This Sober Town Chats About You and Us and the Other Folks Here in Andover

A Sergeant Becomes An Admiral

Sunday night late—almost midnight—there waddled in the pen and in individual in plain clothes, including sea-going sneakers. His face was weather-beaten—the weather-beaten that one finds after one day's exposure to the elements and not the long-time weather-beaten which would prompt you to call a man an old salt. This particular man was not an old salt, but anyone who had not heard of his experiences for the preceding twelve hours might have thought from the way he was walking that he was an old oak. When Sergeant Leonard Saunders cast anchor in the police station last Sunday night, he was in no condition to hop one-legged along a chalk line down the town hall corridor. He sat on the floor, his legs and arms in a straight line. No, the sergeant was not under the influence; rather he was under the weather, had been in fact since he had left Provincetown early Sunday morning in Selectman Howell Shepard's new boat for a jaunt on a sea that proved far from easy on the mind, the legs or the stomach. The sergeant had adjusted his legs to the swaying of the boat, but that swaying had stayed with him even on the ride up from Gloucester to the police station, with the result that when one of his legs touched the station floor his starboard sneaker would be groping around for a deck that at that particular time was no longer rising up to meet the leg. Our night ruler of the police desk had had a very eventful day with Shep, Gordon Coutts and Dr. Tommy Kyle. It was so eventful in fact that a broadcast went out over a radio station to the effect that the party was lost somewhere in the Atlantic, or maybe he'd better say on the Atlantic. They had been held up for hours by the fog in the Cape Cod canal along with the Savannah liners and other boats. It was tough waiting, but they found later that it was tougher not waiting. All they could do in the canal was look at the fish, thousands of them, said Len. The rest of this story however is all true. Finally they slipped out of the canal into the Atlantic. After leaving Provincetown it was not long before they found that a fog on the canal is not nearly so impenetrable as one on the ocean and also that fish in a canal are as plentiful as water in the deep. About the only thing they could see through the ultra-London atmosphere was the next wave, and before long they didn't bother to look for that; they knew that it was coming right along behind the one that had just nearly sent them all in for a good big drink of Neptune's nectar. Gordon Coutts proved a fish-bow-blower par excellence, while Shep, the only navigator of the group, stayed at the wheel for an eight-hour stretch, trying to find his horizontal destination by means of a compass and at the same time trying to avoid a vertical destination by means of charts which contained the soundings at points along the route. By vertical we mean of course the sea bottom; we do not refer to their ultimate vertical destination, since it is not up to us to state whether that is up or down. The sergeant's most vivid picture of the tragedy which seemed imminent any minute

Recommends Another Appropriation—$30,000

State P. W. A. Official Suggests Special Town Meeting Before September 15 to Increase School Building Appropriation

A special town meeting before September 15 to appropriate $30,000 extra for the new junior high school project is recommended in a letter received by the building committee this week from T. B. Parker, state P. W. A. engineer. The letter was received in answer to one from Frank H. Hardy, chairman of the building committee, who asked, for the committee, how much Mr. Parker thought would be necessary and how soon a town meeting should be held. On June 11 Mr. Parker wrote that he understood that unforeseen rock excavation would much more than eat up the small amount of the appropriation allowed for contingencies and he asked in what way the committee wished to proceed to secure more funds or to live within the original appropriation. On June 26 the building committee decided to ask for a special town meeting, and on June 27 Mr. Hardy wrote to Mr. Parker asking the above questions. Mr. Parker stated that the extra already needed was $15,000, but that on a project the size of Andover's another $15,000 should be set aside for contingencies. He said that he could not guarantee that an additional grant would be secured, but that an attempt to secure one could be made. The town recently received an unexpected additional grant of over $30,000 so that the new appropriation will not make the cost to the town over what was expected when the $98,000 additional was appropriated last winter. Mr. Parker's letter follows:

Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works
STATE ENGINEER
July 3, 1935

Frank H. Hardy, Chairman
Junior High School Bldg. Committee
Andover, Massachusetts
Dear Sir:

Re: Docket No. 5197
Project: Junior High School
Location: Andover, Mass.
We have your letter of June 27, 1935 concerning the fact that the cost of the above project is to overrun the appropriation by a considerable amount, partly due to unexpected rock excavation. From the special Progress Report, dated June 12, 1935, as prepared by Mr. P. R. Holt, your accountant, it is indicated that the amount of this overrun will exceed $15,000.

