Playgrounds to Open Tomorrow

The annual summer playground season will officially open on tomorrow afternoon at two, when registration, mass games, baseball, stories and possibly couple races in the evening will be held.

The heavy apparatus will not be available until next week after the Fourth.

The playgrounds will be open from Monday to Friday from two in the afternoon until dark during July and August. Parents are asked to please co-operate with the instructors by keeping the children off the playgrounds except during these hours, in order to avoid accidents.

Miss Margaret Davis will again be general supervisor, starting her eleventh year. The average daily attendance on the one playground when she started was from 35 to 50, while last year the average daily attendance on the three playgrounds was close to 800. She will be assisted by Miss Caroline Abbot, Mildred Schruender, Helen Driscoll, Mary Angus, James Bisset, James Haggerty, George Zink, Benjamin Dimlich, Donald Surette, and James D. Doherty.

Maurice J. Curran, Philanthropist, Dies at Home Here

Rose From Immigrant's Son To Position Of Importance In Financial World

At four o'clock Sunday morning Maurice J. Curran, widely-known businessman and benefactor, passed away at his home, 250 North Main street, after an illness that had brought him near death's door several times before he finally yielded to death's command. Relatives, friends, employees, all of whom had expected his passing anytime within the past year, were grief-stricken when Sunday morning brought the sad news.

Eighty-four years ago the coming September a farmer's wife, who had come to America but seven years before, gave birth to a son, out in Palmer, Mass. His mother lived only a year and a half after his birth, and the bereaved father returned to his home country, in the town of Dingle, County Kerry, where the Christian Brothers gave the little boy a primary education. Then at the age of nine the youngster returned to America, to the then infant city of Lawrence, where he attended the public schools. Then still young he went to work as a grocery clerk in a store, and then in 1870, 16 years old, he started to learn wool-sorting in the Washington Mills of the American Woolen company. In 1872 he went into the retail liquor business, and in 1877 he and John Joyce bought out W. E. Heald and Company's bottling and soda water business. That was the start of Curran and Joyce, a name that is a leader in its field even today. On May 1, 1914, the two partners sold out their business to four employees.

In the meantime they had moved to Andover, Mr. Curran to the beautiful estate next to Arden and Mr. Joyce to the castle-like building just beyond the Shawsheen on North Main street.

Stow, Dracut Granges Visit

"Let's Be Alive on the Fifth"

Caution in the use of fireworks by children and the use of automobiles by adults over the coming long Fourth of July week-end was urged this week by Chief of Police George A. Dane.

Last year the July accident death toll in this country amounted to 10,200, more than two and a half times as many as were killed in the Revolutionary War. Approximately one million people suffered disabling accidents last July, he added.

Basses and Baritones Pull Fast One on Male Choir's Tenors

The much-mooted question as to whether the basses and baritones or the tenors are the better in the Andover Male Choir was settled conclusively on Saturday, with conductor J. Everett Collins weighing the scales in favor of the basses. It was at the annual choir picnic at Pelham Inn that the crucial struggle took place, and according to the box score furnished to the newspapers by a baritone (so say the tenors) the basses and baritones beat the tenors 3-2. With that score the home run by J. Everett Collins was the deciding factor.

However the box score showed a game of six and a half innings, but with only 18 put-outs possible in six innings and 21 possible in the seven innings the box score looked fishy when it showed 26 put-outs by the basses and 20 by the tenors. Actually the tenors allege that the score was actually 18-9 in favor of the basses, but to the tenors that defeat was a very minor part of the afternoon. The really important event was the tug-of-war, which the bass reporter said, was "omitted because of the fatigue which many experienced after a highly enjoyable afternoon." Actually, the tenors say, the tug-of-war was held, two of them in fact, and both times the tenors, who are supposed to be sissies, pulled the basses and baritones all over the lot. And besides, instead of the nine which were mentioned as having played on the basses baseball team, there were actually 15 playing against the tenors' ten. The only true thing about the story was that J. E. Collins actually did circle the bases for the basses, but the number of errors which the tenors made while he was so circling would make an ordinary scorekeeper call it a single and three errors, at least three.

Trying to Curb Relief Drinking

In an effort to eliminate insofar as possible undeserving men from the W. P. A. and welfare rolls, the selectmen have been watching the workers closely, and in some cases where drinking or loafing was found, the men were fired. Last week one man was ousted for having been away from the job for three days, during most of which time he was seen inebriated around the square.

