Civic Musical Organization Formed at Meeting Tues-day Night in Punchard Hall— David Coutts President—J. Everett Collins Director

de Andover Male Choir, a purely civical organization, was formed Tuesday in Punchard hall under very auspicious mistances. The committee appointed at avious meeting on by-laws and nominareported through Dr. Walter H. Davies. manent organization was effected by lection of officers. David L. Coutts was president; Frederick E. Cheever, first president; Alfred Perry, second vicelent; James P. Christie, secretary; cc C. Bodwell, treasurer; David A. es, librarian and Edward Guertin, ant librarian. e most graftfying election was the choice most graftfying election was the choice club in New England Federation of Men's Glee clubs at the annual contest in Synpheny Hall, Boston.

Last season the same group were much in demand throughout this section and with the choir now a civic organization it feels it can properly appeal to the citizens and music lovers for their support. To this end a group of associate members will be asked to endorse the choir. They will be allowed all the privileges of the active members except taking part in business sessions or singing at concerts but will be cordially welcome to attend rehearsals. They will be entitled also to tickets at the concerts by the choir.

Active membership is open to all make singers of the town. Application can be made on application blanks and the vocal abilities of the candidates will be passed on by the membership committee and the director. If the candidates qualify they will be admitted without further test. Application blanks may be had from the president, the director or the scretary for the present.

A rehearsal preceded the business session and several new compositions were sung slowing much promise for nanother successful season. The next rehearsal will be held Tuesday at eight o'clock in Punchard hall when intensive study will begin on the season's work.

Frank E. Lenane, local man who is connected with the federal public works administration in this state, was present to explain the workings of the act under which the town would receive a grant of thirty percent of the cost of any necessary public construction if its od esired. He stated that Massachusetts will have to pay to the Federal Government 250 million dollars for this work, and it might as well use some of it.

The procedure which a town has to go through to take advantage of the act was explained. Several different officials have to express approval as to the soundness of the town's finances, the necessity of the project, etc., but Mr. Lenane said there would not be much doubt of approval for Andover. The town meeting would have to vote on it before federal officials could act, he stated.

Local labor would be preferred, he said, and the contractors would be required to hire local men. A thirty-hour week will be in force, at the prevailing union rate. In answer to a question, Mr. Lenane asserted that it was possible for a town department to do the work itself. This would mean that the board of public works here could build a new reservior itself.

The question of centralization was injected into the school discussion during the or public works are could build a new reservoir itself.

The question of centralization was injected into the school discussion during the evening when Mr. Sanborn was asked if there would be more centralization with a new building. The superintendent replied that there would be no further centralization. The school as proposed does not contain any rooms for new special activities such as some of the opponents of the plan fear will be introduced here.

NRA Meeting in Town Hall Tonight

The town hall this evening will be the scene of another NRA mass meeting, with a speaker from the Boston NRA headquarters appearing to present information about the workings of the movement. The speaker will answer questions after his address. The local organization will attend en masse.

It is planned to check up on all business in town soon to see if they are complying with the code. Members of the local committee will conduct this survey and it is hoped that cooperation will be freely given by the local business men.

The Public Works Act

Andover's town officials have been more or less groping in the dark during the last few weeks in attempting to discover the possibilities and pitfalls of the public works provisions of the National Recovery Act. They have proceeded very cautiously, not wishing to plunge into anything which might not prove of benefit to the town. Since the middle of August the various provisions of the act have been examined in detail, and finally to secure expert opinion on the plan Mr. Lenane of the state public works administration was invited to speak at the meeting of the various boards last Wednesday evening. As a result the town officials now seem to feel that everything is to be gained and nothing to be lost by applying the act there, but again they are proceeding cautiously so that nothing will be proposed which is not absolutely necessary for the town.

The act in brief means a grant from the first prove of the ment at absolutely necessary for the town.

