Malden Man Held on Abandonment Charge

Bradbury Held in $25,000 for Grand Jury as Result of Hearing in District Court Yesterday—Charge Changed to Abandonment

Ralph H. Bradbury, Malden man taken into custody a week ago Monday on a charge of assault with intent to murder, was held in bonds of $25,000 in District court Thursday morning when Judge Frederic N. Chandler found probable cause to hold him for the grand jury on a charge of abandoning Shirley Castine, an infant under the age of ten years, who by reason of such abandonment died.

Bradbury pleaded not guilty to the abandoning charge and waived examination. A charge of assault with intent to murder was placed on him originally, but it was dismissed by the court in order to clear the records.

The autopsy by Medical Examiner Dr. Victor A. Reed resulted in the finding that the child had died of exposure and not of a blow on the head as previously supposed. Bradbury claims that he did not strike the child, that he merely left it in the woods off Holt road on March 7, where it was found over three weeks later.

The abandoning charge was brought Thursday morning following a conference between District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg, State Detective Richard J. Griffin, Chief George D. Re and Attorney William McSweeney.

District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg addressed the court after the defendant had waived examination. He requested that the man be held in the same bail of $25,000 and stated that he was satisfied that the grand jury after hearing the evidence would return indictments to fit the crime.

Fine Performance by Dramatic Club

The town hall was well filled Monday evening to witness "Too Much Family," the first production to be staged by the St. Anthony's Dramatic club for several years. William C. Crowley, Jr., and Miss Catherine Winters, cast in the lead, proved that they were very well cast, while Charles G. Murray as the father and James Davey as the kid brother gave excellent performances.

Miss Anna Hennessy as the mother and Miss Catherine Winters as the sister, played their roles extremely well, as did Miss Eva Bourassa and John McMahon, in the younger parts. William A. Doherty had a small part but his thespian abilities were very much in evidence. The director, Thomas Quinlan, and another Methuen man, John Ryan, played in minor roles.

General dancing followed the show. The cast: Pop, Elmer's father, Charles G. Murray; Ma, Elmer's mother, Miss Anna Hennessy; Herbie, Elmer's kid brother, James Davey; Aunt Emma, Elmer's aunt, Miss Katherine Milne; Eva, Elmer's wife, Miss Catherine Winters; Elmer, William C. Ecclesiastical Art in Exhibition at Gallery

An unusual exhibition, one which will arouse considerable wondering in a person not familiar as to whether he should like it or dislike it, is now on display at the Addison Gallery. It is entitled "Modern Ecclesiastical Art," and shows creations of German religious art, both Protestant and Catholic. It attracted considerable attention last year at the World's Fair, and since then it has only been displayed in two other places. It will be returned to Germany immediately after the closing here, which has been moved up to the eighteenth, next Wednesday.

The first impression of "Modern Ecclesiastical Art" is that the first two words of the title are not misnomers. It certainly is modern; it certainly is ecclesiastical. But as for art, that depends on whether or no you define art as just something thrown together. Yet the fact is that the various churches, of which models are shown, were really meant for worship, along with the unusual statuary. When one realizes that, one can feel that the artist really felt that his work was good.

The main loan gallery is devoted to a display of tapestries, altar cloths, chalices, candlesticks, rosary beads, crosses, shrines, host jars, communion dishes, etc. These are in most cases out of the ordinary, but not so far out that one dislikes them. They are all very interesting pieces, particularly the tapestries bearing portions of the Testaments in German.

In this gallery there is also a very dramatic mosaic, itself alone worth a trip to the gallery. Particularly interesting is a very nicely done Madonna by Elise Eslinger. Another modern contains typical post-war statuary, some of them very good. Ernst Barlach contributes two, "The Singer" and "Meditation." Another by Muller-Oerlinghausen, showing two disciples chatting together, is good in its expression.

Then there is one of St. Anthony, made for a niche way up in a church. From the distance it might look quite presentable. The statuary is made of wood, brass, and copper so that even the poorer churches can have it.