A few weeks ago two men quit welfare work at noon, and their cases were also taken care of. The selectmen have had several wives come to them and ask them that the pay envelopes be given to them rather than to the husbands, for too often they had come home with little money in the envelope, most of it having been left in a barroom till. In one case where the wife finally gave up and left her husband, the selectmen, finding it still necessary to give the man work, paid him off by taking out a meal ticket at a local lunch. The meal ticket was left in the care of the lunch, and thus the man was unable to get any drink, with his own money at least.

One interesting new aspect of what has happened to our welfare workers came to light last week when a West Andover lady living on a farm near the gravel road projects finally discovered why her pullets were disappearing one per day and why her father-in-law was under the influence of liquor most of the day. She found that a W. P. A. man had been bringing him a pint of liquor each day in exchange for a pullet!

THE ANDOVER TOWNSMAN

Established 1887

Published on Thursday at Smith & Coutts Co., 4 Park Street, Andover, Mass., by Elmer J. Grover.

Entered at the Andover Postoffice as Second Class Matter

The World Owes Me A Living

In the last few weeks our town officials, principally the selectmen and the Board of Public Works, have been active in trying to instill in town and welfare workers the idea that they have to work for their living. It's no easy job, either. It would be much easier to let the men go ahead and loaf on the job, but our town officials have acted on the realization that it isn't good for the town and most of all it isn't good for the men.

That's the worst part of a depression. It's something that social welfare people have been trying to solve for years, not just in this depression, but back in '21, back in '07, back in all the other periods of slack business. Men who were hard workers when the depression started, who after losing their jobs, gained employment on a welfare project, too often forget that there's just as much need for working hard on a public project as on a private project. Soon they are just loafers, and for years after the depression is over, they are still loafers. Fortunately this is not the case with all our welfare people, but there is enough of it going on, even here in Andover, to make it a serious problem of morale that must be worked out in some way or other.

Some of the men with a natural lazy streak feel that the world owes them a living, and that therefore they can't be fired if they don't work as hard as they might. So they take it easy, go off in the woods for a nap as one Andover man did recently, or quit the job at noon as two others did. What can be done with them? What can be done with the men who see these loafers getting away with it, and then decide that if so-and-so can do it, so can they? It's not fair to the town or to the Federal Government, whichever is putting up the money; it's not fair to the other honest men on the job who really want to earn their day's pay; it's not fair to the men themselves, for it's hard to conquer a lazy streak once you've let it conquer you.

If welfare work could be run as private work, if when a man tried to get away with not doing his job, he could be fired, the United States in depression and post-depression days would be much better off, as far as the calibre of its male inhabitants is concerned. Maybe a very hard-boiled attitude could be adopted which would make the men work. Maybe if some of the worst offenders are fired, or suspended, and we are glad to say that the selectmen have taken this action in a few cases, the others will realize that they have to work for their living even on a public job. Their hunger has to be satisfied, that much is certain, but they should have to work for it. The world owes nobody a living; these men owe it to the world which is supporting them to give something in return, and when this depression is over, these men will still be MEN and not loafers.

TOO MUCH OF IT ALREADY!

A Real Loss

The story of Maurice Curran's life is typical of what we like to think the United States offers a young ambitious man. Born in less than moderate circumstances, eking out as much education as the public school system then gave, starting out as a grocery boy and serving two years as a woollorter in Lawrence's mills—on that foundation Maurice Curran built a degree of success that is seldom rivalled in this day. Through his business genius he brought to its present prominent position the Curran & Joyce Company; later with his fortune amassed he helped the Gillette Safety Razor Company go to the forefront.

But what he did to make money will not be what Maurice Curran will be remembered for. What he did with the money he made gave him more happiness by far than the many obstacles he surmounted in building up his fortune. Andover and Lawrence know of some of his benefactions, but the way in which he did the most good was not through donations of organs or of chimes. Few days have passed in the last several years which did not see the Curran delivery wagon heading off to some needy family with groceries, clothes and other things. There aren't many streets in Andover or Lawrence which have not felt at some time the generosity of the Curran purse.

Public-spiritidness, Kindliness—these characters in Maurice Curran outshone the characters of ambition and business genius which aided him to build up a fortune to pass on to others who needed it more than he felt he did. For these traits he will be long remembered by those whom he helped and by everyone in Andover and Lawrence who knew of his kind deeds.

A Note Of Thanks

The playground season opens tomorrow, this year for the first time without the services of Henry G. Tyer, who has tendered his resignation from the playground committee because of pressure of business. Mr. Tyer was a member of the committee for ten years, during eight of which he was chairman. Under him the Andover playground system was built up to its present admirable proportions. He maintained a very active interest in the playground work, visiting the various grounds weekly. Though not in a position that attains very much town prominence, he has earned the town's thanks for having done his work well.

