholly inadequate to meet the "expanding" needs of this new school policy. I quote from their last school report:

"Every room is in use at present. The Junior high school is greatly filled to its capacity, and it is imperative to plan for the erection of a new building in the near future." He boasts of the new additions to the curriculum in the way of new "clinics": "a dental clinic, habit clinic, posture clinic, diphtheria clinic, an underweight clinic, and a pre-school clinic, also a second school nurse."

He urges the committee still to add "a teacher in lip reading" for deaf students and the services of an "otologist."

He further urges the closing of all the rural schools and housing the students in one centralized plant.

Here then, we get a glimpse of what is necessarily involved in this "modern trend" in education.

The one idea behind all their urge is "expansion." It is folly for our Superintendent to think he can adopt this new expansive school policy and not expand. He has been expanding our school curriculum for the last ten years. The very nature of this new policy demands expansion and this year by year till it covers the entire needs of every boy and girl of school age.

And now comes along the new addition of "vocational guidance." This is a pet slogan and at once captures the imagination of the parent. To guide her child into his life job would take from her shoulders her chief worry. The teacher is to make a microscopic analysis of her boy's "capacities" and "major preferences," and a similar "scientific" analysis of the various kinds of trades and professions, and then see to it that her child shall be "scientifically" conducted into just that kind of life work for which he is constitutionally fitted.

Surely this task of the school teacher opens an "expansive" program. Yet there is no escaping this task by Andover teachers if "vocational guidance" has any practical meaning.

Oh the folly of it! A soap bubble has a marvelous expansive power, but it always explodes.

Aldready scores of voices are raised against this new "scientific" but psychologically sound policy, so urgently demanded by a few of our school officials, might "do the trick."

An acre of land thoroughly fertilized and intensively cultivated will bring forth more fruit than a ten-acre lot unfertilized, and poorly cultivated.

Andover does not need to be told what constitutes genuine "education," and will refuse to be led into blind alleys.

THE BOY AND THE BEANS

Edison, for God so built the world. Edison persisted through nine thousand experiments before he perfected the storage battery; it took Gibbons twenty eager years to write "The Decline and Fall of Rome"; Lincoln thought he heard his country call but he faced a half dozen defeats before he won the war. Steadfastness alone will win earth's glories, life's prizes, a Christian character, and Heaven. "He that endureth," wins.

Telephone Ballot Stirs Andover

Mr. Cassidy's Statement

It was revealed by the telephone company that at least 25 people living in Andover now, who live in Lawrence and Shawsheen village, are connected with the Lawrence exchange and do not have to pay a toll rate to call that city from their homes, as other residents of town do now. These subscribers are paying a Lawrence rate for phone service plus a "foreign exchange mileage charge."

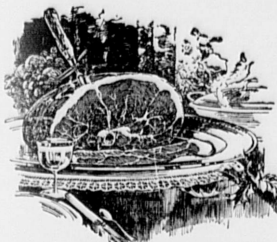

Methuen and North Andover are included in the Lawrence exchange, but subscribers from those two towns pay a Lawrence rate plus a mileage charge, and there is no toll charge for them from those towns.

Mr. Cassidy reiterated the stand of the telephone company with the following statement, a repetition of his statement made three years ago:

At present Lawrence, by reason of the number of telephones in use in that exchange, is in Group I-A of the Company's schedules and its subscribers pay the rates established for that group. Andover is in Group VI and its subscribers pay the rates established for that group. A considerable number of subscribers in Andover wish to be included in the Lawrence Exchange area so that there will be no toll charges on messages between the two municipalities. If this action is taken the number of telephones in Andover added to those in Lawrence will result in an exchange which should include in Group I-A of the Company's schedules, the subscribers who now make up Group VI and its subscribers pay the rates established for that group. Andover is in Group VI and its subscribers pay the rates established for that group. Sunday morning the Sunday school is to celebrate its Rally Day. We are looking forward to having all of the teachers and scholars who are to be with us this year in good spirits and enthusiastic to begin their year of Jesus with the help of the moving pictures, "I Am the Way". Phillips Academy Primed for Opening Game with New Hampton

