Fire Badly Damages Academy Frat House

P. L. S. House on Old Campus Scene of Fire Monday Night—Firemen Called Back after Believing Blaze Completely Extinguished

A fire which unfortunately was not completely extinguished the first time the local fire department visited the scene caused damage estimated at between $6,000 and $6,500 at the P. L. S. fraternity house on the Old Campus at Phillips academy last Monday night. The first alarm came in at 8:59, and after an hour and forty minutes the "All Out" was sounded. A half hour later the alarm was sounded again, and the fire department this time found the house in flames again, causing extra damage of from $2500 to $3000.

The fraternity members had left the house at eight in accordance with school regulations, and shortly before nine a student in Williams hall annex noticed the reflection of the flames through the windows of the main lounge room on the first floor. He called the fire station, and Box 42 was sounded at 8:59.

When the department arrived, the room was a mass of flames. The firemen broke windows on the first floor to prevent a hot air explosion, and after some time Chief Charles F. Emerson ordered his forces to return to the station, believing the fire completely extinguished.

Special officer Herbert Lyle was left at the house, and shortly after everyone else had gone the officer saw some sparks and heard a crackling. He ran down to Williams hall and called the fire station. The Pierce brush fire truck was sent up with a few men, and when it rounded the corner of Phillips street, flames were licking at the eaves of the house, Edward Buchan jumped from the truck and sounded Box 42, which brought out the regular apparatus again at 11:10.

The fire had started up again in the same room, gone through the partition into a room on the southwest corner of the second floor, and then up into a blind attic. Smoke and flames were issuing from the eaves on the south side of the building. The fire department had to chop through the slate roof to get at the fire in the attic.

The fire was under control in about a half hour, but the apparatus remained on the scene until shortly before one.

The first fire partially ruined the lounge room, the hallway and the staircase, and the furniture. The damage to this fire was estimated at $3500. The second fire badly damaged the room on the second floor, charred the attic, and further damaged the inside of the house from smoke and water. The intense heat blistered the walls of the house where the fire did not reach.

Chief Emerson believes that a lighted cigarette left on a desk caused the blaze. At the first blaze Fireman William Ross sustained a bad cut on his hand which was treated by Dr. J. J. Daly.

The fraternity house was built five years ago, with the late John C. Angus playing a very important part in the planning of it.

Addison Curator Speaks at Capital

Charles H. Sawyer, director of the Addison Gallery of American Art at Phillips Academy, was the principal speaker at the 24th annual meeting of the College Art Association at Hotel Willard, Washington, Wednesday. Paul Sachs of the Harvard Art Museum at Harvard University was the chairman.

Mr. Sawyer spoke on "Museum Training from the Standpoint of the Director of a Preparatory School for Boys." He said:

"It is important that the museum executive should have a broad cultural background. The introduction of art into the preparatory school curriculum is comparatively recent, and it is apparent that for the present at least, art and the museum must win its place by first correlating its work with the accepted courses in history and literature.

"In addition, the absorption of young people nowadays in economic and scientific problems makes it necessary for the museum worker to be able to adjust his work to these apparently unrelated subjects as well.

"Scholarship is more important in the museum work of the secondary school than it is generally considered to be, a much more sympathetic knowledge of contemporary art in general and of American art in particular than most graduates now possess is advisable.

"The adolescent student is interested first in the products of his own environment, and a similar interest on the part of his instructor is essential in obtaining his attention.

"The museum executive may have to combine his museum duties with the teaching of drawing and painting, and numerous other smaller tasks not normally related to his subject."

Expect to Have Survey of Speed

A speed survey along Route 28 in Andover is soon to be made here by the Highway Traffic Research, an E. R. A. project, according to a letter received recently by J. Augustus Remington from Hubert M. Canning, Director and Chief Traffic Engineer. Mr. Remington, who asked at the town meeting that reflector signs be used on Route 28 to curb speeding, made the request after consulting the selectmen and Chief of Police. The correspondence follows:

May 10, 1935.
Mr. Hubert M. Canning, Director Highway Traffic Research, Commonwealth Pier, So. Boston, Mass.

