THE ANDOVER TOWNSMAN

Published every Friday at the Press Building, Andover Mass., by the Andover Press... EMER J. GROVER, Managing Editor... TOWNSMAN Telephone 1324

An Unfair Charge

Once again the town of Andover has been notified by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company that there is no possibility of a five-cent fare being introduced between Andover square and Shawshen village.

The company bases its refusal to reduce the rate on the grounds that by so doing its income for the trip would be reduced. However, even granting this, there does seem to be a really justifiable argument for the lower fare in the fact that for a similar distance in town from Andover square to Porter road the fare is only five cents, and for a similar situation with similar distances in Danvers the fare is only five cents.

No one wants the street railway to lose money, but anyone with a sense of fairness can see that a person who rides a mile in one town or in one part of a town should not be forced to pay more or less than a person who rides one mile in another town or in another part of the same town. A mile in Danvers and a mile in Andover are both 5280 feet. The railway company, other conditions being equal, uses as much gasoline per mile in Danvers as it does in Andover, and it pays its help the same rate in Danvers as it does in Andover. In other words the value received by the passenger and the cost to the company is the same in both cases, and therefore the charge should be the same. No groceryman would be allowed to charge a person on Porter road ten cents for a loaf of bread and another person in Shawshen village twenty cents for the same loaf of bread. He wouldn't be able to sell the loaf of bread in Shawshen, and for the same reason the buses travel half-empty between the village and the square while persons walk rather than pay an unfair charge.

It's not the local street railway that is to blame for this discriminatory condition as much as the philosophy behind the old trolley car charges by which fares varied with the amount of traffic rather than with the actual value received by the passenger. The railroads have a certain rate per mile prescribed for them, and it would seem that the bus line schedules might well be put on as near a similar basis as possible.

Siftings

"Trolleys to Give Way to Buses in Lawrence," reads a Boston Herald headline. And the buses aren't giving way to anybody.

The number of pupils at the North school has been abbreviated of late. And if you abbreviate North school you have No School.

Say the selectmen: "What's the use of having a hearing unless there's something worthwhile to listen to?"

"If the veterans do get the bonus, their own grandchildren will pay it," says Ed Pointer in the Boston Globe. And if Hitler et al don't quiet down, the veterans' own children will be asking for a bonus.

Phillips Academy Lecture

One of the most romantic phases of American life which has passed away forever is that of the Yankee whaler. What these courageous men suffered and dared in pursuit of the whale, how they lived at sea and on shore will be the subject of Mr. Chester S. Howland's lecture at Phillips Academy this evening at 8:15. There will be no charge for admission. The lecture is illustrated with slides and moving pictures.

This Sober Town

Praise of Memorial Hall

Down in Dedham they have a Memorial hall which from a description that Atty. James P. Roberts, formerly of Andover, gives us resembles in use our town hall, housing the various town offices and the E. R. A. quarters. An attempt is being made to have the town remodel the building, and in an interesting article appearing in today's Dedham Transcript Atty. Roberts mentions our own Memorial hall.

The paragraph, entitled "Andover's Example," follows:

Memorial Hall, Dedham, and the residence of Mrs. Richard S. Whitney at 175 High street, are the only two buildings of note now in use here and retaining their Mansard roofs. They long continue! The Town of Andover, in Essex County, has a "Memorial Hall Library" but what a transformation! Its hall was built as a Civil War Memorial at about the same time the Dedham hall was constructed but—ten years ago—under the leadership of educators in Phillips Academy, the Andover Hall was reconstructed so that to-day, it is a building of dignity and beauty in the Town's Square. The settings and fittings of Dedham's marble tablets in the lower hallway, have always reminded me of a sort of "glorified hatterack," while Andover's are placed in a dignified, Colonial hall of glistening whiteness on the second floor of its Memorial.

Keep the Dionnes in Canada

The Townsman could never get a job in a maternity hospital. Last week on the back page there was a story of a baby show held at the Legion exposition, and from what a somewhat surprised mother told us this week, we had the babies shuffled around a little—something of a new deal, maybe. It seems that little Olive Dodge won the grand prize, while her cousin Marion Bennett won first in the infant class. Our information came to us somewhat garbled, however, with the result that Marion was said to have been the prize baby in 1934.

...arion wouldn't ordinarily have minded being called Miss 1934, but when the Townsman was read to her last week, she bawled lustily, and asked: "How could I be Miss 1934, when I wasn't even born last year when they had the exposition?" The only answer seems to be that we were out—Winchelling Winchell in "infanticipating."

