Vote "No" on Special Articles

The warrant this year will again be a long one, thus affording more opportunities to spend money, but there is one very good feature about this year's warrant: the special articles provide few if any really worthwhile opportunities to spend money wisely. Therefore, when the voters have finished with the regular departmental budgets in Article Three, they should be determined to answer "No" on all the special articles involving money, with the exception of the playground supervision article which really should be included in the regular budget just as the Pumps pond bathing beach is.

As Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long stated in the town hall Wednesday evening, we have to carry on our regular long accepted governmental activities. There is no escaping from that fact, but it does not mean that we have to say "Yes" to everybody who wants something done in his particular section of the town.

Last year Andover experienced a drastic rise in its tax rate, which combined with excessive valuations of property gave the taxpayers of this town tax bills comparable to those in other towns and cities which had much higher rates but lower assessed valuations. The rate must be cut this year, and Andover's citizens should go into the town meeting determined to vote only for what is absolutely necessary. Otherwise, those who have pet projects to offer, assisted by the impassioned oratory of those who year after year seem bent on wasting the town's money, will once again succeed in having their wishes gratified at town meeting—and most important, everybody who failed to vote "No" or failed to attend town meeting will be blaming someone else when their tax bills arrive with another exorbitant amount again this year.

Siftings

There's an awful lot about that Hauptmann trial that looks mighty fishy.

Town Treasurer Eaton had a sign on the town house door Tuesday reading: "Snow Money Wednesday." Frozen assets?

The treasurer also states, with regard to the "buzzer story" in last week's Townsman, that he, at any rate, has not yet stepped on the buzzer by mistake or otherwise. Think of the fun he's missed. It would be nice to see an officer on some other day than pay-day.

It seems queer to have state officials come out here to give talks on the taxation burden, when there's no town anywhere more wasteful than the state itself. Thrift should begin at home.

Special Articles Ask Over $80,000 Total

Town departments would be required to submit all orders for materials mounting to over $50.00 to competitive bid, on petition of Roger H. Lewis and others.

Article 21 asks that the truck hire and materials used on water systems, highways, parks and playgrounds, and sewer departments be handled by the Board of Public Works, on petition of Charles B. Roberts and others.

A hard surface road on Duffton road is provided for in article 22 at the cost of $2700. The acceptance of Tantalum road in Shawsheen village is requested in Article 23. Article 24 requests the town to take by eminent domain a lot of land at the corner of Haverhill street and Hillsdale avenue for the purpose of widening the approach. The cost of the land is quoted at $200. The cost of the widening and the laying of a hard surface road on Hillsdale avenue is estimated at $400 in the next article. Two lights on Corbett street, at the cost of $45 is asked in article 26.

Article 27, filed by J. Augustus Remington and others, requests the selectmen to cut the street railway to reduce the fare on the buses between Andover and Shawsheen to five cents.

A Carmel road sidewalk and drain is provided for in article 28 at a total cost of $2085. The purchase of the land at Pumps pond, withdrawn at the last special town meeting, is again requested, the cost being $5000.

Article 31 will be the usual final article, dealing with the transaction of other business.

"Made-Over Lunch Carts"

EDITOR OF TOWNSMAN:
Sir:
How much longer are the selectmen going to let the Eastern street railway make a fool out of the citizens of this town? Last Saturday night I waited for the Andover bus 35 minutes in Lawrence, then when it did come, it was so crowded I couldn't get in it. After 25 more minutes waiting I got the next bus and after pushing and fighting, managed to get inside; then we started for home and I got such a shaking up I was sick all day Sunday. I have ridden cars and carts in Ireland but never got such a ride, and believe me when the spring comes, I am going to get a bicycle, and I think I will beat the buses at that and from Lawrence. As slow as the trolley cars were, I and lots of others prefer them to these made-over lunch-carts.
Wake up, selectmen, and do something, before we put a wreath on your door.

The funeral was held in Salem this afternoon.

Stowe School Notes

Assembly Department
At an assembly held Wednesday, February 6, Miss Evelyn G. Robinson, librarian in charge of the Junior Room of the Public Library, gave a talk about books and the way libraries work. The main part of Miss Robinson's talk was given over to reviews of popular books.
Every noon at 12.15, Mr. Taylor is the most popular person around Stowe. Meat pies and icebergs have proved about the best sellers so far.
At the opposite end of the corridor there is situated another popular stand. There the Library Club conducts fruit sales. Most pupils find a red rose apple or a nice ripe banana just the thing to top off a good lunch, and the Library club members find it a profitable means of securing funds for new books.