In accordance with Mr. F. Tyler Carlton's suggestion, I am writing to inquire if you will kindly have your engineers make a survey and study of safe speeds on Route No. 28 within the town limits of the Town of Andover, and if possible have signs erected warning motorists regarding speed limits.

Eight people were killed by automobiles in Andover last year, and any cooperation you can extend will be gratefully appreciated. I can assure you.

It is obviously imperative that something must be done to stop this appalling loss of lives by automobiles in this small town. Very sincerely yours
J. AUGUSTUS REMINGTON

Mr. J. Augustus Remington The Aberdeen Andover, Mass.

Dear Mr. Remington: In reply to your letter of May 10th, I am asking our engineers at an early date to render a report to you concerning posting of speeds on Route No. 28, Andover.

"Thank you for the opportunity of serving you."
Yours very truly
HUBERT M. CANNING

The prizes for children from eight to twelve were won by Charlotte Eaton, first; Benjamin Cole, second; and Peter Arnold, third. Honorable mention was given to Madeline Grout.

Philip Toohy's pan was one considered for first prize in this class because of its splendid execution. The fact that the arrangement contained certain wild flowers which the Horticultural society is trying to protect gave the judges the erroneous impression that these flowers were picked in the wild. The committee learned after the judging, however that all the flowers were grown in the child's own yard.

Harry R. Dow, 3d, won first prize for his arrangement of flowers in a vase in the four to eight group. Second prize went to Marylon Lindsay and third to Maurice Curran, 3d. Wesley Rich won honorable mention. ## Railway Might Try Five-Cent Fare Here

Street Railway to Try Experiment in Another Community—If Successful, Will in All Probability Try It for Shawsheen Village

Junior High Pupils Win Commendation

Commendation cards have been given to the following pupils of Stowe School for excellent work in their major subjects:

Seventh grade pupils: Gloria Field, Barbara Gahn, Alda Grieco, Carol Holmehud, Elinor Houston, Dorothy Christie, Mary Coolidge, Ruth Cowen, Phyllis Campbell, Margaret Cargill, Thomas Dea, Barbara MacLellan, Dorothy Monroe, Priscilla Moss, George Nicoll, John Nunez, Ruth Porter, Warren Richardson, Edward Schultz, Jean MacLeish.

Eighth grade pupils: Donald Cole, Norman Eaton, Mildred Forsythe, Ethel Brierly, Marion Albers, Bernice Crockett, Ethel Chowbrrier, Mary Deyermont, Angie Dantos, Jean Thayer, Donald Thompson, Shirley Thompson, Mary Lin Murray and Mary Zecchini.

The possibility that Andover might in the near future have a five-cent fare experiment tried between Shawsheen village and Andover square was advanced Monday afternoon when a committee representing the local Service club interviewed Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway officials in Boston. The officials, after an informal discussion which brought out both sides of the question, stated that within a month a large-scale five-cent fare experiment is to be tried out in a large community for thirty days, and if that proves successful, "in all probability" a similar experiment will be tried here.

This is the first ray of hope for a five-cent fare here since the agitation began over a year ago. All previous requests, even after a special town meeting vote was passed overjoyingly in March, have met with flat refusal.

Albert J. Boardman, vice-president and general manager, and Fred A. Cummings, vice-president, were the railway representatives, and the Service club committee included Augustus P. Remington, chairman, Everett D. Burton and Elmer J. Grover.

Mr. Cummings told the committee that the railway would lose nearly $50 a week if the present passengers were to all pay five cents a trip. He stated that the officials did not believe that this amount could be made up in extra passengers. He told the group, however, that the coming five-cent fare experiment would have an important bearing on the future rate structure of the railway. When asked by Mr. Remington if he meant that if the other experiment were successful, the five-cent fare would in all probability be tried here, Mr. Cummings said he'd go even farther and say that even if the other experiment failed, the five-cent fare might still be tried here.

Seniors Successful in Difficult Play

An old Irish fairy tale of the eleventh century was the theme of "The Dragon" which was played by the Punched Senior play cast on last Friday evening.

