Connery Recommends Former Postmaster

Congressman Favors John H. McDonald for Permanent Postmastership Here—Appointment Probably to Be Made in Few Weeks

John H. McDonald of 123 Chestnut street has received the recommendation of Congressman William P. Connery, Jr., for the local postmastership, and it is almost certain that President Roosevelt will make the appointment soon. Mr. McDonald will replace Frederick E. Cheever, who has been acting postmaster since early last year.

Mr. McDonald was postmaster here during the Wilson administration, for nine years prior to the appointment of John C. Angus, who died in January, 1932. Mr. Cheever was named acting postmaster at that time, in accordance with the recommendation of Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, the Republican representative from this district. The permanent position was never acted on by the Federal government, however. In November Andover became a part of congressman Connery's district, and in the early part of this year civil service examinations were announced for the permanent postmastership. Mr. McDonald, Mr. Cheever, and Mr. Joseph Burns were the successful candidates in the preliminary elimination.

Mr. McDonald, is president of the B.L. McDonald Coal company, a member of the Andover Democratic town committee, a past grand knight of the local Knights of Columbus, and a past exalted ruler of Lawrence lodge, B.P.O.E.

Fete Business Man at Bachelor Dinner

The Andover Country club was the scene Monday evening of a bachelor dinner tendered John A. Lamprey of the Lawrence Lumber company in honor of his approaching marriage to Miss Ruth M. Stafford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wright H. Stafford of 11 Wolcott avenue. Nearly 70 friends were present to fete the lumber company official. Community singing, remarks, and vocal solos were enjoyed during the evening.

Edward J. Ratte, on behalf of the assembled gathering, presented a set of end tables to Mr. Lamprey and after he had extended his thanks and appreciation for the remembrance, Frederic L. Sjostrom favored with several vocal selections. Frank O. Forster arranged the program, and the group singing was directed by J. Russell Barlow.

John F. Glynn presided as toastmaster and introduced the following speakers: Mr. Lamprey, George W. Hamblet, Arthur Hopkins, Wright H. Stafford, William Covey, William Murphy, Thomas Byrd, Kenneth Mackenzie, Monty Carleton, Walter Tomlinson, William Beld, Harry McDermott, William Russell, John Keane, J. Russell Barlow, Roy Dennison, Frank Forster, Charles R. Vose, Jr., David M. Kimel, William J. Delaney, James Keeffe and James Chaffie.

School Board to Compile Figures

An outline showing the definite assignment of pupils to each room in the event that a new school is built will be submitted to the finance committee in the near future as the result of a special school board meeting last night. Mr. Bullock, chairman of the finance committee, was present to state that his board, as individuals, wished more information on the new school matter, so that nothing would be built under the N.R.A. grant that would not be absolutely necessary. He and the other members of the finance committee felt that they should not recommend that Andover do anything on account of the grant that they wouldn't do anyway if there were no grant. Several of the school board members concurred in this view.

Mr. Sanborn is drawing up an outline to show how the school system would be handled if a new school were to be built, and he is also drawing up detailed estimates as to extra yearly expenses incurred by the erection of a new building.

A few minor matters were taken up at the meeting. Several graduates of the high school, who are now working, are planning to attend the Lawrence Evening high school, and wanted the committee to provide the ten dollar tuition. No action was taken. The Guild has agreed to allow the use of the Guild gymnasium by the high school girls on two afternoons a week, preferably Tuesday and Thursday, the charge to be $100 for the season.

Editorial Writer to Talk on New Deal

The citizens of Andover, like those all over the country, want to know, What about the New Deal? Will the N.R.A. live up to expectations? Will inflation come? Who are the personalities behind the scenes at Washington? These, and similar topics will be discussed in the Meeting Room of George Washington Hall, Phillips Academy, this evening, at 8:15. The speaker will be Mr. F. Lauriston Bullard, chief editorial writer of the Boston Herald, and a student of affairs, both world and national. He has kept in intimate touch with the progress of events at home and abroad, the influences which shape our national policies, and the statecraft of foreign nations. He knows many things and many people.

