Jumping the Gun

If the fellow who invented this noiseless starting for automobiles had done the same thing for races, the two twin-looking girls sitting in the balcony at the Case Memorial race last Saturday would have had a much more peaceful afternoon.

We thought that they were twins, but although they looked just alike, dressed just alike and acted just alike, they fell short of twinning in the most important point—their element. We're not very good at guessing the age of members of the fair sex, especially when they're about the age of these two youngsters, but we should say they were about six and seven.

They chose a seat in No-Woman's Land just above where Monte Peck shoots off the platform to start most of the races. They weren't prepared for the bark of the gun, with the result that while they didn't jump the gun, the gun made them jump. Up into the air they went; Aramith was the high jumper later but unofficially these two youngsters established a new cage record.

When Chief Dan went to investigate the station fire Monday, according to his testimony in court, he saw Downs standing near the post office watching them and then later walk away. Mr. Hesse testified that he saw Downs and two other boys go through the station after he had found the burned papers. Testimony was also introduced to the effect that Downs had been drinking.

Gatekeeper-elect Roger Lewis and Executive Committee-elect J. Harry Playdon were unable to be present and will be elected at a later date. Mr. Mowry was assisted in the installing ceremonies by Mrs. Mowry, marshal, Miss Mowry, emblem bearer and soloist; Mrs. Parker, regalia bearer; Mrs. Hill, chaplain and Mr. Stickney, pianist. A turkey supper was served at seven o'clock by the first third, with Miss Mabel Mowry as chairman.

How Firm a Foundation

We'd often heard of stores with so-called bargain basements, but it wasn't until last Monday that we found a store that had real bargains. We dropped into the Bon Marche store in Lowell on Monday morning. In case you don't know the Bon Marche, it's a large store comparable to the big Boston stores.

League to Discuss School Questions

Meeting Time Changed to 3:30
Tuesday to Allow Teachers to Attend

The attention of those planning to attend the next meeting of the "School of Town Affairs," sponsored by the Andover League of Women Voters, is drawn to the fact that the meeting will be held at 3:30, instead of at the usual time, on Tuesday afternoon at the November Club House. The subject for discussion is "Wise Spending for Schools."

The change of time is planned so that the teachers in the public schools may be able to come to this meeting.

Mr. Harold G. Rafion has been conducting a study group during the last two months on matters dealing with the school budget for next year, recreational facilities in the public schools, the curriculum, the requirements for teachers and other facts pertaining to the school situation. The findings of this study group will be presented in the form of a round table discussion with about twelve women, including Miss Catherine Barrett, Miss Reta Atkinson and Miss Clara Putnam of the school staff, taking part. At the close of the meeting, a committee will serve tea with Mrs. Ralph Hadley in charge.

This group of meetings, devoted to a discussion of town affairs, is being conducted in order to familiarize the women of the town with facts concerning local government and to provide the women voters with a basis for more intelligent voting on the articles in the Town Warrant.

Strike Holds Up Work Three Days

Work on the new junior high school project was underway again Wednesday morning after a lay-off of three or four days caused by a strike called by union men last Friday morning. The dispute arose over the employment of the Sprayo-flake company, subcontractors handling the roofing insulation work, of two non-union men.

The state department of labor was instrumental Tuesday afternoon in sending back all the union men to work and laying off temporarily at least the two non-union men. A conference between the opposing interests was held Wednesday afternoon, the agreement being that if no settlement could be reached by this afternoon the matter would be submitted to a board of arbitration.

The walk-out came last Friday morning when 42 workers quit work, leaving one laborer and the two Sprayo-flake men alone on the job. A long tie-up seemed inevitable, because both sides were not willing to concede an inch.

The union claim was that the insulating people should hire a union engineer. A compressor was being used on the job, and the engineer's local wanted an engineer to be used to run it. Daniel J. Lavery, representative of the Sprayo-flake company, declared the only use he would have of an engineer would be to start the compressor in the morning and stop it at night, since it ran by itself otherwise. This would be an extra expense which the firm could not stand, he said. He declared that the job, a gummer who sprayed the insulating material under the roof, and another man who cleaned up the floor below.

