South Parish Acquiesces in Church Merger Proposition

Long History Comes to a Close Tuesday Night as Parish Authorizes Transfer of All Property and Money to Church in Last Meeting

Traffic Ordinances Will Be Adopted

A set of ordinances regulating traffic in Andover and making certain offences punishable will be adopted in the near future by the Board of Selectmen. It was made known last night. The Board has been preparing for these new ordinances for some time, and when the present pressure of business has let up, the regulations will be drawn up. In the near future stop signs will be put up at certain intersections in town, and if these are not obeyed, the offender will be punished under the ordinances. Signs are contemplated for such dangerous points as the corner of Wheeler and Main streets, Harding and Main streets, and Main and North Main streets. It was previously that stop signs would be placed at Kenilworth and North Main streets. They will stop all traffic entering the main road from the side streets.

Woman's Alliance Observes Birthday at Free Church

On Thursday, April 14, the Woman's Alliance of the Free church is to hold a birthday party. There is to be an entertainment, a cake with candles and all the appointments of a real party. For that afternoon every guest will be considered just twenty years old and will be expected to drop twenty pennies, or their equivalent, into the cup, during the grand march, while the cake is cut. Come one, come all, and be a girl of twenty just for the day.

Violin and Piano Recital Thursday

Marguerite Moore Estaver, violinist, and Beatrice Ward, pianist, both of the music faculty of Abbot Academy, will give a joint recital in Davis Hall on Tuesday night at eight o'clock. There will be no admission charge. One of the interesting features of the concert will be the Cesar Franck Violin Sonata. It is undoubtedly one of the most graceful as well as popular sonatas in the literature for the instrument. Miss Ward will play some music that may be unfamiliar to Andover. The Respiaglio "Siciliana" is an ancient dance tune. Liadivo in his "Hirouli" allows one's imagination to visit Toyland. Tansman's Sonatine "Transatlantique" displays his cleverness in handling the popular rhythms.

The program:

Siciliana	Respighi

Allegro non troppo	Ries
(Finanz Suite no III, in G)
Berceuse	Fauré

During the first three months of 1932, people have borrowed 20258 books for home use. The use in March was 36 percent greater than that for March, 1931.

V. F. W. Plans Job Campaign for Idle Men

According to a statement issued by Andover post, 2128, V.F.W., yesterday, the organization will endeavor to secure employment for the idle men of the town. Those wishing to avail themselves of this offer are asked to register at the club rooms any evening between seven and eight. The statement is as follows: An investigation sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Andover Post, on the unemployment situation in Andover has disclosed that, contrary to current rumors, there are innumerable men idle in the town. Following this, it was unanimously voted at the meeting of the Vets on last Monday night to endeavor to relieve this unemployment in as many cases as possible, and, as a result, all men of Andover, regardless of their service status, are requested to register with the unemployment committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. A representative of this committee will be at the Vets rooms on the third floor of the Musgrave Building on every evening of the week between seven and eight o'clock.

In order that the greatest number of men possible might be started to work, the sincere cooperation of the townspeople is solicited. Home and property owners are asked to contact one of the committee with any odd job that is current at this time of the year. Those employers of small and large endeavors are likewise urged to use the Veterans organization as their employment bureau. If this cooperation is followed out, the present condition of unemployment will be relieved considerably. Those on the committee who may be reached by telephone are Charles W. Bowman, 134-W; Harold S. Cates, 1111-M; and George Abbott, 479-K.

Fire Hazard Diminished at Town Farm

Careful Policing Will Reduce Danger from Paper Flying from Public Dump

The woods in the vicinity of the public dump will be carefully policed in the future, according to a statement issued by the Board of Selectmen recently. There has been a serious fire hazard across the street from the dump because of the great amount of paper which blew across into the underbrush from the waste deposited at the dump by townspeople. The Selectmen's attention was called to this condition by Frank L. Brigham. There was a slight fire in the woods only a few weeks ago.

The correspondence between Mr. Brigham and the Board is as follows: March 18th, 1932. Frank H. Hardy, Chairman Board of Selectmen Andover, Massachusetts. My dear Mr. Hardy:

There is a condition existing in and around the property adjacent to the Public Dump that may prove very serious from a fire standpoint.

I refer particularly to the fact that there seems to be no protection in keeping the rubbish and papers from blowing across the street into the woods on the right hand side of the road.

This condition is dangerous not only to the houses on the street, but particularly our own Town Farm, and it seems as if something should be done by your good Board to take steps for a preventive measure because we may be called upon some day to fight a serious fire starting in the woods.

I observe that there is no gate to bar the entrance of the dump. Would it not be wise for you to install such a gate with the rigid requirement that it shall be kept closed at all times except when used. This in a measure, would help to retard the blowing of papers all over the adjacent property, but even under these conditions I feel that some steps might possibly be arranged whereby we could get even better results than just putting on a gate.

Andover is too beautiful a place to be menaced by such a nuisance as the Town Dump located where it is, and I hope very much indeed that you gentlemen will give this matter serious consideration.