Mr. Bullard has always been an interesting and stimulating speaker. He gets to the fundamentals of his subjects, keeps his hearers to enthusiasm, and gives real answers to questions.

There will be no charge for admission, and Phillips Academy cordially invites the citizens of Andover to attend.

Flywheel Crashes Through Mill Roof

A flywheel breaking in several pieces crashed through the roof of the Tyer Rubber company Monday evening, causing suspension of operations in parts of the plant for a few days this week. No one was hurt, since most of the employees were in the N.R.A. parade at the time.

The flywheel, according to a report, was part of a small engine used at night in the engine room. It traveled about forty feet before crashing through the roof. The broken parts were scattered about the roof and on the ground.

Miss Burt's record has been an excellent one and the townspeople will greatly miss being served by her.

On Monday her coworkers presented her with a beautiful traveling case and book and extended their good wishes and health on her retirement.

Contrasting Views on Limited Meeting Plan

Speakers from Brookline Tell of Success There, While Methuen Representative Explains Reasons for Failure in Neighboring Town

Two contrasting pictures of the way the limited town meeting plan is working in Massachusetts communities were given at the open meeting of the League of Women Voters in the town hall Tuesday night when two speakers told of the success which the plan is meeting in Brookline and another described the troubles which Methuen has encountered since it adopted the plan. Judge Philip S. Parker and Charles F. Rowley presented the Brookline case, while Attorney Paul R. Clay was the Methuen spokesman.

Both Methuen and Brookline have, legally speaking, been governed by the limited town meeting plan exactly the same number of years. In Methuen the experience has been very unsatisfactory, according to Atty. Clay, while in Brookline the plan has worked admirably. Judge Parker explained the actual details of the plan, while the other two speakers dwelt on the way that the limited town meeting has worked out in their respective towns.

Miss Helen Chickering, president of the league, opened with a few remarks about the purpose of the meeting and the aims of her organization. She then turned the meeting over to Alfred L. Ripley, who was instrumental in securing the two speakers from Brookline. Mr. Ripley first introduced Judge Parker, who is moderator and town counsel in Brookline.

The only difference between the old-fashioned town meeting and the limited town meeting plan, Judge Parker explained, is that a selected number of the voters do the voting instead of all those who can enter the hall. Any registered voter can come and speak on any issue, but only those elected by the town can vote on the issues.

Halls Overcrowded

Early in the century Brookline had some trouble with overcrowded halls, once when the widening of Boylston street was the issue and again in 1913 when the question of one day off in the year for the firemen came up. At the latter meeting it took three-quarters of an hour to count one vote. The voting list at the time amounted to about 10,000 and the hall only accommodated 1000. In 1914 a group of the leading citizens went to the legislature which passed a representative town meeting act for Brookline. This had to be submitted to the people, and it was overwhelmingly accepted. It was in existence about three years when Methuen adopted city government.

Brookline ran into trouble on its initial entry into the limited plan, because the town meeting act provided that the town meeting must vote to petition the legislature for such an act. Accordingly, the limited town meeting in Brookline was illegal until 1921 when a new act was adopted as the result of a vote passed at an especially convened general town meeting in 1920. Today Massachusetts has a standard limited town meeting act (Continued on page 2, column 3)

Russian Male Chorus to Give Concert Here

Don Cossack Chorus, Composed of Thirty-odd Former Officers of Russian Imperial Army, to Sing at George Washington Hall Tuesday

"The Cossacks are coming"—a cry of terror in the Middle Ages to the tribes of heathen inhabitants that fringed the Russian Steppes, means today but one thing—the pacific advent of a band of singing men who have been thrilling Europe under the name of the Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus.

These men, former officers in the Imperial Army, "The Singing Horsemen of the Steppes" as they are now appropriately called, thirty-six strong, are under the leadership of Serge Jaroff.

Their appearance in George Washington Hall, Phillips Academy is scheduled for next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock.

