Andover's young John Drews and Ethel Barrymores delighted a large audience Friday afternoon in Punchard hall with the presentation of a play, "The Blue Prince," under the direction of Miss Mabel Marshall.

Students from Stowe school were the stellar attractions, while the supporting features were provided by a sixth grade chorus and the school orchestra under the direction of Miss Miriam Sweeney.

The play was staged in a really finished manner, both by the cast and the very efficient stage management, while the spectators were kept comfortable by a group of young ushers in true movie palace style.

The cast of characters follow:

Abbot Alumnae Ass'n Holds Annual Meeting

Mrs. Norma Allen Haine Elected President to Succeed Mrs. Annie S. Angus, Who Retires after Four Years as Head of Alumnae

Mrs. Norma Allen Haine of Hartford, Conn., was elected president of the Abbot Alumnae association at the annual meeting held Monday morning at the academy. She succeeds Mrs. Annie S. Angus, who is retiring after four years' service at the head of the association.

The weather man evidently prefers the older generation to the younger, for the weather on Monday was not as good as could be asked, far better than the threatening weather on Tuesday morning. There was a fine attendance at the alumnae gatherings on Monday, despite the fact that several of the younger classes held their reunions on Saturday because of the necessity of being back at college or at their business duties on Monday.

The annual business meeting was held at eleven Monday morning, and upon its conclusion the alumnae adjourned to McKee hall, where the annual alumnae reception and luncheon was held. Following the luncheon the graduating class was inducted into the association, with Miss Bailey presenting the class to the retiring president, Mrs. Angus. The incoming president, Mrs. Haine, was then introduced.

The seniors sang their class song and gave song salutes to Miss Bailey, Miss Comery, Mrs. Angus, Mrs. Haine and to the association as a whole. Following this the entire company sang the Abbot Alma Mater, holding hands to represent the Abbot Circle.

Message to Senior Alumna

Mention was made of the senior alumna of the school, Miss Emily Carter of Andover, who graduated in 1854, 80 years ago. She is now 95 years old. The association sent a message to her. Mrs. Anne Hardy Flint, also of Andover, of the class of 1856, ranks next to Miss Carter.

The class of '74 was represented by a round robin letter initiated by Mrs. Belle Watson Pettee of Illinois, and an amusing note from one of the class was read giving the rules of dress for the graduation in 1874.

Miss Julia Tweichel of Andover was the sole representative of the class of 1879, which held its fiftieth at the centennial five years ago.

The fifty year class was the banner class of the occasion, with four of its seven living members present. The response for the class was given by Dr. Jane L. Greeley of James-town, N. Y., who has been a practicing physician for thirty-five years. She taught at Abbot for a time following her graduation.

It was reported that the 1884 class has taken out the exception of one year gone its records without interruption. For the class of 1893, Miss Spencer Gilbert of Still River and Miss Kathleen Jones of the state division of libraries represented the class of 1889. Miss Catherine Sandford of New York city gave the response for the class of '99, while Mrs. Helen Abbott Allen of Waban, formerly Stonebridge road, responded for the class of 1904. Mrs. Mary Davis Lee was the class reunion chairman. Miss Mary Byers Smith, one of the members of the class, entertained the group during their stay here. It was the only class to wear regalia.

Negotiates Lease on Bradlee Mills

Morris Nassau of Claremont, N. H., has taken out a five-year lease on the Bradlee mills in Ballardvale for the purpose of running a shoddy mill. He plans to move in immediately and is now making several major repairs. It is expected that fifty men will be employed.

The Bradlee mills, established in 1836, were noted as the manufacturers of the finest flannel goods in the world. The first piece of worsted goods made in the United States was manufactured at this mill in 1842. The building, a four story brick structure, has been idle for several years.

The lease, which includes an option on buying was negotiated through the Fred E. Cheever Real Estate Agency.

Our School Project

Last fall some of the people of Andover had a dream that in the near future a new school would be built in the center of the town. Today they are wondering if it was nothing more than a dream.

