The coats are red with blue lapels and blue pockets trimmed with gold braid. The belts and shoulder straps are white. The trousers are blue with red stripes trimmed with gold braid on the sides. The hats are Hollywood chauffeur style with a red top, white visor, and a blue band with a gold strap joining in the center. Centered above the visor is a large golden eagle with the Legion seal. ## Senior Class at Punchedard Casts Ballot

Eleanor Barnard Chosen Best Girl Student and also Prettiest Girl

The annual list of superlatives of Punchedard High was made up during the week by the Senior class. The old problem of whether it was better to have beauty or brains was solved by the class when Miss Eleanor Barnard was adjudged the best girl student, the most promising girl, and the prettiest girl. Miss Barnard is valedictorian of the class. William Foster, while he yielded the honors of handsomest boy to Harold Rutter, was voted the best dressed boy, the neatest, the best boy student, the most promising boy, and the boy who has done most for the school. Barbara Hammond will probably have a political career wished on her in the class prophecy, since she was named the class boss and the most talkative girl, but she promises to be an unusual type of politician in that she was also named as the girl who has done the most for the school. Richard McGovern was chosen the most talkative boy, the noisiest boy, and the class politician.

Marion Coutts will probably receive some letters from the boys, asking her to write testimonial letters for them. Letters will appear in papers and magazines with the heading "To Be Popular, Learn to Dance." Miss Coutts was named the most popular girl and the best girl dancer, as well as the peppiest girl. Philip Heifetz was also adjudged the most popular "peppiest" boy, as well as the best boy mixer, but Lincoln Stack defeated him for the dancing honors. Stack was also chosen the class drummer, boy. Charles Armitage, the class president, was selected as the boy who has done most for the class, the wittiest boy and the class actor. Evelyn Higginson was named as the girl who has done most for the class, the wittiest girl, and the best dressed girl. Bertha Hilton was voted the best girl mixer, while Ruth Fairweather was chosen the class grind and the class man hater. George Smith is the class woman hater and the quietest boy.

V. F. W. Planning Buddy Poppy Day

The local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has issued the following statement in regard to its coming poppy day:
On Saturday, May 28, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Andover Post, in cooperation with the National organization, will conduct its annual sale of Buddy Poppies, made by disabled and needy ex-service men still confined to government hospitals.
To most of us the war is over. There have been many changes since the end of that world-wide struggle. We no longer move along at the fever heat which characterized the war-time days of 1917 and 1918. The thrill of witnessing the parade of the first contingent of returning soldiers is over. The cheers that later greeted the entire Andover group of ex-service men have long passed into the ozone. And the sacrifices, large and small that were practiced by those who remained at home are now but a faded memory.
But to those boys—now men—who are still in the hospitals throughout the country, some wasting slowly away, others maimed and mangled to such an extent that even they themselves would much rather be confined to their cots than be subjected to the pitiful and gaping stare which would await them on their return to civilian life, the war will never be anything but a stark reality. Day after day, month after month, and year after year, the Armistice of 1918, these men, the best that the nation could offer to the war god, have suffered from the effects of that war. Shell torn bodies, and lungs devastated by the deadly gas, unbalanced minds from nerve wracking shell fire; limbs gone, minds gone, and peace gone. That is the picture, a ghastly picture, that comes out in bold relief whenever a government hospital is visited by the comforter or the curious. These men are living memories of the toll of war, men who have only too soon been forgotten by the average American man and woman, remembered only by their comrades, their buddies in arms.
It is for these men that Poppy Day was first originated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars in 1922, a year in which the American public gave recognition to the ideals that these poppies symbolized. Since then, the V. F. W. has made Poppy Day one of the biggest events in veteran relief, each year showing a decided increase in receipts for this much needed benefit.
On Saturday, May 28, local residents will have their opportunity to contribute to the comfort of the disabled and needy ex-service men. The past eighteen months have taken a terrific toll from relief funds. The coming winter shows no prospect of betterment. With this in mind, Andover residents who contribute to this most worthy cause will be contributing to the welfare of needy ex-service men of Andover and the result of which will be a decreased withdrawal from the welfare fund of the town. It is the hope of Andover Post that the drive this year will meet with the utmost success, with a contribution forthcoming to the boy or girl who makes the call in your neighborhood.