It was a six-weeks job, and Contractor O'Connor wanted this work done ahead of some other, so that it was not desirable to stop the insulating work and start the other again.

Varied Program Pleases Audience

A discouraging downpour diminished the size but not the enthusiasm of the audience at the second concert of the Andover Civic Artist Course, presented Wednesday evening at Andover Town Hall.

The artists were Edna Merritt, contralto; Walter Smith, trumpet; Ludwig Juht, contra-bass; Kathryn Whitfield Ford, accompanist. The program was as follows: Trumpet, "The Yankee Doodle"; Rogers, "Carnival of Venice" by Staigers, "The Fatherland" by Hartmann, and "Inflammation" (Stabat Mater) by Rossini; Contralto, "Amour viens aider" from Samson et Dalila by Saint-Saens, "Life" by Curan, "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Dvorak, "Sleepy Hollow Tune" by Koutitz and "A Piper" by Michael Head; Contra-Bass, "Pastorale" by Couperin, "Chanson Triste" and "Valse Miniature" by Koussevitzky, "Intermezzo" by Granados, "Gavotte" by Sully, and "Scherzo" by Ludwig Juht. The concert closed with "Agnus Dei" by Bizet with Contralto, and Contra-bass obligato.

Let it be said at once that seldom has a more varied and appealing program been heard in Andover. Certainly the unusual sight of a giant playing so nimbly upon a "bull fiddle" was reward enough for those who had the courage to brave the elements to attend. The ladies are invited to meet at 10:30 to sew for a seminary in South Africa and are requested to bring thimbles and needles.

The most enjoyable part of the program to this writer was the singing of Miss Merritt, whose warm, clear contralto voice is not as well known as it should be. Why have we not heard more of her? Her ample range and splendid technique made each song a pleasant experience. Her voice is well placed for the most part. There is the least tendency to rob the voice of its vitality to create a pianissimo tone except in the lower part of the voice. It was indeed a relief not to hear the all too common type of contralto, the "hot-potato" kind. This young singer has the possibilities of a successful career.

The accompanist, Mrs. Ford acquitted herself with distinction. It is no easy task to accompany three artists with such varying talents at one sitting.

The next concert is announced for March eleventh; and the soloists will be Maria Kouskevitsky, soprano; Howard Harrington, tenor; and Edwin Billcliffe, pianist. Between these two musical programs, the Honorable Jeanette Rankin, the first woman elected to the Congress of the United States, will speak the evening of February 12th. The subject has not been announced.

CONSIDER US YOUR FRIENDS, SAYS CHIEF OF POLICE GEORGE A. DANE IN PLEA FOR CO-OPERATION

As Told to the Townsman by Chief of Police George A. Dane

A different attitude toward the police department on the part of the public, an attitude of co-operation rather than opposition, would help immeasurably in cutting down the crime in every community in the world, including Andover. Hardly a day passes here but what we have occasion to feel that we of the police department are regarded as enemies rather than friends of the public; we're here not to battle people but to help them in making Andover a safer place in which to live, a place in which our adults can live peacefully in a place in which our young people can be brought up to have the respect for law and order that law and order deserves.

In Andover last year we had 333 arrests, far more than for any year in our history. One-fourth as many again we settled out of court, by just reasoning with the persons involved; in other words, by securing their co-operation. Many of the arrests we had to make would never have been made if we had secured similar co-operation from other persons.

We don't like to arrest people; we hate to have to ask that anyone be fined or committed to an institution. Those are only means to an end, only methods by which we hope to preserve law and order here. We're able to accomplish the same end by not bringing one person to court, we would be only too glad to do it.