In the hallway there are a few vestments which one can like quite easily. Then by all means stop in to see Mickey (Continued on page 4, column 3)

Abbot Day Scholars Give Entertainment

Local Group Under Direction of Miss Ruth Stott Presents Two Plays and Several Exhibitions of Dancing at Academy Wednesday

Abbot Academy generously opens its doors many times during the year to the townsfolk. Each occasion is one of pleasure. However, no time is looked forward to with more eagerness than the night of the Day Scholars' entertainment which always is an excellent demonstration of what can be done by the working together of all the Day Pupils. Wednesday evening, April 11, under the wise and skillful leadership of Ruth Stott the following program was given:

MR. X
Mr. Anthony Caroline Rockwell
Mr. Xeres Xavier Georganna Gabeler
Mr. Joshua Tick Eleanor Johnson
Miss Mathilda Hem Eleanor Johnson
Molly (the maid with a teacher's memory) Jean Palmer

Stage Manager, Cathleen Burns
DANCES
Mexican Dance
Ruth Pratt, Martha Sweeney, Doris Anderson,
Hope Humphreys
Tap Dance Mary Toohy, Nancy Barn
Tango Elizabeth Flanders, Frances McTernan
THE WEDDING
The Bridegroom Harriett Cole
The Best Man Barbara Chamberlain
The Bride Barbara Reinhart
A Groomsman Ada Carlson
The Bridegroom's Mother Sarah Dean
The Bride's Father Delight Hall
The Bride's Aunt Elaine Eaton
Stage Manager, Ruth Pratt
Treasurer, Clara Holland
At the Piano, Eleanor Johnson

The play, Mr. X, gave Mary Rockwell an opportunity to show her charm as the poetic daughter who is in love with the shy, nervous Mr. Tick, a part acted well by Ann Cutler, Eleanor Johnson was the typical aunt, a spinster of uncertain age whose whole interest in life is dumb animals. Caroline Rockwell made an interesting picture of the stern, money loving father. The insurance agent who is mistaken for a poet and a rescuer of a fat poodle was well done by Georganna Gabeler. The pivot of the play was Molly, the maid, who because of her poor memory caused amusing misunderstandings. This part was most effectively done by Jean Palmer whose cleverness as an actress gave extra chuckles to the audience. Fortunately, the play ends happily when the insurance agent is discovered to be himself and the shy Mr. Tick becomes bold enough to send a telegram which startles his friends as well as himself but it is the means of bringing him and pretty Miss Jessie together.

The dances between the plays afforded a pleasant interlude. Each group was well done and loudly applauded. The Mexican costumes added to the effect of the Mexican dance. No one girl could well be singled out (Continued on page 2, column 5)

THE ANDOVER TOWNSMAN

Published every Friday at the Press Building, Andover, Mass., by the Andover Press... ELMER J. GROVER, Managing Editor... TOWNSMAN Telephone 1324

Governmental Efficiency

The little battle that Mayor Mansfield is having in Boston now because he discharged a considerable number of city employees in the interests of economy is rather a poor commentary on present-day politics.

Mayor Mansfield was elected mayor of Boston by a big majority, and he has had time to look over the city government quite carefully.

Over a year ago a salary committee was appointed by the moderator to conduct an investigation into the salaries paid town employees and officials.

That is the trouble with Andover's government, comparable in a way to Boston, New York City and the Federal government.

Hard Liquor in Andover

Before town meeting the Townsman expressed itself as being wholeheartedly against the sale of liquor in this town.

Siftings

Officer Deymond described the weather Wednesday evening as being a "Scotch mist," proving that the land of the heather is no stingy with its rain.

The firemen and the school children liked yesterday afternoon.

It's almost too much to have April Fool's day and a Friday the thirteenth in one month.

The gentleman who flew to Greece and then to Turkey probably will not receive the kind of welcome that Lindy did.

We have a funny feeling that the selectmen don't particularly care for the Townsman's attitude on the salary question.

No School Thursday Afternoon

The Selectmen Reply

Andover, Mass., April 9, 1934 Editor of the Andover Townsman.

Judging from news items and editorials appearing in recent issues of your paper it would appear that the Townsman feels that the Board of Selectmen is proceeding in a manner not in conformity with the law.

The Board assumes that the Townsman may be actuated by motives of friendship as well as by concern for the legality of the matter in question.

It may be interesting and reassuring to know that the only exception to our course of action, so far as the Board is aware, has been taken by the Editor of the Andover Townsman.

