Stainer's "Crucifixion"
Of all the Passion-tide cantatas none is as universally known and loved as Sir John Stainer's "Crucifixion," a meditation on the Sacred Passion of the Holy Redeemer, to be presented at Christ Church tomorrow evening at 8. The text consists of various excerpts from the Gospels with selections from several religious poems arranged by the composer.

Stainer was organist of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, during the last part of the 19th century. After he composed the "Crucifixion" the vast cathedral would be crowded to the doors on Good Friday afternoon with devout worshippers eager to hear once again the deeply moving drama of Calvary expressed in such simple and understandable terms.

The cantata will be rendered by the full choir of men and boys with Ben Redden, tenor, and Leland Buzzell, baritone, as special soloists.

News of Other Days

Fifty Years Ago

—In one of the show windows of Parker's drug store are some handsome specimens of orchids in blossom, which are attracting considerable attention.

—A century hence, when like Pompeii, the town of Andover is being brought forth from ruins and burial, to a second life, archeologists will wonder and exclaim at what could possibly have been the cause of such a complete destruction of a beautiful town. Lest, as their labors progress, they should fail to find the reason for such destruction and in despair cease the rebuilding, may we not suggest that some such inscription as this be cut in solid granite and stood upon a firm foundation where it would never decay.

"Swallowed up by mud, A. D. 1891, 6,000,000 inhabitants buried in the full glare of four thousand dollars worth of electric light."

The warning from such a message would undoubtedly influence the government of the newly resuscitated town to vote at least one hundred dollars for sidewalks in 1991.

—Charles L. Carpenter, who has been employed for the last ten months as civil engineer on the Nicaragua canal, arrived home on Tuesday.

—Mr. Emil Hoffman of Ballardvale secured three handsome wild ducks Thursday. Woe be unto the bird that comes in range of his gun!

Twenty-five Years Ago

—When Doctor Abbott, the long-time member of the Board of Health, made the positive statement in the town meeting on Wednesday evening that there was an actual need for a sewerage system in Abbott and Marland Villages, there was nothing further to be said and there was no other decision to the fairminded men of the town than to approve the appeal made for such a system. Until that statement was made, there was little likelihood that the necessary two-thirds vote would be secured.

—One of the best speeches heard in a long time in town meeting was that by Mr. Frost in the sewerage discussion.

A quiet wedding took place last Friday evening at the residence of Rev. Frederick A. Wilson when Archibald O. MacLaren and Miss Margaret Murray, both well known young people of the town, were united in marriage. Miss Annie McGrath was the bridesmaid and Samuel Murray, best man.

How About This Abolishing?

One of our town meeting near-truism is that to insure anything's defeat the best plan is to get one of our well-known town meeting characters to speak for it—and vice versa to insure an article's passing get Mr. Burns to speak against it. Statistics will show that this is very nearly always true. But did you notice that at times he has the germ of a good idea there, buried unfortunately under his exhaustive and exhausting treatment and his anti-official vituperation? (He'll probably quote that at the next meeting.)

His general plan at the recent town meetings seemed to be to abolish the playground committee, the bathing beach committee, the committee for co-ordinated recreation, and the tree warden, and to turn over all these duties to the Board of Public Works. They were turned down of course because most of the argument was directed against individuals instead of against a cumbersome governmental set-up. When you close your ears to town meeting verbosity and think it over, isn't it rather silly that we should have one committee for playgrounds, one for a swimming beach and one for ice-skating when it's all under the general head of recreation. If they're to be co-ordinated—and they should be—one committee would be better.

It might be a good idea to have a pretty thorough study of our governmental organization made to see if unnecessary committees exist and if so to eliminate them with a view of wiping out any possible waste of time and money. There is a question for instance of whether we need—or have—a street lighting committee. There is a question of consolidating the tree department with the park department under the Board of Public Works. There is the question of the town treasurer, who according to the finance committee has other functions in other towns. There is a question about collection of water and tax bills, some suggesting that all collections should be incorporated under one head. There is a question of whether we need a nine-member school committee.

