Leg Broken under Local Fire Truck

Edward Downs, well-known local truckman and call fireman, suffered a severe fracture of the left leg last Friday afternoon when the ladder truck ran over him after he had helped free another fire truck from a snow bank on Salem street near the residence of William August.

Downs was responding to a slight fire in the Millett Greenhouses when Combination 3, on which he was riding, became stuck in the snow. He did not board the truck after it had started again, but instead attempted to board the ladder truck had stopped, but when it started again, Downs slipped. In endeavoring to throw himself away from the truck, he slid down a snowbank at the side of the road and the rear wheel of the truck passed over his leg. Alexander MacKenzie was the driver of the truck.

Downs is in very poor condition at the Lawrence General hospital. The large bone in his left leg is broken, and his right leg is badly swollen.

The titles are, "D-298" concerning an office boy who is tired of working without appreciation in a modern efficiency office and answers a newspaper ad, "Prose Preferred" which is a sly dig, at women's clubs and their aims; and "Now Don't Laugh," a story about a girl with an ambitious, climbing mother and her attempt in inveigle a Title into the family via the marriage route. A Word of Praise

When any town department can do anything and receive far more compliments than complaints there certainly must be something unusually fine about that department's particular activity. Usually persons who wish to complain do not hesitate to do so while those who are pleased with a certain piece of work too often neglect to mention their feelings to the official or department involved.

This past week an unexpectedly large number of people have praised the Board of Public Works for the excellent way in which the most severe snow storm of the present century has been handled and their expressions of praise were couched in most cases in the most earnet thusiastic of phrases. But it could not have been too enthusiastic; the Board deserves every bit of praise that could possibly be given any group of people in any line of human activity. When most cities and towns found themselves hopelessly befuddled in their attack on the storm the And ver officials, notably the superintendent of the Board of Public Works, adopted a systematic line of attack so that every minute they knew that they were steadily conquering the storm. The result was that by Friday evening Andover was far ahead of other municipalities which had merely jabbed

Mr. Hamblin remarks:

"A new record of enrollment has become a regular feature of these reports. The number for the fall term of 1934 is 494. In September after the old building had been razed, two sessions of the school were scheduled, one Eunice David and Dorothy Wade.

for the three upper grades from eight until twelve noon, and the other for the ninth grade from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. On the whole the arrangement has worked better than we had hoped. It is hardest on those teachers who have classes in both the morning and afternoon sessions with only a half-hour interval between. It must bring its difficulties to parents who have children in both sessions of the high school and others in the grades. Probably the greatest losers by the two session plan are the ninth grade pupils. They are so separated from the rest of the school that they have no opportunities for the contacts with the older pupils which should be a part of their education. The lack of any room for a school assembly or even a class meeting is keenly felt. A continuation of this condition would result in a very considerable loss of morale and school spirit. The good nature with which all concerned have accepted the situation deserves high praise.

More 1934 Cases for Health Board

An increase of 37 in the number of cases reported to the board of health in 1934 is shown in the annual report of Mrs. Lotta M. Johnson, board of health nurse and agent. There were 237 in 1934 as compared with 200 if in 1933. Measles showed an amazing jump from 31 to 109, and the most serious trouble to the town had was with scarlet fever where the number of cases jumped from 13 to 25.

Mumps proved a very ino fensive disease last year with only four cases being reported as against 56 in 1933.

Andover's dogs proved very active with the dogbites being reported as against eight in 1933. A new law which went into elect the first of the year calls for an expenditure of up to $50 per person for treatment and innoculation with anti-rabies vaccine.

For the first time in several years Andover had a case if diphtheria, a fatal one. It occurred in a middle-aged person. It is proposed hereafter to use a new diphtheria toxoid, containing no horse serum, thus minimizing the ill enects.

semental Hall library shows a per capitacirculation of 8 1-2; and of 13 per registered

While it is true that, during these years of depression, the town appropriation for the library has been sufficient to permit nearly its usual supply of new books, we have now reached the point where the ordinary appropriation needs to be supplemented by a special one for books. This is because the greatly increased use of the library during the past four years has resulted in a tremendous wear and tear upon our books. Former stocks are worn out and need replacing. This needed work should not be done by cutting out the buying of new books. To do so would be to deprive us of our ability to keep our readers in touch with current developments and of rendering our full contribution to national recovery. The Council of the American Library Association emphasizes this need of additional funos for books, and asks all library trustees to call this situation to the attention of finance committees and of the voting public. It also emphasizes the fact that such an increase in book funds should not be made at the expense of personnel
equally necessary for effective service.