Young people constitute the most important problem we face. Rev. Dr. Wilson said in the guest editorial last week that the breaking down of home life was to be regretted, and we of the police department can certainly subscribe whole-heartedly to that view. Were the influence of home life and of church life to again become as strong as it once was, our young people would be much better citizens, and when they grow older they would not become the chief offenders against law and order that some of our young people of today will most certainly become.

We need co-operation to help the young people; we need the co-operation of the parents who too should feel that our job is not to prosecute juveniles needlessly but to help them. We have cases in which we try to keep youngsters out of court, but we many times buck up against an unjustifiably outraged parent who comes into the police station in a rage to bring his or her youngster behind him. Those youngsters grow up with the feeling that the police are persons who are to be despised. Wouldn't it be much better if the parents came to us quietly to talk over the situation, leaving the child at home. If the child is brought along, and the parents argue with us, either the parents or we are wrong, and when that is shown up, the child loses what respect he has for either parents or the police—and this must never happen.

Consider us your friends; we want to help. You are paying our salaries; co-operation from you will insure that your money is well spent to the end that Andover will be a better, safer town to live in.

ADDITION OF AGRICULTURAL ZONES REMOVES CHIEF OBJECTION TO ZONING PLAN

The Townsman Editorial

A week from Monday the town planning committee will hold a public hearing at the town house on the proposed zoning by-law which was amended by the committee last Monday night to include an agricultural district. This new district was added to the previous four in answer to the objections of those living in the West Andover section.

Any proposal which has been built up in the way that this new by-law has deserves very careful consideration by the voters. The committee has been anxious to secure objections; it has asked publicly for them; where the criticism was a worthwhile one it has made the necessary changes in the by-law. It has given publicity to its every move; no measure has been overlooked in explaining to the voters just what the law is and what its effects will be. The members of the committee have been present at club meetings, at some of which they knew they would receive a friendly welcome and at others of which they knew they would receive a hostile welcome. They have done everything possible, not to put the plan over on the voters but to tell the voters just what the plan is so that they would know on what they were voting.

The addition of the agricultural district and the holding of this public hearing constitute two more steps in making the plan what the people of Andover want. This hearing will give everyone a chance to air his views; if he goes to the meeting and suggests a fault in the plan, he has a right to vote at town meeting against the plan if that fault is not corrected. On the other hand, if he has a complaint and doesn't attend the meeting, it would be far from fair for him to oppose it at town meeting. This committee has asked for criticism; it has been fair in all its dealings with the town, and now it is up to the town to be fair and above board with the committee. They've spent a great deal of valuable time on something that should do Andover considerable good, something that should prevent hazardous growth of the town with eyesores going up in otherwise beautiful districts.

There are people in Andover who may have valid objections to the plan; if there are, they should attend the hearing and state their objections. There are people here who are in favor of the plan; they should go to town meeting and see that it is adopted. And finally there are people who are against the plan without any valid objection; they will be sure to be at town meeting to oppose it mostly because someone in authority has proposed it. They are the ones we shouldn't even listen to; instead we should listen carefully to those men who have studied the plan, for they are the only ones that will know what they are talking about.

Siftings

We'll bet Governor Hoffman of New Jersey couldn't be elected dog-catcher today.

It's a pity that they're picking on Woodrow Wilson, a dead Democratic president, when we've got such a good Democratic president to pick on.

Both Howell F. Shepard and J. Everett Collins were last minute candidates; evidently they were not.

This Sober Town

There are several floors filled with attractive merchandise attractively displayed, and then there is a basement store. In the basement we noticed a huge thing projecting from a wall in space behind a counter. It looked as if it were an imitation of a rock made of paper mache and painted over. On it were the words: Rock Bottom.

The gentleman who was good enough to show us through the store observed our glances at the "rock," and so he told us about it. It's not imitation rock; it's real honest-to-goodness rock. It seems that the store is built on a huge ledge, and this particular section was not blasted out. The customer sees only a comparatively small part of the rock, for the wall behind the counter covers up the rest of it. Shellac had been applied to it in order to prevent dust collection, and that is why it looked somewhat of an imitation, but it was no more of an imitation than if Galli-Curci were to make herself up like Kate Smith. She'd still sing like Galli-Curci, just as shellac or no shellac, this rock is still rock.