Anything we can do to make our government less cumbersome means efficiency—and we can use some of that.

Hail the arrival of Spring!...According to the noise of the battle yesterday, Winter wasn't too ready to give up his throne, but Spring, like Farley, chose to run regardless...and the snowy old man was on his annual vacation at 1:24 with lightning speed...and today appeared the first straw of spring... at 1:98...

And very soon now the Capitol sport of logrolling will be discarded as all Washingtonians go to the laundry for the annual egg-rolling...where it is each year significantly proved that even the most hardboiled crack up...which is the fate which Britain's War Secretary Stanley seems to be wishing on us, "ringside critics"...but if everybody were inside the ring instead of part of the audience, who would pay for the fight?...or is it a wrestling match?...Mr. Stanley ought to give credit where credit is due... (and so, indeed, ought US.)

Evidently we are not supposed to go around rejoicing at our own good fortune at getting ringside seats...and perhaps, we realized, even before Mr. Stanley told us...that there's always the chance that the fight may even get out of the referee's hands and break through the ring...

But regardless of Mr. Stanley, let us rejoice...

Barbara Sellars and Ruth Hardy are particularly joyous these days since they discovered that they both are to attend the Delta Delta Convention at Mackinac this summer...Barbara was chosen as a delegate from Boston University and Ruth from Middlebury college and the two sorority sisters are looking forward to a glorious time in the Rogers' region...

And better still, it's rumored that "The Reward of Crime" is being considered for a bigger and better performance...since many, many people who wanted to attend last Saturday were turned away because there wasn't even standing room and many people who didn't go last week are sorry that they didn't... And honestly, Mr. Stanley, you don't expect us to sit through that without laughing?

A gay round of events as spotted by the Townsman's candid camera eye, shows (1) the originality of the Punchard students who attended the Service Club costume ball last Friday night overpowered by the frolicsome spirit of the faculty. Mr. Hamblin can be seen reviewing the Grand March as Fu Manning, Doc Doherty, Russian Gwen Armitage and Swissian Frank Kefferstan paraded by. The fisherman in the corner is Marion Macdonald. The coquettish senorita in (2) smiling irresistibly at spectacled Cosmo Medolo is Mrs. Emma Carter. Cosmo, incidentally, was the winner of the prize awarded for the funniest costume. Joan O'Riordan and Judy Hardy (not pictured) were the winners for the loveliest and Marjorie Foster for the most original. (3) glimpses Miss Dunn garbed as a gypsy flower petaler followed by Donald Carter in a loudly striped sweater. (We don't know whose back that is.) In

(4) the expressions worn by the large audience at George Washington Hall Saturday night when the Play Production class gave their incomparable production, "For The Love Of Gold" are the result of such hilarious scenes as (5) barefooted bathing beauty Robert Woolsey who made a big splash with his solos and his retinue of modest waders who were more decoratively shoed; and (6) Dingbat, alias George Adams, who was snapped back stage just after he completed a correspondence course in physical culture. In (7) Gisela Bolton, Barbara Brown and Doris Sawyer are pictured costumed for their roles in "Pride and Prejudice" presented in Davis Hall Saturday night by Abbot Academy. Fred Barrett, (8) high scorer for Greeley's bowling team which recently won the Andover Recreational championship, is shown firing a powerful ball which nearly knocked the cameraman off his pins.

Epidemic Of Split Sides Besieges Andover; 1200 In Stitches

Agony Chorus, Diving
Belles, Feather-Dusting
Janitor Boost Merriment

"Mr. Stevens, may we take candid pictures behind the stage tonight?"

"You surely can—anything goes tonight."

Everything went Saturday night. With a crowd so big that some 200 were turned away and headmaster Dr. Claude M. Fuess had to be satisfied with a seat in the balcony, the students of the play production class of Phillips academy's Evening Study Groups presented Andover with one of its most hilarious entertainments in years at George Washington hall.