Project. Some of the officials were dubious about the thirty-hour week, feeling that forty hours' pay might be required, but they have been assured that the prevailing union hourly rate would be used, so that the total labor cost would be used, so that the total labor cost would be no more than if the construction were done under ordinary conditions.

The act seems quite acceptable now, especially in that no projects are to be allowed by the state or federal government would be seen assured to be plan Mr. Lenane of the state public works administration was invited to speak at the meeting of the various boards last Wednesday evening. As a result the town officials work and in the additional stipulation that no oscillation, the only exception being on self-liquidating projects. Costs are low problems allowed by the state or federal government with a project and the first work of the domation. On the other hand, the town should not be led to indulge in unnecessary for the town.

The act in brief means a grant from the federal government of thirty percent of the cost of any necessary public works, the remainder to be borrowed from the federal government or from anyone else at a rate of interest not casced four per cent. Very little federal supervision is required, except for the maintaining of minimum rates of wargs and a thirty-hour week. The town has the awarding of the contract, subject only to the approval of the state engineer who must be astisfied as to the grownent committee must be used in the successary.

Land in the Antarctic Commander Charles Wilkes, in com-mand of the American exploring expemand of the American exploring expedition in Antarctic waters, first sighted land January 19, 1840. Captain D'Urville, in command of a French expedition, sighted a high mass thought to have been land covered with snow on the same day. Actual land was not seen by the French until January 22, observes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune.

Other explorers give full credit to Wilkes, especially in view of the fact that D'Urville did not drop a day from his calendar when crossing the one hundred and eightich meridian to make the time correspond with the eastern hemisphere, making the actual date of his seeing anything January 29.

Checked Cholera

Checked Cholera

The medical section of the League of Nations was asked to do something in the periodical epidemic of cholera devastating Foochow, China, says the Kansas City Star. A parade of carts was organized, carrying large figures which represented the wicked cholera devil and the good angel of bolled water. Men on the carts shouted to the people to drink only bolled water. This intense propaganda went on for several weeks prior to the appearance of the regular visitation of the dread sourge, and when the time came, hundreds in the villages around died of the plague and in the city itself not the plague and in the city itself not a single case was reported!

William Mulready, designer of "the first stamp ever isued," was born at Ennis, County Clare, Ireland, in 1786. The family removed to London while the artist was yet a boy, and he was educated at the Royal Academy school. He became an academician in 1815. In the first rank of British artists, it was natural that he should be chosen to create the illustration employed on the first one penny envelope sponsored by the crown government. A critic says of the drawing, "To be sure, there is a sketchiness about it which renders the design somewhat crude, but there is genius also,

"See how delightfully the golden orient is portrayed in the patient ele-phant and those Africans on clumsy but fleet ships of the desert, the camel; but neet snips of the desert, the camel; the chattering Chinese are there, too, burthen-bearing slaves, eke the busy Moslem scribes plying their pens, squatted tailorwise on their bright bits of carpet.

"The great American continent also is admirably pictured, with its tawny savage clasping the hand of his Quaker brother of the pale face. But the stroke of genius lies in the little corner sketch of the meek-eyed mother, who with trembling clasped hands is listening so eagerly to the reading of the letter from her far-off boy."

The envelope went into use May 6.

Use of Latin

Latin, like all languages, is a growth; and the so-called Romance languages are merely the changes due to growth and locality that have taken place in "classie" Latin; just as Latin grew from some unknown source. Much Latin literature was written from 200 B. C. to 500 A. D., but especially around the time of Christ, when Roman culture was at its height. In the Tweifth century much of this literature was revived. In the meantime the language had suffered the inevitable change, losing much of its stateliness and beauty. Scholars, most of whom were Catholic clergymen, revived Latin literature as it was originally written.

Better Job

"Why, Bee," he said briskly. "Why, Bee, it's great to hear you. To what do I owe this unexpected and undeserved pleasure?"

"Terry," said Beatrice, "don't be sarcastic, I—"

"High up" said Beatrice."