We hope that this greatly needed addition to our funds may be sufficient to enlarge and further develop the work with the children at Ballardvale. The branch librariary here is an important adjunct to the local school, and should so supplement the schod work that the children could have the books needed for all grades under the junior high school. There should be a special sum designated for buying books for Ballardvale, rn1 extra assistance should be afforded the branch librarian at the
hours when the children come for books.

Public libraries have always been among the educational institutions which have administered their affairs honestly and efficiently, at the least cost under normal circumstances. During the pass four years the Memorial Hall library has handled an increase in use of 38 percent with the same saff and approximately the same appropriation as in 1929. It has meant a great deal of additional work on the part of the staff—all working at lower salaries—and a greatly increased physical and nervous strain. There has never been a time in our experience when a larger appropriation is more needed than for the year to come. It is needed for books, for binding, for additional help, and for seneral maintenance. In an epoch of world terrorism and unrest, it is especially imperative to preserve every institution which stands for education and for enlightenment. The town is coming to us for service which Lawrence on February 14, it was announced yesterday.

Marking a new era in passenger transportation in the east, the flashing unit of stainless steel, powered by a 600-horsepower Diesel engine, and capable of whisking 144 passengers, amid luxurious appointments, along at speeds as high as 110 miles an hour, will move into New England amid acclaim by state and city officials.

The train, embodying many new features of the workmanship of General Motors Corporation, through its Winton Engine Division, and the E. G. Budd Manufacturing, Company of Philadelphia has been completed and, except for a few tuning up and test runs now in progress, is ready to make its bow to New England.

Meanwhile she adroitly hid her inward turmoil. Bettina must not escape her with the wrong boy to the wrong place alone at sixteen for indefinite hours. And Bettina must never suspect it was a really vital decision.

definite hours. And Bettina must never suspect it was a really vital decision.

"Bill? Don't say you haven't seen him 'round here—Bill Moore. His mother knows you."

"Describe him," suggested Harriet cheerily as if her attention were only slightly captured.

"Oh—" impatiently—" that's not my line. He's taking the convertible and a load of bubbs in the rumble. We may go to the picture at the Pat tonight if we feel like it when we get back. Bill says gardening is a trifle exhausting at first. I'm to stab in the bubbs while he digs and shows me where. . Don't fuss if we're late. Mom, for it may take hours."

"Sorry I didn't pay proper attention to your plans. Bet. How many of you are going and where is it? Bulbs and Bill, you said—what else?"

"We're going to their cottage at the beach," Bettina said, with the degree of belated respect for her mother's opinion that Harriet had waited for. "Who is with you beside Bill, Sweet?" Harriet felt the affection which she allowed to creep into the little name.

"Way, Just the two of us, why?—" and then, suspiciously—" while the degree of belated respect for products manufacturer.

"Say, Mom, Just what is this all shour?- You're not going out to the coupe and question Bill when he comes and say we must have a chaperon or we can't go."

She said: "Dear, don't be upheaved.
Quite naturally you can't wish, when you come to think of it, to go without wanting Bill to take his mother or someone else, on such a heavenly afternoon. She'd probably like to oversee her own color scheme anyway. Why not phone and investigate with her first? She would be flattere' and value you at the same time."

Harriet hated herself for being of-ficious.

Bettina's voice pierced her with its ficious.

Bettina's voice pierced her with its grave intensity.

"Don't be so littery. Of course Bill's mother isn't going. She is candid about effort of any kind. Loathes it. The cottage is locked, barred and winter-bound. The distance, twenty miles. Work will take perhaps two hours. We'll tea at the hotel grill which is still open. Be back for dinner and a latter show. There's a program. Take it or leave it!"

"Movie stuff, darling. But unconvincing, You can't talk to your host-less like that and remain a popular guest. Plan something else at once and not waste the day. The other is naturally off. Sorry I can neither take it nor leave it just yet. Not at sixteen, Sweet. Not and be your proper mother."