But Dr. Fuess was really quite lucky to be in the balcony, because down below on the floor one of his teachers, George Follansbee, serving as a Hellzamoppinish janitor was keeping very busy clearing off bald pates with a feather duster, and in addition this poker-faced nuisance managed to bring the house down with a hirsute Russian dance. Just to make his evening complete, Mr. Follansbee assisted in the quartet, which the program predicted would be "possibly TRIO, possibly DUET, possibly?", but which was actually a quintet, or was it a sextet?

Wit Clark was the accompanist for the quarquinxet and he also started off the evening by leading community singing. After directing the audience through "El du schone, Schnitzelbank," omitting some of the words too hard to pronounce, he went on through "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree," but on the next number he gave up the ship with an unflattering truism: "Aw, you people can't sing worth a hang." We think he said "hang." Accompanying the specialty acts on piano and organ, Whit proved himself very Chico-Marxian, with his costume of plaidish herring-bone, burnt orange predominating, adding much to his undoubted entertainment value. Incidentally, the four, five or six shots you heard back-stage after the last appearance of the male singers were supposed to dispense with them—all the shots really did was frighten the cast.

The academy teachers told us most of the credit for the successful evening belonged to the Adventurers; the Adventurers said most of it belonged to the teachers; others gave much credit to Marvin Stevens, Lois Gingras and individual members of the cast; probably all deserved every bit of praise they received, but it wouldn't be cricket to overlook the part played by another group, the audience. The program said: "Spectators are graciously permitted by the management to show their approval (or disapproval) of the Players by applauding or HISSING! The projection of missiles upon the stage is strictly forbidden!" A limp, fragrant onion remained just over the footlights when the curtain finally went down and the audience was limp from laughter at the booing and the heckling that had emanated from its own ranks. Deep in the most melodramatic moment of the ultra-melodramatic play "The Reward of Crime," one character says: "Am I a fool?" From the audience came the answer. Long talks, presented very much akin to a high school valedictory, found their dramatic effect, if any, broken by a radio-minded spectator with "Step down" a la gang-busters or "Sold-American." Someone who apparently has taken in shows at the erstwhile Atheneum in Boston shouted a familiar remark at Virginia Graham when she was taking off a Mae Western gal in a sultry-voiced rendition of "Edie Was A Lady, Though Her Past Was Shady." During another tense moment in the drama, someone shouted: "Where's Ding-bat?"

The specialty acts between the scenes proved the most popular part of the program, Dingbat not the least of these. George Adams, husky normally, played the acrobat reinforced by arm and leg muscles made of wool, which bothered him not a little off-stage. Alice James' singing of "Dingbat, the Acrobat," proved that she had a voice which gave her as much right to starbiling as Dingbat's prowess. Robert Woolsey, academy teacher attired in a long bathing suit of wide orange and black stripes, brought down the house with his rendition of "Won't You Come and Splash Me?"—a role for which he was picked because he said he couldn't sing. Carolyn Howe, in bridal array which should have stayed in her hope chest, gave "Waiting at the Church" every bit of pathos that that pre-spinster state of affairs deserves.

Back-stage the principals and the crew members had as much fun as the audience, and the more the audience heckled, the more the participants enjoyed it. Even usually stern-visaged Steve grinned broadly at the remarks from the audience as he whispered "Hold it, hold it," through a half-open door in the set. The only tense moment back-stage came when Marie Leonard, waiting for her cue, became convinced that the zipper at the back of her dress might unzip at any moment.

The program warned that the personnel of the cast and committees might change at any moment. Not listed on the program was the Adventurers' Eddie Weeks, who back-stage served as head husher, worrying himself sick about the noise in the wings. Also not listed was Prissy Hallowell, whose prior publicity was responsible for tying up traffic on Andover Hill. Others listed were: Stage crew: G. Clifford Emmons, chairman; Leda Schultz, Josephine Sacco, Lily Brockelhurst Booth, Theresa Casey, Agnes Doyle, William Christie, Preston Wade and Walter Rankin; costumes: Dorothy Wade and Constance Gregg, co-chairmen; Mrs. Hans Haakonsen, Raymond Ouellette; Properties: Margaret McFarlin, chairman; Doris Anderson; sound effects: Reta Buchan, chairman; Nancy Hird, Isobel Fenner; lights: Charles Armitage; make-up: Jesse West; prompter: Adeline Sacco.