Very truly yours, (signed) FRANK L. BRIGHAM, General Agent

Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Frank L. Brigham, General Agent Andover, Massachusetts. Dear Mr. Brigham:

I am instructed by the Board of Selectmen to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th in regard to the public dump. This Board has discussed thoroughly your letter and appreciate your interest in the matter. They have made provision for a thorough policing of the vicinity of the public dump located off High street, and have made provisions for paper, litter, etc., which might find their way across the street, to be picked up and disposed of regularly. They are in hopes that there will be no reason for further complaint in this matter.

Yours very truly, (signed) GEORGE W. WINSLOW, Clerk Board of Selectmen

Abby Players on Hill Tonight

Pausing briefly near the completion of a long tour in this country and Canada, the Abby Theatre Irish Players will present two plays in the meeting-room of George Washington hall at Phillips academy this evening. The performance is open to the public and tickets may be secured from John H. Dye by calling 720. Andover is fortunate in having this well-known group play here prior to starting on a two-weeks' engagement in Boston. In the long tour in America the company's reception has been enthusiastically cordial and profuse of acclaim for its superior work and offerings. For months the Boston papers have been heralding the arrival of the players and according to present indications the Hollis Street Theatre will be packed every night. The original intention of the company was to depart for Ireland immediately after the Boston stay, but they have deferred the trip in order that they might make a brief stop in Providence.

Though seventeen years have elapsed since the Abby Players last visited Boston, their wonderful acting and the vivid realities presented by their unusual plays are still remembered there. The present company numbers fourteen and has been pronounced "the finest acting company in the English-speaking world." Their home theatre, the national theatre of the Irish Free State, closed its doors this season to make the present American coast to coast tour possible. The cast includes Robinson's "White-Headed Boy" and William B. Yeats' "Kathleen ni Houlihan" will be featured at the academy this evening. Mr. Robinson is the manager and director of the Players and one of their more prolific playwrights.

Eight Names Added at Last Registration

The people of Andover are more interested in who becomes Selectman than they are in whom they desire to represent their party's candidate for president, if the number of those registering at the town house Wednesday is any indication. Only eight names were added to the voting lists as a result of the ten hour session of the Board of Registrars, while in a similar session before the town election 163 people came to the town house to register. This session last Wednesday was held because of a new law requiring communities to afford an opportunity for the voters to register prior to the presidential primaries which come on April 26. The warrants for this election will be posted in the near future.

The new names added to the voting lists Wednesday follow: Precinct 1—Edna G. Marple, 9 Maple avenue; Ferns Hansen, 29 Maple avenue; Lorenz H. Hansen, 29 Maple avenue; Clifford P. Waldman, 32 Maple avenue. Precinct 3—Gaelono Medolo, 5 Middle street. Precinct 4—Arthur W. Reynolds, 5 Orchard street; Gwendolen B. Reynolds, 5 Orchard street; Blanche E. Gray, 31 School street.

Clan Celebrates 24th Anniversary

Another year in the life of Clan Johnston, 185, O.S.C., was closed appropriately last Friday night when the 24th anniversary of the Clan was observed by over 100 members and friends. A supper served under the direction of the entertainment committee was followed by a fine musical program. The 24 years' history of the Clan was summed up in an interesting talk by Past Chief Robert Dobbie and remarks were also made by Chief James Caldwell and Mrs. Thomas B. Gorrie, president of the auxiliary. The entertainment consisted of vocal selections by Robert Cargill, piano selections by Harry Dobbie, specialty dance by Rachael and Gertrude Stewart, vocal selections by Miss Dora Bennett of Lawrence, and humorous songs by Alex Duke. The beef steak supper was cooked by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary and served by the committee, which consisted of the following: Alexander Bertram, chairman; John Greenhow, Chief James Caldwell, George Brown, George B. ### A Standard Accident Report

A report issued by the Governor's committee on street and highway safety Wednesday stated that Massachusetts has almost four times as many cities and towns competing in the National traffic safety contest for 1932 as any other state in the Union. There are 116 communities enrolled in the contest, but Andover is not one of them. Methuen, Haverhill, Lawrence, Lowell, Amesbury, Georgetown, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, even little West Newbury have all adopted an organized program to combat the growing menace of automobile accidents, while Andover, the town which a while ago stood forth as a shining example in saving its money, has neglected to follow any systematic procedure in saving lives.

The report stated that "Already 32 cities have adopted the standard accident reporting system through discovery that accurate knowledge of traffic accidents is necessary before effective steps in prevention can be made." Andover is also not one of these, and regardless of what we think about the wisdom of adopting in toto the program sponsored by the governor's committee, this is one system that we could use with distinct beneficial results.

As it is today, it is hard to discover just how an accident happened, who the people involved were, whether they were 20 years old or 90, what time the incident took place, and sometimes it is even a difficult thing to find out where it occurred. We certainly do not have accurate knowledge of traffic accidents.