Enthusiasm High at Free Church

Sidewalk Appropriation Certain If It Rains on Town Meeting Day

Andover's Town Forum

This second of a series of articles on problems which are to come up before the annual town meeting in March. Mr. J. Augustus Remington has sponsored a petition for a special article to appropriate $175 for the construction of a sidewalk in front of the town hall. In the following article he discusses the reasons for this appropriation.

If the annual town meeting in March comes on a wet day, there won't be a single vote against the appropriation of $175 for the construction of a sidewalk in front of the town hall. Anyone who enters the hall will in all probability have to walk over the present so-called sidewalk, and anyone who walks over this sidewalk will favor this appropriation.

All along Main street on either side we have concrete or macadam sidewalks, except for one place: in front of the town hall. Now if there is one place for which civic pride should demand a sidewalk, the front of the town's main building should certainly be considered first. Yet we are forced to walk through mud in wet days and dust in dry days to transact our town business. It really is a shame that no town department has ever seen fit to remedy this situation.

There's nobody in Andover proud of the appearance of our town house. Its architecture is not particularly imposing; almost anything would be better. It would cost considerable to change the structural features of the building, but at least we can spend the little bit necessary to improve the space in front of the town hall. Constructing a walk is more utilitarian than aesthetic, of course, but it would improve somewhat the looks of the approaches to the building. Later on someone with a bent for landscaping might put out where a few shrubs could be placed to advantage. But for the present let us at least construct a walkable walk there.

Christ Church Notes

The promise of a new lighting system for the church was among the 100th anniversary remembrances. The plans and the work were settled for by the donor, Miss Mary K. Johnson of Reading, Pennsylvania and Andover, and the gift, in remembrance of her parents, is now being installed in the church. Mr. A. B. LeBoutillier has designed the fixtures in cooperation with a Boston firm. They will be in keeping with the Romanesque features of the church. It is expected that the dedication will take place at Easter time. The members of the Girls' Friendly society are asked to meet at the Parish house at 6.30 Sunday evening.

The Leyden Jar

Various forms of machines were developed for the purpose of producing electrification by means of friction. In 1700, Francis Hauksbee mounted a glass globe on a shaft and geared it so that it could be rotated at high speed. Friction was produced by holding the palm of the hand on the spinning globe. Such devices produced an electric charge of considerable strength—which was, however, available only when the machines were in operation. About 1745, Ewald George von Kleist and Pieter van Musschenbroek, working independently, performed experiments which led to the invention of the "Leyden Jar." This was a glass vessel, with inside and outside coatings of lead, by means of which a charge of electricity from a frictional machine could be accumulated and later released by making a connection between the two coatings.

Mourning Dove Like Pigeon

The female mourning dove looks very much like a pigeon. Her dress is dull grayish brown or fawn colored, and she lacks the coloring around the neck which distinguishes the male. When in repose the female is a flabby supine, shiftless-looking creature, but she inspires fear when in flight. Perhaps the male mourning dove is inspired by his plaintive call in appreciation of the refinement of his mate, for she is among the gentlest of birds.

Food Required by Snakes

The majority of snakes in captivity use live animals for food, and the kind of animals to be given depends on the size of the snake. Small garter snakes, blacksnakes and similar species thrive on crickets, beetles, small frogs, mice and the like. Bullsnakes, pine-snakes, puffing adders and other large-sized American species eat roads, frogs, mice and insects; pythons, boas, anacondas and very large snakes eat rats, guinea pigs, rabbits or other fairly good-sized animals.