Yours very truly,

Board of Selectmen FRANK H. HARDY JEREMIAH J. DALY HOWELL F. SHEPARD

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is a very interesting communication, especially the last rather undignified paragraph. The Townsman has already stated that the board's action was based on the Town Council's opinion, and it had had advice from Mr. Fenton, although he flatly refused to even state whether the advice was written or verbal.

As we have stated before, our first information this year that elective officials' salaries had been voted annually was given to us by Mr. Hardy on February 13 after he had conversed over the telephone with Mr. Fenton.

The Townsman has repeatedly asked that these legal opinions be made available for publication so that the various difficulties might be ironed out.

Against Rum-Selling

Editor Andover Townsman: No one who has resided in Andover for the last twenty years can fail to be impressed by the radical change that has taken place in her moral standards.

No longer can her citizens point with pride to her long and noble history of independence, self-reliance, sobriety and militant Christianity.

These qualities once dominated her corporate life. But, little by little, these upstanding virtues have been forced to the back of the stage while a lower standard of morality has been substituted.

Ehe Town meetings no longer are marked by their former dignity nor guided by their former counsel.

and listen to sermons. If Christianity means anything it means a courageous fight for righteousness and social morality. The heart of Andover is sound but just now she is in the grip of a dangerous lethargy.

HEARD ON MAIN STREET "Dollar Day," "Trade at Home." How often we hear the above. Such a thing as dollar day we never have in Andover.

When our neighbors have their dollar days they don't seem to practice what they preach—trade at home.

I believe in trading at home but I sometimes wonder if Andover merchants are on their toes to get our trade. Many a time I have gone down town for everyday things and been told "we are all out, expect it any time," or "too late in the season we won't have any until Spring."

Don't advertise screen doors in the Fall and storm doors in the Spring. Cater to Andover's needs and I am inclined to think you won't have to worry about "Trade at Home."

Weddings

NEWBURY—PAGE

The Academy Church at Phillips academy was the scene of a pretty wedding last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock when Miss Priscilla Howard Page, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Peirson S. Page of 193 Main street, became the bride of Mr. Francis Ware Newbury, son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Nathan Newbury of 31 Church Green, Taunton.

The bride was gowned in her mother's wedding dress of ivory brocade and wore a tulle veil with old lace. She carried an arm bouquet of ivory roses.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. William C. Bennett of Hingham, Mrs. Gregg Neville of New York city, sisters of the bride; Mrs. A. Boylston Nichols of Taunton, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Douglas S. Byers of Andover.

The flower girl was Miss Sarah Nichols of Taunton. Nathan Newbury Jr., brother of the bridegroom was best man. The ushers were A. Boylston Nichols Jr., Taunton; Parkman Dexter Harding, George W. Movius, Hallam L. Movius Jr. and Charles F. Hovey, all of Boston, and William P. Elwell, Winchester.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip the couple will make their home in Taunton.

Mr. Newbury graduated from St. Mark's and was a member of the class of 1932 at Harvard. The bride attended Abbot academy, Madame Vercheux in Switzerland and Miss Child's School of Fine Arts in Boston.

BENOIT—PELLETIER

Miss Ernestine Pelletier, 1 North street, and Leo Benoit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Benoit, 31 Hampton street, Lawrence, were united in marriage Saturday morning at a nuptial mass at the Sacred Heart church, Lawrence.

The bride was attired in a gown of peach crepe with matching accessories and she carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a large reception was held in Lawrence. The couple will make their home in Andover following their return from a wedding trip.

More from State Taxes This Year

Andover will receive a much larger amount from state income tax returns this year than it did last year. Last week Town Treasurer Thaxter Eaton received a check for $19,739.50, which is half of the total amount to be returned for the year. Last year the total return was $28,871.

Abbot Day Scholars Give Entertainment

Frances McTernan and Elizabeth Flanders in beautiful Spanish costumes gave a graceful interpretation of the tango. Refreshments of grape juice, home-made cookies and cakes, were enjoyed between the plays.