While it is true that after the foundation work is completed, extras of considerable amount may not be expected, we have found that for a project of this magnitude it is desirable to allow a certain amount for contingencies. If this project is to be completed as planned it is obvious that additional funds will be required and, of course, they will become available only as a result of an appropriation at a Town Meeting. We agree with you that Town Meetings held during the months of July and August are not satisfactory. However, we feel that if the Town is to appropriate additional funds the meeting should be held not later than September 15, 1935. We are reluctant to specify the amount of the additional appropriation but believe that it should not be less than $30,000. If you apply for this you would doubtless explain to the Town Meeting that all of the amount would not necessarily be spent but only such part as is absolutely necessary to produce the desired result.

Prior to issuing the call for the meeting, we recommend that you confer with one of the members of the State Emergency Finance Board, since the approval of this board is necessary before we could take any action on the additional expenditure. Frankly, we are inclined to think that they will look with favor upon your request but their official sanction must be secured. If a Town meeting should be held it is quite likely that some member would inquire as to whether or not additional grant could be secured based on the extra appropriation. We are not in a position to guarantee that the grant would be forthcoming but would be glad to forward your request to the Federal Administrator for an increase in the amount of grant already approved. Yours very truly,
T. B. PARKER

State Supervisor of Billboards Is Powerless to Act

The question as to whether or not the much-disputed billboard in Shawheen square will have to be torn down now remains in the hands of the Board of Public Works at Boston. R. L. Devine, supervisor of outdoor advertising, stated in a letter to the selectmen this week. Mr. Devine in his letter censured the method of outdoor advertising supervision now existing in Massachusetts where the supervisor is under the control of the Department of Public Works. A bill to have an independent supervisor failed of passage in the legislature this week. The selectmen the first of the month sent a letter to the supervisor "strenuously objecting" to the sign in Shawheen village. The selectmen's letter to Mr. Devine follows: "This is to inform you, regarding application No. 20853, copy of which is acknowledged, the Town of Andover represented by this Board strenuously object to the sign in Shawheen Village facing Main street between Balmoral and Haverhill streets being allowed to remain in that location. "As has previously been stated, many complaints have been registered in this office and it is disappointing to this Board that you have not carried out or enforced your order for removal. "We feel that this should first be accomplished, even before the acceptance of application for permit." The letter in answer from Mr. Devine follows: "We have recorded the Town of Andover's objection to the sign in Shawheen Village erected by the Andover Shawheen Realty Company. I am sorry that the manner in which this matter is being handled is disappointing to your Board. This is necessary, however, because of the present organization of the Outdoor Advertising Division. No responsibility attaches to the Supervisor; he acts solely as an agent for the Board of Public Works who is fully responsible for his every action. For this reason and because of the technical question involved as to the legality of the above sign, I submitted the matter to the Board, and it was their suggestion that the Realty company submit an application and that it be acted upon in the usual manner. Since the location applied for has been disapproved by the Town of Andover, this means that the Board will view the location and determine whether the sign conforms with the Massachusetts law and Rules and Regulations made thereunder. If not a permit will be refused and the sign taken down, unless it is found that it comes within one of the exemptions in the law and regulations, by provision of which signs are erected for certain purposes and not within the jurisdiction of the department. Very truly yours,
R. L. DEVINE
Supervisor of Outdoor Advertising