The cast of the play was: Roscoe Dake, Frederick Hinman, John R. Hall, Thomas O'Donnell, George Driscoll, Marguerite Pecteau, Marie Leonard and Evelyn Cilcus.

In the sexseptoctet were Bart Hayes, Hart Leavitt, Fred Allis, Dan Tower and George Follansbee, ex officio.

MEMORIAL HALL LIBRARY NOTES

The following books have been added to the Memorial Hall Library:

TALES BEFORE MIDNIGHT, BENET. Those who remember with pleasure that rare yarn, "The devil and Daniel Webster" will welcome this varied collection of short stories. Mr. Benet is considered one of the finest of the contemporary prose writers as well as a distinguished poet. His narrative poem, "John Brown's Body," won the Pulitzer prize in 1929.

HOME FROM THE SEA, BER-MANN. This story will appeal to all readers who have enjoyed books by Robert Louis Stevenson for Dr. Bermann tells us about the last two years that the famous writer spent in Samoa. In one sense, it is more than a novel for it is based primarily on Stevenson's letters and all the biographical information is correct. A better understanding and sympathy toward the great writer is the reward of all who read this book.

ONE PAIR OF HANDS, DICK-ENS. A great granddaughter of Charles Dickens writes about her experiences as a servant with an effervescent wit and an insight into human nature which characterized the writings of her famous forebear. Although consistently entertaining, there is the deeper and more serious problem of domestic service in the background and the obvious need for better methods in meeting them.

LANDS OF DELIGHT, EARLY. This cruise book is a sequel to Miss Early's West Indies travel book, "Ports of the Sun" and covers ports in northern South America and the Caribbean sea to which it is considered safe to go during war-time.

Study Child Welfare At All Day Meeting

Over thirty members of the Andover League of Women Voters met at the home of Mrs. Stafford Lindsay, Andover League Chairman of the Department of Child Welfare, on Tuesday for an all-day institute on the subject of child welfare.

First of the speakers was Miss Marion Joyce, Director of Child Guardianship under the State Department of Public Welfare, who explained the work of the division of Child Guardianship. The most important work is the care and supervision of the state wards, of which there are over 8200, from two weeks up to twenty-one years old. These children are divided into four categories: (1) Dependent children, that is, children with no family, (2) Neglected children, committed to state care by the courts because of physical or moral neglect, (3) Delinquents and (4) Wayward children, those who are growing up in a vicious or demoralizing atmosphere. Miss Joyce outlined the procedure followed by the department in the case of each child turned over to it. First he is given a complete medical examination by the staff doctor, and medical care is provided if necessary; he is then outfitted with clothes, a three-month wardrobe; then he is placed in an approved foster home. The department visitors visit him there at least four times a year. Babies up to three years old are usually placed in homes near Boston where they can be visited frequently. Miss Joyce emphasized the great necessity for treating these children normally in the community so that they may feel they are not stamped as "state wards."

One of the greatest difficulties now is that the department often does not receive enough money to support children through school. Children now receive board up to 16 years of age, but if they are retarded and have not finished school, or if they are brilliant and deserving of further education, they have to earn their own living by working during their school days in order to complete their school work.

Miss Joyce spoke of a bill now being drafted, which would safeguard children in Massachusetts up to fourteen years of age. Some children now live in appalling conditions in private boarding homes, and the state department has no authority to interfere.

Second speaker of the morning, Mr. Chester Grant, a member of the Massachusetts Child Council and State chairman of the department of Child Welfare for the American Legion, told of Legion work for under-privileged children of the community. $3,750,000 was spent last year, only part of which went to children of veterans. In speaking of the juvenile delinquency problem, Mr. Grant declared he is not in favor of the extension of the court system. Special justices and court rooms would add to public financial burdens, he stated. Legal training does not equip a judge to deal with social problems, and juvenile delinquents could be better dealt with in individual cases by trained and sympathetic individuals.