When the curtain went up for The Wedding the whole audience felt instant sympathy for the distracted bridegroom, Harriott Cole, who was searching and continued to search throughout the play for his missing collar button. The bridegroom was well supported by his best man, Barbara Chamberlain, who had already served nine times in that capacity and gave more generously than desired of his advice. Barbara Reinhart made a sweet bride who almost doubted she was loved for she and the bridegroom had a quarrel which seemed most serious. The groomsmen, who even took off his own collar button to give the frantic bridegroom, was well done by Ada Carlson, Sarah Dean as the weepy distressed mother giving up her only son, played well that part. The tall, dignified stately father who could easily be twisted round his daughter's finger was shown by Delight Hall. The beautiful aunt who tried to bring the young, quarrelsome lovers to a peaceful understanding was Elaine Eaton. Before it was too late the lovers did discover that in spite of a lost collar button, a serious quarrel, never being on time, that real love is bigger than all that and can go on towards a happy life together.

The audience was reluctant to leave even after two curtain calls and many are looking forward to next year when the Day Scholars again will have their fling.

Shepherd Dog's Training Makes Him a Police Dog

All shepherd dogs are not necessarily police dogs. Only after passing through the strenuous schooling and the rigid tests that qualify him is any dog allowed to enjoy the title. Not confined to Shepherds, says an authority in the Los Angeles Times, the honor is jointly shared with Doberman-Pinschers, Alredales, Schnauzers and Collies.

America was introduced to the Shepherd shortly after the World war, in which his training was utilized to perfection.

Presumption is, of course, that all pastoral dogs descended from the original wild dog or wolf dog. It may be further presumed that formerly the union with the wolf contributed to many of their litters. If so, this must also be true of other breeds, for the Chowchow, Pomeranian, Elkhound, Schipperke, Alsatian, German sheep dog and the Esquimaux (or wolf dog) are members of the same Spitz family of northern dogs known as the Pomeranian group. Of these, the world-famous Esquimaux, sometimes called the Husky, is evidenced by his wild odor, absent in the Shepherd. He surely would not answer the role of tending sheep. And what profit can a dog such as a Shepherd, bred for beauty, shape and purity of strain, derive from union with a wolf or fox?

Registration in the Alsatian club formed in 1891 made impossible the bringing of any further wolf blood into the breed. His gait, coloring and erect ears may resemble those of the wolf, but the adding of these three likenesses, the broadcast "wolf, wolf, wolf," should not frighten one. It was merely an idle boast to raise the market value in the eyes of the simple.

Tangermuende Lost Its Chance to Be Capital

Tangermuende, Prussia, on the Elbe, in bygone centuries the residence of German emperors, is not Germany's capital today, notes a Prussian correspondent in the Chicago Tribune. In those days Emperor Charles IV of Germany had chosen the prosperous and flourishing city as his residence. The wealth of Tangermuende was mainly derived from its excellent beer produced within its walls. For its delicious taste and flavor it was famed throughout the realm and beyond its borders. The wealth accumulated with its beer exports, the city expanded in rich and splendid buildings. The Gothic town hall is one of the finest medieval structures in north Germany. The city walls, rising to a height of twenty feet, are still well preserved.

Emperor Charles, seeing all this wealth accumulating under his nose, hit on the idea of exacting a special beer tax from the prosperous brewers. The brewers dared defy the kaiser and refused to pay the tax. Emperor Charles and his court left the city in a huff, never to return there again. Tangermuende had missed its chance of becoming the German capital.

Too Poor to Propose

By BETTY STRONG

IF DORIS WHITE had not fallen in to his arms, Bob Richards would never have given her another thought. He was clumping up the last flight of dark, oilcloth covered stairs, when he heard a little gasp and then something soft and yielding was flung head first into his arms. He caught her as easily as a feather, and having set her on her feet, gently asked in his big voice with the trace of business in it, "Hurt any?"

"She breathed quickly, and answered, "I—I guess you saved my life!" There was just the suggestion of a laugh in that voice that went straight to Bob's heart.

"You see, I must have caught my toe in the oilcloth," she explained. Bob thought she had the softest, sweetest voice he had heard for a long time.

"I think my dinner is forever lost!" Doris said sadly, stooping to feel about the stairs.

They found at last the head of turtleneck, the two rolls still in their bag and the lemon that was to help make up the dinner. In the process they said several things to each other, altogether trite and yet somehow most illuminating.