Siftings

New York's Hamilton Fish might make a good Republican candidate for president in 1940, and if the Republicans are afraid of what the Democrats might do on a name like Ham Fish, they should wait until the Dems nominate Paul McNutt.

This is the time of the year when our Florida circulation drops off to nothing and our Maine circulation goes a-boomin'.

Several times this week we felt as though someone was bailing out the ocean.

Hamilton has always been a well-known name in U. S. history, but Hamilton Fish doesn't care so much for it when John D. M. precedes it.

Mrs. William Simpson and Sam Simpson of Wolcott avenue, left Saturday for Kennebunkport, Me., where they will be for the summer.

Much Work Done at Old School

When the boys and girls of Shawsheen go up to the playground in the rear of the Richardson School on Lowell street this July they will find that much has been done for their health, comfort and enjoyment.

Last Thursday the Richardson School and grounds were open to visitors, with Stafford Lindsay, chairman of the Playground Committee, in charge.

All those who braved the heat to go up, were surprised at the progress that has been made since a year ago, when the roof of the school was shingled, and the possibilities that the school presents as a Community centre for the village.

The building has the same substantial, but a trimmer appearance; the weather vane has been straightened as much as it can be atop the belfry, the belfry has been painted, but the bell left inside the school. Many of the acts of vandalism done through the 15 years or so that this school has been closed have caused much of the decay to the building.

All of the outside wood trim has been painted and the panes of broken glass replaced. Only one room, the East Room has been put in condition thus far, and entrance to that room at present is through the rear hall. It looks much as it formerly did. The upper walls are painted yellow, the holes in the ceiling have been plastered, the black boards reconditioned and minor repairs made to the floor. The walls of the room are exceedingly high. There are no desks and no chairs in the room at present, but it will house the children on rainy days and display their handcraft on Exhibition days. There is no lighting and no heating at present.

The boys' and girls' toilets in the rear of the back hall have been made sanitary, new plumbing installed, and 100 feet of sewer laid. The old toilets connected with cess-pools in the rear of the building.

A new bulk head and new steps were also installed. A water pipe was laid to the center of the playground and a bubbler installed. There will be a hose to water down the Paddle Tennis court which was built through the interest and direction of Henry Simmers of the Spa. Sand boxes were repainted, and already there is a new set of swings to supplement those of last year.

All the work has been going on since the latter part of March, when two days of work per week were done by the welfare men. The poison ivy and underbrush has been cleared from the yard.

Mr. Lindsay was active in soliciting much that went into the improvements of the building, such as paint, brushes, mortar, varnish, and calcimine. Thanks are due also to F. M. and T. E. Andrews, the American Woolen Company, and the Andover Country Club for their generosity in furthering the playground project.

Professor and Mrs. Warren K. Moorehead will embark from New York on Saturday for a five months' European vacation.

Alumni Attend Annual Banquet

That Punchard high's alumni's apathy was only a temporary one was well demonstrated on last Thursday evening when some 200 alumni turned out for the annual banquet, one of the best attended in recent years. Following the banquet an enjoyable entertainment was presented in the Memorial auditorium. The cafeteria was prettily decorated for the occasion.

The best percentage of attendance was shown by the 45-year class, with Charles H. Eames, president of Lowell Textile, Dr. Jeremiah J. Daly and J. Augustus Remington of the seven living members being present. The oldest class represented was 1885 by Oscar F. Timlin of Reading. The most loyal alumnus, Myron E. Gutterson, was unable to attend, and the assembly voted to send him greetings.

Presiding over the meeting with a gavel turned from wood from the old Punchard school was Sumner F. Davis, who introduced the new officers elected at the recent annual meeting.

Miss Madeleine Kimball was in charge of the entertainment program which was as follows:

Boys' choir, Junior high school boys; Philip Crowley, Alfred Harris, Edward Valentine, George Selden and Eugene Bernardine with Miss Doris Newton, '24, at the piano. Songs and dance, Mammie's Little Girl, Ellen Marie Fitzgerald; Dapper Dan, Sidney Watson; piano selections, Midsummer Night's Dream, Mendelssohn, and Clair de Lune, Claude Debussy, Edna Nutton of the Junior High; tap dance, At a Perfume Counter, Virginia Minahan; a flash, Barbara Keleher; reading, "Robby Doo" Miss Mabel Marshall; Trucking on Down, Sidney Watson and Ellen Marie Fitzgerald; tap dance, Frank Allen; piano selections, Lento, Cyril Scots, and Rigandon, Edward MacDowell, Evelyn Dow, Punchard senior.