"Hush up," said Beatrice, crossly.
"Terry, it's pretty awful. I've lost my

"My dear girl," he said sympathetically. "That's good news. It doesn't do to linger too long with the minority. Join the majority, even if it's wrong, and have a good time."

"I wish you wouldn't be so horrid," sighed Beatrice's voice. "I don't know what to do."

"I do," said Terry. "Marry me. I haven't been able to ask you for two months because you had a job and I didn't, and I've sort of got out of practice. Bee, I mean it. Two can live more cheaply than one. We'll prove it."

it."

So Terry and Bee were married.
Beatrice had a foothold away in the country—a small farmhouse and some not very good land which she had inherited from her grandmother. And Terry had a small—very small, but pretty sure—income of the unearned sort.

They were married one morning and They were married one morning, and traveled that day to Bee's little house. And they spent their honeymoon painting and cleaning and patching and arranging. And within a month they were living happily away from the world as if they had never known the clatter and glamor of New York and the daily office grind.

But within a month their family had grown alarmingly. Whenever Terry drove to the nearest town he came home with some sort of pet.

Terry's content and happiness were persistent. Sometimes Bee lamented her lost life. Not that she wasn't happler now. She was happier. But she couldn't feel that it was quite—well, quite right, to have such a good time
and worry so little about the future.
And all their animals—they only

she went back to her old life.
"But it is right." Terry reassured her, as they knelt beside each other thinning out the radish bed. "It's the rightest thing there is. Look!" Terry settled back on his heels and pointed his remarks with his trowel. "We aren't either of us paying rent. To be sure, I'm living in my wife's house, but what of it? She likes to have me. And we're going to grow enough stuff to make us fat this summer, and what little money I've got goes a darn sight further here than it did in New York and—oh, Bee, aren't we happy!"

And that ended it, for the time. Of

And that ended it, for the time. Of

And that ended it, for the time. Of course, they were happy. As she list-ened to the crackling fire later on, Bee admitted to herself, without reservation, that she was happy.
"Terry," she said, the present crowding out the past, "let's get up early tomorrow and transplant the lettuce. And then take our lunch and go picknicking over at the lake."
Next evening, when they came back, tired and happy and hungry, from their day at the lake. Terry stopped to get the mail out of their box by the roadside, while Bee hurried ahead to open the house and start the fire for supper. Under the front door was an envelope. She stooped to pick it up. It was addressed to her. Penciled on its face was a note from the postmaster of the nearby town. "I stopped by special with this," he wrote. "It had a special delivery stamp on. Sorry you were out."

Sorry you were out."

She walked resolutely to the kitchen, lighted the fire Terry had laid before they went away, filled the kettle with fresh water, put it on the stove, and then took off her hat before she opened the letter. "Old job walting at old salary," she read. "We are reopening your department and cannot carry on without you. Advise Immediately. Would like you back by the sixth."

The sixth. Boo's heart sent.

Thank you for offer."

When Terry came in, Bee was humming. She had pulled a blue apron over her pink dress. She stood before the fire, cooking bacon and stirring cocoa and poaching eggs and making toast as if her life depended on getting them all done to a turn.

"Oh, Terry," she called out. "Tele phone that message on the table to the telegraph office, will you? And supper'll be ready in a second—as soon as I fix the salad."

No Trace Found of Key-Workers

No trace has yet been found of the young men who it is believed broke into the apart-ment of the Misses Jeannette Greeley, Kath-erine M. Ballard and Helen McGraw in the Caronel Apartments last Thursday after-noon. The break was made between threa and four o'clock. When the break was re-ported, the Andover police made an intensive search of the side streak but no treas of the ported, the Andover police made an intensive search of the side-streets, but no trace of the men could be found.

From indications in the apartment the theft was committed by expert key-workers. The lock was plugged up with tooth picks so that the thieves would not be disturbed while in the process of ransacking the apartment. When entering the building the three occupants of the apartment noticed two neatly dressed young men coming down the steps, and these two were the object of the police search.