The story is familiar, in different versions, to all; the princess being born under an unlucky star, to be devoured by a hideous dragon, when she reaches young womanhood, and being saved in the nick of time by a beautiful young prince disguised in some fashion.

John Haggerty as the King couldn't have been better. A fat, pompous monarch, who loved his vicinals, he was ruled by the Queen, a haughty dame, who was bound to have the princess wed so as she would be out from under foot.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory bridal satin, princess style, and fashioned with a circular train. Her veil of ivory tulle was attached to a cap of Rose Point lace which was worn by her mother on her wedding day.

The bride was born in Andover and she is a graduate of the Briggs-Allen school, Wheeler School and Pembroke School. Her father is a former superintendent of the Prospect Mills, and former assistant agent of the Wausau Mills at Providence.

Better Fire Protection

When a fire which was believed to have been extinguished blazes up again within a half hour after the fire department has left the scene, it might possibly be called an unfortunate mistake, but when the same thing happens twice within a few months' time, it must be a sign of carelessness. Only a few months ago the fire department left a fire in a store on Shawsheen road, only to be called back a short time later because the fire had not been completely extinguished. One mistake might be excusable, but when the same thing happens a second time as it did last Monday night at the P.L.S. house at Phillips academy, it makes one wonder if the record of the Andover fire department is not being lowered from that which they have built up in the last fifteen years.

The damage from the blaze which started up again Monday night is entirely inexcusable. The P.L.S. house in construction was fire-stopped, and after the fire department arrived the first time, there should have been no trouble in putting out the fire once and for all. Fire-stopping involves the insertion between the floors, above windows, etc., of a layer of thick wood, cement or metal, the purpose of which is to stop any vent and thus keep the fire in check until the department arrives. It does not stop fires from spreading indefinitely; it merely checks the spread for a time. Therefore, its usefulness depends entirely on an effective fire force. Lacking this, there is no use in going to the extra expense of taking this precaution in building.

There is nothing at all to be gained in leaving a fire a few minutes early. Monday night a special police officer was left at the house without any fire-fighting equipment whatsoever; a truck and a few firemen could have been left there. As it was, by the time the fire department returned to the scene the fire was going even more briskly than at first.

The town of Andover does not care to have its fire department try to establish any new record times for going to fires and getting back to the station. The town does want efficient fire protection; it wants fires extinguished in the shortest possible time, it wants them extinguished with care and respect for property—but it wants them completely and not partially extinguished. Fire authorities have long urged property-owners not to take any chances with the possibility of fire, and rightly; our local fire department must adopt a policy of not taking any more chances in completely extinguishing fires. It is better to spend a little more time on any job and have it well-done, than spend a little less time and have it half-done. It always involves more time, energy and expense in the long run.

There is no one who will deny that our fire department has in the past fifteen years established a really enviable record, and in all probability these past two mistakes constitute only a temporary lapse. It is hoped that the department will resume its previous effective work, so that once again Andover's residents may feel that their fire protection is as good as can be found anywhere.

Siftings

The latest is the W.P.A., which means Work Progress Administration. Is the Progress a fact, or just a hope?

Maybe we will get a five-cent fare after all. And now it can only get the five cents to try it out—.

The veterans who before the last presidential election did not know how President Roosevelt stood on the bonus know now—only it's too late to do anything about it.

Here's a suggestion that might allow us to pay off the bonus without inflation: merely lay a tax on all the telegrams sent to Washington asking that the bonus be paid.

Hitler should have realized that everybody would be against his thirteen points. Wilson tacked on the League of Nations just to make his fourteen instead of thirteen.

Praise for Andover
Mrs. John Cunningham, one of the judges of the Andover Garden club's flower show, knew in advance that the exhibits she would judge here would be worth seeing, for she had been chairman of the Boston Flower show at which the Andover club had an exhibit which attracted considerable attention. It wasn't only loyalty to Andover that made all the Andover people who visited the Boston show feel that the local exhibit should be given the major prize. A letter from Mrs. Cunningham to the local president, Mrs. Chamberlain, stated that the judges "seriously considered the Andover exhibit in deciding which club exhibit should win the Horticultural society medal. The choice was finally narrowed down to Cape Ann, Milton and Andover, and it was only after a two-hour discussion that the judges finally awarded the medal to Milton, with Cape Ann placing third to Andover.