It is difficult to refrain from becoming impatient with the many delays that have been encountered since the school project was first launched last August. For three months the school committee and the finance committee jockeyed back and forth with no definite action being taken until the night of November 15, when despite a request for further delay the school board finally decided to ask the selectmen to call a special town meeting. A month and a half at the most was all that was necessary for this preliminary work. Then the board of selectmen decided to wait for the Board of Public Works, which had been considering several projects since August. The result was that the town meeting was not held until December 11, almost a month after it was requested.

The voters of the town, when finally given a chance to act on the project, wasted no time whatsoever. The newly appointed building committee also swung into action immediately and managed to put the project before the state and federal officials with commendable speed. Finally on March 29 word was received from Washington that the federal government had approved a grant of $112,700.

Then the delays started again, just as they had in the fall. Notice of the government's approval had been received from Senator Walsh, Congressman Connelly, and from Mr. Leneau of the Massachusetts P. W. A., but the building committee decided that it had better not do anything until it received formal notification from the Secretary of the Interior himself. It would seem that the notice which had been received was authentic enough for the committee to go ahead and do something not involving too great an expense, but instead the committee evidently laid aside the project entirely until May 3, when it was announced that formal approval had been received. Actually, however, a letter had been received from the P. W. A. executives on April 4 notifying the committee of the grant.

The many men in town who need work then began hoping again, but at present it seems a very forlorn hope. The architect planned to start tearing down old Punched on June 1, but then there was another delay because the vote of December 11 had to be changed ostensibly to permit immediate work. It was thought that this might delay work for a week or so, but then it was found that maybe nothing could be done until June 25. Bids for razing the old structure were received and opened a week ago last night, but it was decided to defer action until Monday night, when again no action was taken.

Anything in excess is bad, even caution. There has been far too much caution ever since last August. Those in charge must realize that the longer they delay, the higher costs will probably go. The voters of this town approved the project last December; they should certainly have been given something more than they have received so far as a result of that vote. For the sake of the taxpayer and for the sake of the unemployed, the building committee should permit of no further delays in the carrying out of this project.

Attempted Hold-up An attempted hold-up was staged early Sunday morning on River road in West Andover with Renwick Henderson, of River road, playing the part of the intended victim. According to Henderson's story, he was driving his produce truck toward home when he came upon an automobile that was parked in the middle of the road with both doors open and the motor hood raised. He supposed that it was motor trouble, but proceeded on his way. When he reached home he noticed that the other car had followed and was directly behind him. As he got out and walked around his truck he was commanded to put up his hands. Instead of acquiescing he struck at the man who was holding the gun. His assailants became alarmed by his cries and fled. It is believed by the police that the would-be bandits' machine was a stolen one.

School Graduation at Christ Church

In the Christ Church Parish House fragrant and colorful with many flower-filled vases to the Briggs-Allen School for children celebrated its closing day yesterday. The stage was picturesquely set with evergreens and a soft-toned painting of a moonlight night in the country, reminiscent of a scene from one of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

Rev. Charles W. Henry offered a touching tribute to the memory of Mrs. Briggs who 26 years ago founded the school. To Miss Susan Lambert Darling, Rev. Mr. Henry gave the diploma of graduation.

The story-book playlets presented by the pupils were enacted with the naturalness and joyousness of happy childhood. A delightful hit was the directing of the Toy Symphony by diminutive Susanne Leland who swung the baton with all the verve, grace, and technique of a veteran conductor.

A striking testimonial to the spirit of the Briggs-Allen School and its graduates was the number of alumni present,—one having come all the way from Kansas City.

The prize awards:

Spelling Match—Susan Lambert Darling.
Grade V History—Carol Murray, first; Joyce Marie Curran, second; Sylvia Harris, third.

Wild Flowers—Tie between Richard Kimball and Douglas Murray.

Amy E. Briggs Prize to the one who had highest scholastic record all year: Muriel Wood.