(Continued from page 1) before they get a smooth combination working as a unit. Against Lawrence Wednesday, the second leads started, and though the high school lads made four first downs they did not get closer than the 40 yard line. The blue varsity then replaced the scrubs, but if anything their work was more ragged and they looked like anything but the group that is supposed to uphold the Andover colors against many freshmen teams during the next few weeks. Scott Fitz fumbled atrociously, though he did run 95 yards for a touchdown after one of his muffs of the pigskin. But, against a real opponent say the Yale fresh group, it would most likely have been converted into an enemy touchdown, for the Lawrence ends were as slow as truck horses on that particular miff. A fast end would have had that fumble before Fitz got started. The latter has great possibilities as a good ball carrier. His ability to shift his hips and change his pace are pretty to watch, but a tendency to pile into his interference, particularly on end runs was very noticeable Wednesday. Another thing observed in the session with Lawrence was the number of penalties imposed because of offside play. The boys were over-anxious, but Coach Shepard will have that fault corrected in short order, as too much valuable ground can be lost because of the carelessness and over-zealousness of the linemen. Coach Benton, who year in and year out has turned out remarkable linemen for the blue, has plenty of work before him to replace Strauss and Foreman, last year's blue tackles. Norman Cabners and Bill Peterson are endeavoring to fill the places, and we feel sure that "F. M." will have them going places by mid-season time. Cahners, 196 pounds, and Peterson, 190 pounds, have the ideal build for great tackles. Henry Gardner, who unexpectedly returned to school last week will be at left guard, a position he has played the past three years. Captain H. "Webb" Davis, weighing 150 pounds, will endeavor to live up to the traditions of the Davis family. His brother Phil, considered by many to have been the best guard Andover has had since before the war has a worthy successor in the present member of the blue. "Webb" will take care of his position against all opponents. Dick Barr has the center position clinched, but Dan Lewis will be in many games as he is aggressive and is a hard tackler. George O'Neill at right end is certain of that position but left end is wide open to members of the wing squad. D. K. Brown and Bailey Brown, endeavoring to win the praises of Coach Hagenbuckle, are running neck and neck for the chance to be considered the varsity left end. Kimball Whitehead, a chunky lad of 175 pounds, who gained distinction last fall by being chosen All-New Jersey interscholastic basketball has displayed sufficient ability to make a backfield place. He is the only non-letter man picked to start the opening game tomorrow. Whitehead was a member of the Pingree school team of Elizabeth, N. J., last year and comes to Andover with the reputation of being a fine ball carrier. Andoverites remember the first stories regarding Bart Viviano's ability three years ago, when he came here and was heralded as an All-New Jersey back. We all hope the latest member from the "Mosquito" state has half the ability of the present Cornell star. Johnny Bird, quarterback and fine defense man, Roy Graham and Scott Fitz round out the varsity backfield. Other boys who will get action tomorrow will be: J. P. Miller, C. P. Corrigan, J. W. Barclay, J. W. Rowland, George Hite, Dan Lewis, W. Gates, Sid Sweet, V. Gardner, a younger brother of Henry, Dean who was at Exeter last year, R. L. Howard, D. K. Brown and W. P. Jones. Dean, a 200 pounder, was a member of the Exeter all-class team last fall that defeated Andover's all-club eleven. The New Hampton squad which was defeated by a 37 to 0 score last year expect to make things more difficult for Andover tomorrow. A year ago they came here with only a week's practice, but this fall have been out almost three weeks, and feel sure a touchdown or two will be the margin of victory. Joe Dziadosz, a North Andover boy, will be at left guard for the visitors. He was one of Johnson's stars last fall and his fine work gained him a place on the All-Suburban team a year ago. He is a clever basketball player as well and captained the Johnson hoop team last winter. Many admirers and classmates from the adjoining town will be at Brothers field Saturday to root for Joe.

Morgan Sisters Make Brief Stop (Continued from page 1) interpreted more brilliantly and with more precision by an individual virtuoso or by a great symphony orchestra playing under the baton of a Stokowski or a Toscanini than by small ensembles. This thesis is correct because the years of continual ensemble playing necessary to mould a number of individual artists into a coherent entity are almost impossible of achievement in our day of economic haste. The Ponzaleys' reach perfection, several other groups have approximated perfection. It has remained for three American girls, sisters, each a master of her individual instrument, and fortunate in having been brought up in a musical family so that they were playing together before they had reached their teens, to again attain perfect fusion of personalities into one dominant musical group which has established an exquisite balance. Wide Acclaim Critics throughout Europe have universally acclaimed the dynamic sureness and the electrifying coordination with which they play. Because they have become actual interpreters their music is as though a master harpist, a master pianist and a master violinist had blended their art and poured it into their interpretations. They play with the assurance of one mind, and with a sonority and firmness of tone which makes every nuance crystal clear even in the largest auditoriums. There is an unusual combination of instruments which offers rare possibilities for interesting and beautiful musical effects. The piano speaks for the orchestra, the violin is the story-teller and the flageolet and romance of the harp tones cast a spell of colour enchantment over the musical moment. "I am the sunshine and laughter of your story," purrs the harp. "I am your consolation and your love story," pleads the violin. "And this is your fate, I brew the tempest and chart your destiny," warns the piano. United they tell the story of life. Severe Training It was the happy idea of combining the separate missions and tonal qualities of these instruments, the musical imagination and musicianship of the separate players that established the success of Le Trio Morgan. Only the winged mind of youth, abundant native talent and severe musical training with the masters of America and Europe have won for Le Trio Morgan its worthy success. For varied tastes, their programmes range from pre-Bach days to the Ultra-Modern in music. The music of Bach, Rameau or Debussy takes on new beauties hitherto unknown, when interpreted by them. When Le Trio Morgan plays the works of De Falla or Albeniz one feels more intimately than ever before the spell of the castanets and guitars, the dances and moonlight of romantic Spain. Play Folk Music The old folk music of Europe takes on new life in the renderings by Le Trio Morgan. All the quaint beauty and simple charms of these beloved songs are brought before one, in delightful impressions of Time gone by. The great variety in the repertoire of Le Trio Morgan, either trios or solos arranged or composed especially for their instruments, the youthful crinoline-dressed charm of the players, and the unusual manner in which they present their programs have brought decorations and praise from the music lovers and critics of Europe. Having won their fame abroad, and after establishing the name of Le Trio Morgan indelibly in the minds of Musical Europe, they return now to their birth-place, America, for a six months' tour of the United States.