Miscellaneous
On Friday, February 1, Room 3 elected the class officers for the second half year. They are as follows: president, Ruth Mills; vice president, Joseph Hendrick; secretary-treasurer, Garrison Holt; councillor, Walker Lindsay.
During the early part of this week SE elected the social studies class officers. They are as follows: president, Philip Wormwood; vice president, Richard Gordon; secretary-treasurer, Norman Eaton; executive committee, Bobby Hinman, Harold Gordon, Mary Deyermond. The executive committee they appointed Edmond Hammond as secretary of assignments and a bulletin board chairman; Charles Shattuck and Angie Dantos.
The library and press clubs under the supervision of Miss Atkinson visited the Andover Public Library Wednesday, February 6. The main topic was charge and catalogue cards.
The sports club has elected a games committee of three members: Christine Hill, Angie Dantos and Grace Crckett.
The pupils of SE and SF received their new social studies books entitled "A History of American Government and Culture" this week.
Because Ruth Mills, president of the Home Decorations club, is moving to Greenfield, Ann Earley, the vice president, is to be president. Dorothy Christie has been elected vice president.
Sarah Lee Sleeper and Barbara Gillen are to be the delegates from the Home Decorations club to the 4H night at the Parent-Teacher's association meeting Wednesday, March 6. The usher at the meeting is to be Ann Earley.

Arbroathians to Elect
The newly-organized Arbroath association will elect officers at a meeting to be held in the Free church vestry at 7:30 tonight.

Two New Exhibits at Local Gallery

Two excellent exhibits, a one-man show and a group of German textiles, are vying with each other in exciting the attention of the visitors to the Addison Gallery at present. Both exhibits will remain at the Gallery for the rest of the month.

The exhibition of paintings by Omer Lassonde is the second of a series of "One Man" exhibitions by contemporary New England artists. These exhibitions are not limited to current work, but are a careful selection from various stages in the artist's development. Omer Lassonde was born in Concord, New Hampshire, in 1903. He received his formal training at the Manchester Institute of Arts and Sciences (New Hampshire) and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. A Memorial Traveling Scholarship from the latter institution took him to Paris, where he absorbed the rich color of the tropics which is still characteristic of his work. Although Lassonde is a resident of New Hampshire, some of his best work has been done in Tennessee and along the northern coast of Maine.

Mr. Lassonde has had several "One Man" exhibitions in such centers as Boston, New York, New Haven and New Orleans, and has been represented in important group exhibitions throughout the country. In addition to landscapes and still life which are in private collections, he has painted a number of portraits on commission.
In the exhibit are a group of Tennessee pictures and another group of Samoan pictures. Stills, portraits, and landscapes are all represented. Of most local interest is the "New Hampshire Woods," lent by Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire.

The textile exhibit gives a survey of contemporary design in Germany, where much of the work is still done in small workshops by individual artists. They show a decidedly modern feeling in the handling of design and material. Some of the textiles are machine-made and some are handmade.
A series of photographs of the workshop of Alan Mueller in Luebeck portray the actual conditions of this textile work. Included in the exhibit is material for curtains, draperies, upholstery, dresses, coats and rugs. Woolens, cottons and silks are the materials. In most cases the products depend for their design not on the use of color as much as on the weave itself.

In another room there are some really exquisite laces, in addition to table linen. In still another room there is a collection of textile animals which can't fail to catch one's fancy, and there are also some porcelain articles and wall-hangings done by fishermen.

A penny social was held after the meeting of the Thimble club yesterday afternoon.

Shawsheen Club Entertains Guests

A large gathering of members and friends attended the annual Guest Night of the Shawsheen Village Woman's club Monday evening in Balmoral hall. Mrs. Albert N. Wade, president, welcomed the guests. The annual Mid-Winter meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held February 28th, at Hotel Bradford. The morning session will open at ten o'clock and a registration fee of 50c will be charged to defray the expenses. Senator Nye of North Dakota, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Investigation Committee, will be the outstanding speaker of the afternoon session. Another challenging speaker will be Cornelia Stratton Parker, author of "An American Idyll" and other well known books. Those wishing to attend are requested to notify Mrs. Albert N. Wade or Mrs. William W. Kurth. It is hoped that a good group will enjoy this opportunity.

