Two Kittens Prove
Most Popular Pets

Dogs, rabbits, even fish and turtles may be all right in their places, but when it comes to winning prizes, kittens have it all over the mes who won the popular fancy. A gold that their particular pet would easily be the mes tho popular, but the two little gray kitens owned by Kathleen Hayes were the nes who won the popular fancy. A gold bloom was awarded as the prize.

There were seven different divisions in the annual playground pet show, with three winners being chosen in each by the popular applause of the children. Blue, red, and white ribbons and boxes of animal crackers were awarded as prizes in each division. William C. Crowley acted as referee.

A parade preceded the actual judging of the pets. Richard Fraser carrying the American flag led the line and he was followed by the various divisions, led by the following lacard bearers:

Dogs, William Livesley; cats, George Spinney; rabbits, Harry Duke; flyers, Alex Gordon; zoo, as James O'Hagan and pupples, Donald Lewis. The winners follow:

There may be a lot of mud-slinging in our presidential elections, but it's a far better way than the way they change their rulers in Europe.

Siftings

We wonder how many people in Andover have been dreaming all week of securing a position as mattress-tester.

"The king is dead; long live the king," applies to the underworld as well as to monarchies, and so the department of justice fortunately hasn't stopped at Dillinger.

The good thing about this terribly hot weather is that people are so hot they don't have strength enough to say: "Hot enough for ya?"

Gifts Presented to Phillips Library

Several Andover people have presented the Phillips Academy library with books and ther material of value recently, according to he July issue of the Phillips bulletin. The article reads in part.

The article reads in part.

During the winter term, if the weather permits, the sport of ski-ling is always much enjoyed at Andover. Next year it is expected that there will be an even greater interest in this sport because of the ski runs which are being constructed by the Outing Club on the hills outside the center of the town. Mr. Alfred Ripley's gift of thirteen volumes on ski-ling is, therefore, a very timely one and a contribution which will be much appreciated by the students.

The request for Andover memorabilia in the January Bulletin has met with a very gratifying response and several important "wants" have been filled. From the estate of the Reverend C. C. Carpenter, through his daughter, Miss Jane Carpenter, the library has received twenty-eight catalogues, some of them rare and difficult to secure. The file of school catalogues is now very nearly complete.

As a record of the years from 1889 to 1892.

of them rare and difficult to secure. The file of school catalogues is now very nearly complete.

As a record of the years from 1839 to 1892 the scrapbook recently given to the library by Mr. Philip Ripley provides excellent "source material." The photograph of the class of 1892 in their junior year, also the gift of Mr. Ripley, is a picture new to the Andover collection. Three interesting photographs belonging to Albertson Case, '62, have been sent to the library by his grandson, Mr. Richard Berresford of New York. Through Mr. Burton S. Flagg of Andover a copy of the class album of 1858 has been received.

Very illuminating in regard to the cost of living are the term bills sent to William A. Goldsmith eighty years ago and now presented to the school by his daughter, Miss Bessie Goldsmith, of Andover. In the years covered by these bills, 1847 to 1852, the room rent was never more than a dollar, the Ituition from six to seven dollars, and dinner at the Academic Club could be secured for ten cents. An account of these eating clubs, which flourished from 1850 to 1889, would make an interesting contribution to the history of Phillips Academy.

Just received through Dr. Lewis M. Silver, "78, are two interesting items for the Andover collection, both of which belonged to the late Dr. Frederic S. Dennis of the class of 1868.

One is a Bible which Dr. Dennis had when he was a student at Phillips Academy and the other is a gavel made from a Phillips elm and given to him by Dr. Stearns in 1925. Columbia Books, 1893-1933, which also belonged to Dr. Dennis, has been given to the library by Henry M. Silver, '22, one of the completes of

TO LOVE! TO LIVE! 88

By R. K. WILKINSON

VER since she could remember, Edna May had loved Henry Ap-pleton.

pleton.

Of course at first it wasn't really love. Not the way sophisticated people thought about love.

It had all started with a girlish admiration, a sort of worship.

For Henry was truly a hero to be worshipned.

Even in grammar school he was ar even in grammar school he was an outstanding figure in boyish sports.

