Judge Chandler to Talk on Roses November 1

Judge F. M. Chandler will speak on Tuesday November 1st before the Andover Garden Club on "Roses," a most beguiling subject. For years Judge Chandler has successfully written to worms, caught scaly rose bugs and pestered pests and is now so rewarded by his labors that he can sit in his rose arbor and watch his roses grow and flourish. If this is not the correct and enchanting picture he will undoubtedly tell his audience on November 1st.

Pansies are said to express thought, rosemary remembrance, and roses—the thornless variety preferred, romance. But romance seems a far fetched subject to some of us when hastily stooping to pick one of our own blossoms we utter an unlovely yell coupled with surprising language and tear into the house for tweezers to extract a needle-sharp thorn. Or thrusting our nose deep into the rather motheaten bud we discover a family of rose bugs comfortably cuddled in the center. Our foliage instead of being a deep glossy green is a faded speckled yellow and covered with spider webs. Ants are running up and down the stem and we are surprised to see odd looking feelers and dead wood popping out all over the bush.

It will be a joy to have Judge Chandler explain how to keep these invaders and protruberances as far distant at least as our neighbor's garden. E.H.

The annual installation of Indian Ridge Rebekah Lodge, 136, I.O.O.F., took place Monday night without the presence of Noble Grand-elect Millie MacLeod, ill at the Lawrence General hospital with the grippe. She will be installed later.

It is possible that three members will be delegated to attend a convention of the New England Council of Taxpayers next month.

Children Injured by Autos Tuesday

Two accidents Tuesday resulted in injuries to two children, both of whom required two stitches for cuts on their heads. At noon Kendall Smith, 46 York street, was returning from school and according to the report filed at the police station stepped off the sidewalk on Havenhill street and was felled when he bumped into the side of a J. E. Greeley company truck operated by Edward H. Dwyer, 53 Summer street. The truck was proceeding at about 15 miles an hour, toward Shawheen center, it is claimed. The boy had evidently intended to cross in order to ride home in the car of Mrs. Harry L. Emmons stopped across the street. He was taken to the Shawheen hospital where he was treated by Dr. Walker and then removed to his home.

Raymond LeFevre, 10 South End terrace, Newark, N. J., was the operator of a Ford roadster which struck Dorothy Maise, 7, of 65 Park street, and then turned around and came to a stop on the sidewalk in front of J. H. Playdon's fish shop Tuesday afternoon about four. The little girl was crossing to the east side of Main street with the Ford proceeding northward. Myles West of Chestnut street accompanied by LeFevre took the girl to the Lawrence General hospital. She had a cut in her forehead that required two stitches. The left rear wheel of the Ford was broken.

Goodwill Industries to Start Operation

The Goodwill Industries for Andover, Lawrence, Methuen and North Andover is about ready to begin operation. The parent organization, Morgan Memorial, and the sister organization at Lowell have surrendered this territory for the new branch.

William Kruschwitz of the Meadowbrook Laundry has granted the use of the weave room of what was formerly the Brightwood Mill, 11 Sutton street, North Andover, which will be used as a workshop and the main store.

The Andover committee is seeking to secure Andover's share of the necessary funds to get this organization started and it is expected sufficient will be secured to start the first operations next week.

This organization after being well established can be made practically self supporting by converting the waste materials of a community into helpful values. The necessary subsidy depends upon the number of handicapped people used. The parent organization, Morgan Memorial in Boston last year paid in wages to the unemployed and handicapped $4000.00 weekly. This is duplicated by many other of the 70 such institutions in the large cities throughout the United States.

The people of Andover can help by making a contribution however slight toward the $500.00 needed and also by the contribution of cast off clothing, furniture, and other surplus of many other of the 70 such institutions in the large cities throughout the United States.

The "Opportunity bags" will soon be distributed but it is not necessary to wait for them. Bundle up, tie up and telephone Andover 1151 or to any member of the committee and your contributions will be called for and taken to the work shop for reconditioning and wages will be paid to needy people. Even better, take an automobile load to the workshop.

The committee is Miss Fannie E. Davis, Miss Anna W. Kuhn, Frank Hardy, Henry S. Hopper, I. R. Kimball, G. Edgar Folk, secretary, and A. C. Dame, treasurer.