The Dramatic Department of the Club met with Mrs. Joseph Mulvey this afternoon. Mrs. John M. Lynch, Chairman of the program committee introduced the entertainers, Miss Pearl Young, singer and pianist and Miss Ella Starrett, violin and Theresmin artist. The audience was particularly interested in the thersmin, an electrical instrument played by vibrations from the fingers and untouched by the player. Miss Starrett invited the audience to try their skill on the thersmin during the social hour and explained its construction and the method of playing.
A social hour was enjoyed and luncheon was served by the hostesses of the evening: Mrs. Clinton H. Stevens, chairman, assisted by Miss Mary Robinson, Mrs. Earl Rutter, Mrs. Edward Reilly, Mrs. Charles Sawyer, Mrs. Henry J. Simms, Mrs. Earl Sleeper, Mrs. Frederick C. Smith, Miss Ann Stone and Mrs. Nathaniel Stowers.

Phillips Academy Lecture

An explorer, an archaeologist, and a Pulitzer Prize winner—these are the accomplishments of Oliver La Farge, who will speak in the Meeting Room at Phillips Academy this evening at 8.15. His subject will be "The Rewards of Exploration," and from his own experiences he will analyze the reasons which lead men to go forth through jungles, deserts, high mountains, and difficult tribes, suffering pain, disease, and hardships, for no material gain. Mr. La Farge is the author of Laughing Boy, Sparks Fly Upward, and Long Pennant. There will be no charge for admission.

Christ Church Notes

Owner Must Be Sensible

If He Expects Wise Dog
If obedience is essential for the dog, to get it the owner must display good qualities, too, asserts a writer in the Washington Star.

The first of these is patience, and still more patience.

This is all the more necessary for the man or woman who is not by nature a born trainer. There are few of these, as stated; the average human being will not find training, either of self or others, easy, but will be helped by a conscious grasp of the theory and practice of training.

The second essential is determination. Call it perseverance, if you want to. Whatever one calls it, it is the same, and the need for it is thoroughly understood, especially with a stubborn dog.

The third need is kindness.

The animal nature in the human must never meet the animal nature of the dog, but must substitute for it that true kindness which does not permit anger, ire, cholera, impatience, to enter in.

Then there is a fourth quality, difficult to name, but comparatively easy to describe, in that it is simply the ability to give praise when due, and the bravery to give proof when deserved.

With man or beast, this is a rare quality, but in training the dog it is the true proof of the pudding. Like obedience itself, it pleases the dog, sets him up in his own esteem, and helps make the world a better place for him and all concerned.

Turn All Statures Toward Easter Island's Graves

In some long-ago era of bustling energy, Easter Islanders turned out stately by the ton. Using volcanic craters on the island as quarries, the people carved out heads and torsos—little fellows 3 feet high, big fellows 20, 30 feet, even one giant 70 feet tall. Both men and women were portrayed, writes Emily C. Davis, in the Washington Star.

They had a pattern for their art, and they stuck to it. The stone faces had to have long noses, disdainful mouths, jutting eyebrows.

In another quarry, workers ran a stone fat factory, hewing out a red-tinged stone for top hats to adorn the heads of gray stone giants. A red hat for a 30-foot giant would weigh half a ton.

When an image was finished, the workers slid it down the hillside, and then somehow pulled or pushed the statues—some weighed as much as 40 tons—to an appropriate site. All the faces were made to turn inland, toward the graves of Easter Island's dead.

Genius Inherited

The fact that geniuses rarely have sons that are geniuses tends to prove that it is inherited, because all theories of human development agree that the better the environment the more likely it is to bring out any person's abilities, and a genius would be more likely than any father not a genius to furnish a stimulating environment for his son, says a writer in the Detroit News. Since many geniuses rise in poor environment and the son in question has failed to become a genius even in this exceptional environment, it indicates that the father surely did not get his genius from his environment, whether good or bad, but must have got it from his heredity, since we know of no sources of genius other than heredity and environment, or else the two combined.