A Local Organist Afield

Walter Howe, director of music at Abbot academy, was the subject of a very interesting article in a recent issue of the Worcester Telegram Gazette written by William Placé, Jr., on a concert at the Worcester auditorium. A portion of the article follows:

"The polyphonic beauty of a well-played organ in itself provides assurance of an hour of relaxation for any music lover, and when the mechanics of a fine instrument are at the disposal of a soloist who studiously portrays the compositional ideals in hand, without adherence to any self-imposed form, a program becomes enlightening. Often, the listening approach the impression that the organist approaches the instrument from one of two angles; either orchestrally or that he utilizes the console much as an artist employs palette and brush, for the fusion of color and blending of tint, but the experience Mr. Howe presents each number upon its face value, strictly as an organ solo and begins from there. He colors and tints with careful attention to phrase and nuance, and at the same time introduces his combinations of instrumental voicings that evidence a taste in musical craftsmanship, which comes only with the years."

Another Fatality

Another fatal accident! The third this year! So ran the thread of thought through our mind last Thursday noon as we left a particularly tempting-looking desert on the table to run down to the police station after having received a very cryptic message over the telephone. We had gone to the 'phone to ask the chief of police for permission to work part of the Press plant on the holiday, as required by law. We had called 390, and in answer to a "Hello" we had asked if the chief was there. The answer was "Yes, but clear the line for an emergency; we want a doctor." Naturally we obliged.

With our last fleeting look at the desert, we scurried down the stairs and out the door to cover what was either a very bad accident, a murder or a suicide. Since the days of Charlie Borah, Andover never saw anyone travel so fast as we did down Barnard street. Nearly bowling someone over as we pushed through the back door of the town hall, we coasted into the police station, where officer Dave Gillespie, strangely placid in view of the seriousness of the occasion, was sitting behind the desk.

"Where's the accident, Dave?" we shouted as loudly as we could through gasps of breath that had undergone a serious re-trenching process. "Accident?" queried the local motorcycle officer. "What accident?" "Wasn't that the accident?" we asked. "No today," Dave countered. "Well, what did the chief want a doctor for?" was our puzzled rejoinder.

"Oh, that was just a man who fainted," said Dave.

We had two desserts for supper last Thursday night.

Waiting for "Number, Please?"

We used to get all worked up if after having lifted the receiver of our phone off its hook, we had to wait any length of time for the operator to breathe her "Number, please?" over the wires. We don't any more. One day we happened to drop into a local grocery store about noontime when there were several persons patiently waiting for the clerks to take care of those who had entered first. Shortly after we had entered, in the door walked the chief operator of the local exchange and she too started to wait as patiently as we and the others were waiting.

We talked about the weather, each other's health and a conversation, when suddenly, looking at the persons waiting without a single complaint and then glancing at us, she said: "Isn't it funny that persons will wait patiently for service in a grocery store, but when they are called in to the telephone exchange can't give them instantaneous service?"

Is the Baptist Church Brick?

Without looking at it, can you remember whether your watch has Arabic or Roman numerals?

Last Thursday morning, shortly before the Townsman was going to press, we were obsessed by a sudden feeling of doubt as to whether the Baptist church was brick, a statement we had made when writing the previous week's questionnaire. We pass the church three or four times each day, but in spite of that we really weren't quite certain. So we took an emergency measure and called up the Chief of Police. He thought that when writing, but he wasn't any more sure of it than we were, and so he asked Dave Gillespie, who it turned out also shared our doubts.

Dave possesses a very inquisitive nature, which is of course a very laudable trait in a police officer; he ran out to the square and was back soon with the very interesting report that the base of the church was granite, the front wood and the rest of it brick. After we had breathed our sigh of relief mingled with a few words of thanks, Chief Dane told us of a little conversation he had with a lawyer after a court session one day. They were talking about the facility with which persons can forget details about things that they see every day, when the lawyer mentioned the best of the numerals on your watch. It's up to stomp the best of us; try it on your friends.

How Much Do YOU Know About Andover?

The Townsman's Weekly Questionnaire

"Who makes up those questionnaires in the Townsman?" an academy instructor asked us at the track meet last Saturday. After we had, with considerable apprehension pleaded guilty, he next put to us this embarrassing question: "Do you know the answers yourself?" We were more or less non-committal, but if he'll call up the young lady at the town house who obligingly went to all the bother of looking up in the town records the date when the town infirmary was built, he will receive a non-nominal answer.