No other chorus, it is said, possesses such marvelous sonority, such a phenomenal compass—the basses descending to incredible depths, the tenors soaring to heights of lyrical enchantment. To these men, their homeland on the banks of the "quiet Christian Don", as they affectionately call the wide river that flows southward through the Steppes, is always a living memory. This memory is stirred to a passionate intensity when they sing the songs of their homeland.

The men march upon the stage in military formation. The military effect is further carried out in their dark-blue Cossack uniforms, the trousers trimmed with broad red stripes. Knee-high leather riding boots serve to remind that the Cossacks were a cavalry unit. Standing at attention, the men await the signal from their leader. Then, without any "giving of the note", they begin to sing, achieving effects in crescendo and diminuendo that few, if any, other choruses can hope to approach.

These men have mastered every variety of choral singing. There is a wild beauty in their voices that belongs to no other chorus. Everything about them is dramatic, even to the electrifying realism of some of the songs with their outbursts of fierce yelling and whistling.

In startling contrast, is the devotional effect which these same men produce in their singing of religious songs.

All that they sing is in Russian—native folk-songs, and both secular and religious choral numbers, all of which are explained in well-detailed translations.

After one has heard the Don Cossack Russian Chorus, one is convinced that comparisons are futile.

Among the patrons of the Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus which opens the Andover concert season at Phillips Academy are: Dr. and Mrs. Claude M. Fuess, Dr. and Mrs. Willet L. Eccles, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edson Andrews, Dr. and Mrs. Carl L. Platticher, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Paradise, Mr. John H. Dye, Mr. Frank D. Ashburn, Mrs. R. H. Recchia, Mrs. John A. Towle, Mrs. Charles E. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. French, Mr. and Mrs. Moses T. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. E. Barton Chapin, and Mrs. W. (Continued on page 2, column 1)

Local Drum Corps Second at Lynn

The local bugle and drum corps placed second at Lynn Sunday, with Weymouth first with a percentage of 87.9. Andover was only four-tenths of a point behind, and three-tenths of a point ahead of Bridgewater, which has been an obstacle in the local corps' path recently. New Bedford, the winners of the state straight marching championship at the Holyoke convention, placed fourth.

Limited Town Meetings

Those who attended the meeting on representative government at the town hall last Tuesday night were treated to three very interesting and informative talks on the workings of the limited town meeting plan. The important point brought out at the meeting was that the plan had worked successfully in Brookline and had failed miserably along with other plans in Methuen; rather it was, as Attorney Clay stated, that any form of government is going to be just as good as the people want it to be. In Brookline, with its homogeneous electorate, the people are very much interested in the government of the town; in Methuen, with its heterogeneous populace, interest in the administration of the town is at a minimum. Even in the summer months at Brookline it has never been necessary to wait longer than ten minutes to secure a quorum for a special town meeting, while just a short time ago it was necessary to adjourn a special meeting in Methuen for lack of a quorum, despite the fact that a $100,000 issue was at stake. In Methuen the tax rate hovers around the forty dollar mark, and in Brookline it is down around the twenty dollar mark.

The claim most often advanced for a limited town meeting here in Andover rests on the fact that the town hall has been far too small for the town meetings which have been held during the depression period. The town hall legally seats 600, and by stretching a point between 800 and 900 can be crowded into the hall. Yet the registered voters of the town last March numbered 5362; of these 4369 cast ballots at the annual election, and only about 900 at the most were able to attend the meeting. A second claim is that it is easy to "pack" a meeting, since many of the voters who attend are interested in their pet projects rather than in the welfare of the whole town. A limited town meeting, it is claimed, would provide a true representation of the whole town; through the election of the town meeting members, the will of every voter would be represented at the annual meeting.

But to look at Brookline and conclude from its satisfactory experience that the limited town meeting plan is the panacea for all Andover's ills, to close our eyes, in other words, to Methuen's unsuccessful experience, would be taking a step which might turn out well—or it might turn out to be disastrous. That is why Andover should not jump rashly into this step. If this town ever adopts the limited town meeting plan, it should do so not because it has been successful in Brookline; or, if it rejects the plan, it should do so not because it has failed in Methuen. Its action should be based solely on whether it feels that the people of this town are the type who would be as amenable and as interested in the plan as the people of Brookline are or on whether it feels that the people are the type who would be as diffident about it as are the people of Methuen. If more interest in town government can be sustained here through the present unlimited meeting plan, by all means keep it, regardless of Brookline. If more interest can be developed through the limited form, that should be adopted, regardless of Methuen.