Presidential Succession

It was at the instance of Vice President Hendricks' death in November, 1885, that the Presidential succession act was created in 1888. This act provided an order of succession of the cabinet officers in the event of the removal, death, resignation or disability of President and Vice President. John Sherman was president of the senate pro tem at this time. It is not likely that he would have taken the President's place. Perhaps congress would have taken some action, or one of the political parties. This situation has never arisen and there is no specific provision in the Constitution or in law to cover the point.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Saar Basin

The Saar basin lies north of Lorraine, and contains about 738 square miles and 770,000 population (1926). Extensive coal fields occupy the middle of the valley between Saarlands to the northwest and the Saar river on the west. These mines, which came into German possession with the territory after the Franco-German war, produce annually more than 7,000,000 tons of high grade coal and employ 50,000 men.

Ethiotic Sense Defined

The sense of beauty, or the ethiotic sense, has been defined as the power for wise use and enjoyment of natural surroundings and the human body in the first place, and, in the second, a similar power in the work of human creation—a noble building, a great picture, a refined piece of handicraft, poetry and music.

Dolls

By J. T. BARBER
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

THAT half hour which was to change the course of Mr. Hoopla Kelley's life in the time-honored manner, began with the monotonous pulse of a thousand half hours wherein he leaned upon an elbow and surveyed speculatively the dust-grimed patrons of the Algonquin county fair.

Rosie de Veen, appraising him from the next booth, yielded to a wave of pretty confusion which she buried in a mixture of onions and mustard and sold to a man wearing a green blur.

"It's those dolls," she'd said many times. Mostly to herself, of course, because hardly anyone else would quite have understood.

Rosie de Veen was a statuesque sort of person, grand and beautiful. She would have been ashamed to admit her natural contempt for the tiny bright-eyed cherubs which occupied Mr. Kelley's "flash" in tempting array.

Naturally, too, as Mr. Kelley smiled offener at Rosie de Veen, this resentment extended itself to women. Rosie watched them alertly and without compromise. But it seemed that nothing could take Mr. Kelley's attention from his dolls. He examined them every morning, to check on the little velvet projections behind most of the doll stands which he had said, reminded him so much of real women on account they were teasers which wouldn't let the chumps throw the hoops all the way over, see?

"Life," Hoopla Kelley had remarked, "is finding a dame with a handicap you think you can handle. You got to know what to depend on."

In this vague way Rosie de Veen figured out that what he meant was that a man must know what sort of virtues a woman has so he won't have to spend a lot of time misplacing judgment in critical moments.

Consequently, she was conscious of a rising note in Mr. Hoopla Kelley's voice when his spiel poured its nascent cascade out upon a golden-brown man and a pink-and-white baby-faced girl.

"Hi-yah! hi-yah! Step right up, folks, and try your hand at the easy, simple liddle game of science and skill. Its the opportunity of a lifetime, folks. No risks, no messes. On'y a dime; tea cents. Hi-yah-hiyah! take home a doll, folks—"

At this point Rosie de Veen became acutely conscious of the pink-and-white customer.

Instantly alert Miss de Veen ignored scorching hamburgers to listen intently to Mr. Hoopla Kelley's spiel which became so persuasive that within the next twenty minutes the golden-brown man spent two dollars without result and went away still with the unearthly light of frustration in his eye.

But the pink-and-white girl, lengthening a half dollar into an unseasonably long try, seemed unwilling to admit defeat. There was a vague suggestion that she was determined to persist and handed Mr. Hoopla Kelley a ten-dollar bill he broke it with a cold professional avidity that was balm to Rosie de Veen's suspicious soul.

Then the pink-and-white woman—being a woman—changed her mind. After placing the small bills into her pocketbook, she looked uncertainly at the courteous Mr. Kelley and said that she thought she would rather not break the ten-dollar bill after all. Being an expert in matters of public confidence, Mr. Kelley promptly returned it to her.

"To tell you the truth," she said, smiling because she realized that she was putting the man to an awful lot of trouble, "I'd rather have those two fives you have there than the ten-dollar bill." Whereupon Hoopla Kelley promptly produced the two fives and took back the ten-dollar bill, seeming not to be concerned with the complications involved.

Not so the watchful Rosie de Veen. Miss de Veen had observed that opportunity had come to roost upon her battlegrounds. "Hey, Hoopla, wasn't there some change or something?"

It was pretty tactful but adequate. Mr. Kelley looked inquiringly at the girl and she burned. She reached into her pocketbook, pulled out her small fist and shoved a lump into Mr. Kelley's hand, which he dropped carelessly on the counter much to Miss de Veen's distress.

"Ain't you goin' to count it?" she asked, almost before she thought.

