Held for Grand Jury After Killing Student

Probable Cause Found to Hold Bruno Loik of Lawrence as Result of Accident in Which June Swenson Was Fatally Injured

Bruno Loik of 53 Bromfield street, Lawrence, was held in bonds of $1,000 for the grand jury in district court Tuesday morning on charges of manslaughter and operating an endanger as the result of the death of June Swenson of 193 North Main street, struck by Loik's car on November 10 while she was crossing the street. Justice Albion G. Peirce presided.

Frank Dushame, Jr., of 227 Osgood street, North Andover, whose car Miss Swenson had just left after visiting a movie, testified that he saw a car coming down the hill at between 45 and 50 miles an hour as he drove away to his home. It was raining very hard, he said.

Dr. Victor A. Reed, medical examiner, told the court that the girl had died of a fractured skull the night following the accident. Joseph McCarty, who was standing in a doorway of a store near Harding street, stated that he heard a noise and saw a man getting out of a car. The man then backed up his car, and then picked the girl up. McCarty accompanied Loik to the hospital.

Officers Thomas Dailey and Carl Stevens testified that the driver said he was going about 30 to 35 miles an hour and did not see the girl until about 15 feet away. Inspector James French and Chief Dane said that the car's right headlight was broken.

Gertrude Tingley Sings at Abbot

Miss Gertrude Tingley, who has taken charge of the vocal department at Abbot Academy, will give a recital in Davis hall, on Saturday night, November 24 at 8:00 o'clock.

Miss Tingley is well known as a singer and teacher in Boston circles where her experience in this dual role has given her much recognition. She has appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra and with Boston choral bodies with great success, and has turned out a host of fine young singers.

A champion of classical art-song, Miss Tingley will present at her first public recital at Abbot Academy a program that will include five songs from the early classics, a group of songs from the Romantic Period, including songs by Hahn, Widor, Wolf and Brahms, and a more modern group which will include two of our interesting folk-songs from the Kentucky mountains.

Miss Marion Muther will be Miss Tingley's pianist and Miss Kate Friskin and Walter Howe will play the Prelude, Fugue and Variation of Cesar Franck, and the Notturmo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer's Night's Dream," arranged for piano and organ.

The public is cordially invited to this recital. There is no charge for admission.

C. C. C. Boys Aid Search for Woman

At the urgent request of the Chief of Police of Amesbury Wednesday morning, forty-one members of the 110th company C.C.C. in Andover were detailed to search the swamp in the vicinity of Amesbury and Great Swamp to find a 27-year-old mother of two children who had disappeared from her home through a window the previous night suffering from a nervous breakdown. Her absence was discovered some time after by her husband, William J. Rose, a milkman on returning from his route.

The call for aid came through at the C.C.C. headquarters early Wednesday morning and was answered immediately by Captain John E. O'Neil and Supt. Thomas Taylor. On their arrival at the scene the boys were divided into four groups, each under a leader, and the whole party under Lieut. Carlberg, Police, Boy Scouts, and even city volunteers joined in the search which lasted for hours, and it was not until the missing woman was found wandering about the outskirts of the town that the party was called off.

Thanksgiving Sale on Next Tuesday

A Thanksgiving sale, which will include among its attractions "The Tinder-Box," a puppet show from Hans Anderson's fairy tale, a huge rocking horse in his paddock with a professional jockey, and the Old Goose for grabs, who wiggles his head in a most mysterious manner, will be held in Christ church parish house, under the auspices of the Woman's Guild, next Tuesday afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock.

Many of the other church organizations will assist and there will be a most festive air in the two halls, the upper being given over to the puppet show and the larger reserved for the many patrons who will wish to avail themselves of the opportunity not only to buy their Thanksgiving dinner supplies and decorations, but Christmas gifts and gadgets as well.

Besides plum puddings and pies there will be for sale many other Thanksgiving and Christmas things too numerous to mention. Tea will be served through the generosity of the committee and there will be delightful music.

There will be no admission fee to the sale. But one performance of "The Tinder-Box" will be given, as you remember it takes some time and much scheming for the noble soldier, with the help of the three extraordinary dogs, to make off with the princess.

This gorgeous presentation takes place at 3:45 and all children are invited to attend with the necessary dime in their pockets.

It was Andover's seventh fatal accident of the year and the fifth within the space of a few weeks.