John H. Campion Widely Mourned

One of Andover's most respected citizens, John H. Campion, was taken by death early Wednesday morning at his home on Bartlet street. A resident of Andover for nearly a half century, he had established himself in the hearts of those townspeople who had had the good fortune to know him intimately, and his loss at this time is many expressions of regret. He had been in poor health for some time, and the end had been expected almost momentarily during the last few weeks. However, his friends had witnessed a marked improvement Saturday, causing them to hope that he would recover. The passing then came as a distinct shock to the people of Andover.

The late Mr. Campion was born in England at Holon-Le-Cloy seventy-two years ago and he has a sister living there at the present time. On coming to this country he early associated himself with Murray Brothers, wholesale grocers in Lawrence, and later he helped form the firm of Currier and Campion. He conducted his own grocery in Andover successfully for many years before his retirement a few years ago.

Mr. Campion served in many different capacities in Andover life, having acted as director of the Andover Press, trustee of Puncture and the Memorial Hall library, the Andover Home for the Aged, and the Andover Savings Bank. He also served in the finance committee for three years.

He was a 32d degree Mason, belonging to St. Matthews lodge, and also holding membership in Lawrence, Lowell and Boston lodges. He was also a charter member of the old Andover club and a member of the Odd Fellows and the Odd Fellows encampment. He belonged to the Episcopal church and was a contributor at Christ church.

In addition to his sister in England, the late Mr. Campion is survived by a daughter, Gertrude. His only other relative in America is a cousin in Philadelphia.

The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon, and services will be conducted by Rev. Charles W. Henry, rector of Christ church. Interment will be in Spring Grove cemetery.

Football Rally Put Off Until Methuen Game

Truck Goes Up; Coal Comes Down

A heavy Bernard L. McDonald coal truck tried to imitate a trained dog shortly before noon yesterday by standing up on its hind wheels in front of the empty store in Daly's block on Main street. In its rapid rise it came near seriously injuring the driver and his assistant who were at the rear unloading the soft coal and it also smashed the plate glass window and the door of the store.

The body of the truck had been slightly elevated and all the coal had been removed from the rear, when suddenly the load shifted from the front, causing the cab and engine to go straight up in the air. All the coal came rushing out and the two coal men just jumped in time. For about an hour the truck resisted stubbornly all the efforts made to have it obey the law of gravity, but it was not until a brother truck came along and offered its body as a means of descent that it finally became settled on terra firma again. Meanwhile a kind Providence, aided and abetted by Officer David Gillespie, was successful in guiding hundreds of motorists who preferred to watch the truck rather than the road ahead of them.

John Henry Campion

The list of Andover citizens who have passed away since the beginning of the year is a long one, but the loss that the town will probably feel greatest is that of John H. Campion. For years the late Mr. Campion had been one of the town's most respected citizens. It was a respect that certainly was due him for his prominent place not only as a merchant, but also as one who took an active part in the affairs of the town. For the last few years he had been enjoying a well-earned rest from business affairs, and though the sign bearing his name has been removed from the old grocery store in the square, Campion's corner because of the dominant personality who had for years conducted the successful business there.

He has left Andover now, but the town is a better community for his having lived here.

"In Time of Need"

"At the Helm—in Time of Need," is the caption at the head of a poster issued by the American Red Cross in initiating its annual membership drive. Communities stricken by flood, famine, hurricane, fire or any imaginable catastrophe can well realize that the Red Cross is always ready to guide them through their distress. And we here in Andover have had this realization brought home forcefully to us this year with the local unit having agreed not only to co-operate with the local emergency committee, but even to take over the entire task of securing funds for the relief of the unemployed during the coming winter.

The current year has seen Andover's unemployment problem ably handled through the sacrifices of many of the townspeople. The Emergency committee conducted a drive on a small scale in the spring and from this realized a large enough sum to give work to many of the unemployed throughout the summer. These contributions were augmented greatly by the donations from the town employees. Very few people have a surplus nowadays, and so it must be a source of great pride to the people of Andover to know that private funds were sufficient to tide the town over a summer in which at times over 400 were on the list of unemployed.

From the start the Red Cross has helped the Emergency committee meet its routine expenses. In addition to helping Andover in this way, it maintains a nurse here whose work in school and home is invaluable. And now to top all this, it has taken over the work of raising funds to provide work for Andover's unemployed this winter. Each and every one of us should take a hand in this active part in sponsoring the legislation recommended by the Commission of "Neglected Children." In fact the Committee of which I am chairman, "Joint Judiciary," heard and brought out many of these proposals, which are now law.