Mr. Kelley obeyed her suggestion almost wearily. He opened the roll and found it to contain nothing more than a dollar bill wrapped around a tiny blue handkerchief. But his further examination was interrupted by a sudden scraping of small, sharp heels in gravel and a wall of alarm from Rosie de Veen. He looked up to find Rosie in pursuit of the golden-haired one.

Miss de Veen returned in due course, bringing the pink-and-white creature triumphantly and left her with Mr. Kelley. Craftily she said nothing, but retired to her stand to fry hamburgers.

She was still at it when Mike "Pop-eye" Wells came around on his nightly checkup and halted her cordially.

"How come this Hoopla Kelley flash is closed up, Rosie?"

Miss de Veen grinned. "Kelley's gone hipped on his own racket."

"You mean he's sick?"

Rosie de Veen brushed a white fist across her eyes. "You don't get me, Pop-eye," she said, looking steadily at the hamburgers. "He's taken home a doll!"

Letters to Old Andover Resident Give Interesting Picture of Nineteenth Century Scotland

(Editor's Note)—The following story, containing many interesting glimpses of the life and thought of the little towns of Scotland in the middle nineteenth century, was sent to the Townsman by Katharine Jean Middleton of Madison, Wisconsin. It is based on some old letters, written from Port William and Brechin, Scotland, to Mrs. Margaret Middleton, a former resident of Brechin, who spent the last years of her life in Andover. The letters were given to Miss Middleton by her uncle, George Middleton, who was born and brought up in Andover.)

Scotland to America, 1847-1853

A short time ago there came to light a package of old letters written from Scotland between 1847 and 1853 to a widow of Brechin, who was then living in America. Not a great deal is known about her, but the fact that at the then not inconsiderable age of fifty-seven she was willing to cross the ocean to live with one or another of her sons, persisting in her voyage even after shipwreck off the coast of Ireland, suggests an adventurous spirit that age could not suppress. She was a woman of strong character, loved devotedly by family and friends, one of whom writes of her saying, "I have got ten shillings from William (Mr. Kelley) and think I will get another ten. It will be only half of what he was due; you; it will only amount to sixteen shillings in all after paying expenses. I had his effects ready to be exposed to public sale."

Having finished with business affairs, David proceeds to give his aunt the news. John Dove is coming one night to drink tea with him and his wife, Mary Ann is at school and doing fine; Helen has gone to Liverpool to keep a baker's shop, likes it very well and is in much better health than when at her sewing; Alexander has become a pupil teacher in the village school, bound for five years. One of their friends is struggling to support her child and a husband "who has wrecked his constitution by drinking and every other evil" and who has just been committed to the Paisley lunatic asylum. "Provisions of all kinds are getting cheaper. Meal has been as high as 30 per bushel. Had it not been for the great mass of Railway lines making in our neighborhood I do not know what our people would have done this winter."

He mentions the death of several acquaintances and comments, "Indeed God has been speaking very signally to us as a people, removing many from amongst us in these few months past and not a few almost without a moment's warning. O may we hear it as a voice saying to us Be ye also ready!" The congregation of his aunt's old church has just been greatly shocked by the sudden death of the minister. The Rev. James Goodwin is no more. He preached to his congregation Sabbath last to all human appearance with great energy and faithfulness and a quarter of an hour had scarcely elapsed when he fell from his pulpit and was called to worship at the Temple above. His cold remains to be consigned to the grave tomorrow. In the midst of life we are in Death."

David has been having troubles of his own in the form of severe headaches, which call for the prompt remark, "O may the fruit of all our afflictions be to the taking away of Sin."

A glimpse into the medicine of the middle nineteenth century is given in one of David's letters. He writes to his aged aunt, "I have called upon John Gilvie and conferred with him about getting his Receipt for curing the Jaundice, but he would not give it for less than twelve shillings, which I thought was too much and did not take until I get further word from you. I applied to an Ant of my friends who I know has the means of removing the complaint of Jaundice and is said to be the very same cure as John Gilvie's. You will get a Bottle of Pure Strong Ale and go and dig amongst the Earth for the largest red Tany worms. Put in a quantity of them into the Bottle amongst the Ale just as you take them out amongst the Earth for the Virtue of the Slubber that is upon the worms and at the same time you will get a quantity of Insects called Slaters with us and put them into the Bottle the same way and cork it up and let it set for a day or two. Of which take a Dram Glassful morning, midday and bedtime. I hope by the Blessing of God it will be useful to you."