So it was not strange that the second time Bob ran into the occupant of the hall bedroom he lifted his hat and stopped to talk.

The third time they met, Bob asked directly, "Would you take a walk with me this afternoon?"

The faintest tinge of color showed through Doris' white skin and she said—"for it was Saturday—" "I'd love to!"

They walked along Fifth avenue, stopping before the shop windows to peer in and feeling a part of all the thrill and stir of an afternoon on the avenue.

Doris' eyes were shining and she was actually prettier each time Bob Richards looked down at her.

The next Saturday it rained and Doris hesitated and then knocked at the door on the second floor that bore the card: "Robert Richards."

"I thought you might have tea with me, it's such a cold, dismal kind of afternoon," Doris offered shyly.

At the answering gleam of pleasure in his eyes Doris hurried up the flight of stairs. She knew it would mean that she must lunch meagerly all the following week, but she bought crumpets—toasted them over her gas burner—and a tiny jar of marmalade, and a spray of narcissus to put in the bowl by the window.

At his loud rap she opened her door and smiled up at him.

Bob laid down a box of candy as he said, "I bought it for the party," and looked about him curiously.

For it was the oddest hall bedroom he had ever seen. He had imagined a room with a bureau and an iron bed, and enough room just to sit on the one chair. What he saw was a room with two windows and an alcove, a room that looked sunny in spite of the fact that it was raining, because the walls were yellow and charming sunny colored chintz hung at the windows and covered the cushions of the two brown tinted wicker chairs.

Gleaming brass candlesticks were on a table in the corner, a brilliant color print of blue mountain and an icy mountain brook hung over the gray-painted table. A couch under a tumble of cushions and a black luster bowl held the frail narcissus in the window.

Doris sitting down at the table pouring tea into clear yellow cups, he suddenly saw as another girl. A girl removed from his own hard struggles by all the beauty of this charming room. Why, she must earn more in a week than he did to have a place like this!

For a month Doris scarcely saw the owner of the room on the second floor. When she did meet him by chance, he hurried past her with an abrupt "Good evening!"

But once when she climbed the two flights of stairs and saw that Bob's door was open and a strange girl was standing by the black marble mantelpiece, her heart seemed like a piece of lead. She could scarcely drag herself away.

"Oh, do you live on the floor above?" the strange girl asked eagerly. "I've seen your room and it is so pretty—"

Doris answered, wondering how she could go on talking when the bottom of her little world had dropped out.

"I bought the hangings on Sixth avenue at a sale, and the candlesticks in Allen street for $1.25; you can find some second-hand furniture and paint it yourself; oh, yes, I'll show you how." She smiled wistfully and went on up the stairs.

But the blood thrummed in her ears madly when she heard clumping steps behind her. Doris turned to see Bob Richards coming toward her with a bewildered, dawning happiness in his eyes.

"I heard what you said," he began, "I had to come back. I thought I'd go away and try to forget you—for I knew I couldn't ask a girl with all you had to marry a poor fellow like me. You mean it, Doris, you fixed up that room out of nothing?"

He caught her hands and looked down into her eyes. "Don't you know I love you?" "But—" she whispered. "I was ashamed to ask a rich girl to marry me," he said as he took her in his arms.

Rise of Nile Important

Event of Egyptian Year

From earliest times the Egyptians recognized that their health, wealth and happiness were dependent entirely on the bounteous Nile, says a writer in the New York Times. The ancients regarded the god of the Nile as the "Father of the Gods." Even today festivals in celebration of the river's rise are among the most important events of the Egyptian year.

In the days of the Pharaohs it was believed that unless certain prescribed ceremonies were performed with due reverence at the proper time and place, the Nile would refuse to rise. The celebrations were participated in by all classes, with great pomp and ceremony. They began when the river commenced to rise, and the rejoicings were proportionate to the height of the rise.

The actual rise of the river at Cairo begins about the time of the summer solstice, and formerly, about a fortnight after "Lelet el Nukta," a cryer in each district of the city would begin to make his rounds daily, announcing in a quaint chant the amount of increase of the water as registered on the Nilometer on the island of Rodah. When the river had risen to about twenty or twenty-one feet, he proclaimed the "Wafa on Nil"—"completion or abundance of the Nile." The cryer continued his rounds with his former chant until about the end of August, when the river attained its greatest height. He then concluded his annual task with another chant, and presented to each house in his district limes or other fruit and dry lumps of Nile mud.