The accident reporting system in Andover today works about as follows. If the accident happens to be serious, the telephone in the police station conveys the information to whoever happens to be at the desk. An officer is sent out to the scene, and presently he returns with a few notes written down in a little notebook. This he transposes to the record book at the station, and most of the time it proves terribly incomplete. The officer is not to be blamed; it is difficult for any human to remember all the little details, no matter how important, of any problem. Were standard accident blanks used here in Andover, furnishing the officer with a guide as to what he should find out about the accident, we would have something on which to base our campaign of prevention, and the police department would have sufficient material to prosecute the case in court if necessary.

As the reports are today, we are wandering in the fog, and a fog is no place for safe driving.

Not Much Similarity

With the Federal government trying to find a way out of its budgetary problem, and with many cities in the country still wondering where they can find the necessary revenue to meet their needs for the rest of the year, the value of the New England town meeting budgetary procedure is again brought to light. It was not until about a decade ago that the Washington government adopted a systematic method of planning its finances, and a good many cities today are still groping in the dark because they have failed to strike a balance in their ledgers.

Andover, keeping one eye on its probable income and the other on its necessary expenditures, succeeded a month ago in bringing down its tax rate without having to do anything to impair the efficiency of its governmental machine. The Federal Government, unfortunately, is unsuccessful in trying to do the same thing. Down in Washington there is a Budget Bureau corresponding to our Finance committee in that it has the duty of making recommendations to the President, who sends them to Congress. The parallel stops there, however. Merely looking at the superficial aspects of Congress and Town meetings, one would be tempted to say that another comparison could be found there. However, the fact that Congress's members are trying to satisfy the taxpayers by keeping the taxes low and at the same time trying to please their constituents by having a great deal of money spent in the particular locality represented and never even thinking about reducing their own salaries, shows that the Federal Government's budgetary procedure is weak in the very place that Andover's is strong.

Free Church Players Make Success in Two Night Run

In these depressed times a town dramatic society can feel itself fortunate if it manages to draw a near-capacity audience one night. It was therefore a deserving tribute to the Free Church Players to have a capacity audience both nights of their presentation of "Mary-Gold," and the quality of the acting was such that even greater successes can be forecast for the future of this group.

Jessie Doherty, looking exceedingly attractive as Mary Brown, proved a big hit with the audience as she succeeded in keeping her aloof lover, Jed Davis, from making a fool of himself and losing all he owned to his step-sister. Uncle Ed was a great help to Mary, Lewis Paine, portraying this role, drew many sighs of sympathy and peals of laughter with his realistic acting.

Jed, the leading man, as done by Stanley Swanton, was especially good in the asides, which indicated his embarrassment and annoyance in various difficulties in which his experiment in love-making involved him.

William Perry, known to the audience as "Props," added his share to the interest and amusement of the audience as he successfully kept the value of the corkie jar in mind. Starr Bradley, played by Robert Armstrong, and Ernest Clark, played by Thomas Gorrie, helped the audience enjoy the evening's entertainment.

Great credit is due Emmanuel Booth, who directed the play and coached the cast. As time goes on, the value of the corkie jar, capable director, Mr. Booth has been becoming more and more evident.

A large number of members and friends of Lincoln lodge, N. 78, A.O.U.W., gathered in the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of this well-known fraternal society. The degree team gave an interesting drill exhibition. Included in the team's membership are the following: Raymond L. Buchan, Ira O. Gray, J. H. Playdon and Daniel P. Webster. There has been an astonishing increase in the number of immigrants deported from the United States in the last three years, according to an address delivered by Miss Alice W. O'Connor before the League of Women Voters at the Phelps house Tuesday afternoon. Less than a thousand were deported during the years 1928 and 1929, while in 1931, 18,000 were deported, said Miss O'Connor, who is Supervisor of Social Service in Boston and for many years was secretary to Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer.

Miss O'Connor spoke very interestingly on the general subject of "Immigration," treating more especially the changing aspects of immigration today as compared with ten years ago. Immigration has ceased to be a problem of immigrants coming in to the country she says. Ten years ago, we began to close the door to immigrants. Since 1929, there has been a drastic cut in immigration, due to the problem of unemployment in this country. The president has asked that no one be admitted to the United States if he were likely to become a public charge. This has caused limitation to such an extent that our problem today deals with the immigrants who came here years ago.

Within the last five years, there has been a change in the policy of the United States in regard to deportation of immigrants. In 1929, a drastic law was passed which meant permanent exile to all those deported. This law stated that a person who fell into distress during his first three years in the United States should be sent back to his own country at the expense of our government. If this law applied only to persons responsible for crime it would be satisfactory said Miss O'Connor, but often this law is a penalty for misfortune. Less than a thousand were deported during the years 1928 and 1929. In 1931, 18,000 were deported.

Immigration at its height, according to the speaker, constituted a problem but had some advantages, one being that it gave a market for our Western grain producers. Now that our immigration is cut to such a degree, the grain producers miss their market. Immigration also gave a market for clothes, foods and furniture.

In closing, Miss O'Connor said, "Is immigration entirely a liability or might it be somewhat of an asset?"