We were in a grocery store this week when one of our subscribers came in to puzzle us with this question: "Is Dracut really one of the towns on the borders of Andover? The Merrimack river is between the two towns, we know." We looked in back of us and to the side, but there wasn't any way of escaping from the store; so we had to answer that question. We said that the actual boundary line runs down the middle of the river, that half the river bed is Andover, half is Dracut, and we run under the center of the stream the two towns clasp submerged hands. If you don't believe us, go down under and see. If anyone knows the answers to the following questions, will they please let us know by next Wednesday so that we can give the answers in next week's questionnaire.

1. Name three grade crossings on the main line of the Boston and Maine railroad in Andover. Also name three turnouts on the now abandoned street railway line between the square and the Lawrence line. (Two points for each of the three; twelve points in all.)

2. Who were the two presidents of the academy trustees who died within the last three years? Who was the prominent Andover citizen who preceded them as president, who was the headmaster under him, and what prominent town office did the two hold, one and the other? (Two points for each of five parts.)

3. Locate Park Revere hall, Lawrence Gas company power house, Andover Male Choir rooms, Harriett Beecher Stowe house, and Andover's main pumping station. (Two points each.)

4. Which precincts are the following streets in: Park (Tewksbury, Morton, Windsor, Stevens). (Two points each.)

5. What streets in town bear the same names as (a) a reptile; (b) a Massachusetts river; (c) a poet; (d) a post-war president of the United States? (Two points each.)

6. There are three numbered routes in Andover. What are the roads and numbers? Two points for each number and two for each road.

7. Give the names of the head doctor at Phillips academy, the night sergeant of the police department, the football coach at Pynchard high school, and the local postmaster. (Two points each.)

8. Give the location of the traffic lights and blinkers on Main street from the by-pass to the Lawrence line. (Two points each.)

9. Locate the following fire alarm boxes: 412, 54. What box would be rung in if Abbot academy were burning? The town infirmary? (Two points each.)

10. Who were the last men to run against town clerk George H. Winslow, fax collector William B. Cheever, town treasurer Thaxter

Request for Walter Scott's Latest Novel One of Many Unusual Requests at Library

It is high time that a portion of that extensive tribute accorded our multitudes of "unsung heroes" were switched to a new and equally meritorious candidate, that industrious changeling ministering to the hordes of information-seekers—the Librarian! School teachers have nothing on these patient souls when it comes to the heterogeneous batch of questions which are tendered to them daily for solution. No common fund of information is adequate for the problems they encounter. They must also be mind-readers and the master sleuth, when it comes to tracking down vague and obscure clues furnished by those with but a hazy idea of what they are seeking.

Requests have even been received for a book "that has a red cover on it" (red covers predominating in the library), or for one "with a girl named Paula in it," (these irrelevant characteristics being the sole means of identification). The idiosyncrasies of the reading public together with its whims and prejudices are not only tolerated but studied. A bit of research brought to light the following queer requests recently received at the Memorial Hall Library: "Where are the 'R's'?" "Any particular author?" "No, I like names beginning with 'R'." "Please—a book that hasn't anything about English people in it. I don't like the English." "A mystery story that 'hasn't any murders in it'." "A book that happens in New York—I went there once."

The other day someone startled the librarian by demanding a new novel by Sir Walter Scott, obviously unaware that the gentleman in question had left this earth some years before.

A stickler for detail is this individual, who, after asking for a "work by Shakespeare," a few minutes later complained loudly, "But this is a play... I wanted a work!"

The following miscellaneous assortment of information was desired by one person, providing plenty of opportunity to ponder the possible relationship between such dissociated topics as: "Who invaded England in 490, whose name begins with 'H'?" "What word beginning with 'a' means 'sharp mentality'?" "Any poem in which some line says something about 'tomorrow'?"

A request for a book called "The Effects of Secret Living," encountered blank faces, and a puzzled consultation ensued before it was discovered that "The Secret of Effective Living" was the title of the book really wanted.

Whether a book is to help put a tired business man to sleep or to aid a mother in bringing up her children, the librarian is ever concerned with getting the right book for the right person, and satisfying the public's taste in literature.

She knows the favorite author of this one, and the type of mystery liked best by another. She has aided in the construction of countless themes by her intimate knowledge of the sources of all sorts of information, and finds time to act as critic on the latest fiction, on the side. Her function is a manifold, and her capacity for service limitless.