MISS ADA CARLSON

MISS SARAH DEAN

MISS DELIGHT HALL

Warren Luck
By SIDNEY WINTHROP

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, W.N.P. Service

IT WAS a cardinal article of faith up and down Duck river that things would happen to a Warren as sure as he was born. It had been so from the beginning—witness the voyage of Gilliard, the earliest corner across the mountains from Carolina. He had loaded a fatboat for New Orleans with the yield of his own fat, fresh land, sold out the second day after his journey ended for what seemed a fabulous price, then, going from the market, had met and fallen deep in love with Carliotta Woodruff—whom he married three days later.

When Gilliard died fifteen years later, leaving Carliotta five thousand rich acres, six sons and ready money in both pockets, she carried on just as if he were still there to comfort and counsel her.

To her grief she lived to see the name passing out—Warren daughters had far, far outnumbered Warren sons in the third generation. But she died happy in the knowledge that the fourth Gilliard was the very moral and pattern of the first. His baby girl Carliotta received her last blessing.

Then one fine day in walked young Herbert Townsend, to say to her father and mother that he had married Carliotta at the county seat. His father, President Townsend of the Y. & C. railroad, had picked out a girl of quite another sort—not specially unattractive, but rich, and stupid beyond expression. Anyway, he had known the minute he met Carliotta that she was the only wife for him. No! He hadn't as yet a steady job, nor very much money—none, in fact, if the governor turned rusty. But Carliotta shouldn't lack things so long as he could lift his hands even with a pick and shovel in them.

So they went to live with Carliotta's family. Herbert found himself disowned save on the impossible conditions of forsaking his wife. Lacking a chance to use his mind, he did not blench before using his trained muscles. Going doggedly to work as a common miner, in a month he was promoted to gang foreman and better pay.

When at last they laid a son in his arms, his first tears fell. Carliotta, watching him, understood. He was vowing to make up to their son all his willfulness had cost.

She paid for it in utter desolation a year later, when lightning fired the house, killing her father instantly, stunning her mother, but leaving unscathed Carliotta, Herbert and their child. They got out safely, but when Herbert rushed back into the burning flames to save her mother, Carliotta followed him, until the baby's cries recalled her, severely burned. Herbert was staggering toward her, seared and blinded, but steadfast even to death. He had her mother in his arms.

A month later Carliotta, deeply scarred, a figure of woe, faced President Townsend. He said in a hard voice, his eyes greedily upon her son. "You stole my boy—now you will pay for it with your own. Give him up and he shall have all I meant for his father. You have an invalid mother to support—no strength to work, no beauty left to ensure another husband. I will give you competence for life—and will give your son riches."

It was a frozen woman who laid her child in his arms, kissed it once, and moved away.

Wins Highest Honor

MISS RUTH E. STOTT

North Andover Graduate

MISS MARY ROCKWELL

Years later—fifteen, to be exact—the Mountain house was interested and mystified in July at the coming of the Gray Lady. "Mrs. Florence Gray," her card read. She was neither young nor old despite snow-white hair, was hallmarked unmistakably as rich and aristocratic.

People waited to see whether she might be a friend of the Townsends. But when they came, a fortnight later, they seemed as strange to her as everybody else.

But the Townsends were in trouble. Townsend Williams, nephew of old Mr. Townsend, and co-heir with his grand son—seventeen-year-old Herbert, apple of his grandfathers' eyes—was a bad egg. He hated Herbert and was always scheming to get him into scrapes. He knew his uncle's pride in blood and honor, and based his schemes upon it. Using an inborn knack with a pen, plus opportunities due to relationship, he had involved the family fortune so deep there was no turning back. A million dollars would be needed now to clear the family name of scandal.

Summoned imperatively to his uncle's presence, when old Mr. Townsend found out how things stood, the nephew found there his uncle's lawyer—and the Gray Lady.

"This scandal can be hushed—for a million dollars—if you are willing to beggar yourself," said the lawyer.

"I cannot do it," said Mr. Townsend.

"Think of Herbert."

"I will give a million for him—twice over," said the Gray Lady.

Mr. Townsend stared. The lawyer explained. Sue could do it—she was the widow of Calvin Gray, the oil man, sole heir to his fortune. She had married him from pity when he seemed down and out. Gushers kept coming in, one after another—and she was left with a fortune.

"Quite the finest sort of romance," said the lawyer.