High School Eleven Will Meet Danvers Expect to Annex Another Victory Tomorrow - Lester Hilton Playing Well Allen Milnes will not play Saturday or the rest of the season, for he dislocated a collarbone and left shoulder in a scrimmage Wednesday. With one win tucked away in this season's story, a punchard high school's football campaign, confident of bringing to the town a year of consistent victories, is putting on the finishing touches preparatory to leaving tomorrow for Danvers where the local players will meet the high school eleven there. The boys are in the victory mood as their grim-maged faces reveal a powerful line with a rangy and intelligent backfield, under the marshaling of Captain Harry Gouck, and the generalship of Coaches E. V. Lovely and William McDonald. If they play as well as, or better than they did at Ipswich last Saturday, which team they defeated 7-0, they will carry the home another victory tomorrow. The first team of the first game remains intact for this week's game, but during the course of scrimmaging last week, Lester Hilton, son of Deputy Chief Lester Hilton of the Fire Department, has developed into a corking good back. He can smash the line and carry the ball excellently and the fans look to him to alternate with Captain Gouck in the carrying assignments. Francis McCarthy is back again in uniform on the second team as left halfback, and the coaches are glad of it too, because Francis is a reliable mainstay and reserve. He will see plenty of action before the football season ends. Last Saturday's game, although resulting in a victory of 7-0 by Pynchard over Manning high in Ipswich, did not show off the Andover players to the best advantage. They were not sure of themselves in several plays, and they had played more concentrated football than the score would have been decisive. As it is, Pynchard has been whipped into better shape this week by the coaches, and it is expected that although they may not have to, they will exhibit a better type of football than they did last Saturday. Pynchard last Saturday scored in the opening period when Captain Gouck circled left end for a 20-yard run and a touchdown. Drummond Bissett added the extra point with a placement kick. Twice during the afternoon Pynchard was within striking distance of the Manning goal line but failed to score again. The nearest that the Ipswich schoolboys came to Pynchard's goal line was when they reached the 30-yard stripe. Many Illiterates in Massachusetts Twenty-five states and the District of Columbia have less illiteracy than the state of Massachusetts, Andover, which is so conscious of its educational facilities, may be interested to know. With 124,158 persons above ten years of age unable to read and write, Massachusetts is second in the nation, after New York, with 125,000 illiterate persons. In 1920 and 1930 reduced her illiteracy to 22,449. In 1920, 4.7 per cent of the population above ten years of age were unable to read and write compared with 3.5 in 1930. Among the New England states, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Connecticut each registered a larger reduction in illiteracy rates between 1920 and 1930. The greatest problem of illiteracy in Massachusetts is among the foreignborn whites where there are 111,568 persons unable to read and write. In 1920, there were 135,720 within this group. Unfortunately, during the decade the number of native white illiterates increased from 7,780 to 9,652. Some illiterates have been taught through the state's system of immigrant education. Money was appropriated for this purpose and although no special campaign was made to ferret out of the masses of immigrants a number of them were reached. Also, the Congress of Parents and Teachers have been sympathetic, have cooperated in the national movement, and have shown considerable interest in the problem. An illuminating commentary on the interest in illiteracy was manifested throughout the United States when the Life Insurance company advertised that it would supply a book for any illiterate and necessary materials. There were calls from every state and eleven foreign countries for the information, and Massachusetts ranked fifth in the number soliciting this material. The number of illiterates in the United States is of such formidable proportions that a nation-wide movement has been promoted, through Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, for the purpose of reducing illiteracy to a minimum. He appointed a National Advisory committee on illiteracy which is composed of 1,000 distinguished citizens from all parts of the nation. This committee acts in an advisory and stimulating capacity. When this committee was created, Secretary Wilbur turned to Dr. A. E. Winship, of Massachusetts, distinguished educator, to serve on it, and his support has given additional impetus to the movement. Forty-three states and the District of Columbia organized committees through their department of education and have developed programs for teaching the illiterates, and the result has been indeed gratifying since hundreds of thousands of persons for the first time have been taught to read and write. Massachusetts is one of the few states which has not appointed such a committee but has relied upon her regular educational system to take care of the situation. Although any reduction in illiteracy is gratifying, nevertheless Massachusetts, with her great educational system, at the rate she has proceeded in the past ten years, would probably take more than fifty years to eliminate her illiteracy. Within the shadow of Harvard University, there are 19,676 persons unable to read and write. And within the metropolitan area of Boston, a city famous for its culture, there are more than 25,000 illiterates. Here is a new way of moistening seams of trousers or skirts to be pressed. Fill a medicine dropper with water and press slowly as you move along the seam. You will find that this gives just the right moisture and will make pressing much easier.

Town Deluges Firemen with Phone Calls

"All-Out" Signal Did Not Know If Fire Was Out

After working nearly two hours to extinguish a fire in a barn which caused damage estimated at $10,000, Andover firemen returned to headquarters only to be deluged for the rest of the evening by telephone calls from all over town from people who, forgetting that the "all-out" signal had been abolished, thought that the fire department was still battling the conflagration.

The fire in the barn did considerable damage, since the structure had just been remodelled. It measured 45 by 50 feet and contained 70 tons of hay, five tons of grain, and a great deal of dairy equipment, all of which were destroyed.

The fire in the barn did considerable damage, since the structure had just been remodelled. It measured 45 by 50 feet and contained 70 tons of hay, five tons of grain, and a great deal of dairy equipment, all of which were destroyed.

A farm hand managed to save a score of cows and a bull from the flames. The fire broke out in the engine room of the barn just as the cows were being led in from pasture for the evening milking. A farm hand had just fastened one cow in its stall when he heard the crackling of flames. He quickly released the cow and drove it and the rest of the herd into the yard. None of the beasts were injured except a bull which was slightly scorched.

Returning then to the fire the farm hand attempted to extinguish it in vain with pails of water and scoops of sand. In the meantime, an alarm had been rung in and the Andover firemen responded. The water and sand had little effect on the blaze which was eating its way into the loft. A few minutes before the apparatus arrived the fire had reached the hay and then there was little chance of saving the barn.

Fifteen hundred feet of hose was laid. Fire authorities believe the blaze originated around an electric motor used for running the dairy machines.

Groups are forming in Andover center, Ballardvale, Shawsheen and West Andover.

Mrs. Morely has made this subject a study for years, and also speaks from her experience as a mother. The subjects discussed will be, not from the angle of what to do with Philip, who behaves in an undesirable way, but why he behaves as he does. Habit training through the activities such as eating, dressing, play and daily tasks will be discussed.

One mother, who has taken this course with Mrs. Morely says, "Since my study in this course the general problems of discipline have been made easier. I wish I had been given this help when my older children were young. I have made more changes in my own habits than in the children's."