"consequential things things biological things cosmological science and thought and feeling building or loving or stealing all that life gives or holds the mind of this woman enfolds this grammarian alert librarian expert Three cheers for our librarian!" B. B.

Tennis Season Opens at Balmoral Courts

In spite of unfavorable weather of the past few weeks the popular tennis courts at Shawshen have been resurfaced, and all necessary preparations have been completed that contribute to the enjoyment of the game under the best possible conditions. Increased activity among the players has made it possible to prepare for a team of five of the best players that will represent Shawshen in the best play against other clubs during the season. In accomplishing this, a ranking list will be made up, rating the players in an approximate manner from number 1 down. Each list will be prepared by the club challenging the man above him so that it virtually becomes continuous competition as winners or losers move up or down on the list in accordance to their actual ability.

Information and Rates

The customary season ticket will be issued which will entitle the holder to the privilege of playing on the courts at a club rate. This ticket is available to residents of Shawshen Village and vicinity, or to those employed locally. The classes of membership are as follows: Regular Season Ticket: $7.00 which entitles holder to play with other season ticket holders, one member of the family, or out of town guests.

Family Season Ticket: $12.00. This form of membership entitles holder and any members of the family, other season ticket holders, or out of town guests.

Out of Town Ticket: For those who reside too far away to conveniently play with local members, and who would be more likely to arrange for play on the courts with the acquaintances of their neighborhood. No definite rate can be set for this class of membership. Each case will be taken up individually by the management.

Special arrangement can be made for lockers and shower bath privileges, for Season members only—Apply to manager.

Scholar's Ticket: $2.00. Those who qualify under this class may play at the special rate, but cannot engage the courts after 5 P.M.

Regulations

Any of the above classes of membership may reserve by telephone or otherwise, six days in advance, and daily sheets for that purpose will always be available at the Spa. No member will be entitled to more than a total of five hours reservations during any six-day period. The management reserves the right to cancel reservations if players fail to appear twenty minutes after time of engagement.

Members playing with non-members are subject to half of the regular hourly fee except with occasional out-of-town guest.

Members' children under 14 may play with out charge mornings or afternoons up to 4 P. M. providing the courts are not engaged. Courts may not be reserved for children except by special request to the Spa.

These regulations are made for the purpose of insuring local members and players a fair amount of tennis. There is no idea of making arbitrary restrictions and it is expected that all will follow these regulations in a spirit of fair play.

The usual hourly rate will prevail for non-members. Courts may be engaged at 50 cents per hour, payable at the Spa. In case of rain or other prevailing weather conditions that render playing impossible, money will be refunded.

Stowe School Notes

Assembly Held

A very interesting entertainment put on by Mr. Hans Helms, "Wizard of the Voice" in the Stowe School hall, was the center of attraction on Tuesday morning. Mr. Helms, who was born in Berlin in 1903, related how he stumbled on his method of "Instrumental Singing," and how, for eight years, he worked to perfect this art. Among his selections were: "Slumber Boat" (a lullaby), "The Golden Wedding," a violin and trumpet solo. As a closing number, with the assistance of William Ferguson, he presented a short play, "The Chinaman and the Judge." In this the Chinese witness, impersonated by Hans Helms answered the questions of the judge William Ferguson, with the first line or so of a song.

PAYING ITS WAY

A widowed mother and her daughters had a telephone, among other household conveniences. Sharply reduced income compelled a cut in the household budget, however, and the telephone was scheduled to go.

One of the daughters—an expert comptometer operator—had registered at the school for such part-time work as might be available, and GAVE HER TELEPHONE NUMBER so she might be reached quickly if wanted. Result: Fifteen days' work during the ensuing month. The telephone stays, because, by this service alone, it has more than paid for itself.

Whether you can afford a telephone depends on its value to you. What it would cost you can be learned by calling a telephone business office. . . . (No charge for such a call.) New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

BUCHAN

John S. Buchan, 64, prominent in the plumbing business in Andover for thirty years died suddenly Tuesday afternoon while working in the garden at the rear of his home, 3 Lincoln street. Mr. Buchan had had heart trouble for the past few years.

A native Andover, Mr. Buchan had resided here all his life. His first position was in the old bleaching in Frye village. After serving four years as an apprentice in a plumbing shop in Haverhill, he entered the employ of William Forbes and Son in Lawrence, for whom he worked eleven years.

Thirty years ago with Joseph W. McNally Mr. Buchan bought out the plumbing business of E. C. Pike. The firm, now known as Buchan and McNally, with offices on Park street, one of the best-known plumbing firms in this vicinity.