Mrs. Samuel H. Bailey, Jr., was in charge of the local exhibit. She was assisted by Burt Newhall and Mr. Bailey, and she enjoyed the kind co-operation of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome W. Cross.

Public Safety vs. Public Safety

Said a local police officer the other night: "Well—they investigated the police department—? Probably some of our fiery orators will finish the sentence at the next town meeting.

Oh, for a "Candid Cameraman"

It wasn't the flames licking at the roof, it wasn't the smoke pouring out from the windows; it wasn't the sound of the siren; it wasn't the water being poured into the flames—not one of these things thrilled us half as much as the fraternal hug fire the other evening as the sight of some of the Hill's most dignified faculty members strolling around in haberdashery that was very very appropriate—for bedtime wear. One in particular whom the boys at the academy have dreaded for many years lacked much of his awe-inspiring appearance in a very patriotic blue bathrobe and pajamas which we are unable to describe even though the flames did their utmost to show them up. Others strolled around in sweat shirts and anything but formal attire.

The End of the Trail

Four teachers, all of whom retire this June, were the guests of honor at a tea held at the home of Mrs. Ralph N. C. Barnes last Sunday, and each one of them during the afternoon shared hands and talked with some member of the school committee who had once been a pupil of hers. We met Miss Dodge up there, and she wondered whether the little article we had about her a few weeks ago was praise or criticism. We told her it was all praise, and after saying that everyone who went to school with us was afraid of her, we "imagined that students still are." She agreed that they are, which makes it unanimous—a unanimity which makes for good English.

American Ideas of Hitler Entirely Distorted, Says Andover Girl

Tales of Nazi terrorism beneath the "mailed fist" of Hitler are sheer propaganda, according to Miss Claire Duemling of West Andover, returned recently from a year's study at Munich, Germany. "Garbled stories smeared with sensationalism are responsible for many popular misconceptions regarding conditions in Germany today," was her preface to a frank discussion which blasted many of the misstatements prevalent with regard to the German situation.

In spite of pronouncements to the contrary, German people as a whole are perfectly satisfied with the present regime, and approve wholeheartedly the policies of their dictator. "This idea she brought out repeatedly during the conversation.

The classes understand one another. All college students are required to attend a workers' camp in the summer. Here there is no distinction between wealth and poverty, and all students perform menial tasks. The boys do gardening, carpentering, and take care of the forests while the girls sew, cook, mend, and wash.

"A girl from a refined family, taken from a sheltered life and set to washing the clothes from the back of a sweating ditch digger will understand much better those who do this work regularly, than she would without the experience of doing it herself," comments Miss Duemling. "In other words, Hitler is trying to do away with the snobbish attitude adopted by college students, and make them realize that their position is a privileged one."

College Requirements Rigid Only the more serious type of student is allowed to go to college in the first place. Germany has more college students than she can make use of, with a corresponding shortage of carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, etc.

The immediate need of replacing the labor supply has raised college entrance requirements to eliminate all except those who show themselves worthy of an advanced education. Applicants must not only pass an intelligence test with a high rating, but they are also examined for character, personality, habits, ambition, etc. Students travel from city to city while studying, associating with internationally famous men, and seeing the practice as well as the theory of what they are learning.

"Germany is extremely interested in exchanging students from other countries in return for their own, for the purpose of studying each other's manners and customs," Miss Duemling went on. "It is the best way, perhaps the only way, to promote true internationalism and to prevent wars."

"Germany is not ready for internationalism in the broad sense," she said, regarding the policies of the Reich along this line. "She is not yet secure enough on her feet to actively encourage exporting and importing, and that is why she sometimes seems so very nationalistic in her relations with other countries."

Does Not Want War As far as war, she dismissed that much debated topic with a shrug.