A buffet luncheon was served to the guests and speakers, and after luncheon, Mrs. Lindsay introduced Mrs. Autumn Ryan, Acting Manager of the Haverhill Field office of the Old Age and Survivors Insurance, who explained the titles under the Social Security Act which provide care for children. Title 4, Aid to Dependent Children, is the most important of these. There is also provision for grants for Maternal and Child Welfare, and Aid to Crippled Children. All these forms of aid are financed by both state and federal funds.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY CLAN AUXILIARY

Mrs. Archie Davidson was elected president of the Clan auxiliary at a meeting Tuesday night. Other officers chosen are: vice-president, Mrs. Ann Renny; chaplain, Mrs. Jean Wood; secretary, Mrs. Margaret Grant; financial secretary, Mrs. Catherine Lefebvre; treasurer, Mrs. Daisy Gorrie; conductor, Ella Petrie; assistant conductor, Louise Keith; guard, Agnes Cairnie; sentinel, Jennie Cairnie; pianist, Mrs. Marie Souter; American flag-bearer, Isabel Maclaren; Scottish standard-bearer, Mrs. Mary Smith.

The installation will take place April 18.

BENEFIT CARD PARTY

The second annual card party of the Catholic Daughters will be held Monday night in the Parochial school hall. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the St. Augustine's church.

Door prizes will be awarded to guests holding the lucky tickets.

BRIGGS-ALLEN NOTE

The Briggs-Allen school will close today until Monday in observance of Good Friday.

Blackfaced Endmen Are Minstrel Show High Lights

The entire cast of the Andover Men's club minstrel show will hold a rehearsal Sunday afternoon at 3:00 in the club rooms. With two weeks remaining before the presentation, April 5, at Memorial auditorium, Director William McLaughlin and pianist William Burbine are very well pleased with the progress of the rehearsals and with the antics of William Valentine and John Burbine, the premier ends. Both men are well experienced in the art of black-face singing, comedy and dancing and their novel manner in making an entrance to the show is sure to be one of the highlights of the evening.

James J. Gorrie, Jr., George Gorrie and Martin Darby are repeating their good work of last year and George Brown who has appeared in "old time minstrels" makes a particularly amusing endman. James Davie and Harry Duke, both newcomers to the footlights, are already taking their parts like veteran troupers.

George Platt is in charge of tickets which may be purchased from members of the association or from members of the cast. Edward J. Lefebvre is chairman of the Minstrel show committee.

The Kanone ski club, which has been proving more and more as winter melts into spring that one certainly can if he puts his mind to it, enjoyed the "long, long trail awinding" down Cannon mountain last week-end and if the spin from the top was interrupted now and then by a string of enforced landing, well, one can keep on trying, can't one?...

Dorothy McDonnough, Virginia Wise, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Phillips and children, Harold Rudder and Elmer and Gladys Grover found that the sport writers weren't just taking a shot in the dark when they reported that Cannon was "go d" nor d'd a few thousand "skidood'ers" (apologies to Time magazine) who crowded the tramway...

A party from Lawrence, Andover, Boston and points between which included Eddie and Dorothy Coates and Ruth Newton, spent the week-end at Raymond, N. H., where the main sport was throwing another log on the fire at Camp Onway... although tobogganing was also indulged in...

Ronald Valentine, Midge Buchan and John Lowe returned to North Conway where the conditions at Cranmore had been improved by the week's snowfall... The ride home, however, was impeded by a fat tire which suggests that a stouter shoe should be worn on ski trips even by wieldy vehicles... Bertram Morgan found Keene, N. H., just as good as it sounds and Richard Simmers and Robert MacMackin went as far as Franconia Notch...

And even when the March lion is tamed, Spring ski enthusiasts won't be taking it on the lamb until May rears its Lady Slipper and the real kick comes in tennis and golf... and horseback riding to boot...

Then Ski Tales will have to come to an end unless the Gulf stream marches southward and northern climes are still herringbones...