Old Rites Are Observed by Peaceful Englanders

Old customs die hard and it is good that this is so, observes a writer in the Chicago American. For the origin of the majority of old customs is shrouded in the mists of antiquity and through the years have surrounded themselves with all sorts of quaint ideas. England is one of those countries that is rich with quaint customs that are still as soberly reported by the press as though they were current happenings of grave import.

Recently the English papers carried a report of the award of the Dunnoo Flitch, and anyone who has been present at this ceremony has a memory that will always endure. For he sees before him a group of married couples every one of whom claim to be eligible for the award of the couple of bacon which is given to the side who can come forward and swear on oath that they have lived in perfect harmony and mutual understanding during the year.

The custom has been traced back as far as the restoration of Dunnoo Priory in Essex early in the thirteenth century. Some say that the good fathers of the priory instituted the amusing custom. There is a record that at the ceremonies held in the sixteenth century, the judges were six bachelors and six maidens before whom the married couples had to kneel and recite an oath written in quaint doggerel.

Birds Guide Men to Honey

One of the most remarkable birds of the world is the African honey-guide, which directs human beings to bees' nests, in the expectation that it will be rewarded by a meal of the bees' grubs when the nest is opened. On beholding anybody approaching, the honey-guide hops from tree to tree before the wayfarer, fluttering excitedly to attract attention, and uttering a peculiar cry. What especially excites the bird is the appearance of a honey-bag, or rattle. Instinct teaches the birds to associate this beast with the discovery of bees' nests, the honey of which he, like the British badger, delights to eat. The birds know that by following him they are likely to come by a feast. And this may explain their behavior towards man—they expect him to be a honey-lover, too!—Answers Magazine.

An Old Clock

The clock in the Parish church at Rye, England, was started in 1545, was finished in 1560, and has been running ever since, except for the few times it was stopped for repairs. A well-known firm of clock makers has the contract to keep it going and it seems capable of running indefinitely. This is said to be the only clock in the world having a pendulum swinging through the roof and into the body of the church. For years its 1,500 pounds swung over the choir before it was discovered to be supported by only a 2-inch rusty nail.

Damage by Termites

The damage termites are able to do is almost beyond belief, especially to objects of wood. Hundreds of thousands might be in a house without the owner ever seeing them, for it is not until the damage is complete that their presence is detected. This is because they work inside the woodwork, eating it away until only a thin shell is left, and they are careful not to penetrate this.

Definition of "Flame"

A flame may be described as a body of burning gas or vapor. Burning or combustion results from the chemical reaction between the elements composing the fuel and the oxygen in the air. A simple flame consists of a luminous envelope surrounded by a body of unburned vapor and itself is surrounded by an invisible layer of gases produced by the burning.

Grange News

Andover and Tewksbury Garden Clubs were guests of Andover Grange on Tuesday evening. Miss Edna Catter, Braeput gave one of her interesting and instructive talks on "How to Make a Successful Garden."

Several points noted were: "Plant the flowers you like," "Use plenty of white flowers," "Suit your fertilizer to the plants you are using," "Don't crowd," "Use perennials for lasting beauty, annuals to fill in," "In the garden find the right place for each thing then watch it grow!" "Don't be afraid to try new varieties, they can easily be dropped if they don't prove to be all that is desired," "Use red very sparingly," "Have your seed bed thoroughly prepared, labor spent in this way saves disappointment later."

After this fine, comprehensive talk, Mr. George E. Erickson, Middlesex County Club Agent showed four reels of pictures, "In the Realm of the Honey Bee." These showed the different stages in making honey, the queen bee, the workers and the drones and what part each took, how undesirable visitors are treated, how they hover about one kind of flower, not mixing the pollen of different species. One picture showed the handling of bees as experts understand the methods. The pictures were interesting and instructive, making plain much that was little understood by members before seeing the pictures. Refreshments were served by worthy treasurer Harry A. Wright.