Carton received many bad lacerations, requiring 24 stitches, when the car in which he was riding as Hollinger's passenger, crashed into the rear of a ten-ton truck parked beside the Reading road about 1:30 in the morning. Hollinger was slightly injured.

New Building Plans Expected on Monday

Gymnasium Smaller, but Basketball Court Regulation High School Size—Folding Doors Remain, Allowing Crowd of 1200 to Attend Town Meetings

It was learned this morning that there is a possibility that on Monday night the building committee may include in their call for bids an alternate proposal by which the contractors would give figures for both the smaller gymnasium and the gymnasium fifteen feet longer. Then if after the figures were submitted, the town wished to appropriate the extra money for this purpose, there would not be the delay that would be entailed if the building committee were to call a special town meeting now. The contracts could be awarded, and preparations for construction could get underway while the town was deciding whether or not the extra should be appropriated. Otherwise the special town meeting would involve at least a two weeks' delay now, and even then the extra might not be appropriated, as was the case in a similar situation in Tewksbury recently.

The final revised plans for the new school building project are to be presented to the building committee Monday night. It is expected. If approved by the building committee, they may then be taken to Boston, where the state P. W. A. engineer has verbally promised approval within a day. Then the project will again be advertised for bids, and within two weeks at the earliest after the advertising, the bids may be resubmitted.

The contractors who were successful on the first call for bids have stated that they can start work immediately, so that the buildings would be going up during the winter months. The state engineer has already looked over the proposed changes and approved them verbally.

Several changes have been made in the buildings under the revised plans. The facade of the auditorium will not be as ostentatious as heretofore, although the architects feel that it will be equally as attractive.
The gymnasium has been reduced in size fifteen feet, but according to Chairman Hardy, it will allow a basketball court as large as the regulation size for high schools. Two sets of teams can practice at the same time using the width of the gym as the length of the practice court.
The stage opening of the auditorium has been reduced from almost the width of the hall to 35 feet or 11 feet wider than the town hall stage. This means that 24 seats on the auditorium floor will be eliminated. Four seats in the gallery have been cut out, to make way for a larger motion picture projection room. The architects were asked at the last meeting to try to widen the stage more.

The folding doors between the stage and the gymnasium are still included in the plans, with the result that overflow town meetings can be accommodated up to 1200 persons. Bleachers can be erected in the gym and on the stage to seat 375 persons.
The locker rooms and the showers have not been changed in any way. The junior high school building remains as in the original plans.

Probably the most outstanding change will be in the heating plant, which originally was to have been in a separate building to the rear of the Samuel C. Jackson school. The revised plans call for the installation of new sectional oil-burning boilers where the present boilers are now. The architects have stated that the floors will be insulated, thus eliminating the excessive heat at present in the classrooms above the boilers. The oil will also eliminate the dust, etc., which formerly bothered the pupils. The large cost entailed in erecting a high chimney is also eliminated by this plan.

There has been some talk on the part of a group of residents of calling a special town meeting to appropriate the extra $60,000 for following the original plans.

Mrs. Paige's Pupils Present Recital

A group of the piano students of Mrs. Gertrude Pearce Paige gave a very enjoyable musicale at the home of their teacher Monday afternoon with their mothers as guests.

A Nickel to Shawsheen

A little story in the Boston papers this week bore the headline: "Danvers Wins Battle for Five-Cent Fare." The item stated that the board of selectmen had won its battle with the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company for a five-cent fare within the town's limits, which means that from the town square it will cost the Danvers public only a nickel to go to any place in the town reached by the company.

What is right for Danvers is right for Andover, and what Danvers can do, Andover can do. The selectmen should go to the Eastern Massachusetts officials, and ask, as if they really meant it, that the five-cent fare within town limits policy be extended to Andover. Last spring the railway made the concession on the hill to the square; now why should the same concession be made from Shawsheen village to the square, certainly no longer a distance than the stretch to the hill.

The buses are at present making the trip at frequent intervals, half empty. The extra cost of carrying the extra passengers who would be attracted by the lower fare would be negligible, since it would mean no extra buses and no extra operators. Nor would the company be losing any of the fare money that it now collects between Shawsheen and the square, because very few people will ride that distance at such an unfair fare.