Andover's Parade

Parades are not easy things to organize; that is why unstinted praise should be given to those who in a week's time were able to give Andover one of the finest parades in its long history. A parade the length of Monday evening would ordinarily require two or three weeks for the completion of plans. Yet all the many local business firms and organizations were brought into the parade on a few days' notice; all were put in their proper place in the line; and all were ready to swing into the parade when their time came, with the gratifying result that the march was a steady one, with only a very few pauses along the way. That is something quite difficult for a group of military units to achieve, let alone some 4000 people who are not accustomed to parading.

Colonel Fitzhugh and the Legionnaires deserve the town's thanks for their part in accomplishing the objective which they set for themselves such a short time ago. This parade was made one of Andover's best only through the hard work and the effective leadership of the local NRA head and his Legion helpers. It was a difficult task well done, and it has made Andover proud to know that this town, in proportion to its size, has had a far better NRA demonstration than any of the surrounding communities.

Siftings

From the looks of things Monday night, a lot of people who talked like Republicans last October walked like Democrats this October.

Germany doesn't seem to want to sign any treaties; so there won't be any need for calling anything a "scrap of paper" this time.

From what we hear about chiseling, the blue eagle's teeth will get plenty of exercise.

The Tufts students are boycotting the barbers because of high prices. We expect that the baseball manager will be trying soon to arrange a game with the House of David team.

Possibly a mill-workers' residential section will spring up where the school for feeble-minded once was planned. Which is what we call an improvement.

Abbot Academy Notes

The model class meeting, presented on Saturday afternoon, October 14, by the Senior class, and ably presided over by Lena Hamilton, was most successful.

Mr. Graham Baldwin of Phillips Academy conducted the evening service on Sunday, October 15.

Since the invitation for the school to participate in the N R A parade on Monday evening came too late for arrangements to be made, the Abbot girls enjoyed the next best thing, and watched from the sidewalk as the many floats and bright colored uniforms filed past. They enthusiastically applauded the names of the firms and organizations whose many courtesies have always helped to make Andover a happy place in which to live.

On Tuesday evening, October 17, Leonard Craske, sculptor, lectured on "The Making of a Statue" in Davis Hall before a large audience. Speaking genially and informally, with little recourse to technicalities, he gave the layman a surprising amount of information. In this he was aided by his excellent slides.

Wednesday was a day of diversion, as usual. A party of girls, including Elizabeth Caldwell of Titusville, Penna., Alice Caldwell of Houston, Texas, and Clara Estes of Turkey, went on a motor trip to Gloucester and the Cape Ann coast. One important objective for them was the sight of Mr. Craske's "Gloucester Fisherman" at the

EDITOR ANDOVER TOWNSMAN:

The frank and unblushing confession of your correspondent in last Friday's issue who timidly hides his identity under the mask of "A voter" betrays a type of mind all too common here in Andover. We see he uncovered a fellow-townsmen who nonchalantly confesses to subordinating his conviction to a self-regarding desire to please. "I signed (the petition) not because I agreed with it but to be agreeable to the person who brought it around."

This open and naive confession might induce us to mitigate somewhat our disapprobation of his action were it accompanied by the least sign of shame or repentance. On the contrary this unrevealed writer seeks to justify his act by the statement that he is only one among many of his wobbly type of mind: "I signed it (the petition) as probably many others did." And to further buttress his excuse he attempts to invalidate all endorsements of any and all kinds of petitions: "I wonder why boards pay any attention to petitions?" He closes his confession with a declaration diametrically opposed to that hitherto subscribed by him in the above mentioned petition: "In answer to the question: 'What are we to believe?' that which he subscribed in the petition or that which he publicly avows in the last issue of the Townsman?"