And later in high school when he began to feel his maturity he was elected captain of the football team, and was prominent in all social activities.

elected captain of the football team, and was prominent in all social activities.

A tall, handsome figure, decidedly masculine, yet finding time to bask in the warmth of the worship Edna May and other girls bestowed upon him.

Afterward, Edna May entered Smith and Henry went to Harvard.

She could only see him occasionally then.

But the newspapers played him up big, predicted he would be the coming gridiron star.

And through it all Edna May's regard wavered not at all.

The girlish feeling of admiration ripened and grew into what must be love.

No other word could explain the thrill she felt when Henry asked her to a sophomore hop.

Edna May remembered that hop vividly.

She went over big, and this seemed to please Henry a lot.

Like all college men he had been afraid of being stuck with a flat tire on his hands. She'd only danced with him twice during the evening.

And after it was over four couples of them went home together in the same automobile, and Henry had left her at the door of the dormitory where she was staying with a hurried goodnight and the merest trace of a hand squeeze.

But he must like her, she told her-

But he must like her, she told herself.

He must, or he wouldn't have asked her to a big event like the sophomore hop, with dozens of other girls willing and eager to go.

On three other occasions during the four years of college she had gone to Cambridge and attended Harvard functions with Henry.

And during her junior year he had been her guest at the prom.

But their relations had never got beyond the brother and sister stage.

That was the trouble.

Henry had always acted more like a brother to her. That sickening "big brother" stuff.

Just because their families were friends and they had been brought up together in the same town, had attended the same public schools, played in the same sand pile.

Henry probably thought, she reflected bitterly, he had a duty to perform. That's why he took her around some—out of respect to the families.

After college Henry came home and went to work in his father's bank, and Edna May lived with her folks and said she'd like to stay home for a while rather than travel in Europe for a year at her mother's suggestion.

But the real reason for it was because she wanted to be near Henry.

Surer than ever she was now that she loved him.

That feeling that had grown and ripened and turned from adoration to admiration and then to respect couldn't be explained any other way.

They saw each other frequently.

They saw each other frequently.
They played tennis together and swam and danced at the Country club. But Henry's attitude remained the same—a sort of casual indifference, a brotherly regard.

If he saw that she had developed from a gawky girl into full and appealing maturity, the change failed to interest him.

He talked to her freely about other girls, called her attention to any attractive females who appeared from time to time at the club dances, infuriated her by paying court to the young Mrs. Morgan, whose husband had died of pneumonia two weeks after their marriage.

It angered her to feel this way.
She knew it was useless, hopeless.

She knew it was useless, hopeless.
And because of this knowledge she maintained a careless indifference toward him.

It was only when she seemingly became interested in Bob Somerville that Henry's attitude changed.

"Keep away from him, kid," he advised vised.

"Bob's a good scout, but he's not for you. He has a trick of getting girls all haired up about him and then leaving 'em flat."

Edna May's head began to whirl. Was this why Henry had never paid any attention to her before? Was it because she had acted goofy about him, never appeared interested in anyone else? Was this the key to his affections?

Thereafter Edna May became more attentive to Bob than ever.

She spent four or five nights a week with him. And when Henry asked her to accompany him to a club dance she informed him sweetly that she had already promised Bob.

And it worked!

Henry grew alarmed.

And it worked!
Henry grew alarmed.
He cautioned her about Somerville again, and received a cold retort to the effect that Edna was now old enough to take care of herself.

The effect upon Henry made her districted the effect of the cold and th

The effect upon Henry made her deliriously happy.

He became angry.

At last she was making some impression; at last Henry was beginning to realize she was something besides a kid sister.

She consented once to go out with him, and Henry spent the evening handing her brotherly advice, to all of which she smiled sweetly and looked wise. Henry raged and took her home in sullen silence.

Edna May found difficulty in controlling her emotions.

Henry was waking up.

He was, she was sure, beginning to fall. She could tell.

Every girl can tell when she is making an impression on a man. And the thought made her deliciously happy. Her happiness couldn't be any more complete than on that morning, two days later, when she came to the breakfast table and picked up the early edition of the Reporter that was lying there. She glanced casually at the headlines and flipped the pages to the society section.

Right then her heart stopped beating and the breakfast table and the room and everything began to swim and sway crazily.