Perhaps a dose of his own medicine is the cause of the rather gloomy conclusion to David's letter. "If I am spared, I will write you a long letter soon. So no more at present, but I remain your loving nephew, until Death."

Revolutionary Calendar of the French Republic

The revolutionary calendar was the calendar of the first French republic. It was substituted for the ordinary calendar by a decree of the national convention in 1793. The 22nd of September, 1792, the day from which the existence of the republic was reckoned, was the date of the new calendar. The year began at midnight of the day of the autumnal equinox, and was divided into twelve months of 30 days, with five additional days (sans-culottides) for festivals, and six in every fourth year. Each month was divided into three decades of ten days each, the week being abolished. The names of the months, and the approximate dates of their commencement, are as follows: Vendemiaire (vintage), September 22; Brumaire (fog), October 22; Frimaire (sleet), November 21; Nivose (snow), December 21; Pluiviose (rain), January 20; Ventose (wind), February 19; Germinal (seed), March 21; Floreal (blossom), April 20; Prairial (pasture), May 20; Messidor (harvest), June 19; Thermidor or Fervidor (heat), July 19, and Fructidor (fruit), August 18. The five regular sans-culottides were dedicated respectively to the Virtues, Genius, Labor, Opinion and Rewards. This calendar was abolished by Napoleon at the end of 1805.

Georgia's Natural Wonders

The seven natural wonders of the state of Georgia, according to a state librarian, include Amicolola Falls, in Dawson county, the highest natural waterfall in the state; Okfenokee swamp, near Waycross, Ga.; marble vein in Longswamp valley, in Pickens county; Warm Springs, in Meriwether county; Stone mountain, in DeKalb county; Tallulah river gorge, in Itabun county; Jekyll island forest, near Brunswick, Ga.

The White Squall

When a squall, or sudden fierce rush of wind, comes unaccompanied by any loss of light, it is known as a white squall, which is usually heralded by dark clouds and heavy rain. The white squall is the more dangerous of the two, as there is no warning of its coming, save the white foam it raises on the surface of the sea and a thin haze.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Numerous Varieties of Bothersome Cockroaches

While there are many varieties of cockroaches belonging to the same family, among which are the German and Australian, the American is the most common and widely distributed species in the corn belt, according to an authority in the Missouri Farmer.

Sports on the Hill

The crowning achievement of the past week in Phillips academy sports came last Saturday when the P. A. swimming team proved the pick of the field in Class A at the first annual Harvard Interscholastic swimming meet at Cambridge. Coach Duke's natators were well ahead of the nearest competitor, Huntington school. Exceter, however, was not entered in the meet. The Andover team scored in six finals.

The academy hockey team showed its potentialities Saturday when it defeated St. Mark's 2 to 1 at Southboro, thus breaking St. Mark's winning streak. Somerby Chase, a local boy, scored one of the Andover goals.

Askov of Bridgton academy was the only first place winner for the visitors in the track meet which Andover won easily 60-1-6 to 25-5-6 Saturday. Askov took first in the hurdles and in the 600. Donnelly proved himself a coming star when he took the 100 in 33-4-5 seconds, and turned in a speedy performance as anchor man on the Andover relay team which came within 3-5 of a second of equalling the cage record, despite the lack of competition.

The basketball team, which has a strange propensity for either winning or losing by the narrowest of margins, ran true to form Saturday by eking out a 36-32 victory from New Hampton. The game was nearing the finish with the score 33-32 for Andover when Chuck Kellogg scored three more points to ease the nerves of the Andover rooters and also to give him a 15-14 edge in a duel for scoring honors with Noble of Bridgton.

On Wednesday the academy five took New Hampshire fresh into camp 29-22. The P. A. second team started the game, and the freshmen rolled up a 10-0 score again them, but the first team inserted after the first ten minutes scored 29 points while the Wildcat freshmen were dropping in 22. Bill Moody, vice and tied with Chuck Kellogg for scoring honors.

State Commissioner Advocates Sales Tax

Henry F. Long, State Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, States Burden on Real Estate Must Be Reduced

A plea for the lessening of the taxation burden on real estate and a suggestion for the adoption of a sales tax were expressed by Henry F. Long, state commissioner of taxation and corporations at the meeting of the Andover Parent-Teacher association in the town hall Wednesday evening.