Town of Andover Office of the BOARD OF SELECTMEN Andover, Mass.

You are hereby notified that on or before December 1, 1931 to destroy the gypsy and brown tail moth on your property in this town.

This notification is in accordance with Chapter 132, General Laws, which requires cities and towns to destroy the eggs, caterpillars, pupae and nests of the gypsy and brown tail moths under heavy penalty for failure to comply with the provisions of the law.

If a property owner fails to destroy such eggs, caterpillars, pupae and nests, then the city or town is required to destroy the same and the cost of the work, in whole or in part, according to the value of the land, is assessed upon and becomes a lien on the land. (Section 18, Chapter 132, General Laws, on reverse.)

The Selectmen ask owners and tenants to cooperate with the town in its work on highways and other public grounds by doing effective work at their premises. Citizens who have cleaned their premises of the moths, but find their trees endangered by the neglect of owners of adjoining estates should make complaint to the Selectmen. The infestation of a residential neighborhood by the neglect of a few will not be tolerated.

The eggs of the gypsy moth should be destroyed at once with crescentine. They should never be scraped off the objects on which they are laid. Careful search should be made for gypsy moth egg clusters, not only on trees, but also on house walls, stone walls, fences and in rubbish heaps, etc. Trees in which cavities occur and which it is not desirable to cut should have the cavities cleaned out and destroyed. This is important. The present and future cost of combating this insect can be greatly reduced by cutting and burning worthless brush, hollow trees, etc. A few trees well-cared for are more valuable to the property owner and the community than a large number of neglected trees.

The nests of the gypsy moth should be destroyed from trees, carefully collected and burned in a stove or furnace.

Full instructions as to the best methods of work against the moths may be obtained from the State Superintendent, Ralph T. Berry, or from the State Forester, Room 519, State House, Boston, Mass. Work done by contractors should be inspected and approved by Local Superintendents before payment for the same is made.

Advertising Can Bring Recovery of Business

Roger W. Babson Says Advertising Must Pull Out Hoarded Dollars and Render Country a Great Economic Service—Under-Consumption Is Trouble

Babson Park, Massachusetts, October 2, 1931. Advertising is now offered an opportunity to render this country and the world at large a great economic service. The present trouble with business is under-consumption, not over-production. Human nature always goes to extremes. It was popular and fashionable to spend money lavishly in 1928 and 1929, and people over-did it. Now it has become fashionable to scrimp and hoard, and again people are over-doing it. Advertising must sway the public fashion back to a sane middle course. It is up to the advertiser to make the desire to buy goods more appealing than the security of safe deposit boxes. The extreme lack of purchasing among the well-to-do classes is now the result of fear and fashion rather than it is of inability to buy. There is still plenty of money in this country. The trouble is that it is being hoarded.

This hoarding goes on in two ways: First, by the actual withdrawal of currency and placing it in safe deposit boxes, hiding it in homes, and otherwise storing it away; and second, by piling up savings deposits to a point where many banks are refusing to take more money. Moreover, the banks are virtually hoarding it, because in an effort to keep as liquid as possible they are not making their accustomed volume of loans and have shut down on their purchases of securities. I am not pleading for extravagance. I do, however, believe that those who can afford to buy should do so. If even one-half of the billion dollars now hoarded away were brought back into circulation, business would start up immediately. However, mere preaching about it won't loosen up those pocket-books. The best way to break the "hoarders' strike" is by liberal and intelligent advertising, showing merchandise values the greatest they have been in this generation, and greatest in relation to wage levels they have been in the history of the country.

Must Appeal to Two Groups. Advertisers must recognize that there are now two distinct groups of consumers. There is the ten per cent, or well-to-do, who still have plenty of money but are hoarding it, having lost the urge to buy; and there is the ninety per cent with plenty of money to buy and little money. Advertising must be fitted to these two groups. The ten per cent alone are hoarding enough money to make good business if it could be got out into circulation. Intelligent advertising must create in this group a desire for goods. The manufacturer and merchant can, by the tone of advertising and by specific cases, show the folly of leaving money idle when merchandise values are so great. Moreover, the tone of such advertising must be light and cheerful, to offset the gloom and solemnity which has become so fashionable in the depression. Show society that the most effective work today is to buy goods. Make it popular and fashionable to do so.

With regard to the ninety per cent with plenty of needs and small buying power, the advertiser should honestly put himself in the place of these families. He can teach them to buy the sort of things they really need and the sort that will give them the most economical service. Usually nothing less than good quality meets these requirements. Limited purchasing power has no place in buying poor merchandise. Manufacturers and merchants must not make the mistake of cheapening their quality. By so

Former Andover Man Finds Russian People Are Certainly Not Starving

Takes Trip through Soviet Union This Summer and Returns to America Realizing that This Country Has Been Flooded with Much Propaganda about Russia that Is Far from the Truth

The wild and conflicting tales about Russia circulated in this country have long been a joke to intelligent Americans. Intent upon gaining an accurate picture as possible of that country, devoid of all prejudices, Eric Arthur Starbuck, senior master at Westminster School, Simsbury, Connecticut, a former Andover resident well-known here, traveled to that country this summer and has written an article on his observations for the Andover Townsman, the first installment of which appears below. In it he reveals some fascinating information which not only dismisses the trash that has been spread through the United States about Russia, but also will prove a positive revelation of the state of affairs in that eastern country which is trying to "go western". His opinions are his own and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Townsman in the matter. We feel sure that you will enjoy this series, both for its style and information.

Mr. Starbuck lived in Andover from 1883 to 1901, teaching in Pynchard from 1898 to 1901. Since then he has spent several summers in town. While in Andover he lived first on Porter road, later on Salem street, on High street, and on Whittier street. He was graduated from Phillips in 1894 and from Harvard in 1898. After leaving Pynchard in 1901 he taught at Highland Military Academy four years, at Westminster ten years, at Choate School in Wallingford six years, and came back to Westminster as senior master in 1923, where he has been since.