At first she couldn't be lelve her eyes. But she read it again, and then a third time. There couldn't be any mistake. It must be true. And there was Henry's picture and the widow Morgan's. And there were the black headlines staring back at her, "Banker's son elopes with young widow."

er's son elopes with young widow."

Edna May got unsteadily to her feet and somehow reached her room without uttering a sound.

Even then she didn't cry.

Her hurt was too great. She just sat before her window and stared out and saw nothing.

She wished she was dead.

How easy it would be to die now. It would simplify matters so much. It would simplify matters so much. It would simplify matters to come, years of torment and misery.

Edna May suddenly stood up and went into her bathroom and took down a bottle of lodine. . . Later she opened her eyes and became conscious of a burning sensation in her stomach, and decided she wasn't dead.

Her mother was there, bending over her with anxious eyes.

She wondered why Edna May had taken such a large dose of cough medicine, and Edna May shut her eyes and didn't attempt to explain.

She'd have to try again, she told herself. She couldn't, At noon Edna May got up and couldn't.

couldn't.
At noon Edna May got up and dressed and went out for a walk. At the corner of Fisher and Spruce she turned and crossed over to detour around a roped-off area where some construction work was going on. She remembered hearing the warning cry, but her mind was too occupied to give it much heed. Then she saw the heavy crane swinging toward her, and screamed. Death stared her in the face, and she tried to avoid it. in the face, and she tried to avoid it.

Death! A few hours before she had sought it. And now she screamed and "It's a pity," the doctor was saying, "she'll be scarred for life . . . such a good-looking girl, too . . even though they do get damages, it won't do much good . . damages won't remove that scar. ."

Edna May opened her eyes and looked at the doctor and her mother and father, and smiled.

There was pity and sorrow in their faces, but Edna May still smiled.

She reached for her mother's hand and drew her toward the bed. "It can't be as bad as that," she said, "It could be so much worse. I—I'm luck to be alive."

After a while she thought of Henry and wondered if he was happy with the widow Morgan.

She hoped he was. She wanted every one to be happy. There were so many important things to do.

Life meant so much.

It was so good—so good to just be alive. To feel that you had years and years to live. How foolish she'd been to try to crowd it all into so short a space of time, to have had but a single purpose in mind.

Edna May closed her eyes again, but the smile lingered. She shuddered, remembering how near death she had been. She sighed, Life—just to be alive—was so sweet.

It was selfish to waste life away. . . So many things far more important and necessary than love.

Edna May at last had found herself ran and prayed that it would not

A Weighty Subject
Willam Howard Taft, former President of the United States, was a man of big proportions, both mentally and physically. He was also blessed with a keen sense of numor. A Washington newspaper correspondent once asked, him if he would tell how much he weighed. "No, sir," boomed the President. "Mr. Red used to say that no gentleman could weigh more than 200 pounds. I have amended that to 300." Mr. Taft actually weighed more than 300 pounds at one time.

Eskimo Children Lucky

Eskimo child is in some respects the luckiest child in the world. He is never scolded or whipped and is respected and revered by his parents. This is because the superstition-dominated Eskimo believes that in the child the spirit of its dead grandfather or grandmother lives again. For this reason, it is quite common to hear an Eskimo mether address her child as mother or father.

Andover Girls at Northfield Meeting

Miss Lois Ferguson of 64 Chestnut street and Miss Helene E. Hall of 43 High street are among the 400 delegates attending the 31st annual Northfield Conference of Religious Education now in session on the Northfield Seminary campus. This conference, the third of a series of five being held here this summer, will end July 28 after an eleven-day session devoted to classes in the theory and practice of Church School work, to devotional and inspirational meetings and to recreation. The conference is interdenominational, seven Protestant denominations being represented in the management. The delegates come from churches in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, as well as from all parts of New England. Judge Robert C. Parker of Westfield, Massa, is chairman; the Rev. Dr. Herbert W. Gates of Boston, dean; and the Rev. Dr. John W. Brush of the First Baptist Church, New Haven, chaplain. Among the 35 other members of the faculty are Dr. Sidney A. Weston of the Congregational Publishing Society, Boston, and the Rev. Study classes at the conference are held in the morning. Afternoons and evenings are devoted to athletics, swimming, dramatics and social events. Each evening a devotional service is held on Round Top where D. L. Moody, founder of the Northfield Conference is buried.