Death Removes Oldest Resident

The family included three children, four grandchildren, four great grandchildren and one great, great grandchild. Mrs. Davis had always taken great interest in the affairs of the South church, of which she was a member. Despite her advanced age, she remained cheerful and active, and always welcomed the neighbors who dropped in frequently to see her. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Ida M. Wilson, pastor emeritus of the Free church and Rev. Frederic B. Noss, pastor of the South Congregational church. Interment was in the Tewksbury cemetery. Andover Lady Describes Hearing Aids as Evicted at the Ohio Convention

The remarkable advances made in hearing aids for the hard of hearing in the past few years were demonstrated recently at the annual convention of The American Society for the Hard of Hearing held at Cincinnati. One of those present at that meeting was Miss Elizabeth F. Swift of Central street, and she has written the following interesting account. The first evening of the conference was devoted to a Memorial to Dr. Wendell C. Phillips, the Founder sixteen years ago who died last November. A very beautiful tribute was given by Dr. Austin Hayden of Chicago who studied under Dr. Phillips. A String Orchestra played several of his favorite selections, followed by the reading of Scientific papers. During the year more time was given to the study of children of pre school age. Each of the daily programs was remarkably varied although all touched the subject at hand. Different groups met at luncheon in private dining rooms, as Social Workers, Editors, Teachers and others, after which their particular problems were discussed. One of the choicest extras was a Travel Talk on Old Vienna by Mrs. Robert C. Morris given at 7:30 in the morning with a goodly number present. Handicapped since three years of age she is well known as a Shakespeare Lecturer and has unusual power as a speaker. Besides the work and pleasure of the day, the Cincinnati League planned delightful programs of recreation for us which would

A Triple Loss to the Town

Death has played an important role in the town of Andover during the past two weeks. Three persons, one of them hardly on the threshold of life and another our oldest resident, have passed on, leaving behind grief-stricken families and a sorrowing town.

Two weeks ago tomorrow morning, Arnold Bodwell, son of a member of the Board of Public Works, died suddenly after an automobile accident in New Hampshire. A robust, healthy young man in the twenties, his whole life lay before him, a life on which he had started out with singular promise.

Not so well known in town as his son, the superintendent of the Board of Public Works, Stephen Gilliard nevertheless was greatly respected by those who knew him. He was always keenly interested in town affairs, and although he took no direct part in them, his opinions were always listened to carefully by the town authorities.

Sunday night our oldest resident, Mrs. Rhoda Davis of Salem street, passed away. Ninety-nine last February, she was well on her way to reach the century mark when injuries resulting from a fall hastened her death.

The Circumstances of Pomp

Last winter an automobile bearing the number plate S-1 bumped down a rough woodland road to the local C.C.C. camp. The car was slightly late, for two reasons: (1) it was in the midst of a snowstorm; and (2) being in the midst of a snowstorm, it was impossible to have a motorcycle escort to rush ahead.

Siftings

Now it is claimed that the interim zoning act is unconstitutional which puts the L.Z.A. in the same class with the N.R.A.

The American Woolen again pays the highest Andover tax. Their big bill probably hurts them less than our little bill hurts us.

One local policeman will probably do all his fishing from a rowboat on Haggets pond for a while.

One thing about Mussolini: he certainly has put Ethiopia on the map. Now if he'll only refrain from wiping it off the map.

They used to say "They never come back." That tennis match at Wimbledon proved that "Where there's a Will, there's a way."

They've painted stripes on Main street where you're allowed to park, and stripes where you're not allowed to park. Now "if you can keep your head about you..."

Wedding

FRANCIS-GREITZER A wedding of local interest took place in Brooklyn, New York, on Sunday, June 30, when Miss Yetta L. Greitzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greitzer of Brooklyn, was united in marriage with Israel Irving Francis, son of Mrs. Rose Francis of 52 Summer street, at the home of the bride's parents.

The couple are enjoying a wedding trip through New England and they stopped in town this week. They will make their home in Brooklyn.

Mr. Francis, a graduate of the local schools, is personal secretary to the owner of a large monthly publication.

Drill Team Trip Planned

The Clan auxiliary drill team will go on a trip to Revere beach Saturday, July 20.