The next meeting will be April 24 when the third and fourth degrees will be worked by the Ladies Degree Team with Edna Peterson as Master. It will be inspection night with Deputy L. Roy Hawes of Sudbury as inspecting officer. Supper in charge of the second third, will be served at seven o'clock.

May 15, Andover Grange will be the guest of Saugus Grange.

May 3, Essex Pomona Grange will meet with Arimac Grange, afternoon and evening. Fifth degree will be worked in full form in the evening.

Start Drive for Monument Funds

The Past Presidents' club of the American Legion auxiliary are planning a drive to take place next week for the erection of a memorial at the Legion lot in Spring Grove cemetery. Cards are being circulated asking that each family in town donate ten cents for each member of the family.

The card reads as follows:

As this is the Anniversary month of the entrance of our beloved America into the World War, it would be well for us to pause a moment and reflect upon the past, the present and the future.

The heroic deeds of the past have become history, the present speaks for itself, but what of the future? What of the generation to come who will look for Memorials commemorating the names and deeds of those men who gave their all? Will they find these Memorials just as we of the present generation have found Memorials honoring the veterans of earlier wars?

These are our men, our fathers, husbands, sons, and brothers—the War came into our home and town and took its toll from our very own. Are we not, therefore, the generation who should erect these Memorials?

Certainly no other would we wish to delegate this honor.

The American Army typified youth—youth with its love of life and joy of living, so let our monument insofar as possible be erected at once. Those who have "gone West" would want it so. And to those of us who remain to "carry on" their wishes are to us commands.

The people of our town have never been found lagging. Many times they have "blazed the trail" and have always been ready to express their love of country in terms of service, whatever that service might be. We joined together in a wonderful "send off," remembered each one in service during their days given for each one of us, and who can ever forget that "Welcome Home," and surely we cannot stop now until we finish that part of our duty. We do not want to follow the crowd another Memorial Day to a beautiful Veteran lot with lonely head stones of our generation.

Don't put off any longer. We look to you, each and every one in this beautiful town of Andover to see that the heroic deeds of the sons of your town are preserved and immortalized for the future generations.

A gift of ten cents from each adult and child in your home will enable the Committee to do this work. If everyone does his part, think what a beautiful monument it will be, one to look across to the monument of the

Herbs Subject of Garden Club Talk

Sweet Herbs, "those little old age plants which give so much and take so little," was the subject of an interesting talk by Mrs. George B. Whiting, given Tuesday morning at the Phillips Inn with First Vice President Mrs. John M. Stewart, presiding.

The renewed interest in herb gardening was stimulated by Mrs. Whiting's description of balm basil, marjoram, hyssop, horseradish, rue, borage, balm fennel, pennyroyal and many other herbs. She spoke of herb literature, the making of an herb garden, of their fragrance, the interesting variety in foliage and bloom and of their culinary use giving suggestions for unusual flavorings and garnishes.

The use of peat moss and peat products was the subject of a second talk by George B. Whiting to its virtue as a mulch, and improved mechanical condition of the soil added to the fact that it has no odor and can be kept anywhere indefinitely.

At the business meeting Mrs. Stewart gave a report of the recent successful garden committee held by the club. Announcement was made that a flower show will be held on May 23 with Mrs. W. T. Rich Jr., chairman and that club members have received an invitation to be the guests of Mrs. Brewster in Dublin, N. H., on July 24.

The annual meeting of the Garden club for the hearing of reports and the election of officers will be held Tuesday, May 1.

There he started on a tour of studying, which included Spain, Haarlem, Morocco, Paris, Cuba, Japan, Manchuria, and Mexico. His work cannot fail to find many local enthusiasts.

Others available from last year's squad include Thompson, a second baseman; Hackney, Gillen, Russell, and Joe O'Brien, outfielders; Cliff Walker, a young brother of Howard Walker, an infielder.

Two restaurants in town, refused hard liquor licenses by the selectmen recently, have appealed to state authorities in the hope of having the regulations of the Selectmen set aside. The Town Fathers ruled that hard liquor licenses should not be given to restaurants.

Samples of supposed 3.2 beer being sold in another place have been taken to Boston for analysis. This particular restaurant had applied for a wine and malt beverage license, but its application is being held up pending an analysis which should prove whether or not beer stronger than 3.2 was being sold there under a 3.2 license.