Cooperation Necessary

Andover has succumbed to a great American fad and as a result the town will soon have an emergency unemployment committee. It seems nowadays that whenever a problem arises, a committee is suggested as the means of arriving at a solution. At the last special town meeting, a committee of five was appointed to investigate the unemployment situation, and after a survey this group made a report that all that was necessary for Andover to do was to loosen its pursestrings. The newest committee will have the task of trying to persuade the residents to do this.

The committee was suggested at the meeting of officials and welfare workers Monday night as an alternative to calling a special town meeting for the appropriation of funds for work. As such it should be heartily supported by the townspeople. A special appropriation would of course aid only those who are physically able to do street construction or water pipe installation work, and it would also mean that many people would be taxed who cannot afford it. The better plan is to have those who are able to donate anything do so, and then have the money spent in various ways, either for direct relief or work. Certainly any one who is able to work should be allowed to do so before any money is given him, for in this way the town or the donors, as the case may be, are realizing some return on their expenditure.

The citizens of Andover must do their part. The committee named after the special town meeting in January reported: "There can be no let-up in giving by the people of Andover for the remainder of the winter, but if all purses are opened just a bit wider we see no reason for any special appeal, or organized drive, in behalf of the needy or unemployed." The fact that an organized drive is now planned is proof that the townspeople did not open their purses just a bit wider. Andover's needy will probably be paid for a little longer until the new committee starts its work, but if after a few weeks, conditions do not improve, the demand for a special appropriation will again be made. If the voters of Andover do not wish to have their taxes increased, they should GIVE NOW.

But the appointment of this committee raises another problem: Why is it necessary? Why do the needy of Andover have to wait for such a committee to organize, make a preliminary survey, consult officials and welfare records, before they can hope for any work or food? In other words, why are we unprepared for this crisis? We have town officials appointed to look after welfare work; why are they not sufficient to take care of this problem? The first answer that comes to mind is that such a committee will centralize the work of all the various welfare workers in the community, but this should have been done long ago. We have a club here donating funds for the needy, and a church doing its part. Then the case is also brought to the attention of the

Emergency Committee to Organize Relief

but he felt that any amount of money which the taxpayers would care to appropriate at a special town meeting would be inadequate. He added that by taxation only 2200 people could be assessed, whereas there are others who would be glad to give. This group would feel insulted, he said, if they were not permitted to give in such a crisis as now faces us. Then he outlined a suggestion that a committee be formed to arouse the community to that degree of fervor and patriotism that we had during the war. He explained that such committees as he had in mind were being formed nationally and will soon be formed everywhere locally.

Dr. Claude M. Fuess of Phillips academy next arose to say that if such an appeal for funds were made to the community the people of Andover would be surprised and gratified at the response from the Hill. He stated that he had always attended the town meetings, but he felt that he could not say anything since he was not a taxpayer.

The motion for an Andover Emergency committee was voted on and passed after Mr. McDonald's motion had been defeated. Prior to this there were all sorts of suggestions. Frederick R. Hulme of the American Legion explained the Legion's plan whereby private people may employ men and pay half the wages, the town to pay the other half out of a fund donated by clubs and individuals. G. Edgar Folk proposed that if there were a special town meeting the town salaries and wages be cut accordingly. Dr. Daly suggested that everyone should support the governor's excessive tax measures, but Roy E. Hardy and Walter E. Curtis expressed the sentiment that there were too many taxes town authorities, and as a result there is an unnecessary duplication of effort and a wasteful expenditure of funds. Some families are being aided by clubs, churches and town, while others go hungry. This is a condition that should have been remedied long ago. Our new committee should help eliminate this waste, but it is late nevertheless. The next depression should see Andover better prepared, and it is hoped that when business again goes into a slump, relief efforts will be co-ordinated immediately and not two years and a half after the start of the decline.