By ERIC ARTHUR STARBUCK. So much ink has been spilled on the subject of Russia lately and so few of the writers seem able to agree about her present condition or her future prospects that I decided last spring to go and see for myself. I knew that Russia last year was the third best customer for the trade of the United States. Only Canada and England buying more from us, and yet the reports published in most of the American press seemed to indicate that Russia was in a condition where she could hardly pay for a package of toothpicks. How did such a state of affairs come about? Not knowing the Russian language, I joined a group sent out by the Open Road travel agency. Our leader was a young American woman who had spent two years with her husband in Russia; he had been an adviser in handling certain publications. There were six other women and two men besides myself,—an editor of a liberal journal and the owner of a California newspaper. With us on the Columbus in our trip across the Atlantic were three other rather larger groups who were also going to Russia for different trips, making in all about sixty of us. After landing at Bremerhafen we spent the night at Bremen and took an early train for Stettin, where we took a Finnish boat, Ariadne, for the trip up the Baltic. The boat was comfortable and the food was good and abundant. The weather was calm and clear, and the second evening out we had a beautiful sunset, which we decided to watch to the end. But when we finally decided to go to bed a little after eleven the sunset was still going strong. We understood the reason when we looked at the map; we were almost as far north as the northern tip of Labrador, and the sun had a perfect right to stay up all night if it chose.

Boatlegging in Finland. The third day out we arrived at Helsinki, Finland. We were met by the representative of the Open Road, who took us to the Hotel Fenia for lunch. As we began to eat he announced loudly and publicly that prohibition in Finland is just like that in the United States and that we could have anything we wanted to drink by paying bootleg prices. While we ate and drank he delivered an address, a sort of funeral oration, on the almost impossible task that within twenty-four hours we should be lying as mangled corpses in the streets of Leningrad.

I didn't quite understand till a member of the party who had been in Helsinki for long ago told me that at that time he was tagged for a contribution to buy gas masks for the school children when the Bolsheviks made an air raid to wipe out Finland. What was actually done with the money he did not know; probably it was used to publish some more of the strange tales of Russia that periodically come out of Helsinki. A Finnish lady with whom I later talked in Russia said that the condition of the work in Finland is such that the government is afraid of their following Russia's example, and therefore its hostility to Russia is easily explained.

At about eleven that evening we went to the highly modernistic railroad station and boarded the train for Leningrad. We still liked to read, and one member of the party found by his exposure meter that it was light enough for a snapshot of the group. Our sleeping quarters proved fairly comfortable. The European sleeping car is divided into compartments, two, two, or occasionally four, berths. Each compartment has its own washing arrangements, though there is a washroom at each end of the car. There is a large cubbyhole above where the baggage can be stored. After installing ourselves we ate a late supper which we had brought along, and watched the landscape, which was rather level, more or less rolling, and with some hills, and about as well wooded as a New England landscape.

Count Your Money. When we woke up we were still in Finland, and got breakfast at a station where we stopped half an hour. About noon we crossed the border and came to a stop at a small station attached to the custom house. Here the baggage was examined, and the passenger thoroughly done than in most European countries, resembling rather the examination on an American dock. They inspected especially the reading matter, as various countries have attempted to flood Russia with revolutionary literature. Nothing was confiscated, however. A peculiarity of the inspection was the declaring of the amount of foreign money we were bringing in, as export of foreign money is controlled by the government, and travelers may not carry out any more than they bring in. But except for people wishing to take out large sums there is no difficulty. We also were asked to declare cameras, typewriters, watches and a few other articles the export of which is forbidden on account of the shortage in the country. Then we were given a receipt showing what we had brought in and were entitled to take out. The inspectors were very courteous and good. They were checked through as fast as possible without giving us any difficulties.

In less than an hour we rolled up to the station at Leningrad, once known as St. Petersburg and later as Petrograd. For a city of over a million inhabitants the station was not impressive, rather small and needing overhauling and sprucing up. This was true of much of what we saw in Russia. Four years of the world war, the effects of which were aggravated in Russia by the misgovernment of the Tsar and his court, two revolutions, followed by years of invasion and then by a drought coming before the country had any chance to recover, left little time and energy for keeping buildings in repair.

We were met here by the representative of

Meals at Odd Hours

In accordance with the behavior of the sun, our meals came at odd hours. Lunch we had at about five o'clock in the roof garden of the hotel. Here we had our first experience of Russian food.

Idea that Russia is starving, is to say the least grossly exaggerated. Since the famine, when a great drought, following years of war and invasion and complicated by the breakdown of transportation caused by these wars, wrought enormous havoc, there has been nothing worse than shortages. With the development of agriculture and transportation in the last few years these shortages have grown less and less serious, till now they are pretty well confined to luxuries, or what the Russians consider luxuries, rather than the essentials of nourishment.

What food there is well distributed, so that while the number of people who are actually undernourished has, during the last year or more, probably been far larger here than in Russia.

The idea of starvation is dissipated by the sight of the crowds one sees everywhere, the healthiest looking, sturdiest crowd I have seen in any country in the world. Especially the children. In accordance with the German sun worship and also to save cloth the younger children often wear only bathing trunks and swim caps; they are brown, rounded, and show no ribs in their sturdy bodies. As for the food served us throughout our trip, it was plentiful, mostly good except that the meats were poorly cooked, and it was substantial. I gained eight pounds during my stay of about three weeks in the country.