"Germany is certainly not prepared for another war, and nothing is further from her desires, for the present at least. Her attitude on the armament question is accepted by many eminent students as the inevitable result of years spent under the thumb of the League of Nations, while it has become second nature for the newspapers to tag Hitler's name to the responsible end of the frequent minor conflicts staged in the arena of European politics."

Interesting information regarding the Storm Troops which one hears so much is that while their members wear uniforms and drill regularly, they are a political organization rather than military orders, and exist mainly to perpetuate the party idea, along the same idea as the Republicans and Democrats of this country.

Miss Duemling accounts for Hitler's achievement of his present position of power by his ability to act in a crisis without fear. "He is not a particularly impressive looking figure," she recalls, from seeing him at his frequent public appearances. "One might easily pass him by without looking twice."

Nor does he radiate tremendous power or display that seemingly endless vitality Hitler possesses. He is not in a uniform, however, and is straight and well built, with compelling eyes."

Miss Duemling designates him as one extremely interested in other people. He has a summer home near Munich, where he takes an occasional vacation, and forgets for the time being, the affairs of State. There, he is happiest just wandering about his grounds and gardens, preferably in the company of a small child.

B. B.

As a matter of fact, she went on, "Hitler's policies are not as extreme as they are printed. The goal of National Socialism is, roughly, to promote the advancement of the people as a whole, in the political, cultural, social, and financial sense. So far, all of Hitler's policies have been directed solely toward that end: to the German people, the Swastika is the symbol of a promised land."

Based on Economic Concepts There is nothing helter-skelter about the German government. Miss Duemling is emphatic on that point. Hitler has based his stupendous undertaking of remaking the State on economic concepts which are sound as well as advanced. He has bent every effort to achieve by education a nation of politically minded citizens, and his labors have been rewarded with the intelligent cooperation of his people. Rarely before, says Miss Duemling, has dictatorship stooped so low to reach the understanding of the man in the streets.

The Jugend is an organization for children in which they are educated to the Nazi point of view from the beginning. Political economy is emphasized in the German schools. Hitler wants statesmen and lawyers and judges trained to think in terms of and act in accordance with the ideals of National Socialism. This, in his opinion, is one step nearer the perfect State.

While not attempting to eradicate class, he does, however, strain every effort to have

Local Woman's Recipe Endorsed

Mrs. Herbert Lewis of 128 Lowell road, has just been awarded a Certificate of Recipe Endorsement by Better Homes and Gardens for her recipe, "Rhode Island Clam Chowder."

This certificate is given by Better Homes and Gardens only to distinguished recipes which pass its testing kitchen's tests for dependability, excellence of taste, and family usefulness.

Mrs. Lewis' endorsed recipe follows: RHODE ISLAND CLAM CHOWDER 1 pint of clams 1 cup diced carrots 1 quart strained 1 cup diced turnips 1 cup green beans 1 cup corn 1 cup green peas, 1 small can mushroom sauce 1 quart medium white sauce 1 cup diced celery 1 cup diced onion

Salt and pepper to taste Chop the clams coarsely and drain off the juice. Place the clam juice, strained tomatoes and vegetables in a deep heavy pot, cover and cook gently until the vegetables are tender. Add the chopped clams and mushrooms and continue cooking for 10 minutes. Add the white sauce and if milk or cream is used for the sauce stir in 1/16 teaspoon of soda to correct the acidity of the tomatoes and find that the chowder has an excellent flavor if the white sauce is made with a very generous amount of butter and boiling water in place of the milk. Heat to boiling and serve in deep bowls with crisp crackers. Serves 6 to 8.

Punchard Baseball Results

Punchard high's nine, giving woefully weak support to Charlie Hurley, lost to Methuen 7 to 1 last Friday. Hurley held Methuen to four hits, all in the first four innings, and he struck out ten. The local team took a three to one decision from the Chelmsford nine Tuesday, thus breaking the Chelmsford team's six-game winning streak. Hurley fanned eleven, walked one and allowed only six scattered hits. The local team scored another win at Manchester, Mass., Wednesday when it defeated Storey high 10 to 3. The local fielding showed considerable improvement. Platt pitched for Punchard, and while rather wild at times, he only allowed five hits and struck out seven.