It would seem an excellent endeavor for the local service club to back the selectmen to the limit in this request. The merchants' committee has been reorganized recently, with the evident purpose of stimulating local business, and certainly anything that would make it easier for Shawsheen residents to come to Andover than to go to Lawrence would give Andover business a decided advantage over that of the neighboring city. With larger stocks for the village residents to pick from in Lawrence, it is only natural that they should pay a dime to go to Lawrence rather than to pay the same amount to come to Andover. This unfair rate is the real reason why Lawrence merchants feel that Shawsheen village is, from a business standpoint, more a part of Lawrence than of Andover.

The selectmen owe it to the town's businessmen to take some really aggressive action along this line, and the Merchants' committee will be fulfilling its duty by helping out the selectmen, possibly by circulating a petition asking such a rate.

Close Them Up Sundays

The local police court on Monday presented a scene not usual in Andover. Two young men, not the type that are described as habitual inebriates, who would get liquor even if Andover did not have license, faced Judge Stone after having spent a night in the lockup for having indulged in a brawl in the alley near the Musgrove building, in plain view from the main highway. The judge warned the young men that a second offense would mean Bridgewater.

The police and the court did their duty in this instance wisely, but there still seems something left that the selectmen might well do, and that is forbid the sale of liquors on Sunday. It is not a particularly inspiring sight at seven o'clock on a Sunday evening to see two young men engaged in a drunken brawl. These were not youths who would have indulged in such an affair in Andover if they had not been able to become intoxicated in Andover. They were not the type who would spend an evening in Lawrence and then come home and start a fight in public view. They were able to obtain the liquor here in Andover, and so we had the brawl in Andover.

To protect the public interest the selectmen should immediately forbid the sale of liquors on Sunday. They have this authority, and they should exercise it. Not a single person who voted "Yes" for liquor at the first of the month would vote "Yes" on the question: "Shall we have drunken brawls in Andover's streets on Sunday?" By not taking this action, that is precisely the way the selectmen are interpreting the town's vote.

Siftings

After seeing more paint being splashed on Andover streets this week, some residents wondered why it wouldn't be cheaper to just paint one big yellow stripe around the whole town, thus eliminating all parking.

The shoe industry seems to be giving Massachusetts the boot.

Be sure not to do what we know we'll do Thanksgiving day: eat too much.

"Administration Opposes 30-Hour Week," says a headline, proving that maybe the administrator really does want people to work.

When shall we see you at the laying of the new school cornerstone?

Favors Speed Signs To the Editor of the Townsman: I have just read with approval the letter of Mr. Remington asking that a concerted movement be started at once on the part of the citizens to bring about the placing of "speed signs" conspicuously along Main street, presumably along the main line to a point somewhat beyond the Academy.

The idea seems a good one. I am not acquainted with the Selectmen, but I feel sure that Board would be glad to co-operate in such a plan, especially if they felt assured it was in harmony with the best thought of the town. Most motorists are sometimes pedestrians, and I think most adult pedestrians are sometimes riders if not drivers, at least when they patronize the buses which are now the only public transportation. So a reasonable speed on the main street is beneficial to all, and, of course, doubly so and doubly necessary for the children's sake.

As a concrete suggestion, if the editor of the Townsman would send the Board of Selectmen the letters of Mr. Remington and mine, with my reference in full to the matter, announcing a week or so in advance that it was the intention to do so, it seems to me that the very number of such letters, taken collectively, would be so impressive that it would bring quick results. Of course, if there is any possible objection to the placing of such signs, the objectors should be invited to write in also and the whole matter could then be treated by the Board as a sort of referendum on the subject. Respectfully yours, FREDERICK W. COLLIER

Will Signs Help?

Dear Mr. Editor: When I read Mr. Remington's communication in last week's Townsman, I said excellent. As I read it a second time, I said excellent, IF. When I thought again I said, excellent, but it can't be done. Up here in town we have one hour parking signs. Traffic Signal Ahead signs. Red, yellow and green lights. What do they amount to. Why disfigure Main street with any more useless signs. Maybe the investigation of the police department will enlighten us on some of these matters. A. R. T.

Two parties have spoken to the Townsman this week regarding statements made in a communication entitled "Ramblings of a Subscriber" in the Townsman. One statement was that a United States government truck had violated the lights at Main and Chestnut streets, but it has been learned that the truck was not a government truck but instead a private truck under contract to the post office, and as such not under the control of the government.