Soup, excellent and filling, usually with a piece of meat or fish or a couple of eggs in the dish; various varieties of meat, beef, lamb, chicken, pork, pheasant, etc., apparently of good quality but ordinarily not very well cooked except in the dishes prepared with rice, which were very appetizing; plenty of fish, good as far as I found anywhere; caviar, of course; potatoes, lettuce, beet, radishes, cauliflower, mushrooms, etc., especially large quantities of cucumbers, which have always been a favorite vegetable with the Russians and which they make into excellent salads with sour cream dressing; other sorts of salads; cheese, especially served with eggs for breakfast; eggs that were not always as fresh as might be desired but were often good; mostly rye or black bread, the latter fermented to give it the sour taste which the Russians like and which I came to enjoy; fruit mostly stewed in compote, but also a fair amount of fresh small fruit, cherries, gooseberries, raspberries, strawberries, etc. For drinks there was coffee, pretty poor (it is hard to get good coffee outside of the United States); tea, the national drink, which I had heard and which I found was expensive and ran from poor to fair; vodka, which is much overrated; and various mineral waters, of which Narzan is the best.

Some of us drank water directly from the tap in Leningrad and Moscow and drank spring water in the country without suffering any evil effects, but most of the party drank only bottled or boiled drink or melted milk. The only member of the various parties with whom I came in contact who was seriously sick was in bad shape when he left the United States, grew worse on the way, and after a short attempt to keep him in Japan, he died for home, but without laying any blame on Russian food or conditions.

Killed 1500 People

After our lunch we started an afternoon tour. This time we visited the Winter Palace, before which, in 1905, gathered a throng of peasants and workers to petition the Tsar for relief from some of the miseries brought on them by the war with Japan. Their answer was a burst of rifle fire which killed 1500 people and precipitated the abortive revolution of that year. Later it was the seat of the government of bankers and business men established by Kerensky, and its capture determined the victory of the present government, the Russian Bolsheviks, as vividly depicted in the film, End of St. Petersburg, which ran for some time in New York. Not far from there we visited the Smolny Institute, where the present government was organized and where it awaited the outcome of the struggle at the Winter Palace. It is now a university, but some of the rooms are preserved as museums of the revolutionary struggle. In particular, the room where Lenin worked is preserved untouched,—a cheap desk, a couple of chairs, a rather decrepit lounge, and an alcove with a camp bed and washstand.

Supper we ate sometime after midnight in the roof garden. The sunset glow still lingered and lighted the bulbous domes and the minarets of the churches. The view across the rooftops was beautiful, but was somewhat marred by the forest of antennae which testify to the Russian passion for radio. An orchestra was playing, and a few couples were dancing. One odd thing to observe in a Russian hotel is the number of people, evidently mere workers or peasants, whom you see eating an expensive meal, with a bottle of wine in the cooler on the table.

The explanation seems to be that the ordinary expenses of life do not nearly consume the wages of the average worker and that he is rather hard put to it to spend the surplus, as little provision is being made for luxuries in the present industrial and agricultural depression. He can spend money in traveling, in going to the theatres and movies, which are always crowded, in patronizing the book stores, which are numerous and do a rushing business. But one way to spend money is to go to a hotel and have a bang-up meal, such as he never would have dreamed of in the old days. To save money hardly enters into his plans; the rate is trying to encourage savings banks but is not meeting with much response.

So large a part of the population have their future provided for by insurance of various sorts that they feel quite at liberty to spend what they earn without worrying. This, of course, means that business, instead of having to find markets, is having a terrible time to catch up with demands for everything. The reported shortages of many things in Russia are not shortages as compared with the times before the revolution, but merely excess demand. Before the revolution the poorer classes had little money to spend and were content with very little. Now they have money in their pockets and they clamor for all that the luxurious classes used to have. As wages go on steadily rising, it will be a long time before the supply of goods comes anywhere near meeting the demand. This is a

Questions on Health and Prevention of Disease will be answered in this column every Friday. Send questions to Health Forum, State Department of Public Health, State House, Boston, Massachusetts

How Many of These Questions Can You Answer?

Will a stocking wrapped around the neck at night prevent sore throat? Is sewer gas the means of spreading disease? Is it safe to delay a minute in securing antitoxin for a case of diphtheria? Does vaccination for smallpox cause syphilis? Is it wise to expose children to the usual contagious diseases so they can have them over with? Will amber beads around baby's neck prevent croup? Is it necessary to remove food immediately from a can after it is opened to prevent spoilage? Will a poultice draw poison out of a wound? Is there any way to get typhoid fever other than by eating or drinking the germs in the body wastes of some person who has or who carries typhoid fever?

Even though one feels "as fit as a fiddle" should he neglect his annual physical examination? Will dog's hairs applied to a bite prevent rabies? Is it safe to diagnose your own ailments and treat yourself with patent medicines? Should the "finger of the knife" prevent any one from having an early operation if cancer is suspected? Will wearing an iron finger ring or carrying a buckle in the pocket prevent rheumatism? Do you need to allow flies or mosquitoes to breed on your property? Now that toxin-antitoxin has been perfected, is any case of diphtheria necessary? Should the "conscientious objectors" prevent school and health authorities from requiring that all children be vaccinated? Is there any truth in the belief that a bag of asafoetida tied around the neck will prevent contagion? Is there any other known cure for rabies (hydrophobia) than the Pasteur treatment? Is there any way to detect, in their early stages, diseases of the heart, kidneys and other organs except by thorough examination by a careful physician? Is a toothbrush of as much value as proper diet in childhood in preventing tooth decay? —New England Sanitarium Health Exponent.

To all of these questions the answer is "No." Miss C. L. My finger joints became inflamed and are now badly swollen and stiff. Now my feet and hip are lame. I hope you can tell me what to avoid in eating habits. Will it eventually become crippled? —Ans. We have sent your Arthritis Diet which will answer your question on what to avoid in eating habits. As to your second question on whether or not you are likely to become crippled we would say—not necessarily, if you can receive the proper treatment and the cause of your trouble can be discovered. We should advise you to consult your regular physician at once, and take his advice. If you wish to consult a public clinic, you may do so.

