Emergency Committee Raises Workers Pay

All Town Laborers to Receive Fifty Cents an Hour Hereafter—Projects Outlined in Joint Meeting Wednesday Night

Meeting Wednesday Night

A comprehensive plan of work was outed at a joint meeting of town officials, ergency committee members, and Garden club representatives in the town hall Wedshay evening. The rate of pay for the unployed was advanced to fifty cents per by the emergency committee as a result the meeting. This was done to place allose working for the town on the same basis, of the raise will be made effective as of rill 1, the date on which the regular town overs' wages drop to fifty cents an hourse committee felt that this would cause less satisfaction on the part of the unemployed elving the same scale as the others, the waste of the joint meeting that ey town department should co-operate to e unnost with the Emergency committee is unsoft with the Emergency committee the men in smaller groups in heretofore on different classes of work past there have been too many men one job so that they too often interfered the ach other's working. The school committee, represented by its sub-committee on buildings and grounds, suggested three different projects. One is the moval of a large quantity of rocks from the rear of the Shawsheen school and the possible construction of a wall on the east side of the rear grounds to prevent the gradual erosion of the road which mounts a hill near that point. The Emergency committee could provide nothing but labor, and the school bard would have to provide the funds for a pair of horses and a drag, in addition to some funds for dynamiting. The front lawn at the Bradlee school is in bad shape, as are some of the walks at the Central plant.

The tree department brought up several brush cutting plans and the reforestation of Carmel Woods. The trustees of Spring Grove cemetry also had some brush to cut an addition to other improvements.

Those present were Mrs. Hardy and Mrs. Carlton of the Garden Club, the Board of Public Works under the leadership of William D. McIntyre, chairman, Superintendent of Schools Henry C. Sanborn, William A. Doherty, Arthur R. Lewis, Fred A. Swanton of the Spring Grove cemetery, Ralph T. Berry, tree warden; Walter M. Lamont and Walter E. Curtis of the Emergency committee, and Frank H. Hardy, Dr. Jerenian J. July, and Andrew McTernen, Board of Selection.

Featuring Industry

The April meeting of the Andover League of Women Voters, which was to have been held in the Shawsheen hall, will take place at eight o'clock next Tuesday evening, April 4, at Davis hall, Abbot academy, through the courtesy of Miss Bailey. The program of this meeting, which is in the hands of the Committee on Women in Industry of which Mrs. A. G. Baldwin is chairman, promises to be a most interesting one. There is to be a one-act play entitled "Daily Bread" presented by the high school club of the Lawrence Y. W. C. A. under the direction of Miss Ruth Fedder, Girls Work secretary of the association. This little play has been given several times in other places by the same group and is a most moving picture of some of our present-day problems. The speaker of the evening will be Miss Margaret Weiseman, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Consumers! League. Miss Weiseman has chosen for her topic, in the discussion of the present breakdown of our American Industrial Standards, the arresting and challenging title "The Real Cost of Bargains," and will endeavour to answer such questions as "Who pays the balance of the cost on the $3.95 dresses? On fifty cent stockings? On cheap food-stuffs?"

Miss Weiseman has been making an intensive study of present-day conditions in industry from the points of view of the worker, the manufacturer, and the consumer, both from the theoretical and the practical standpoints.

"To be thankful for the morning sunlight, for your neighbor's smile, for the pure sweet air of heaven, to be glad of the day's work and the power to do it, to be content with what you have, to live each day better than the last—surely this is the road to happiness."

In men whom men condemn as ill I find so much of goodness still; In men whom men pronounce divine I find so much of stain and blot I hesitate to draw the line Where God has not.