Two years ago the meeting place was Chicago and that made it possible to have Miss Jane Adams as the chief speaker at our banquet. I will quote her reaction on just one evening's attendance. At Hull House she was telling of the meeting at the Lake Shore Athletic Club the evening before:

"It was the culmination of my experience. I have never seen anything that so inspired me! There were hundreds of people in that room, all of them hard of hearing, and they had phones on their heads, and they could hear!"

"It was a revelation of Heaven itself to me. I could scarcely speak to them, I was almost overcome by my emotions."

Those of us who had the one hearing experience in public during the year know she did not exaggerate. E. F. SWIFT

Bitten By Dog

Marilyn Addis, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Addis of 13 Florence street, had to have four stitches taken about her scalp and over her right eye Monday night after being attacked by a dog at a roadside stand in Londonderry, New Hampshire. Chief of police William Smith of Londonderry has the dog under surveillance to see if there are any symptoms of rabies.

Dr. William Wilson of Derry treated the youngster.

to clear the way for the Governor's car. The party arrived quite safe, and there were no complaints because the Governor was late. Most important of all, however, the state police had just as many members living when the Governor arrived home that night as it did when he left.

Spring came, and the state police took their motorcycles out of storage again. Since then the Governor has been on time at pretty nearly all his public appearances, and he certainly has attracted attention as he tore through towns on his way to give the public the privilege of seeing him—and, incidentally of course, giving him the possibility of obtaining more votes next time. Of course, one state police officer has been killed and another nearly killed in escorting the Governor, but what does that matter? His Excellency did attract attention.

Last November the people of this Commonwealth elected James Michael Curley Governor. What he seems to have failed to grasp since then is that the people chose him for a job and not for a pageant. The Governorship of Massachusetts is not an honorary position such as those of the monarchs of Europe. It does not exist merely for show; its occupant is supposed to carry out the duties of the office and not to spend most of his time running around so that people will see him.

Since the first of January the conduct of our Governor has been nothing of which the Commonwealth can be proud. He started off paying up his political debts by giving his followers any plans he might have. In that he had a big debt to pay the plums didn't go around. So he had to fire a good many of the state officials, and against those who wouldn't be fired, he lodged various complaints. Most of his time since then has been spent in running back and forth to Washington in a supposed endeavor to tell the Federal Government what Massachusetts wants in the way of funds. He hasn't received any of the funds yet, but he did put on a great show.

The pomp with which our Governor has travelled around the state the voters could pass aside as only a childish desire on the part of a state official for a way in which to draw attention to himself, were it not for the fact that it has meant loss of life, needlessly so. It is hoped that another serious accident will not be necessary to make the governor realize that all the pomp in the world isn't worth a single life. He should give up his motorcycle escorts, and hereafter travel around with only the silk hat, the S-1 and the self-inaugurated exclusive use of the state flag to make himself conspicuous.

How Our Readers Feel

To the Editor of the Townsman: The editorial in the Townsman of June 28th deserves our commendation and appreciation.

Thanks also are due the selectmen for their restrictions on the sale of fireworks, and the policemen for their thoughtfulness in regard to noises near homes where there is illness.

In the editorial of July 5th the writer, in considering the interests of our local business men, suggests the state legislature take action "before another Independence Day rolls around."

Such action should bring to each city and town a satisfactory solution to the problem. H. M. C.

Describes Hearing Aids at Ohio Convention

(Continued from page 1) make us aware of the beauties of "The Queen City of the West." Our eight-day trip ended with supper at Ault Park, a superlatively beautiful park. Then there was an hour's sail on the large steamer down the Ohio river to the recreation island where we spent a long evening. We also paid a visit to the Taft Museum given with the lovely house of Mr. Charles Taft to the city. Another day we saw the Cincinnati Art Museum and Rookwood Pottery with its charming vases and other work.

The convention was greatly encouraged by the announcement of the Kiwanis that they had taken work for the hard of hearing as their major objective. On the last evening the banquet was held with Mayor Wilson as toastmaster who introduced Rabbi Heller and other speakers. After the award of trophies a beautiful ballet in rare Chinese costumes with oriental dances was given to the members and invited guests.