Editorial Cinder

Regardless of what one's personal opinion of John F. Fitzgerald may be, he certainly should be commended for having suggested and defended a cut in the salary of the members of the State legislature. Tuesday he pointed out that in 1919 the salary was $1500, whereas at present it is $2000. This is obviously too much to pay a man who does not have to devote all his time to his public duties. The General Court is in session only part of the year, and when it is convened in special session, it votes itself a little more of the public funds. It is about time that our legislators should realize that economy should start at home.

Motorists who travel toward Andover from the direction of Boston are wondering why it is still necessary for them to detour around the by-pass and down Salem street. The entire three lanes are completed and only part of the shoulders remain to be done. Yet during working hours traffic from Boston is shunted away from a perfectly good road and sent down over Salem street, which is now in a wretched condition. The time spent in traveling around on the detour is almost double that which would be used if the new road were open to north-bound traffic. The macadam on Salem street is becoming worse than ever, and if Route 28 is not opened up soon, Andover will have to spend money to put the street in condition again.

The authorities at Phillips Academy have arranged a baseball game to be played tomorrow afternoon for the benefit of the town's unemployed. The academy has always done its part in helping welfare work in the town, either by providing employment or making donations, unofficially. It certainly is a fine beginning for the new relief campaign and shows a commendable spirit of co-operation. The game should be well attended by residents of the town. The cheering section will be filled, and the town should help out by filling the remaining stands.

Don't forget that there is another poppy day tomorrow. The response to the Legion sale last week was better than expected, and it is hoped that this spirit of generosity will again be in evidence tomorrow when the Veterans of Foreign Wars conduct their sale.

Stradivarius Cello at Recital Sunday

The recital in the Chapel of Phillips Academy on Sunday afternoon at 4:30 will be played by Russell B. Kingman of Orange, N. J. Mr. Kingman is president of the American Metal Textile Corporation and is at the same time an extremely fine cellist. He possesses, and will use on Sunday, the famous "Archinto" violoncello made by Stradivarius in 1689, one of the five Stradivarius cellos, and one of the finest violoncellos in existence. Its history is as follows:

This instrument was made by Stradivarius for Count Archinto and formed part of the Quartette of Stradivarius Instruments in the famous collection of Rare Works of Art of the Archinto Museum.

The Archinto family, one of the oldest of the Italian nobility, dates back to the Eleventh Century. Count Giuseppe Archinto was, during the 17th Century, the personal Ambassador for His Holiness, the Pope, to France, Germany and other European countries. He was a famous man of letters and patron of arts to whom the well known Alessandro Kolla dedicated many of his compositions of chamber music. His collection of rare instruments was well known and is now mentioned in various encyclopaedias. This cello in particular, which Stradivarius made for him, is specified as the finest instrument of his entire collection. Hill's famous book on the Life of Stradivarius makes special mention of this instrument which bears the original label dated 1689. It is made of the choicest Italian wood—there being only one other instrument of such character— that known as the Tuscan Stradivarius, now in the Museum of Florence. In Grove's Dictionary of Music and other encyclopaedias, under the caption "Stradivarius," five of the outstanding cellos of the world are usually mentioned. In these lists the "Archinto" Cello, 1689, appears first as the outstanding specimen of the master.

The cello remained in the Archinto family and was preserved in the Archinto Museum in Milan until 1869 when it was acquired by Jean Baptiste Vuillaume, the great Luthier, who brought it to Paris. Thereafter it passed into the hands of the world famous cellist, Jules Delsart, professor at the Paris Conservatoire, whose concert instrument it remained until the time of his death. The tone of the cello is beautiful and the instrument itself, totally uncracked and unmarred, is in perfect state of preservation.

As seen from the above the cello has passed through only four hands since the date it was made by the master.

The game was evened up in the sixth, but after a lucky seventh the local team was never headed.

Punchard outhit the visitors, twelve to seven. Asonian smashed out three singles in four times at bat, while Hemiway connected for a triple and a double for the Groton team. The local boys scored 14 runs on 12 hits as compared with Johnson's 9 runs on 11 hits.

The North Andover team's fielding was ragged, with ten errors being marked up against it. Roberts started on the mound for Johnson, but he was pulled out in the seventh after ten hits had been made against him. It was in this inning that Punchard scored its winning margin.