"Well, if that isn't cool! And heavy. Maternal solicitude indeed." Bettina said this with deadity deliberation.

Harriet hid her anger successfully as she said, "Don't attempt to be boringly clever, darling," and walked with assumed serenity into the suncoom.

Bettina called after her: "I'll phone Daddy, that's what I'll do."

"Anything you like, Bettina," was the smooth assent. "I like your Dad's judgment about anything and everything."

Then Harriet appeared to become lost in a bit of writing she was do-

today."

Harriet blinked away the sudden moisture from her lashes. Bettina had her father's quick forgiving nature. In a few minutes she would appear proudly penitent and atoning, anxious to show Harriet how she valued her mother's favor, really.

At sixteen, Harriet thought she too had believed her mother a kill-joy. Yes, that was the old significant word they had for it.

At that moment she heard a tumul-

"Say, Bet," roared a fine unmodulated boyish voice, "Tve just thought of the hunkiest idea. Let's take your mother planting to the lake and we could all have tea at the grill instead of pottering about here. You ask her for me, will you?"

Harriet thought, "So that's how they manage these things now." Distinctly clever. Or had it just happened?

She would take a book and go far down the cliff and read and let them plant bulbs merrily.

Sea-Lilies Not Flowers; Are Related to Starfish

Are Related to Starfish
Zoology has revealed no organism
more at variance with the popular conception of animals than the seaillies, or crinoids, found in the waters of Australia, according to a correspondent in the New York HeraldTribune. When seen for the first time it is difficult to believe that they are not flowers; yet in all but the stately form they are animals, belonging to the same family as does the starfish.

"Bill, I don't think I want to delve in the soil today and I forgot ad date for tonight. I really want to surprise Moms with a tray of afternoon tea today."

Harriet blinked away the sudden moisture from her lashes. Bettina had her father's quick forgiving nature. In a few minutes she would appure. In a few minutes she would appure. In a few minutes she would appure. Unlike most of the anemones the crinoids live in deep water, and some of them have been dredged up from the same family as does the starfish.

The crinoids grow in clusters like the beds of tiger-likes, and from the bed a jointed stalk rises, sometimes to a height of several feet, before the "lip" is produced. Surmounting the stem is a disk that bears the mouth, as in the case of the anemones; but the tentacles are much longer, and rise around the margins of the disk in such a manner as to simulate a lily with marvelous perfection.

crinoids live in deep water, and some of them have been dredged up from depths in which it seems impossible for such tender and delicate things to exist. They were among the earliest types of animal life on earth, and their fossils are very common. They are in such preservation that they were called "stone lilles" before their true nature was understood.

Denmark's Throne
The laws of Denmark provide for the succession of the sons commencing with the oldest after the decease of the royal father; the succession in the event of a direct male heir, descending to the son's son. In the case of the minority of the heir it was quite common in early times for a regency to be declared, and many times such regency actually resulted in the setzing of the throne by the regent and the dethronement of the real heir.

Reception Held for

The Punchard high athletic association which a year ago, was thinking of giving up baseball because of the lack of funds, ended the year with all bills paid and a small balance in the treasury. This encouraging situation was partly due to the generosity of friends and partly to the fact that the Methuen football game was here this past year.

Mr. Hamblin states in his annual report:

"I have maintained for years that the athleties in our school were better managed, on a saner basis, and contained more of real value to the participants than those of most similar schools. With suitable quarters in view, we should be able to get nearer our goal of physical education for every pupil. There will always be an anomaly however in a situation which includes athletic sports as a part of our educational program and makes them depend for their support on the uncertain income from gate receipts or the charitable donations of friends." A reception to six new members of Court St. Monica, 783, C.D.A., was held Monday night in K.C. hall, with state regent Mrs. Anna K. Ballard of East Milton and her suite in charge. District deputy Miss Mary Healey of Dorchester was also present and made a brief address. made a brief address.

The members of the state choir who were scheduled to sing were unable to be present because of travel conditions. Instead Miss Anna Hennessey rendered a few selections.

A catered lunch was served following the recention.

An Arbroath association was formed Wednesday evening at a meeting which took place at the home of John Greenhow on Main street. The next meeting will be held on February 8 at a place to be anneunced later, and at this time officers will be elected.