Our new president was announced, Dr. Frederick N. Sperry of the Yale University Medical School. He has long worked for those with hearing defects and the Society is most fortunate in his acceptance.

Two years ago the meeting place was Chicago and that made it possible to have Miss Jane Adams as the chief speaker at our banquet. I will quote her reaction on just one evening's attendance. At Hull House she was telling of the meeting at the Lake Shore Athletic Club the evening before:

"It was a revelation of Heaven itself to me. I could scarcely speak to them, I was almost overcome by my emotions."

Those of us who had the one hearing experience in public during the year know she did not exaggerate. E. F. SWIFT

But then we started thinking (after all these years!) Why should it take columns to define "superior?" Why would it be hard to give a definition which would offend neither the school committee member who had used the word or the doubting Thomas who had written the communication? We've been thinking about it off and on ever since, and now we have a general idea of just what we want to say, and here it is:

"superior" (pronounced "supe") as in the first course of a meal; "supe" as in Lake Erie; "or" as in "hoss." a. (derived from Latin word meaning "pretty good, but not quite as good as Caesar thought he was")—pertaining to an indefinable something, which is composed of certain intangible qualities, the component parts of which are given varying values by certain persons, and which therefore may mean one thing to one person, and another thing to another.

Actions of Pedestrians Resulting in Deaths From Automobile Mishaps

Crossing in middle of block and against signals—34%

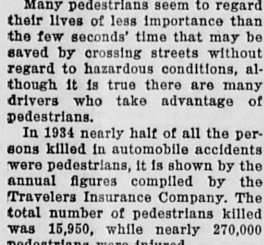

Children playing in street—11%

Walking along road—17%

Coming from behind car—9%

Miscellaneous—29%

Many pedestrians seem to regard their lives of less importance than the few seconds' time that may be saved by crossing streets without regard to hazardous conditions, although it is true there are many drivers who take advantage of pedestrians.

In 1934 nearly half of all the persons killed in automobile accidents were pedestrians. It is shown by the annual figures compiled by the Travelers Insurance Company. The total number of pedestrians killed was 15,950, while nearly 270,000 pedestrians were injured.

Five out of every eight pedestrians killed, it is shown, were involved in accidents while crossing streets in the middle of the block, crossing intersections against signals or diagonally, darting out into streets from behind parked cars, or while walking along rural highways.

It has been pointed out that pedestrians run across streets in the middle of the block or against signals because many feel that little if any more protection is given them at properly designated crosswalks or when they wait for signals. Many pedestrians know that it is dangerous to walk along rural highways, but since paths or walks have not been provided, the question often is raised, "what else can pedestrians do along rural highways?" Of course it is good advice to walk facing traffic.

Pedestrians may well pause to consider the fact that in 1934 the rate of death per pedestrian accident was 45 per cent worse crossing in the middle of the block than at intersections, and was 74 per cent worse crossing against signals than with signals. At the same time, however, the driver is warned to "be tolerant with the pedestrian, since the latter's faults are not crimes punishable by death."

Local Girl Weds Wisconsin Minister

Christ Church was a most appropriate setting for a very charming wedding on Saturday afternoon, July 6, when Daisy Anne Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stevens of 121 Summer street was united in marriage with Rev. John Garside Hilton, rector of Grace church, Menomonie, Wisconsin, and son of Jos Hilton of 188 North Main street, this town.

The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Charles W. Henry, rector of the church, was at four o'clock, and long before that time the edifice was filled with relatives and friends of the bride and groom, who listened to a program of organ music played by John D. Newall 3rd, church organist.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party moved up the aisle at the appointed hour, the bride escorted by her father, who gave her away. They were met by the groom and his best man at the chancel. Vows were exchanged before the altar beautifully decorated with garden flowers, and the procession moved from the church while Mendelssohn's wedding march was being played.

