If ifteen blocked textiles, with historic Andover as a subject, done by students of Punchard High School, under the supervision of Miss Alice Ollift, are being exhibited in the Print Room of the Addison Gallery from July 1-31.

The process used was an interesting one. Each student first made a pencil drawing of a single unit, and then a repeat pattern of four units. The pattern was then enlarged to sixteen units and completed by connecting them. Next the design was traced on unbleached cotton and then filled in with was crayons. The Freshmen and Sophomores used one color, the Juniors two, with one as as an accent, the Seniors three, one predominate color, and two for accent. The pattern was set by pressing with a damp cloth and hot iron. Finally the textile was dyed a color to make the processing with the furnishings of some room in his, or her home. Students who are represented in the exhibition are: George Bancroft, Roberta Brickett, June Carmichael, Margaret C. Dooley, Norman Druin, Elizabeth Eastman, Jacsequeline Ferguson, Barbara Flanagan, Ruth Hebb, Marilyn Lewis, Mary MacTammany, and Handle Webb.

REASONABLE ENFORCEMENT OF PARKING RULE REQUIRES CERTAIN DEGREE OF COMMON SENSE

There are two sides to the local parking controversy which has developed in particular to the property of just a minute to run into a store to buy something, still other cases occurred where delivery trucks were tagged for parking double while picking up a slight load. One or two, it is true, were tagged justifiably.

There was not a bit of fair play to the whole method. If the town officials decided suddenly to stop parking on Main

Red Tape Boosts Cost

of Housing to Taxpayer

of Housing to Taxpayer

New York.—Bureaucratic red tape of the kind that requires twenty copies of every order, and twelve signatures for a change of one minute detail is reacting upon the government housing program to raise cost of its construction work to far more than the same work would cost private concerns, a survey conducted here shows.

Private contractors, to whom these jobs are let, have found that red tape holds up the jobs so that they cannot be completed in specified time or anywhere near it, and this costs the contractors money. They have the alternative of turning down the business or boosting their bids, figuring on the difference to take care of the red tape.
As a result, PWA and WPA housing projects cannot get the advantage of low prices which are bid on private construction jobs, and the cost to the taxpayers soars.

In the building boom before the depression, when wages and building costs were high, contractors used to do well on jobs on which they bid 35 cents a cubic foot. But bids on federal housing projects in New York today have gone up to 40 cents a cubic foot, and in Chicago to 55 cents a cubic foot. Part of this results from the fact that so many skilled laborers have found permanent jobs on the WPA, being paid by the taxpayers, that contractors are faced with a shortage of help.

Hungry Dog

By SIDNEY MELLAR

ONE night, lounging alone before the fireplace, I heard a sound at the door, a sound of scratching. "Who's there?" I cried. There was no the door, a sound of scratching. "Who's there?" I cried. There was no answer.

Again the scratching and the whine! I went to the door, opened it. A police dog lay outside, quivering.

The mellow light from my two-room bungalow fell upon him, and I saw how weary he seemed, how his ribs showed through his short, stiff fur. He looked as if he were starving.

It was cold at the door so I whistled and he followed me into my living room. Patlently he sank down before the fireplace, his head relaxing over one outstretched paw. Years before, I'd had a police dog that resembled him.

Then I went into the kitchen. There was no meat in the food-safe, but there were eggs. I broke two eggs into a soup plate, beat them up, poured on some milk. Into this mixture I crumbled a slice of stale wheat bread. What else? In the vegetable bin I found tomatoes and lettuce, shredded some of these and mixed all together.

When I stepped from the kitchen into the living room, the police dog sniffed the combination that was in my hand. He stood up, his tall lashing excitedly, his tongue dancing from his mouth. "Sit down!" I ordered.

Reluctantly he sat down. His body writhed with anxlety. I admitted to myself that he was a handsome beast, his ears up, attentive, hungry yet obedient.

"O. K." I sald. He stared at me appealingly, not sure of my meaning. I nodded, and he bounded to his food and swallowed hastily. He was gulping entirely too fast. I bent down to pick up the plate. He turned on me.

"Down!" I cried, holding the plate in my hand. He bared his fangs. I sympathized with him. He was starved. But he'd have to learn who was master immediately, so I snarled at him, "S.sit down!" Slowly, slowly his hunnehes sank.

