For several weeks the question has been hanging fire. Because of the delay there were many wild rumors circulating about the community. He went on to mention his happy selection of a life mate, and advised the young people in the congregation not to wait until they were 37 for marriage, as he had done. He also feels that Andover has a great deal to do with his age. Prior to concluding his talk he told his philosophy of life: this is God's world, and mankind is all one great family. He added that he believed in immortality and that the best in life is stil before us. Finally he advised the congregation to continue loyal to the Christian church and to Christ.

Andover Wins; Nobody Loses

Andover has proved victor in its long fight against the locating of the State School for the Feeble-minded here in town. There will be many who will have the impression that the town was lacking in humanitarian feeling in protesting against the State's choice of a site, but anyone who has studied the problem knows that this is not so. Andover was the victor; nobody was the loser. When it was announced yesterday that the site would not receive approval, it did not mean that the feeble-minded would not be taken care of. It merely mean that the school would be located in a far more suitable site than Andover.

Those residents who signed the petition against the location of the school here were not signing a petition against making any sort of a provision for the care of the feeble-minded. They were only protesting the unwise choice of the school site; they were only suggesting that it would be far better for the town and for the school itself if the authorities were to reconsider their recommendation and establish the colony in some less densely settled district, in so

In last week's Stowe school league game, Glasses 7-A1 and B combined defeated class 8-E in a regular scheduled game played on the playstead by a 5-4 score.

This was the most interesting game played thus far this season. The game started out to be a pitcher's duel between Frank Ostrowski, Jr., pitching for the winners and Jack McDonald hurling for 8-E. But in the third inning the seventh graders started hitting McDonald hard and scored all of their runs in this big inning. He was then relieved by J George Wallace who finished the gan. ein the box. Up until the third inning McDonald was pitching a great game, having fanned seven batters via the strike-out souring the game and except for two wild pitches he might have shut out the eighth graders.

8-E was the first to score, gathering two runs in the second and two more in the third, liwing the seventh grade scored five in the third.