For we may be sure that one whose actions are motivated solely by a desire to be agreeable to persons can invariably be counted upon to perform no action to that of the last friendly solicitor.

Unfortunately this moral cowardness, this eagerness to be in rapport with everybody by differing with nobody is not confined to this public confessor. He betrays only a single type of human weakness, a type that more than any other just now threatens our town. It is the non-support of the town. Scores of our citizens are moral cowards when faced by town problems. They dare not publicly reveal their true convictions through fear of offending some friend, or alienating some customer, or suffering social ostracism; they seek to hide their cowardice behind a claim of neutrality. It is this non-support, this chameleon type of timid citizens that accounts for many of the unwise measures that have from time to time been railroaded through our town meetings.

With Reference to the N R A

EDITOR OF THE TOWNSMAN:

Having, recently, been "put over the hump" once or twice, in passing along Haverhill street not far from the center of North Reading, the writer found the street apparently undergoing reconstruction, but in a state of suspended operations, so to speak. Inquiry developed the information—or so it was alleged—that the Welfare Board of the township of Reading had been furnishing day-laborers at the rate of thirty cents per hour to help perform the work of widening and resurfacing the aforementioned thoroughfare; the work being under the supervision of the State. The said hired out "help" had struck for more wages, but were then (a week or so ago) about to return to work, without charge.

Now, the writer has no quarrel with the workings (or aims) of the N R A, speaking in the abstract; but were the work mentioned being done by contract, and under private operation, a fair wage (without going minutely into the different codes) for day-laborers would be around, let us say, fifty cents per hour. True, the workers, then, would be performing the work of widening and resurfacing the street, and hence, very likely, more efficient than a picked up crew of men out of work, furnished by the Welfare Board of Reading.

The thought naturally intrudes itself; if private employers are obliged by law, to pay a minimum wage for "inferior" classes of work, to help perform the work of widening and resurfacing the street, might it not conceivably happen, in a long-range view of the workings out of the law, that if private concerns are obliged always, as said to pay an arbitrarily set "minimum wage," even for the most inept classes of help, and should they, in an extensive degree (due to competition, etc.), would not more and more of the displaced help logically be thrown on the governments to take care of, and we should have the beginnings, as it seems, of a "Socialist State," in good earnest.

It is a poor rule that doesn't cut two ways. J. N. P.

which any town may adopt if it so desires. Brookline is divided into nine precincts, each of which is represented by 27 town meeting members. The heads of departments and certain officials are ex officio members, so that the total membership of the town is 263. Under the standard law the selectmen in any town decide the number of precincts. The number of members from each precinct is to be as nearly equal as possible, and the total membership of the meeting is to be 240. Usually one-third are elected each year for three-year terms.

The modern system is chosen by the people at large, the same as under Andover's present plan. The town clerk should, Judge Parker said, be the steerer; he has to see that all vacancies are filled, etc. The precincts are revised every five years. A majority of the regularly elected members constitute a quorum.

Has Excited Interest

In Brookline, Judge Parker asserted, the plan has excited considerable interest, especially among the young men of the community. It is exceedingly democratic, he said, since the members are elected by all the voters, and this presents a true cross-section of the community.

There are two things which are necessary: first, the town clerk must be the steerer, and second there must be a finance committee to guide the meeting through the budget. The limited town meeting, the speaker declared, is rapid and businesslike, and the discussion is good and not perfunctory. A small group of people cannot put something through a limited town meeting; there is no "packing." If the minority want anything they have to convince the majority that their plan is a good one.

In closing Judge Parker declared that the representative town meeting in Brookline has been considered a success. Brookline, he told the audience, is the largest town in the country, its population being about 50,000 and its voters numbering 22,000. Andover, Judge Parker stated, would be making no mistake in adopting the plan.

Mr. Rowley declared that the limited town meeting was the only thing for Andover. He warned the audience never to adopt the city council plan. Under the old town meeting plan, he said, many people came looking for a fight, and they were not informed on the subjects to be discussed. There was not enough preliminary studying under the old plan, while under the limited town meeting plan the elected voters feel a certain amount of responsibility and in general keep themselves well-informed on the issues which come up before them.