A reception was held in the parish house for relatives and especially invited guests. The bride was beautifully gowned in white tulle, with satin cut on train with a tulle veil, coronet style, covering her head. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Emma Stevens, sister of the bride was maid of honor and she wore peach mouseline de soie with matching accessories and carried talismans roses and blue delphinium. Miss Elizabeth and Miss Bertha Hilton, sisters of the groom were bridesmaids, the former wearing lilac mouseline de soie with matching accessories and carrying yellow roses and orchid sweet peas and the latter wearing a yellow gown with corresponding flowers. Harry Hilton was best man for his brother and the ushers were Herman Hilton, Douglas Richardson, J. Henry Long of Melrose and Thomas Stevenson of Boston. Mrs. Stevens, the mother of the bride, was dressed in lilac printed chiffon and had a corsage of gardenias and sweet peas. Other lovely gowns in the assemblage made the affair one of the most colorful and beautiful events of the season.

After a brief wedding trip, Rev. and Mrs. Hilton will make their home in Menomonie, Wisconsin, where Mr. Hilton has been rector of Grace Church for about a year. The bride is a graduate of Andover public schools and Puncard high school in the class of 1927. She has been employed since that time in the office of the Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance company. A member of Christ church, she has been very active in the church, Sunday school, choir and Girls' Friendly society.

Academy to Occupy New Dorm in Fall

Phillips academy's new dormitory, Rockwell house, is not just another dormitory; it is the reason that headmaster Dr. Claude M. Fuess was able to declare at the annual alumni meeting in the cage a few weeks ago that "no school in the United States is better equipped at this moment than we are to take care of the boy of 13 or 14." It also marks the passing of the private rooming houses on the border of the campus. Hereafter every student will live in a house owned by the academy and proctored by academy instructors.

Two of the instructors, Grenville Benedict and Roger Higgins, have already moved into the new dormitory. Their quarters occupy the entire first floor, and John B. Hawes will have quarters on the second floor. On the two upper floors are forty-four single rooms, of approximately the same size and type. The corridors are well-lighted and spacious and have the advantage of being easily proctored. In the basement is a large common room, equipped with radio, pingpong and pool tables, and other facilities for indoor recreation.

With Williams Hall and Junior house (Williams Hall annex) Rockwell house will supply accommodations for virtually the entire junior class. In these buildings the boys will be under careful supervision, special restrictions and a carefully regulated routine. Rockwell house will be in general house of the older and larger members of the junior class.

The passing of the old rooming houses will bring all the students under supervision and control heretofore. The Phillips Alumni Bulletin, in commenting on this change, says: "This change is, from any point of view, an improvement. The boarding house of the 1880's may possibly have fostered independence and rugged individualism and left its rich deposit of memories, but it was also a perennial source of annoyance to the administration, and it denizens, only too often a law unto themselves, frequently idled along the primrose path unhampered by any restraining hand. The policy now in operation will place upon the housemaster full responsibility for every boy under his jurisdiction; and no undergraduate will be beyond the reach of the system. The marked increase in the size of the faculty during the past two years provides the personnel sufficient for carrying out the plan.

Rockwell house will complete the quadrangle on the west side of Main street, composed of Bishop, Adams, Taylor, Johnson and Bancroft halls. It is probably the last building to be erected on this side of the street.

The Phillips Bulletin also included the following comment on the care of the younger children at the academy:

"Rockwell House is a deliberate and thorough attempt to justify the claim that Phillips Academy to-day takes excellent care of small boys from twelve to fourteen. We still have no intention of coddling or pampering these youngsters. They are still encouraged, in the good old-fashioned way, to display self-reliance, to assume responsibility, and to manage their own affairs. Andover does not propose to become a nursery. On the other hand, it does intend to place a sympathetic newcomer in a sympathetic environment, among people who are interested in his problems and concerned about his future, and to whom he may go for counsel without embarrassment or shame. Rockwell House is a further extension of the doctrine that Andover is a friendly place, where teachers and pupils are working together towards a common end."