MEMORIALS--THAT ENDURE!

For forty years we have been engaged in the manufacture of high-grade, Cemetery MEMORIALS, which today—after years of wear—are the outstanding specimens of endurance and beauty in the cemeteries where they are set. We own and operate the largest MONUMENT MANUFACTURING PLANT in this state. We are strictly MANUFACTURERS—we make our monuments here, out of the yery finest quality SMITH'S WESTERLY, RHODE ISLAND GRANITE and we sell them directly to you at first cost... A MANUFACTURER'S COST.4

Our EXHIBIT includes hundreds of monuments—every type of CemeteryMemorial—each and every one a GUARANTEED specimen of Memorial Art. We invite you to come in and inspect this display, to prove the amazing values we are offering this month at a MANUFACTURERS' PRICE.

Toward Wakefield a cloud of smoke ballooned and hung motionless above treps; directly in front of the Boston Custom House tower, a long gray spiral rose languidity to the heavens; over in the direction of Gloucester, two brown plumes nodded and billowed, and on the Bosford-North Andover line, a thin haze still marked the course of line at the haze.

"Just what did you want, son?"

"Oh, a swell one like last year! With flames shootin' up an' everything." Turning to me—"You oughta been here then. Boy' that was a fire—what I mean!"

The phone rang.

"Hello, Ves, I'll get them. You say have them run out Essex street...? O.K."

"Hello, Give me... Hello, Nichols talking. They need you out on that East Gloucester fire. Run out along Essex street; ask for Mrs. Smith's farm. You'll have to lay your hose from there. So long."

"Well, son. That's a fair one. They've called the CCC boys from North Reading."

The phone again.

Sonny took a long knowing squint along the ruler which acts as range finder. He agreed that it was without doubt, over in Methuen. The mysteries of the sectional map had evidently been explained to him on a previous visit.

Mounted on a flat topped stand, the oriented map is circular in shape and outlined on it are the three local stations: Georgetown, Wakefield and Chelmsford. Degrees and distances spiderweb across the surface. The sighting ruler is swung on a pivot and the location of a blaze is figured by triangulation. An inspiration to Sonny to bone on his Trig. Observer Nichols, in the employ of the State Department of Conservation, is on the lookout from his eyrig, 455 feet above eal level, from nine o'clock in the morning until six at night. Few fires occur after dark, he explains, and they are soon detected. It is the day time fires that keep the watchers on the qui vive.

Andover Leads in Roadside Stands

Four of Andover's roadside stand owners have been awarded certificates for complying with the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, according to an announcement received this week. This gives Andover an enviable position, for no other comunity has as many as four approved stands. Only thirty-eight certificates have been issued. East Longmeadow with three comes next to Andover, while Newton Centre, Danvers, Concord, Arlington and Seekonk have two each.

Andover Subject of Globe Article

'Andover of the Hill, the Till and the "Andover of the Hill, the Till and the Mill" was the subject of an interesting article by Frank P. Sibley in the Boston Glove last Saturday. It was one of a series of articles entitled "Seeing New England" now occupying a full-page each day in the Globe.

With the Andover article were large pictures of the Square, the Abbot house, the Memorial Tower, the mills at Shawsheen, Abbot academy, Pomps pond bathing beach, and the Oliver Wendell Holmes library.

and the Oliver Wendell Holmes library.

The article follows:
Andover lies on a long slope to the north.
At the top is culture, in the Phillips Academy—Andover lies on a long slope to the north.
At the top is culture, in the Phillips Academy—Andover lies on to speak of it as "Andover." That is the "hill." Down in the waitst of it is the retail business section, poetically referred to as the "till." And in the valley lies Shawsheen and the mills of the American Woolen Company, which explains "the mill."

It is a town of immense spread and many surprises. It has cherished its old houses the oldest, one of the Abbot homes was occupied till within two years, though it was built in 1684. Of course, not all the original shingles remain.

At first about six local men were put to work on the wrecking job, and they of course first had to clear out the inside of the building and then remove the roof. Most of the actual wrecking was done by two skilled men from Boston, while the Andover men carried lumber and slate. The work proceeded much faster after the remeyal of the roof. Inside all the partitions were taken down and all the Punchard Hall was torn up, and all that was left of the second atory after this work had been completed where the large room separated from the small outside hall and the stairs by a brick partition.