Ophthalmia Neonatorum

Ophthalmia Neonatorum, or eye infection of the newborn, is an infectious disease appearing shortly after birth, which may lead to blindness, if neglected. It is known that this disease can be prevented and, if present, cured, by putting into each eye of the newborn infant a single drop of silver nitrate solution. Out of 4300 blind people in Massachusetts, 530 are children. Much of this blindness in children, because it is so easily preventable, need never have occurred. Fifteen per cent of all blind children are blind because of various infections at birth.

As soon as the baby is born, the eyelids are cleansed with boric solution and cotton, the lids are then separated and a drop of a solution of silver nitrate is instilled into each eye. Should the disease develop, special care is required, preferably in an institution with the proper facilities.

Since this was discovered the death rate and complications of the disease have been remarkably reduced. The effectiveness of the serum is greatly increased by its use early in the disease, so that the importance of early diagnosis cannot be overstressed. If your child is sick, always send for a physician.

Girl Scout Notes

Pine Cone Troop 3, Girl Scouts, is planning an intensive program for the coming year. A preliminary meeting was held at the Andover Guild house on Monday, September 14. As it is impossible to have both younger and older girls working on entirely different projects, the troop is planning to form a Senior Patrol for girls of high school age. The Monday afternoon group divided into two patrols and elected the following officers: Patrol leaders, Everedie Thiras and Alice Porter; corporals, Margaret Dooley and Ellen Stewart; treasurer, Christine Ross. The officers of the Senior Patrol which meets on Friday evenings are: Patrol leader, Margaret Sparks; treasurer, Shirley Kemp. The girls and their leader, Mrs. Herbert W. Ford, anticipate a full year. It is hoped that the interest of the older people of Andover in Girl Scouting can be aroused and that the troop will be more active than it has seemingly been in the past through their encouragement and cooperation.

Guarantee that Russia will not, at least for many years, compete on the world markets with anything except a few raw materials of which she has more even than can be consumed at home. The amount of goods she now exports will be reduced as soon as she has got the machinery for which they pay. In the meantime the Russian peasant and worker has more than he ever had before, but is constantly yelling for more.

Entertainment

Colonial Theatre—Andover. Included in this week's program at Andover's only theatre is the farce "Politics", featuring New Dixie's song Polly Moran, which is shown Monday and Tuesday together with Ramon Navarro in "Daybreak." On Wednesday and Thursday, Eddie Quinlan in "Sweepstakes" shares the bill with "Vice Squad", featuring lovely Kay Francis, while on Friday and Saturday the Colonial will show "Arizona" featuring John Wayne and "The Bad Boy" with Rbert Armstrong. A "Silly Symphony" is also a popular feature on this program. The usual short subject will be included at all performances.

Warner Bros. Theatre—Lawrence. Nancy Carroll in "Personal Maid" will occupy the screen at the Warner theatre starting Sunday and continuing through Wednesday. "Personal Maid" is said to be one of Nancy Carroll's best films.

Palace Theatre—Lawrence. The Four Marx Brothers are starring in "Monkey Business" beginning Saturday. The New Dixie's song Polly Moran, which is shown Monday and Tuesday together with Ramon Navarro in "Daybreak." On Wednesday and Thursday, Eddie Quinlan in "Sweepstakes" shares the bill with "Vice Squad", featuring lovely Kay Francis, while on Friday and Saturday the Colonial will show "Arizona" featuring John Wayne and "The Bad Boy" with Rbert Armstrong. A "Silly Symphony" is also a popular feature on this program. The usual short subject will be included at all performances.

Broadway Theatre—Lawrence. Here, too, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are running for screen and political honors in "Politics", starting Sunday. The companion feature is "Hush Money", dealing in a serious vein with the subject that "Politics" pokes fun at.

Colonial Theatre—Lawrence. Here lovers of the spoken drama find the popular Dwight Meney with his fine voice, singing a highly successful opening week. Mr. Meade has prepared "Your Uncle Dudley", one of Broadway's recent comedy successes, for the second attraction. Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson are the authors, and, incidentally, are the same collaborating pair responsible for the perennial favorite "Tommy". The play is a gem, combining with the same wholesome fun, human foibles and interpretive understanding of men, women, boys, girls and average home life that made "Tommy" so popular.

Uncle Dudley Dixon, of the play, is a leading light of the community. The type who is called upon in all civic drives, evening and general public activities and who gives of his time, money and self for the reward of flattering speeches as to his citizenry, and the presentation of loving cups.

For three acts you will find yourself a member of this Dixon household. You'll like Uncle Dudley with his fine voice, singing and his complete collapse into romantic affair with the gentle and intelligent Christine Seiderholm, a Swedish girl. And you'll perhaps hate the assertive, domineering, scheming and ungrateful sister of Dudley's, Mabel Dixon Church, who, with her two children, Mabel and Cyril, has made her home with Dudley ever since her husband's death. Mabel is shortly after the birth of her second child. And you'll want to aid and abet Ethelyn in her romance with Robert Kirby and you'll understand so thoroughly just how much the girl rebels at her mother's efforts to make a prima donna of her, when all she wants is a home—and Robert Kirby is in his role of irrepressible Cyril, even while you giggle at him. And you'll want to step right into the heart of the melee and plant a smacking kiss on the rosy cheek of Janet Dixon, the hilariously vivacious mother of Dudley and Mabel, who shares stellar honors with Dudley in this grand, honest and human comedy.