The chief advantage of the limited plan is that the basic principles of town government are retained, Mr. Rowley said. This means less expense, with more people being able to have direct contact with the governing body.

Methuen's Experience

Atty. Clay opened with a criticism of city government. He said it does not seem adapted to New Englanders. The smaller the number holding power, the more frequently justifiable criticism arises.

In Methuen the town meeting has about 177 members, the membership being based on a percentage basis. The precincts are fairly well averaged in their population. Atty. Clay explained that the criticism that he had against Methuen's limited meeting was possibly applicable to almost any kind of government. He felt that the plan was ideal, but it requires the good will, the interest and the co-operation of the people. "The government is going to be just as good as the people want it to be," he asserted.

Christmas Seal Plans Formulated

At the annual meeting of the Essex County Health Association, which took place last Wednesday (October 11th) at the Greycroft Inn, in Beverly, plans for the annual Christmas Seal Sale to be conducted by the Association were discussed.

Many new projects were discussed and it was felt that some of the most urgent needs of the health campaign at present is the installation of a new refrigerator and an outdoor swimming pool. A report of the festivities conducted at the health camp this past summer was read by Miss Vera B. Griffin, secretary of the Association. Many suggestions were offered and it was felt that these could be used to high advantage in the forthcoming season.

Among those interested in the work of the Association who were present at the meeting, which tea was served by the hostess, Mrs. A. Mabel Grey, were: Miss Anna W. Kuhn, Mrs. Lillian Pfattheicher, Mrs. Anna K. French, Andover; Miss Marion Parker, Miss Vera B. Griffin, Miss E. Rantz, Beverly; Mrs. Louis A. Young, Miss Isabel B. Tapley, Mrs. Clara P. B. S. A. District Committee Meets

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Andover Citizens was held for the purpose of organizing the District Committee in Andover to promote the Boy Scout Work for all boys of the community in the Legion rooms Tuesday night.

The opening of the meeting was in charge of Mr. Burchard E. Horne, Past-President of the North Essex Legion, B. S. A., who served as Lay Organizer of the new District Committee. He spoke in behalf of the boys of Andover and the need for the citizens' backing in Scouting and the need for an active District Committee. He reported on the results of his efforts to interest people in this most noteworthy cause for the future development of the American boy and presented a list of officers and members for the ensuing year which were accepted.

Following the election of these men Mr. Horne introduced Mr. G. Edgar Folk and in introducing him expressed his feeling that with Mr. Folk's leadership as Chairman of the committee, the organization of the District Committee, that Andover Scouting would prosper and go forward with more boys receiving the beneficial training of Scouting.

Mr. Folk, in reply, expressed his wholehearted interest in such a worthy cause for the development of boys in helping them on their pathway to future manhood. He stated that the American youth organization in America today that was contributing more to the future welfare of our future citizenship than the Boy Scouts of America; stating that for years he had had contact in all types of organizations, both for boys and men, and he felt the future of our country depended upon our youth. Honorable mention in the most original class went to the Board of Public Works with its interesting water works float. The truck contained many men and much equipment showing almost every stage in the workings of the water department. Stowe Junior High School did itself proud by also earning honorable mention. The float showed Uncle Tom's Cabin, with George Lawrence as Uncle Tom and Olive Thayer as Eva sitting in front of the cabin. In the rear of the float sat Valerie Simmers, representing Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Resident Manager Benjamin Duce, assisted by resident manager Needham Brown, and cashier David R. Lawson were in charge of the Shawshen Mills aggregation. In addition to the winning floats mentioned above the drawing room entered Queen Prosperity and the mill as a whole entered Queen Nira. The mending room had a float representing an Indian Village. Their bands included the Lawrence Legion corps, the Stoneham drum corps, the Clam MacPherson band, the V.F.W. Band, the Garde Guy corps, and a Boy Scout band.