4. Selfishly, I would have Massachusetts get all the aid it can. However, I believe the Federal Aid is a delusion, for Massachusetts many sister states get more aid than they are really entitled to.

5. The State Budget was balanced in 1932 and if the proper men are elected to office in Massachusetts in 1933 it will be balanced in 1933. If further special forms of taxation are needed, they should be such taxes as will bear most lightly on our citizens, particularly the real estate owners, should prefer to have the state spend less and thus have to raise by taxation.

6. The state should do all it can directly for the relief of unemployment without injuring its own credit. It often happens that of a large sum spent, the persons receiving employment get a comparatively small amount, the balance of the appropriation going for a multitude of things that only very remotely aid unemployment.

7. As Chairman of the Recess Commission on "Educational Requirements" I advocated the increase of the school age.

8. I have not worked out any plan of Unemployment Compensation. If we can get back to normal times, industry may be able to arrange some such system. We have not yet even settled the matter of Old Age Assistance as yet.

movement; we should all pitch in and add our names to the membership roll of the Red Cross, an organization which is its national, even international greatness, has not and will not neglect the problems of even such a small town as Andover. The Red Cross plan allows donations weekly, a much easier way for the individual and one which will allow the cessation of the donations when the need no longer exists.

Someday soon a Red Cross worker will come to your door. She will ask you to make a donation, one not to be used far away, but right here in Andover, to aid someone, probably a friend of yours. Do your bit by giving something, secure in the belief that it will be spent here in Andover to help the unemployed Andover. The Red Cross is your friend, everybody's friend, and it is up to you to justify that friendship and so make yourself everybody's friend, too.

Editorial Cinders

One of the very good suggestions made by the emergency committee a few weeks ago was that the organizations in town should conduct charity affairs this winter and donate the funds to the unemployed. It is hoped that all the clubs will join in this plan. The local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars is already well along in its plans to conduct a charity ball on Armistice day eve. This affair and all the other events throughout the winter should be well attended, for in this way not only is entertainment derived but also it is an excellent means of helping someone unable to secure the necessities of life, let alone entertainment.

The Andover League of Women Voters is making an attempt to ferret out the opinions of the candidates for public office on the various questions that face the state and nation today. Several of the candidates have answered these questions and the Townsman is glad to be able to pass these opinions on to the citizens of Andover. Today as always the people are apt to lose sight of a candidate's real stand on a matter because politicians as a rule find that more votes can be gained by playing on the people's emotions rather than appealing to their common sense. In every campaign from the presidential struggle down to the fight for the lowest elective office, the candidates who really do not have a leg to stand on attempt to secure their votes by destructive criticism of their opponents. The League of Women Voters is trying to present to the people the real feelings of the candidates on the current issues, and it is hoped that the townspeople will read the answers with care so that when November 8 comes, Andover will go to the polls knowing what it is doing.

SIXTY DISASTERS IN 1932 ADD TO NATION'S DISTRESS

Red Cross Spends $2,760,000 To Help Victims of Catastrophes.

In a year of great misfortune caused by economic depression, in which the American Red Cross assumed heavy burdens of relief for the unemployed, the organization also responded to emergency needs in 60 disasters in the United States and its insular possessions.

During the twelve months ending June 30, 1932, the Red Cross gave aid to 75,000 families totalling 338,000 individuals, with expenditures of $2,760,786. These people were in distress because of drought, flood, forest fire, tornado, snowstorm, mine explosion, or other similar great disaster.

Prolonged drought caused the Red Cross to go with help to 58,000 families in the northwest. Here in 144 counties in North and South Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, Washington and Iowa the Red Cross spent $1,980,000 from its own treasury to feed and protect people through the winter and spring.

Other grave disasters were floods in southeastern states, where the organization spent $192,000 from its treasury and $66,000 local contributions to help 13,000 persons.

More than 50,000 people were homeless from floods in tributaries of the Mississippi river and again the Red Cross faced a long relief task, aiding these people. The national organization gave $108,000 and local contributions were $10,000.

The Red Cross always maintains a state of readiness to meet these sudden emergencies, and funds and other essentials to this work are supplied, in part, by the annual roll call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day. Every citizen can support this worthy activity through joining as a member in the local Red Cross chapter.

Protesting Valuations of Reading Assessors

READING—Many protests have been entered at the office of the Board of Assessors as a result of increased valuations and personal property levies which appeared on the bills sent out recently. It is understood that others who wanted to protest found the office locked.