Metropolitan Theatre—Boston. "My Sin" opens at the Metropolitan theatre Friday with Tallulah Bankhead as its star, assisted by Fredric March and a supporting cast of talent. The story is filled with dramatic incidents and its vivid scenes stretch from Panama to New York. Bankhead sprang into public favor when she appeared here in "The Tarnished Lady" but "My Sin" provides a better vehicle for this star than ever before. March puts into his role a dramatic vigor that is certain to carry his audiences along with him. On the stage will be seen and heard "Marches Militaire", a Metropolitan Revue having in its cast Charles Irwin, Largo and Margher, Rodney and Gould, the Sunnik Beauties and others. As an added attraction comes James Hall, star in "Hell's Angels" and other noted pictures of the past season. The usual supplementary subjects will round out the program.

Roseland-on-the-Merrimack. Jean Goldkette's famous Casa Loma orchestra of Detroit, generally credited by music critics with playing the sweetest band of dance music in America, will be the featured attraction at Roseland-on-the-Merrimack tonight for the last time this season. This will be the semi-final dance party at Roseland this year, as the season is closing tomorrow evening. The Casa Loma band scored the outstanding hit of the season at Roseland last week and there is every indication that a banner throng of dance enthusiasts will be on hand this evening. Tomorrow evening, closing night, will be marked by the last check dancing party of the year and Roland Russell and his Rollicking Ramblers will occupy the orchestral stage.

One week from tonight, Friday, October 9, the Crystal ballroom in Shawshen village will hold its opening. For the opening attraction Manager William F. Wholey has booked Ed Murphy and his famous Bohemians from the Hotel Bancroft in Worcester, the outstanding dance band in the heart of the Commonwealth. The Bohemians are tremendous favorites in Shawshen village, where they have been standing on more than one occasion. Crystalline patrons will hardly recognize the beautiful ballroom this year. Hundreds of dollars have been expended in new decorations and paintings, while the new stage is something to marvel at. The same successful policy of former years will be pursued, with admission dancing every Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evening. There will be ample free automobile parking space. Following the gala opening, there will be a special holiday eve dance next Saturday and a special holiday night dance one week from Monday.

Recreation ballroom—Lawrence. Opening tonight is the Recreation ballroom, where Edward J. McInelly's Victor Recording band will present a dancing program until one o'clock. Favors will be distributed. McInelly comes to the Recreation after a successful tour of New England ballrooms, where his highly original brand of music and tempo has met with the instant favor of New England dancers. Cliff Evans will feature the check dancing on Wednesday night, and another popular band will play at the Friday night session.

Not on the Program

When firemen on Ladder 1 from the Central fire station answered a still alarm at the home of Frank S. Crawford on Hidden road Tuesday evening at 8:10, they found no fire to put out although sparks had been flying from the chimney a few minutes before, but they did find a rehearsal for a play in some confusion with the women taking the parts in no mood for continuing their acting. As a matter of fact, a touch of realism was added to the acting of the evening when a neighbor burst in from next door and cried that the roof was on fire and that flames were bursting from the chimney. Since there was nothing in the play that called for this touch of drama, the rehearsal was cancelled until the firemen, under Deputy Chief Lester Hilton, arrived and assured the ladies that the conflagration was out.

When the Masonic Hall was built he was the first to use the hall, and continued his classes and assemblies there for a period of 30 years, until changes in the hall made it necessary to seek larger quarters. For more than 20 years he conducted special classes for high school students and for members of various organizations. Among his most noted pupils was Elvira Leveroni, later a grand opera star.

"Old Fire-Eater" on Exhibition

back of a big truck, but she could have made the trip from Ballardvale on her own great cart-wheels, which today are as intact as they were in 1859. There are men in Andover today who have vivid recollections of having pumped the old engine when she was in use, for she was a hand-pumped affair, drawn by a heavy rope which is still attached to the engine and in good condition.

On the rear of the old pump was a two-wheel carriage around the axle of which was rolled the hose. The hose, of course, has long been gone from the engine.

This relic of the past, now 72 years old, in a few more decades will be a most valuable historical piece. Few of them exist today in the state, four being known to officials in North Andover, Pittsfield, the Island of Nantucket and in town here.

The Andover Historical society is anxious that residents who may have any of the missing pieces turn them over to the home that the apparatus may be restored. It will be first viewed by members of the Bay State Historical League at its fall meeting tomorrow at the Andover home, at which will be delegates from all over the state. The business meeting will be at two o'clock, after which there will be a discussion on "What plans are the societies of the League making for the Washington Bicentennial?" Each society will send three delegates. Andover will play host. Next Saturday, October 10, the Andover Historical society will have its own fall meeting.

Abbot Academy

On Saturday, September 26, intelligence tests were given to the students by Miss Moses.

Miss Bailey conducted the evening service in Abbot hall on Sunday, September 27, when the choir sang under Miss Friskin's leadership.

The Senior class had a delightful picnic supper at Haggitt's pond on Tuesday evening. Their guests of honor were Miss Bailey, Miss Grimes, and Miss Mercat. On Wednesday noon Miss Carpenter and Miss Hopkins entertained their comrades at a luncheon on the grounds. Hamburger sandwiches were cooked on the ingenious cover of the stone fireplace, and corn was successfully roasted in the embers. Miss Bailey and Miss Buttfield were especially invited guests.

The trustees of Abbot Academy will meet in Boston today.

Miss Mary Carpenter, director of Physical Education, will give in Abbot hall on Saturday afternoon, October 3, the first of a series of lectures on general hygiene.

The president of Wheaton college, the Rev. J. Edgar Park, will conduct the evening service at 7:30, Sunday, October 4, in Abbot hall. Friends of the school and of Dr. Park are invited to attend.

The class of 1921 has presented to the Abbot academy library "A short guide to the art of Europe" by Martha M. Howey, former teacher at the school.

Miss Hopkins has been appointed for a second year chairman of the Scholarship committee of the Massachusetts Library club.