Mr. Buchan was a charter member and past chancellor of Garfield lodge, 172, Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Buchan leaves besides his wife, a son, Norman, a chemist in Lowell, three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Power of Washington and Margaret and Betty Buchan of Andover; three brothers, Charles S. and Raymond Buchan of Andover and Donald Buchan of North Andover; and four sisters, Miss Annie Buchan, Mrs. Frederick A. Wilson of Smith of South Lawrence and Mrs. Clarence Legro of Danvers.

Funeral services were held this afternoon in West Parish cemetery chapel, and interment was in West Parish cemetery.

Rev. Dr. Frederick A. Wilson conducted the services. The bearers were: Edward and William Buchan, Joseph W. McNally, Arthur Jenkins, Joseph Myatt, and John Stark.

Red Star Days in Lowell

The seasonal co-operative selling event in Lowell stores so eagerly anticipated by the residents of the Greater Lowell Shopping area is being held to-day.

During these Red Star Days the retail merchants of Lowell will outdo their established reputation insofar as offering money-saving possibilities to their patrons is concerned. The backwardness of the weather, during the Spring season, has had a most slackening effect on the movement of seasonal merchandise, with the result that the heavy purchases of seasonal merchandise made in anticipation of a heavy Easter business were much greater than the demand warranted and now must be cleared over so that the incoming summer wearables and household requisites can be accommodated.

To accomplish this end, the merchants realize that there must be drastic action and have placed very enticing prices upon the stock that is to be moved. These establishments, affiliated with the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce, assure every patron that the merchandise displayed and on sale at the attractive closing-out prices of Red Star Days, will be seasonal, stylish and of unquestioned quality and manufacture. Everything shown in the windows and throughout each establishment will positively be regular merchandise regularly carried and not of the type ordinarily acquired for purely sales purposes.

Red Star Days will be the only associated selling event of the Spring season promoted by the members of the Merchants' Division and each store has made special preparations for this mammoth selling event. Lowell will be a shopping centre this week-end and it would be wise, providing you can conveniently do so, to shop there during the early part of the day when the stores will be less crowded and you can make your selections in a leisurely and comfortable manner.

To Start River Road Construction

Work on the River road reconstruction will start in a couple of weeks, Superintendent Charles T. Gilliard of the Board of Public Works stated yesterday. Twelve hundred feet is ready for stone now, and state engineers were working on plans for further reconstruction yesterday.

Plans for rebuilding Salem street have been drawn up. It is hoped that E. R. A. labor may be secured for part of this project, as well as for changing the water main on Florence street and for installing an extension on Chandler road. Contracts on the pipe supply have been awarded.

At the request of the school committee, portions of Salem street and Haggets pond road have been scraped, and it is hoped that this part of Salem street, all of North street and Chandler road, and a section of Haggets pond road will be hard-surfaced this year. The school committee made these requests because the school buses travel over the roads frequently.

Most speculators are engaged in trying to recoup their losses from previous speculations.

Hard Wooden Benches in Cells Only Furniture at New State Police Barracks

Barren barracks—that's what Corporal Arthur V. Ford and his State Police squad at the Reading barracks will soon be calling their new barracks at the bypass in Andover if a load of long-overdue furniture does not arrive in the near future.

Originally scheduled to have been ready for occupancy at the end of last September, the building still lacks the necessary furniture with the result that Corporal Ford still preaches a fine new Colonial style sub-station stands vacant on the Andover by-pass near the entrance to the camp of the 110th Co. C. C. C.

Delays encountered during the actual construction last Summer forced the postponing of the opening of the new barracks from September until the end of December. When the year ended, the building was still uninhabitable, both because of the lack of furniture and because of the lack of water supply.

Originally it had been planned to secure drinking water from wells to be constructed near the building, but this proved impractical. Dr. J. J. Daly, local E.R.A. administrator, was asked then to install a water extension from Route 28, South Main street, along Gould road to the by-pass.

An emergency job begun in the dead of winter, this project proved a difficult one because of the condition of the ground through which the ditch had to be dug. At one place frost was found 44 inches deep. The extension was completed some time ago.

The only furniture in the barracks to date is the hard wooden benches in the block of three cells located off the guard-room or sitting room. Other rooms on the first floor are the main office, the dining room and the kitchen.

A private stairway from the guard room leads to a very roomy basement garage where motorcycles and cruising cars will be kept.

On the second floor there are six double rooms and one single room with toilets and bath. The third-floor attic contains extra sleeping accommodations.