Picking up the plate, still half full food. I put if on the library table. He watched me saidy. Even now he was powerful, tired and hungry though he might he, I bent over his collar, bet it held no license plate. He wagged his tail and wanted to lick my wrist. There was a knock at the door. The deg stood up, growling. His ears orleked forward and his black nose spitond.

"Who's there?" Lealled

My heart fell. The dog was being dalmed.

I opened the door. A man entered.

Ie was wizened, with shifty eyes and sneery lin. "Is this the dog?" I asked.

"Yes. Hello, Ringy!" The dog went to him.

"He seems pretty hungry," I said.
"If you'll walt a minute or two, I'll give him something more to eat. I have it all prenared for him."

The man kicked the door shut behind him and sneered, "You'll give him and me more than something to eat."

"Come, come," I said, approaching,
"What's the meaning of this?"

"Stop!" he warned sharply, "Come one step closer, and I'll order Ringy to tear you to pieces. This dog is trained, He's my side-kick on a new angle of hand-me-over. You can tell it to the police after you gimme your lack and I beat it."

I had about seventy-five dollars, and that wasn't a trifle for me to lose,
but the worst nehe was to surrender to this thief. The muscles in my arms tiched. I wanted to leap at him,

"Well? Hand over your money before I count ten or I'll take it off your body after Ringy's through with you.
One. . . . Two.

I thought fast. My heart was pounding in my ears, My breath was disordered. I cried aut. "Hold on!"

"Ready?" he sneered, one hand out negligently.

"There's a trick you didn't think of!" I cried, running desperately to the library table.

"At him, Ringy! At him!" screamed
the thief frantically. Ringy charged.
He was almost on me as I tore the plate upon the floor, Ringy bounded in after the food and I shut the door behind him.

Then I faced the cowering thief.

Death-Spray Too Dangerous

Fears that arsenic dust sprayed from airplanes to combat the great ocust plague in South Africa would bring death to big game and domestic attle have proved to be only too well rounded, according to reports reaching the British Society for the Preseration of the Fauna of the Empire wation of the Fauna of the Empire. Preliminary experiments had indicated that the danger would be small. Experience has shown, however, that the polson clouds have not only been fatal to animals but to large numbers of insectivorous birds, particularly the migrant European stork. "This picture," the society's journal says, "alters the whole aspect of the supposed efficacy of the method, for the army of insectivorous birds inhabiting the regions invaded by locusts would in any year undoubtedly destroy more locusts than are poisoned by arsenic,"

Several large groups from Chi-cago, Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis, as well as cities of the East, have indicated plans for chartering airplanes, busses and railroad

Even now the streets of the Kansas capital are bearing an unaccustomed load of automobile traffic, carrying steadily increasing tourist hordes bent upon a first-hand glimpse of the man whose popularity, with the speed and force of a typical prairie cyclone, has endeared him to the hearts of millions of Americans as the one to lead t'e nation out of the mire of "three long years" of New Deal sovietisms, blunders and waste.

Landon Takes First Vacation in 4 Years

Topeka, Kan.—When Gov. Alf M. Landon and his family left here for Estes Park, Colo., it was the start of the first vacation in four years for the Republican nominee for the presidency. He was to spend two weeks resting in preparation for the campaign and in writing the speech with which he will accept his formal notification of the nomination, in Topeka, July 23. In between he hoped to sandwich a little horseback riding, of which he is fond.

With the governor were Mrs. Landon and the three children, Peggy Anne, nineteen; Nancy Jo, three, and John Cobb, two, and Mrs. Samuel E. Cobb, mother of Mrs. Landon. In addition there were a few members of Governor Landon's staff.

The governor was to return for the opening of the special session of the state legislature the second week in July, but Mrs. Landon is to remain until the notification ceremonies. The children will stay all summer.

Number of Bird Species

How many kinds of birds inhabit our globe? Dr. Ernst Mayr answers this question in the latest Proceedings of the Linnaean society in New York. Linne (Linnaeus), the Swedish naturalist, listed only 117 species in the first edition (1735) of his great work Systema Naturae, the starting-point of systema Naturae, the starting-point of systema in the systema in the system of the globe has vastly increased the number, so that in 1900 Sharpe's catalogue of the birds of the world counted about 19,000 distinct species, Since then several other scientific estimates have been published noting additions, and the tendency to split species into geographic races and subspecies has grown, confusing the definition. Studying all these, rejecting doubtful cases and making various allowances. Doctor Mayr concludes that the total number of birds in the world known at the present time is about 27,000, classified in about 2,500 genera. He adds: "There is no reason not to believe that an average of 200 valid new forms will be described during the coming 25 years, which would bring the number of known birds up to 32,000 in the vent 1960. From then on the progress will be slower, and I do not believe that the number will ever reach 40,000. Chicago.—How workers as well as employers in the reincipal industrial states are carrying the burden of relief payments in other states was revealed in a report of the Illinois Manufacturers' association