Gregg was carrying on an affair with another woman!

No, not Gregg! Not dear, kind, devoted Gregg! Not the Gregg whom she adored and vorshiped and loved more dearly with each passing day. Impossible!

Anne brushed the mist before her syes and laughed.
It wasn't true. It couldn't be.
There was some explanation for it

Alphabet From Greek
The last seven letters of our alpha bet, like nearly all of the others, were inherlted from the early Greek which language originally had received them from the Phoenician, says an author ity in the Chicago Tribune. The letter T was the final symbol in the Semilic alphabet, but its form in the earliest inscriptions was that of X. The Greek and Latin symbols for T approached more nearly the modern form of the letter than they did the Semitic form in English the sound value of T is an alveolar rather than a dental stop
In some cases T becomes a sibilant in English as in the word motion. The letter T also may have the value of an unvolced sound, as in the word thin.
The next three letters of our alpha

The next three letters of our alpha bet, U. V. and W. are Latin variants of one Greek symbol. The letter Y is another variant of this same symbol. The four letters were developed as a means of representing sounds in the Greek alphabet more accurately Most interesting, perhaps, is the letter W, which is exactly what its name implies, double U. For hundreds of years the sound was represented by UU, but in the English of the Ninth century this form was found to be unsatisfactory as representing the consonant sound, and the distinct symbol W was developed. The ordinary W represents a volced sound, but when used in conjunction with H, as in when, it has a tendency to become an unvolced sound. The letter X, unlike most of the other alphabet symbols, was derived from the western Greek. In the original Semitic alphabet the name for this letter was samekh. The final letter of our alphabet, Z, has a history approximating kxactly the other letters discussed here.

The Greek form of Z was a close copy of the Phoenician, but authorities are puzzled by the Greek name for this symbol, zeta. Several explanations have been advanced, but none of them have been accepted. This letter, too, has interesting variations in its sound value.

Anne found herself wishing that it was work and work only that was responsible for his condition.

She wanted to believe he was telling the truth, and perhaps would have succeeded had not the germ of suspicion taken such a firm hold upon her soul.

And so when Wednesday the following week came around Anne found herself no nearer a solution.

And, acting on an impulse born of desperation, she decided to throw all sense of pride and honor to the winds.

The thing must be settled once and for all.

At nine o'clock Wednesday evening Anne called her husband's office on the 'phone, asked if she might speak to Gregg, and upon hearing his voice over the wire, hung up the receiver without speaking a word. So far so good. It was now 9:05.

It was now 9:05. Anne backed her own roadster from e garage and drove down town and parked at a spot which commanded a view of the front door of Gregg's office

Hardly had she switched off the ig-nition when her heart gave a bound. A blue coupe, with chromium cov-ered tire racks mounted on either run-man and a woman.

The man was Gregg!
There was no mistaking it.
The blue coupe with the chromium tire covers was his. There was no mistaking this, either.
Anne sat as if stunned.
Now that she had actually seen with her own eyes, the revelation was more of a blow than she had anticipated.
The shock of it had a sort of numbing effect.
She sat still for five minutes.

She sat still for five minutes. Gradually her tensed muscles relaxed. She moved automatically, started the car, guiding it through traffic toward Yet she had seen . . . Well, it was settled.

Now she could conduct herself with some definite plan of action in mind.

Of course she'd have to leave Gregg.

This was inevitable.

The parting would be hard.

She pictured his looking at her.

That would be harder still—meeting his eyes, which had always been so twinkly and wholly lovable.

Anne told herself she still loved him. fers was the kind of love that went Hers was the kind of love that went on and on. It would never end. Yet it would be easier not seeing a little pile.

For one brief moment she thought of Gregg and almost gave in to the ache in her heart.

Then something happened—
Another light snapped on.
Anne turned.

Gregg was sitting up in bed, rubbing his eyes, trying to adjust a sleep-drugged mind to what was happening.

"Huh?—oh, hello, Anne. Sorry I dropped off before you came in. Couldn't help it. . . Too much work . . . Dead thed . . I had to quit "Dumb cluck of a stenog tried to make me drive her all the way home. I dropped her at Fifth street. . . . Get a bus there." His voice faded.