An eastern religious publication is trying to settle the question of why men don't go to church. It says the trouble is golf and that Sunday newspaper, but it is bilinder than a close-fisted elder during the missionary collection. When a preacher undertakes to convince a man whose brain cells are in a pleasing state of health that Jonah occupied a furnished flat in the interior of a whale for forty days, without being supplied with a night key, he has taken a contract that will keep him busier than a one-armed paperhanger with the prickly heat. When the pulpit flounders, the pew nods. After a man has been fed from childhood's happy hour on canned sermonettes and scrambled homilies that were hoary with age a thousand years before Martin Luther ordered eggs straight up at the Diet of Worms, he will go to church with the hopeless book of an old maid at a leap year dance. What the pulpit of this country needs is enough ginger to keep a man whose mind is full of overdrafts and eight per cent interest from falling into a noisy and pervasive snore and making the tenor solo sound like a duet between a bull fiddle and a piccolo.

To a by-stander moving a safe seems anything but safe, as the following conversation heard Tuesday when the Insurance company safe was being hoisted into the second floor of the Shawsheen post office building will indicate. The speakers were a young man and a young lady. After the latter had exclaimed that she wouldn't like to be standing under the air-minded safe, the young man took it upon himself to tell her with very serious mien the principles of the block and tackle. While she listened attentively he told how two strands would cut in half the force required to lift it; four strands would make it seem one-fourth as heavy, etc. But, looking back up at the safe, the young lady turned to her escort and said, "Well, it would be just as heavy if it fell on you." That's reasoning that can't be disputed.

A new industry for Andover! Making of

A new industry for Andover! Making of maple syrup. The owner of the property at 85 Main street tapped his maple trees recently and from several gallons of sap made of the syrup. This is not "guaranteed by Good Housekeeping" but by the managing editor of the Townsman, to whom the new syrup producer gave a generous sample.

To print or not to print—that is the question. You know, Will Rogers says all he knows is what he reads in the papers, but we'll bet he knows a good deal more than that, for being connected with newspapers, he must know that newspapermen don't print half of what they run across. For instance, you remember that time last December when the police were called to find a woman who had wandered away from home and had become lost? No, of course, you don't; only one paper published anything about it and even that paper used very little space on it.

about it and even that paper used very little space on it.

It wasn't that the newspapermen didn't know about it; in fact, they were right on the scene. But there was something about the story—well, only a heartless person would sensationalize such a tragic incident. It was about ten o'clock, and the three local newspapermen were just returning from that fine speech of Rev. William G. Poor's in Shawshen village when they decided to check up at the police station. Driving up to the rear of the town hall they saw a couple of officers with search lights evidently ready to start off on some sort of hunt. A few seconds later the police car with two regulars and a special had started off at breakneck speed toward a lonely part of the town. Following closely was the car with the three members of the Fourth Estate, and behind them came a machine with a prominent local clubman and a fireman. The breakneck pace did not continue for long; country roads minimize the pace and emphasize the breakneck.

Eventually the three cars drew up at the rear of a pathetic-looking dwelling on the outskirts of the town. A very worried father and a beyof wondering children trooped out cheful version of why the mother had wandered away. One of the officers and one of the newspaper boys took a searchlight and tamped through the woods near the house, shuddering as their imaginations worked too freely when they noticed the river nearby. The others lingered behind to make attempt at piccing the story together.

Soon the officers had some very definitions at the possible places in which she might be found. The father had told them where she was most likely to go and so the trio of cars was soon tearing over the country-side in the direction of one of the nearby communities. They all stopped at a farmhouse to ask if anyone had seen her pass there wasn't anyone there. However, the officers noticed some fresh footprints in the vicinity of the house and began tracking these down.

The library notes last week gave the name of a new book, with a very interesting commendation of the possible places in which she might be cell of the possible places in which she might be found. these down.

Newspapermen have to get copy ready for the press and so they have to retire sometime before five o'clock in the morning. Accordingly, the three reporters jumped into the car and headed back toward civilization. But on approaching the home of the missing woman they were stopped by a siren-blowing fireman and the children who reported that the woman had returned but had disappeared again. One of the reporters stayed behind to assist in the search while the other two raced back to stop the officers from going any further. The horn of the car was blown incessantly so that the police car would not continue toward the neighboring community.