Mr. Brickett was in charge of the Marland Mills 200 marchers. The Marland float was an interesting horse-drawn one, with a girl representing Miss America dominating the scene. She was surrounded by ladies dressed in the national costumes of several different countries, all looking up at her. The Stevens company also had several marchers dressed to represent different things connected with the N.R.A. Mr. Brickett was in charge.

The Tyer Rubber company had a float in the form of a big shoe, with a girl dressed up like the Old Woman in a Shoe, and two children of employees also taking part. There were about 500 in line, and the St. Anne's cadets furnished music. Following this came the Hardy Brush float and twenty men, with Henry Fairweather in charge.

Following the manufacturing division came the mercantile group, led by the British Empire Veterans and auxiliary with the North Andover Boy Scouts' band. One of the outstanding floats in this group was the Burns Company float, in white and blue, led by three employees attired in the latest in evening wear. The Greeley company had its fleet of trucks entered, and the Press had thirty marchers and a float. The A. and P. company had 100 marchers, the North Andover drum corps, and a float. Included in this group was Carl Rehn, gigantic North Andover boy attired as Uncle Sam. The prize milkmen's float was in this group. The Vermont tea and butter company had 100 marchers, two floats, and a section of the Lawrence drum corps. One of the floats had an enormous mold of butter on it. The Andover Service club float was in this division. The Insurance offices had a float showing a miniature house with fire trucks on the street in front. All the employees were marching. The Lawrence Gas and Electric company had 100 men and a float, and the Arrow Dyeing and Cleaning Company had 60 marchers, a float, and a Boy Scout band. Morin's float was preceded by six girls on horseback. The float itself was nicely decorated to appear as if it were candy covered. J. H. Playdon's flower truck was attractively adorned with flowers. A unique group was that entered by George Brewer, painter, with several young men sitting on a truck playing various musical instruments.

The school division was headed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and auxiliary. Close behind came the Phillips academy band, the faculty, 150 boys, and many local men employed on the Hill. Then came the local schools, the high school led by the faculty and marching by classes, and the Stowe junior high led by its prize-winning float. One troupe of Girl Scouts and four of Boy Scouts with three scout drum corps followed.

The Andover Guild with three floats, representing the various activities of the Guild, were in this division, as was a float on the baby clinic. The Legion drum corps appeared for the second time in the parade, this time as head of the club, lodge and parish division. The Legion auxiliary had an attractive float, which was followed by St. Augustine's parish and several organizations. The Grange was the outstanding group, while the Clam Johnston auxiliary marching in cross formation was very impressive. The Women's Relief Corps float and the James Otis pre-revolutionary scene both excited a good deal of attention.

The sixth division contained the Board of Public Works group, headed by ploughs and other snow and sanding equipment. Behind came the tractors performing pivots that would be the envy of any farmer. The water works truck was the outstanding entry from this department. The telephone company had 25 marchers, and a float with a Private Branch exchange board, with Ruth Watson at the board, and Gertrude White and Marilyn Jones assisting.

The Pacific Mills float was probably the most attractive in the parade, with the trade mark in a large circle in the center. The Eagle-Tribune float was also unusually beautiful. The two local sportsmen's groups presented two attractive outdoor scenes. The Curran and Joyce and Morehouse floats also attracted considerable attention.

The Legion parade committee: Commander-elect, Joseph T. Remmes, chairman; Commander James Sparks, Percy J. Dole, C. LeRoy Ambye, John A. Anderson, Robert B. Christie, Arthur L. Coleman and Joseph A. McCarthy.

The judges who awarded the prizes were: Selectman Frank H. Hardy, Dr. Claude M. Fuess, headmaster of Phillips academy; Irving E. Rogers of North Andover; Dr. Robert Farquhar of Lawrence and Clifford Chadwick of Methuen.

The Legion drum corps appeared for the second time in the parade, this time as head of the club, lodge and parish division. The Legion auxiliary had an attractive float, which was followed by St. Augustine's parish and several organizations. The Grange was the outstanding group, while the Clam Johnston auxiliary marching in cross formation was very impressive. The Women's Relief Corps float and the James Otis pre-revolutionary scene both excited a good deal of attention.