The Pellagra Disease

The pellagra malarial disease back in Europe to the beginning of the eighteenth century, soon after the introduction of maize into Spain, where it was first observed and described by Gaspar Casal (1681-1759). This work was written in 1735 but not printed until 1762. The first published report about pellagra in the Journal de Medecine (Paris) in 1755 was prepared by Francois Thery, but based upon Casal's experience. Casal called the disease mal de la rosa, while the name pellagra originated in Italy.

Student Government in Stowe School

Stowe School has had "Student Government" for a number of years, but now the students are to have a larger share of participation than ever before.

The plan was described at an assembly of the eighth grade on Monday morning. There will be two houses, the upper and the lower, the former being composed of a council of teachers, and the latter of delegates from each home room.

If one can judge by comments overheard, the idea has the hearty approval of the student body. We feel that this training, besides bettering our school, will enable us to be better citizens when the time comes for us to take part in our nation's government.

Assemblies

On Monday, Elinor Houston read "The Country of Books." After that Miss Evelyn Robinson, Junior Room librarian, gave the eighth grade a talk on the dictionary catalogue used in the library.

Following this our principal discussed with the eighth grade the subject of self government and portrayed the course we, the pupils of Stowe, should take to have one ourselves. He also told of the responsibilities connected with it.

Thursday morning at 8:30, at Mr. Sherman's request, Room 1, having held their mid-year election of officers, gave as an assembly program a model election for the benefit of the school. Dorothy Christie acted as temporary chairman; Nancy Eccles, Gloria Field, Constance Cole, and William Ferguson read articles commenting on the qualities essential to leadership. The officers were then elected. Then the pupils discussed

Gives High Praise to Abbot Director

Walter Howe, director of music at Abbot academy, made his debut as conductor of the Worcester Philharmonic orchestra society before an audience of 1200 on Thursday night. The Worcester Daily Telegram of the following day contained an account of the concert written by E. Gwyn Thomas of the Telegram staff.

The account follows in part: Before an audience, which had braved inclement weather to make their way to Mechanics Hall, Walter Howe made his debut as conductor of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra Society, in the society's eleventh concert last night. The audience, numbering nearly twelve hundred, was the largest in the history of the society.

The performance was one resounding to the credit of the new conductor, the orchestra, as a group and as individual musicians, and Arthur J. Bassett, pianist, who was assisting artist.

A familiar figure in Worcester musical circles for many years, Mr. Howe is associate conductor of the Music Festival and its business manager, as well as being an organist of note and a composer of distinction, he scored heavily in his initial public appearance as the Philharmonic's leader.

Faced with a difficult situation, when he took over the baton last Spring, Mr. Howe has accomplished more than a little. The orchestra, last night, seemed imbued with some of the conductor's own thorough-going musicianship. It played as a balanced, integrated unit.

Precise... and Sure Responses to Mr. Howe's sharply clear beat were precise and sure. In extremely soft passages, as well as in full orchestral voice, the orchestra showed impressive musicianship. Miss Myrtle D. Olson was concertmaster.

Mr. Howe put the orchestra to the supreme test in a new work, his own concerto for piano and orchestra, which was receiving its premiere. The work had been played before in a two piano arrangement, but this was the first performance with orchestra. The concerto is in one movement.

Response to the Howe composition was immediate and the applause was vigorous, becoming an ovation.

The program, excepting the Howe concerto, was familiar and well played. It began with Mozart's Symphony in G Minor, permitting an opportunity for the orchestra to show splendid phrasing. Mr. Howe's reading was virile, yet restrained, and the auditors showed their enjoyment with much applause.

At intermission Conductor Howe spoke briefly to his auditors in behalf of the society and its officers, for their support and telling them: "This is your orchestra. It carries on the musical traditions of your city."

COUNTY COUNCIL TO ELECT

Three delegates, Commander Harold L. Peters, Harold N. Wood and John A. Anderson, will represent the local Legion post at the County Council meeting at Hamilton Sunday. Officers are to be elected. Other members wishing to go should be at the Legion rooms at two Sunday.