Portrait of Mrs. Trott

Donald Gordon Squier, noted painter, has recently completed this charming study of Mrs. Howard Spencer Trott (Ruth M. Brainerd) of Boston and Andover.

Mrs. Trott has been portrayed in dark blue velvet against a background of sylvan green.

The portrait makes use of one of the oldest mediums known to man, that of casein tempera.

MAURICE J. CURRAN PASSES AWAY

Built Up Gillette

On selling out the soda water business, the two partners became interested in the Gillette Razor company, and it was in large part through the financial backing given by them that the company rose to the prominence it holds today. They were both made vice-presidents, and at the time of his death Mr. Curran was still a director.

He also held other prominent positions in the business world. He was a director of the Merchants Trust company in Lawrence, the Shawinigan Water and Power Company in Canada, the Massachusett Bonding and Insurance company, and the National Shawmut bank of Boston (resigned 1934).

His club affiliations were many, including Tedesco, Andover and Merrimack Valley Country clubs, Exchange club, Elks, and Knights of Columbus.

Philanthropist

His benefactions will probably never be known, for many of them were kept anonymous. St. Augustine's church in Andover and St. Mary's in Lawrence were frequent recipients of gifts from him and Mrs. Curran. The chimes at St. Mary's, the organ, pulpit and sound system at St. Augustine's all were Curran gifts. He was one of the outstanding Catholic laymen in this part of the country, and a number of years ago Pope Pius XI conferred knighthood in the Order of St. Gregory on him.

In 1878 he married Miss Theresa Keating of Charlestown, and surviving him by her is a daughter Mary (Mrs. Daniel Murphy of Lawrence), wife of the president of the Arlington Trust company and former Andover town counsel.

In 1884 the first Mrs. Curran passed away, and later Mr. Curran married Miss Abigail F. Morrison of Dover, N. H. Their four children, all living, are Joseph Frederick, Margaret, Maurice, Jr., and Lidwine (Mrs. Donald Falvey of Boston.)

Impressive Funeral

On Tuesday morning the chimes of St. Mary's in Lawrence were played as the funeral cortege proceeded from the home here to the church, largest in this vicinity but not large enough to hold all those who wished to pay a final tribute to Mr. Curran. Andover police guided traffic near the home as the long procession of cars bearing business associates and friends from far and near started from the home, and in Lawrence police found a serious problem on their hands as persons in cars and afoot came to attend the services.

Rev. Thomas B. Austin, O.S.A., pastor of St. Augustine's celebrated the mass, with Very Rev. Patrick J. Campbell, O.S.A., pastor of St.

Mary's as deacon, Rev. Henry B. Smith, O.S.A., of Andover as sub-deacon, and Rev. Charles F. Hart, O.S.A., of St. Mary's as master of ceremonies. A large number of priests, friends of the late Mr. Curran, sat within the sanctuary, including Monsignor Michael J. Splaine of Brookline representing His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell; Very Rev. Mortimer A. Sullivan, O.S.A., of Atlantic City, retired provincial of the Augustinian Order; Rev. Bernard M. Albers, vice-president of Villanova; and Rev. William J. McGarry, S.J., president of Boston College.

Joseph M. Walsh was the organist, and solo selections were rendered by Mrs. Therese M. Donovan and Mrs. John A. McGilvrey.

Represented at the funeral were: Father O'Donnell assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus; girls of St. Mary's High, with Notre Dame nuns; children from the Protectory of Mary Immaculate, one of the chief benefactors of Mr. Curran; St. Mary's Alumnae association; Aventine club; St. Clare branch, League of Catholic Women; Lawrence lodge, B. P. O. E.; Division 8, A. O. H.

The ushers at the church were: Leo F. Daly, Leland B. Evans, Wallace Falvey, Dr. Charles P. Gabeler, Donald MacDonald, William Moore, Joseph O'Brien and Joseph C. Sullivan.

The following were honorary bearers: T. F. O'Erien, P. A. O'Connell, Bradley Palmer, James L. Richards, Bernard Rothwell, Rob-

Child Swallows Pin; Needs No Operation

A pair of Andover parents were very much worried last Thursday morning when their five-year-old daughter swallowed a little pin with which she had been playing. Rushed to the Boston Eye and Ear Infirmary on orders of Dr. Blake, little Constance Welch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Welch of Elm street, was thought at first to be in need of an operation, but on Sunday she was able to return home again, having passed the pin herself normally.

Doctors at the infirmary kept careful watch on the progress of the pin, and by Friday noon were able to announce that an operation would not be necessary.

Constance had been playing with her dolls when the mishap occurred. Her father and John Caldwell, a business associate, drove her into Boston.