The sixth division contained the Board of Public Works group, headed by ploughs and other snow and sanding equipment. Behind came the tractors performing pivots that would be the envy of any farmer. The water works truck was the outstanding entry from this department. The telephone company had 25 marchers, and a float with a Private Branch exchange board, with Ruth Watson at the board, and Gertrude White and Marilyn Jones assisting.

The Pacific Mills float was probably the most attractive in the parade, with the trade mark in a large circle in the center. The Eagle-Tribune float was also unusually beautiful. The two local sportsmen's groups presented two attractive outdoor scenes. The Curran and Joyce and Morehouse floats also attracted considerable attention.

The Legion parade committee: Commander-elect, Joseph T. Remmes, chairman; Commander James Sparks, Percy J. Dole, C. LeRoy Ambye, John A. Anderson, Robert B. Christie, Arthur L. Coleman and Joseph A. McCarthy.

Parade Notes

The most exciting moment in planning the parade came when a mill official announced at a meeting that his group would have a Kiltie band in the parade, but that "they'd be far enough away from the N.R.A. official group so that the music from the pipes wouldn't interfere with the marching." You should have heard the indignant rolling of r's that burst forth from a nearby Scotsman who was filled with the spirit of the "Scots who hae wae Wallace bleed." (Scotch spelling, apostrophes, etc., not guaranteed correct.)

The "unkindest cut of all" came from the person who said that the B.P.W. boys don't work as hard days as they did on that float. Well, most of the other floats relied quite a bit on imagination, too, didn't they?

A lamp post got in the way of Burns' float on one stage of the journey. Of course, it looked nicer to have the float leaning against the lamppost than it would have been if the stylishly dressed young men ahead had been leaning against it.

Among the animals in the parade were horses, ponies, dogs, and a bottle of milk.

Wouldn't it have been better if the fire trucks had followed close behind the B.P.W. float so that they would have had easy access to the hydrant?

The N.R.A. certainly has helped the crepe paper business.

One truck that has not received as much comment as it deserves was Percy Dole's, which was used quite satisfactorily as the reviewing stand and press box.

Hurley's Punting Bright Spot in Punchard Defeat

Punchard high's football team, again struggling under an inferiority complex that has seemed to hold them powerless on both the attack and defense, went down to defeat before a heavy Needham team at Needham Saturday afternoon. The boys seemed a little over-anxious and unsure of themselves, thus causing much fumbling and poor handling of punts. The one bright spot in the whole game or Punchard was the fine punting of Hurley, who time and again featured with splendid kicks to put the ball out of dangerous territory.

There were none of the spectacular runs which featured the Punchard team's two earlier games, with neither Hackney, Sayles, or Gillen being able to break away. The frequent recourse was made to the fake punt play which was successful in the Danvers game, with the result that the opponents were always ready for it.

The summary:

- Needham: Lansberg, l.e.; Packard, Moore, l.t.; Rensen, Lang, l.g.; Waitkunis, Glyn, c.; Clenen, Apleby, r.g.; Scrima, Androschewich, r.t.; Tracy, r.e.; D'Addesio, q.b.; Chambers, Sherman, Hasenfus, l.h.b.; Pirro, r.h.b.; Bacrony, l.b.
- Punchard: Russell, Barrett, Williams, r.e.; O'Brien, r.t.; Pomeroy, Elder, r.g.; C. Mitchell, Donovan, c.; Evans, Keefe, l.g.; Hurley, l.t.; Ostrowski, l.e.; P. Mitchell, Walker, Simpson, q.b.; Sayles, Gillen, r.h.b.; Hackney, l.h.b.; Tammany, Chelowski, l.b.
- Score by periods: 1 2 3 4
- Needham: 6 7 0 6—19
- Punchard: 0 0 0 0—0
- Sherman, Pomeroy, by D'Addesio 2; Sherman, Pomeroy, by after touchdowns; Sherman, Referee; Samborski, Umpire; Schallenberger, Linesman; Rogers, Time: 4 ten-minute periods.