Seven dollars and some jewelry were taken. Another sum of money was overlooked.

The Andover Mothers' Club will meet next Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock in Punchard hall. Members are asked to note that the meeting opens at two instead of 2:30 as is usually the case.

U. S. Leads All Others
in Useful Inventions
Since the United States patent office was opened in 1791 American inventive genius has developed more great and useful inventions than all the rest of the world combined. So fertile of new ideas is the American brain that no less than 200 inventions a day are patented in Washington. The following is a list of some of the epoch-making inventions since the foundation of the Republic.

Dragon Fly Cannot Sew

The dragon fly, or darning needle, as it is commonly called, fortunately cannot live up to either of the superstitions which have been built up about it. It is supposed, by children, says the Washington Star, to be able to sew up the ears or to sting. The first belief is absurd on the face of it, but belief is absurd on the face of it, but many adults believe it can sting. However, as it has no stinger, it cannot harm human beings in that way. The dragon fly feeds on insects which it catches on the fly and holds securely with its strong biting laws. The dragon fly lays its eggs on still water and the larvae live in the water, feeding upon insects and ting fish. When it arrives at maturity the larva crawls up on the bank, the shell breaks open and the adult fly emerges.

Octopus in the Plural

If certain philological rules shall be followed in using foreign words in the English language, the plural of octopus should be octopods, because this word has been derived from Greek; Octo, eight, and pus, leg. It means eightlegged, thus its root is octopod, and the anglicized plural should be octopods, though the Greek plural of the word pus, as a neutral noun, is poda. But octopoda has been adapted in zoology to designate a suborder of dibranchiate cephalopods. The same we see with other foreign words like datum (Latin), plural data; genus (Latin), plural indices; phenomenon (Greek), plural phenomena, etc.

Chain Letters

Some scientists think the Idea of the chain letter originated thousands of years ago in Assyria, where the writers, having copied prayers for prosperity in cuneiform characters on large bricks, flung them one by one at those whose decease was desired. To those whose decease was desired. To break the chain by missing one was held to be very unlucky, as the letter might then be thrown back with fatal results. The whole business of the chain letter with its vague threat is based on credulity, fear and super stition. In the United States the dis tribution is an offense against the law

The Gold Standard

The Gold Standard

The gold standard is an agreement between a government of men and men governed that a certain fixed amount of gold lies back of each nominal unit of paper money outstanding, either actually or by promise to pay, and that through its banking system a certain percentage of gold will be carried against deposits and outstanding currency notes. The purpose of the gold standard is threefold. To give confidence, to warn of abuse, and to enable the settlement of balances between different sections of a country or different countries.

Christ Church Notes

Woman's Guild to Hold Fashion Show Mich will be held on Monday afternoon, October 9, at three o'clock in Christ church parish house, are already in the shop windows, and the date should be saved for this occasion by all women interested in the latest designs and fabrics for the winter wardrobe.

The Woman's Guild is sponsoring this style show and Cherry and Webb of Lawrence are sending their smartest gowns suits, coats, hats, gloves etc.,—which will be worn by their own models on a run-way.

The Spring Show aroused so much interest that Mrs. Charles W. Henry, the chairman, has been asked if it could not be yearly even.

Miss Betty McAllister has charge of the details. Miss Alice Jenkins promises a most charming and original setting for the stage, and the officers of the Guild will be hostesses.

There will be a short musical program and an intermission during which tea will be served by the officers and members of the Guild assisted by the usbers.

The small admission fee of 25 cents includes the tea and will ensure a delightful social afternoon.

Rooms; eight p.m. meeting in Symphony Hall.

Suffragan Bishop Babcock will visit Chris* Church for confirmation on Sunday movi! December 3rd. diocesan educationa. Secretary, spoke to the teachers of Christ church school last Tuesday on "Worship," at their first meeting of the season.