Strangest Horse Race Is Held in Italian Village

Find Grim Relies

Grim link with the Wars of the Roses, 500 years ago, was found at Stamford, Lincolnshire, when 30 skeletons without heads were uncovered during road widening operations, says the Montreal Herald. All the skeletons are those of men of unusual physique. They were found near the site of a church that was destroyed in 1461. Tradition told the story of the beheadings when the Red Rose party conquered Stamford. The heads were all found in a single grave Illinois Manufacturers' association here.
Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Michigan and Massachusetts, all industrial states, received relief in amounts varying from 29 to 55 per cent of the amounts they paid in federal taxes during 1934 and 1935.
Yet South Dakota, which paid only $2,872,000 into the federal treasury during that time, was dished out $41,660,000 in relief, or 1,451 per cent of its tax payments. In effect, the state received an actual gift of more than $38,000,000 of the taxpayers money. North Dakota, New Mexico, Idaho and Arkansas received in dole from 705 to 979 per cent of the total of federal assessments against them over the two years. Mississippi, Alabama and other states also profited from this relief situation. The strangest horse race in the world, the historic Pallo of Siena, is run round the cathedral square of this little town every August, usually in the presence of the king of Italy and his family. The horses represent different communes of the town, which shoulder the cast of organization. this little town every August, usually in the presence of the king of Italy and his family. The horses represent different communes of the town, which shoulder the cost of organization, horses, and jockeys. The event is an extraordinary affair, for there are no fouls. Riders may strike at each other and at their opponents' horses; often jockeys fall off and the riderless mounts add to the confusion, Inc. dentally, the face may be won by an animal whose lockey has fallen and cannot continue.

cannot continue.

Before the event each horse is blessed by the officiating priest, and the winning horse receives thousands of pats. The Jockey receives a kiss from every girl in his commune. Remarkable scenes and banquets follow, in which the winning Jockey is feted and the horse, with glided hoofs, takes the place of honor at the head of the table. A spotlessly clean manger is always laid for him.

Foods Deteriorate

Thrifty Miner

Remarkable procedure was followed by a Johannesburg gold miner, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald. He took a bath every night, collected the sediment and out it in a tank. After doing this for 29 years, he "panned" the sediment and found it contained about 20 ounces of gold, werth nearly $500. It was decided to be "lost property," which was divided equally among the mines where the man had worked, a "reward" of 10 per cent being given to the ingenious and per severant miner. Foods Deteriorate

In general, foods deteriorate on ageing with varying intensity. This is manifested by such visible conditions as mold, rot and loss of moisture which is concomitant with a hardening effect. Many times, however, this deterioration can only be detected by the change in aroma and flavor, as with butter and eggs, and coffee belongs to this class. One of the greatest causes for spoilage in foods is the presence of oxygen. This gas is instrumental in changing some of the various constituents of foods which have an affinity for it and thereby alters the dayor of the entire food. The chemical composition of the roasted coffee bean is such that it is very easily attacked by oxygen.

Skeet Shooting
In skeet, as in trapshooting, the expert does not take deliberate aim. He simply looks at the target with both eyes open, concentrates on breaking it, instinctively swings his gun along the line of flight, and at the right instant, without a pause, pulls the trigger. The exact spot to place the shot load can be learned only by experience. Nearly all skeet targets require a slightly different helding and swing just as rising birds do in actual field shooting experience.

Early Known Islands:

The Solomons, 900 miles northeast of Australia, are among the most remote of the Pacific Islands, yet save for the Ladrones and perhaps the Marshals, they were the earliest found by Europeans They were discovered strangely, from Peru, where adventurers, thirsting for more gold, heard rumors of a continent close by to the west. Lost for 200 years, they were rediscovered in 1767.

Fortune Telling Old

Authors' Eccentricities

Flaubert, the master of exquisite style, rolled himself violently on the expression to his taste. Shelley used to toast his head before an open fire to gain inspiration. Voltaire could never begin work unless there was an exact dozen of pencils with sharpened points at his side. Dickens delighted in ornamenting himself with costly jewelry.