When the group returned to the house ortiner. The horn of the car was blown increased by the same for Andover: the town meeting two the group returned to the house gain, she had been found.

Germany denies it's bothering the Jews. Galifornia discorns the earthquake. Well, let's do the same for Andover: the town meeting went off in perfect harmony this year.

A good story so far—all of it could have been printed. But the rest—no. She looked so puny and miserable; she looked all worn out; the little girl of fourteen was so forforn in her sobbing declaration that if they took in her sobbing declaration that if they took her mother away she would have to get up at four o'clock to cook the breakfast for the over-large family; the little children were so obviously in doubt as to what it was all about; oh, no, the public didn't have twas all about; oh, no, the public didn't have know about that. Two very human policement talked the situation over with the family, and soon the little girl was resigned to the early breakfast hour and her mother was taken havy to a hospital where we all know she'll be better off.

Siftings

Main street near the campus was called "like a dog's hind legs" in one of the speeches at the annual town meeting. The academy does give us pretty good legs to stand on, doesn't it?

If the State Legislature doesn't get going, the beer mugs on April 7 will be as empty as the once full dinner party.

The unemployed have just received a boo in wages here in Andover—and in the year decreases, too. If the extra ten cents an ho will put a stop to the complaints of the tow meeting loud speakers, it might be worth it.

Garden Club Holds Annual Conference

The annual conference of the Andover Garden club was held in simply but attractively decorated. Peabody house Wednesday with a most gratifying attendance. The lower floor of the house was used for exhibits and the upper for the lectures.

A competition of flowering shrubs was held for the members, with the winners being: First, Mrs. Everett Graves of North Andover second, Mrs. Mitchell Johnson, third, Mrs. Warren Stevens of North Andover and fourth, Mrs. J. S. Rogers.

The shrubs were on exhibit near the door. On one side of the room there was a sale of handcraft by the Division of the Blind of the Commonwealth. Photographs illustrating the aims of the Council for the Preservation of the Beauties of Essex County were on display. A model of an ordinary roadside as compared with what a roadside should be attracted considerable attention. aims of the Council for the Preservation of the Beauties of Essex County were on display. A model of an ordinary roadside as compared with what a roadside should be attracted considerable attention. Bird houses donated to the club by Frank Mills were osale, with the proceeds going to the club. In the morning A. M. Davis, horticultural professor at the Massachusetts State College, was the principal speaker.

His meaning of a garden was the old English one which includes the yard and entire doorway instead of thinking of an individual bed of flowers. The two most important requisits of gardens were 1, to feed them and 2, to let them grow old. No one can grow a garden in 1 year, perhaps not in 5 or 10 years. It may take half a century before the ideal is accomplished.

Prof. Davis showed beautiful colored slided before them, border gardens, rock gardens and formal gardens. Evergreens, he stated, should be sheared to keep them back. Each year shrubs must be pruned at the base, 1-4 or 1-3 old wood cut back. Shrubs need food just as much as flowers do. A good efertilizer for them is leaf material found about the grounds. This should be worked in and down for 2 inches.

A good expanse of lawn counts 50 per cent in the success of your garden. It is a setting for the plants.

Questions asked the speaker were an swered with great clearness and homory and continues by the decomplete of the plants.

Stowe School Notes

After the long struggle of earning sufficient funds to pay for it has come the realization of our desire for a bit of much needed equipment—an electric outlet in every class room—whereby it will be possible for any teacher to use the equipment which we bought some years ago. Visual Education has come to be a standard means of teaching many subjects and we hope to enjoy many lessons more by using this means. A few lantern-slides on China and Japan, also the British Isles and France have been added to our collection.—

Theory Given Up
The idea of the existence of a continent of Lemuria is no longer accepted. The name was given by Haeckel to a vast area assumed to exist in past ages and including the present Africa, Indian ocean and Malayan archipelago. The belief was based on the hypothesis that the existence of such a continent was necessary to explain the peculiar present distribution of the lemurs. However, the discovery of the remains of lemurs in America and Africa rendered such an hypothesis untenable.