He closed his eyes, breathing heav-y in sleep.

Once he roused, brushed a hand across his cheek with a little gesture of impatience.

For even in slumber the sensation caused by hot tears splashing down on one's face is disturbing.

Buckwheat, Asiatic Product

But shallow, like most girls who pound typwriters and chew gum.

Anne waited a week.

She was going to give Gregg every opportunity to come to her, to be honest and fair about the whole thing.

She waited a week because there was the bare possibility that she had been mistaken, that it was all a product of imagination.

And during the week she waited Anne tried to perceive in her husband some change, some noticeable difference in his demeanor that would betray his deceit.

But Gregg remained the same.
He looked tired and worn.
His features revealed the strain of hard work, and more than once he mentioned that if the present pace continued to be maintained at the office, he'd be a physical wreck.

Anne found herself wishing that it.

The organization takes its name from that of Edward Lloyd, who kept a coffee house in Tower street, London, about 250 years ago. In his place ters and there they remained until 1774, when they removed to the Royal Exchange where they have been ever Millers, on Tuesday night the Press will play the Pioncers; and on Thursday night the Laundry will tackle the Ballardvale Town team.

The final player changes were made this week at the meeting of the league. Connies O'Leary was transferred from The Pioncers to Leary was transferred from The Pioncers of note, was traded from the Press to the Laundry. Wallace Rennie, an orator of note, was traded from the Press to the Pioncers for Dyke Thompson. Brad Webb was also signed by the Pioncers, while thus compares to the stock exchanges and similarly regulated market places.

Rev. Mr. Riegler

The union services between the South and Free Congregational churches will be continued during August. They will be held at 10-45 a.m. at the South church. Rev. Gordon A. Riegler, pastor of the College church at Moorhead, Minnesota, has been engaged by Mr. Church to preach.

Rev. Albert W. Palmer, D.D., LL.D., President of Chicago Theological Seminary, wrote thefollowing letter regarding Mr. Wisses Helen, Mary and Katherine Peille.

wrote thefollowing letter regarding Mr. Riegler:

DEAR MR. CHURCH:

Lan glad to hear from you and remember very pleasantly our contact in Honolulu. It is a great pleasure to be able to reassure you with regard to Gordon Riegler as one of our very finest men and you can put him into one of the most critical and conservative communities without any fear. He has background and scholarship and a lot of real religion along with it all. He is free and human and has made a marvelous record at Moorhead, Minnesota, where the students at the State Teachers College simply idolize him. His particular hobby is Congregational History and so he will appreciate an opportunity to gret into Nowe Faulach (A. 1).

Feathered Saluki Enjoys Greatest Honor in Persia

Greatest Honor in Persia
Throughout the lonely desert stretches of Persia, the feathered (Shami) Saluki, still enjoys the high esteem his ancestors earned in the song, art and verse of the sporting khans of 6000 B. C. Not treated as the despised "dog," the Arabs speak of him as "the Noble," honoring his possessor with the title "gentleman,"
He receives thoughful care, stretching himself at ease on the carpet of his master's tent.
With the exception of his long silk

his master's tent.

With the exception of his long silk ears that reach the corners of his mouth, and feathered tail, the Saluki at first glance resembles the modern greyhound. He is, however, tighter in build and shorter, with a straighter back, presenting in profile almost a perfect square. His extremities and under-body colors are of paler shades than his short, close body coat, which may be golden cream, white, fawn, black, black-and-tan, blue or silver gray. The tail is always white-tipped. His brown, golden or hazel eyes are gray. The tail is always white-tipped. His brown, golden or hazel eyes are his greatest attraction—mild, intelligent in their expression that is termed "almost human."

"almost human."

He is not to be confused with other oriental greyhounds such as the Barukhzy (Afghan) hounds that are larger and heavier and of shaggy appearance, feathered over their entire body with the exception of their tail, almost void of feather and carried like a saber. Both of these breeds is said to be capable of great endurance and speed, being credited with a speed of 32 yards per second in spite of the handicap of loose sand. Of faithful and gentle dispositions, either is always a valuable companion.—Los Angeles Times.