The second statement concerned the passing of a bad check in a local store. The check, it has been told us, was passed by a woman who gave a familiar name and who apparently was the mother of a Phillips Academy boy—and local merchants have usually made it a practice of honoring such checks.

National Secretary to Visit Church

Next Sunday morning at 10:45 at the Free church, Rev. George L. Cady, D.D., executive secretary of the American Missionary association of the Congregational churches of the United States of America, will deliver an address on "Underlying Principles or What It Is All About." At 12 o'clock in the parish house he will conduct a forum on Race Relations. The Brotherhood and the Margaret Slattery classes have been invited to attend. All are welcome.

Dr. Cady is an outstanding character in Congregational circles in this country. In his addresses he combines inimitable wit with wisdom of such high type that he keeps his listeners interested. He probably knows more about our Home Missions than any other man alive today. He will undoubtedly have much to say about the action of the General Council at Oberlin forming a Council for Social Relations.

Speaks on Peace to November Club

Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., gave a very interesting and worthwhile talk on "Preservation of Peace" at the meeting of the November club on Monday afternoon. He proved a speaker having a very pleasing manner of presentation of his subject matter. Afternoon tea was enjoyed following the meeting. The art department will meet Monday at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. Oswald Tower, 32 Phillips street. The subject will be "The Jacobean Period."

Mrs. Frank Mansfield Taylor, who has been lecturing on "History in the Making" for the last three weeks, will not lecture next week, but her final talk will be on December 5.

"Passion Play" in Movie on Sunday

The public of Andover is to be given the rare opportunity of seeing a new and world-famous "Passion Play" motion picture film actually produced in Europe, The Holy Land, and Egypt, with special recorded organ, orchestral and choral music, on sound equipment, depicting many famous scenes in the Life, Crucifixion, and Resurrection of Jesus, at the South church, on Sunday at 7.45 p.m. Everybody is invited, and admission tickets are not necessary.

Accompanying this film, in person, will be Rev. Laurence A. Lambert, eminent speaker and baritone soloist of New York, who will render an appropriate sacred solo. He will also speak briefly, giving an explanation of the world's great "Passion Plays" and their history, also touching on the present world crisis in religious affairs.

This fine program in picture, music, and address, is attracting large audiences in many of the largest churches in the United States, having been exhibited in over one thousand of the principal churches of America to more than one-half million people during the past two years. A capacity audience is anticipated here. The public is very cordially invited, and are urged to be in their seats early.

Dr. Fuess Speaks on Calvin Coolidge

Calvin Coolidge, even when he had left the governorship for the presidency, felt that the governor should not take second place to anyone, and he didn't mind saying so, according to Dr. Claude M. Fuess, the late president's official biographer, who spoke before the Service club last night.

When the President came to the academy sesquicentennial in 1928, he was placed with other federal dignitaries in the front row, while somehow or other Governor Alvan T. Fuller was seated in the second row. Dr. Fuess was running around taking care of something or other, he said, when he saw a crooked figure beckoning him with as much of the imperious as the reticent Vermont politician could summon up. Dr. Fuess went over to him and the President whispered: "Governor of Commonwealth belongs in front row."

The academy headmaster gave a very enjoyable talk replete with amusing anecdotes of the late ex-president, and his talk was made all the more enjoyable by the fact that he did not hesitate at times to imitate what he had thought was the inimitable accent of Calvin Coolidge.

Coursing through the entire talk was Dr. Fuess's feeling that Calvin Coolidge fitted perfectly the mood of the United States from 1923 to 1929. The late ex-president, Dr. Fuess stated, really did not want to run in 1928. Furthermore, he added, Coolidge would not have fitted with these times.

Industry, honesty, and thrift comprised the philosophy of Calvin Coolidge's life, a life in which was characterized an unusual shyness which made him feel peculiarly at home with those whom he knew well but very reticent with those who were strangers. He once told of how he felt as a boy when he would have to pass through the kitchen door to speak to a group of people in the kitchen. He always dreaded it, but every time he met someone new, even as president, he "had to pass through that kitchen door again," in his own words.