Property owners were loud in their declaration that any rise in assessments was unfair at this time even though inequalities in valuations do exist and have existed for many years. They insisted that the raise wiped out the decrease in the tax rate.

The assessors point out, however, that practically all of the increases complained of are on land values and that the increases made do not yet reflect the percentage of the land values in town. They point out that where some land is valued at 14 cents a foot and nearby land, just as valuable, is set at four cents a foot, there is obviously something wrong and a need for an adjustment.

They agree that in times of economic distress it is hard to raise the value of the land set at the lower figure because it may work hardship upon the owner. But they go further and state that if the valuations were left untouched it would be just as unfair to have the man with the higher valuation carry the expense of the town for his neighbors. In times of hardship, they declare, it is just as heavy for him.

They also show that the raise in valuation is only about half of what it should be and that it ought to be raised again.

years of growth from the Post Office in Andover as I first knew it, approximately 40 years ago. When I came to Andover the Post Office was located in the Town Hall and the postmaster at that time was Mr. William Goldsmith. My box number was, as I remember it, number 497 and was a pigeon hole with a glass front. I don't remember definitely whether there were boxes with keys or not. I remember Mr. Goldsmith as a splendid character and from him I received confirmation of one of my mother's early teachings. A few days after I had secured my box I drove into town for my mail, looked at my box from the outside and discovered I had a letter which to me was most important. I suppose I was a little over anxious to secure it. I hastened to the window which was attended by Mr. Goldsmith, and pointing to my box, I said, somewhat earnestly, "My mail, please, box number 497." Mr. Goldsmith drew back in a very dignified, but horrified manner, and said "Young man, don't point, never point. I have never forgotten, and have ever since endeavored to act on his advice."

"Since that time the Post Office has been located first in the Musgrove Block and later in the McDonald block on Essex Street from which it has now moved to its present location. "We have indeed been fortunate in securing for postmasters men who have kept the character of our service as near perfect as possible. In later years much of the credit has been due to our Assistant Postmaster Mr. Frank McDonald who has been and is untiring in his efforts to be of service: a man who has always given his best in cooperation with the postmaster to make Andover's Postal Service 100 percent. "I want to again thank Mrs. Rogers for her efforts and to assure her that the citizens of Andover deeply appreciate the manner in which she has represented them. I personally wish for Mr. Cheever, the present postmaster, a most successful administration and I am sure that our service is still in good hands; and in behalf of the citizens of Andover I wish him every success."

Historical Sketch

Dr. Fuess next gave a historical sketch of the post office. He mentioned that the first postmaster-general in Washington was Samuel Osgood, a native of Andover. In this connection, Mrs. Rogers later mentioned to the townsman that Mr. Cheever and Mr. Osgood belong to the same family. Dr. Fuess's address follows: "Soon after the organization of the Federal government in 1789, the Post Office Department was formed by congress. President Washington's first postmaster general was Samuel Osgood, a native of the town of Andover and its only resident ever to sit in a president's cabinet. It may, therefore, be said that Andover had its share in the building up of the far reaching national postal system, one of the manifestations of which is being dedicated here today. "The Andover post office was opened in 1794, with Isaac Abbott as its first incumbent. The office itself was undoubtedly located in the Locke Tavern on Elm street, on the main highway between North Andover and the South Parish. Abbott's incumbency lasted until April 1st, 1822, and he was therefore postmaster for a longer period than any other postmaster in the history of the town. It is unnecessary to give the full list of his successors, but they included some of our ablest citizens, namely Nathaniel Swift, grandfather of Miss Kate and Miss Florence Swift; Samuel Phillips, a member of the famous family who founded Phillips academy; Major William Marland, not unfamiliar to many living townspeople; William G. Goldsmith, once a teacher at Phillips Academy, and principal of Punched High school, and still remembered for his learning and public spirited character; and more recently, Arthur Bliss, who served from 1897 to 1913; John H. McDonald, who served from 1914 to 1923, and the late John C. Angus, who was postmaster for almost seven years. "The postoffice has been located in various places. It once stood on the corner of Brook and Central streets; again it was located in a building on the corner of Main, Essex, and Central streets. After the erection of the Town hall, in 1858, the postoffice was given quarters in that building. After the erection of the Musgrove building the postoffice was transferred to new quarters in that structure. In 1917 the postoffice was again moved into the McDonald building, on Essex street, where it has remained until the present time. It is to be hoped that this new structure, centrally and advantageously located, will long stand. "It may be noted among interesting details that city carrier service was established in Andover 1897, with Joseph H. Blunt, J. Albion Burt and James J. Feeney as the first carriers. Mr. Burt is still in service, as superintendent of the Shawshen Village station. Joseph Blunt, known as "Uncle Joe" among the Phillips academy boys for many generations, was retired with honor last July. Miss Mary Winnie Burt entered the postoffice service in 1895 under Postmaster Goldsmith, and is still a valued employee. Frank S. McDonald, the assistant postmaster, is in his twenty-eighth year of service, and Arthur Bliss is now serving his twenty-first year. "The position of postmaster is one of importance in the community. It requires tact, energy, and reliability. The present acting postmaster, Frederick E. Cheever, combines these qualities in an unusual degree, and we hope that through the influence of Mrs. Rogers and the voice of the postmaster general, he will be retained in a position for which he is so well qualified. "This is perhaps the last official appearance here of Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers as congresswoman from our district. For some years Andover has been represented in Washington by a person who could speak for this town, who, in her principles and her ideals, knew for what this historic community stands. We have all of us, Republicans or Democrats, been proud of her integrity, her intelligence, her independence, her high-minded, unselfish service. Now, by one of the tricks of political strategy, the congressional districts in this commonwealth have been reorganized, and Andover is the loser. We shall miss Mrs. Rogers and her visits here. We are sorry that the official tie between her and Andover is to be broken. But we cannot forget her, and this postoffice will long remain as a memorial of what she has been to Andover and its citizens.