Commissioner Long felt that real estate should pay a portion of the costs of governmental activities, such as welfare, which have no definite benefit for property. Education and public safety and the like should be carried on with the real estate owner bearing the costs, he said, because they directly benefit the property-holder. Since 1929 the state's welfare costs have risen from $10,000,000 to $80,000,000, and real estate has had to bear this extra cost, much to the detriment of education and the other established governmental functions which real estate should support.

Taking Ford Training Course

Several Andover men are taking an intensive training course for men engaged in the sale of Ford cars in New England which has been inaugurated by the Ford Motor Company to educate salesmen on recent developments in the Automotive industry and to aid them in solving the automotive problems of the public. Special attention is being given to the many features in the 1935 V-8 which meet the current requirements of motorists everywhere.

Hundreds of salesmen in New England will be thoroughly schooled in the scientific presentation of the merits of the new Ford car and will have a better understanding of why the new Ford V-8 for 1935 is the most important Ford contribution to motoring since the introduction of the Ford V-8 engine. The new exclusive Ford development—the full-floating spring base which gives the ease, smoothness and comfort of a "front seat ride" even to back seat passengers will be covered completely in this salesman's training course, as well as other major improvements in the Ford V-8 for 1935.

Wife of Former Andover Man Popularizing Rhode Island Reds in Western Canada

The following news from the Melfort (Saskatchewan) Moon is of interest to Andover as George Howell was born in this town and is the son of John Howell of 28 Summer street and brother of Mrs. Thomas Dea of the same address, and Miss M. Ethel Howell of Camel road.

"Mrs. George Howell returned Monday evening from Regina after attending the combined annual meeting of the R.O.P. Poultry Breeders' Association, the Saskatchewan Poultry Association and the Saskatchewan Poultry Hatchery Association. Mrs. Howell states the meetings were well attended and the judging contests were particularly interesting. She was elected a director of the R.O.P. Association for the northern part of the Province. Mrs. Howell has the only R.O.P. flock of Rhode Island Reds in the Western Provinces, and ships foundation stock to all parts of Western Canada. The flock at present numbers over 100."

Mr. Howell went to Saskatchewan with his brother, Arthur, about 25 years ago and has made his home there ever since. When the Howell boys first went there, the place was just in its beginning, not having a name and they lived in improvised huts with lean-tos for their cattle. Now Melfort is a thriving town. The temperature in the winter, however, hasn't changed much in the last quarter century as the thermometer goes to 50 below frequently during the winter months. Mr. Howell is now a British subject.

LAST YEAR

AGAIN, INTRODUCTIONS

DEAR Mrs. Post: My son calls all young people, those newly met as well as old friends, by their first name always, and says that is the way they are introduced and he takes it for granted that he is expected to start using their first names immediately. Just how far is the use of first names carried without offense to propriety?

Answer: If by propriety you mean that approved by the young and modern, I should say that all our bright young people, within what he considers their own circle, discard Mr., Mrs. and Miss. And all up to sixty, who optimistically think they can be mistaken for twenty, follow suit. I am merely reporting—not recommending this practice—excepting among friends. The never relaxed Miss and Mister of the 90s went to the other extremes. Somewhere between the two would, I think, be admirable.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am planning to give a tea (at which my engagement will be announced) at the home of a new-poor society woman who has recently opened her large house and manages teas, lunches and dinners as a means of swelling a depleted income. I am having my invitations engraved but I am not sure how I am to tell people that the tea is not at my home. (2) Must I introduce my guests to this professional hostess, who is a cultured person but not a friend of mine at all? (3) In the newspaper account of the announcement party, must I explain where I had the tea?

Answer: Put the address of the tea room on the invitation. Then in the lower left corner engrave: R. S. V. P. 2 Park Place (your own address). (2) No. She is on this occasion a professional caterer. (3) Where a party is given is usually included. If you do not want to mention it, you can say in stead that Mrs. Jones of 2 Park Place gave a tea to announce the engagement of her daughter, etc. Or, if you are living alone, that Miss Jones, of 2 Park Place, gave a tea, etc.

Friday and Saturday, February 8 and 9, are Dollar Days in Lowell! To the shopper acquainted with the savings customarily offered on these semi-annual Dollar Days, it is unnecessary to give any further details of the shopping attractions for this week-end in that city. This week's Dollar Days, strangely enough, are unique through the rare values to be obtained. Because of the unusual demand made upon the stocks by the record breaking holiday season business of the members of the Merchants' Division of the Lowell Chamber