It was the hottest day New England had ever seen when on July 4, 1872, Calvin Coolidge was born into a simple Vermont family, but at three o'clock in the afternoon, shortly after his birth, Plymouth experienced its worst hailstorm. He went to Amherst, the first in the Coolidge family to attend college. From 1907 to 1929 he held public office, rising

Tough Luck—Tough Duck

Anyone who expected to give thanks on Thanksgiving day by eating the ducks that were stolen from Ralph B. Stevens of 197 High street early Wednesday morning ducks stolen were from five to seven years old, slightly, to put it mildly, beyond the edible stage. The ducks were black and white. Mr. Stevens reported that there had evidently been an attempt to raid his hen and duck coops about 5.30.

When queried Wednesday afternoon the two prominent local gentlemen who were shooting wooden ducks off the Cape over a week ago denied any knowledge of the theft, saying that their bullets would go through a wooden duck, but not through a real honest-to-goodness duck. They stated they are interested only in ducks a mile and a half out in the ocean, where ducks should be ducks and not firewood.

from a minor position in Northampton to the White House. "No man in public life ever had a better training for the presidency," Dr. Fuess declared.

Once a woman asked the president what his hobby was, and the two words came forth: "Holding office." Never except in his early days was he defeated for office, and the headmaster asserted that he was as great a vote-getter as Senator Walsh.

At the White House Calvin Coolidge slept eleven hours a day. He used a peculiar concoction for bruises, aches, etc., called "Aurora's Liniment" after its perpetrator, Aurora Pierce, housekeeper at Plymouth. Dr. Fuess smelled of it once—only once.

Dr. Fuess told many amusing anecdotes about the Vermont'er's trait of reticence. General Logan visited him at the White House on business one day, and when he was leaving, the President said: "Come around and lunch with us sometime." General Logan said, "Well, you see, I'm only going to be in Washington Thursday and Friday," and Coolidge replied: "We have lunch both days."

General Edwards, known for his lack of reticence, once greeted the president with: "Hello, Chatterbox." The Vermont'er waxed unusually verbose in his reply: "General, what I don't say doesn't hurt me half as much as what you do say."

A woman at a prohibition days once asked him if he would have taken whiskey and water to cure a cold, but Calvin said "I don't know." The woman repeated her query, more emphatically, and Mr. Coolidge put an end to the talk with: "I've always heard gin was better for colds."

In a freshman picture at Amherst Calvin Coolidge was leaning against a post, with a book under his arm. In the senior picture he was leaning against the same post, with a similar book under his arm, causing a prominent person to state "Observe how he sticks to his post."

The headmaster repeated the story of the messenger in the White House bringing the President his salary check. Mr. Coolidge looked at it, and said: "Come again."

Gives Lecture on Munitions Trade

The address of Mrs. James Morrison of Groton, Conn., to the League of Women Voters at Memorial library hall on Tuesday November 20, proved to be very stimulating in its content and served to arouse a feeling of individual responsibility in all who were able to attend. Her subject was one that has been rapidly accumulating more and more interest, "The Control of the Manufacture and Trade in Munitions, Arms, and Implements of War."

as suffrage, and is now engaged in furthering the great world movement for peace, the climax toward which she worked in her speech. She began by giving an exact and dispassionate account of some appalling statistics, first in regard to the shipment of arms to warring countries by countries actively engaged in maintaining peace as in the case of Great Britain and the United States sending munitions to China and Japan. The statistics also showed the amount of money loaned by a peace-loving country, France, to a country forbidden by treaty to arm, Austria, for the purpose of purchasing arms from the great French firm of Schneiders. The incredible profits enjoyed by the large munitions factories at the expense of the governments under which they operated and ultimately at the expense of the people, were also brought out.

Mrs. Morrison explained the organization of the great munitions factories and their inter-locking boards which are proof against all interference from the outside. She went on to describe the discovery of the Senate investigation committee and the proof they hold of the machinations of American manufacturers with foreign companies, such as the profit-sharing agreement between the American Electric Boat company and the British Vickers firm over the sale of implements of war to Peru and Chile, and the part that their agents have played in wholesale betrayal.

As to the answers to this stupendous problem, Mrs. Morrison believes with many other able people that government ownership should be a last resort and that control should be given every chance, first. Her final appeal, which was very strong in spite of the fact that the presentation of her material was entirely uncolored by sensationalism, was for a concerted local pressure of intelligent public opinion, which is practically the only means that the individual has to combat the methods of procedure. People's committee meetings, follow testimonies of hearings, keep in constant touch with Washington, and make their voices heard by their own Congressmen.