Mrs. Rogers' Talk

Opening with an expression of appreciation for the support given her by the people of Andover, Congressman Rogers went on to mention the many conferences her husband, the late Hon. John Jacob Rogers, had had with the late Speaker Cole and other prominent Andover citizens in regard to the erection of a new post office. She said that one of the first things she did after her election was to go to the post office department and plead for a new building for Andover. She added a word of appreciation for the wish that he might have lived to see the opening of the new office. "Next Mrs. Rogers commented on the tiresome and arduous work of the carriers, who must carry on through all kinds of weather—and also through all kinds of handwriting. She remarked on the fine testimonials she had received about the courtesy and efficiency of the local employees. Mrs. Rogers then presented the keys to Mr. Cheever and wished the best of luck to him and his constituents. Mr. Cheever stated that he would do his best in carrying out the work of the postmaster, and also commented upon the assistance given by Mr. McDonald and all the clerks and carriers. Rev. Charles A. Branton, O.S.A., pronounced benediction, and after the singing of "America" the post office was thrown open for inspection, with Mrs. Rogers and Mr. Cheever receiving in the postmaster's office. The building will be ready for use Monday.

School of Politics to Be Held Next Week

Do you know how the 18th Amendment can be repealed? Do you know how the election may affect our Foreign Relations? Do you know how to vote on the Referenda Questions on the State Ballot? Do you know about the economic issues of the Election? You can learn about these and other politically important matters at the Fall School of Politics. It is being held at the Hotel Bradford in Boston on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 25-26. Among the notable speakers is H. V. Kaltenborn, who has recently returned from an extensive survey of European conditions. He spent a day with Adolf Hitler during the past summer. He also spent many days with other distinguished public leaders learning at first hand the European situation which must be the basis of our foreign policy. He is to speak at the School on the subject, "What Changes in our Foreign Policy May be Effectuated by the Results of the Election?" Former Editor of the New York Globe and now managing editor of the New Republic, writer and lecturer, Bruce Bliven, who speaks at the School on the "Economic Issues in the Presidential Campaign," has been recently characterized as among the few who "can closely observe what goes on in America, interpret it accurately, and write about it cogently." The prohibition tangle and its present political status as well as the probable future of its constitutional and legislative history will be straightened out by two speakers. Tuesday evening at seven o'clock Dr. Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald, student of world affairs, the author of the much-read article "A Dry Warns the Drys," will open the discussion on "The Prohibition Issue and After." Thomas Reed Powell, Langliell Professor of Law at Harvard University will continue it. Dr. Powell is an authority on constitutional law and can tell his audience how a constitutional egg may be un-scrambled. In addition to these brilliant speakers, others of high authority, including Governor Ely, will give instruction on party platforms, referenda questions, and ballot marking. The School is arranged by the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, and is open to all, both men and women, who are interested. The Program follows, and please note its excellence.