"With a happy ending for me," said the Gray Lady, once Carliotta Warren, "for with that million dollars, that clears the Townsend name, I buy back my beloved Herbert." And she rushed away to claim her ransomed son.

All Edible Eggs Are Not Produced by Old Biddy

Ask for eggs in a store, and it is taken for granted that you mean hens' eggs. If, however, you happened to live in the lonely island of Tristan da Cunha what you would get would be penguins' eggs.

Penguins lay on the ground in long, tussocky grass. There are thousands of them, and the eggs are nearly as big as those of a goose. They are quite good and have no fishy flavor.

Most seabirds' eggs are edible. Those of the black-headed gull are almost as good as plovers' eggs.

The moorhen lays most excellent eggs. When boiled fresh the white is clear and transparent. Guillemots' eggs are also good. Thousands are collected on the Farralton Islands, off San Francisco, and sold in that city, while the eggs of penguins and gulls from Dassen Island are retailed in the shops of Cape Town.

Most kinds of turtle supply good eggs. The only trouble is that they won't boil hard, but for making omelets they are excellent.

Even alligator eggs are quite edible when fresh, though apt to be slightly musky. In Brazil the eggs of the iguana, a large lizard, are considered a dainty. They are the size of bantams' eggs and have a leathery shell.

We all eat fish eggs. A herring is nothing unless it has a good roe, while the eggs of the Russian sturgeon form that well-known delicacy, caviare. The rare red caviare is made of the eggs or spawn of the omul, a fish of the sturgeon family. Shad eggs are prized by Malays, and salmon eggs by the Choctaw Indians of British Columbia. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Superstitions Attached to Colorful Turquoises

Turquoises were at one time so plentiful in Mexico that the Aztec Indians used thousands of them in masks which they wore for their religious ceremonies, says the Washington Star. Big ones and little ones were cemented together over a cedar frame to make a covering for the face. The teeth and eyes were inlays of mother of pearl.

Some say turquoise, or turkis, is named after Turkey, whence came the stones that were used in old European jewelry. Really the finest ones came from Persia, but that was before the wealth of the blue and green stones of America had been commercialized. Long ago the Apache and Pueblo Indians of southwestern United States used them in quantities, for turquoises, unlike most stones, do not have to be mined, but appear on the surface of the ground in bright, greenish-blue spots and stains.

The various peoples that have been particularly fond of turquoises have attached most curious superstitions to them. The opaque blue and green color of the stones is suggestive of the freshness of grass, the blue of water. That's why Persians and Egyptians carried them in the desert. The Persians fastened them to the tails of their horses, mules and camels.

In Europe it was once believed that the word turquoise meant victorious, or fortunate. Because the turquoise frequently changes color, turning from a sky-blue shade to a paler greenish hue, people fastened a superstition to it, saying that the stone shone when the air was pure, but became dim when ill fortune was about.

Let us hope that full soon there will be nothing blue but the eagle.

Edible Figs

There are two types of edible figs. One type will develop fruit without pollination and includes the White Adriatic, Black Mission and Kadota. The other type requires pollination and includes chiefly those called Calmyrna, Stanford and San Pedro. Figs are insect-pollinated plants, the pollen-bearing flowers and the edible fruit being borne on different trees. The male tree is known as the caprifig. The staminate flowers which bear the pollen are just inside the eye, and the gyno flowers, which are modified female flowers, occupy the rest of the cavity of the fruit.

About Shoes

When shoes were first worn, thousands of years ago, it was the custom for a man to take off a shoe and give it to his neighbor as a pledge to seal a bargain or close a deal. Heels and stout soles were not invented till the fifteenth century. They were originally intended for riding, as they gave a firmer hold of the stirrup. Today it takes 80 workpeople to make a shoe. 150 kinds of machines are employed in the various operations, and 450 processes have to be gone through before the boot or shoe is ready to be worn.

Do you know why your neighbor reads the Boston Globe? Have you seen Emily Post's etiquette talks, Lois Leed's beauty tips, and Culbertson's bridge lessons? Take a tip from your neighbor; get the Globe!
