He is a graduate of Andover-Newton Theological school and Harvard University. His wife, May Louise, is a graduate of Portia Law School. They have a five-year-old son, Levering, III. The Free church and the South church, which have been holding union services, will go back to their former schedules, with services at the Free church at 11:00 a. m. and at the South church at 10:45.

LIBRARY NOTES

Fredrikson — Picnic book, prepared for the National Recreation Association. This book includes the planning and preparation of a picnic, food and its preparation, fire and fireplaces.

Jaeger—Wildwood Wisdom. Mr. Jaeger has written this book for the amateur as well as for the experienced woodsman. Illustrated with detailed line drawings, the book gives information about equipment, packs and clothing, shelters, fire making, the use of ax and knife, camp cookery. There is also material on canoes, canoes and portaging, trailcraft, stalking and calling animals.

Graham — The Gentle Art of Walking. "It is a gentle art, know how to tramp and you know how to live." . . . And then there are those who have lived an outdoor life, been men of nature, lovers of the open road, who have chronicled their experiences for us in an unforgettable way. Let them speak for themselves!

Hazlitt—Table Talk. In his essay On Going A Journey Hazlitt writes "One of the pleasant things in the world is going a journey but I like to go by myself . . . out of doors nature is company enough for me . . . Give me the blue sky over my head, and the green turf beneath my feet, a winding road before me, and three hours' march to dinner . . . and then to thinking."

THOREAU—Walden. Thoreau would have us make of walking a pilgrimage, a great adventure, for in his essay on Walking he tells us: "I have met with but one or two persons in the course of my life who understood the art of walking, that is, of taking walks, who has a genius, so to speak for sauntering . . . We should go forth on the shortest walk, perchance, in the spirit of undying adventure. If you are ready to leave father and mother, and brother and sister, wife and child, and never see them again,—if you have paid your debts, and made your will, and settled all your affairs, and are a free man, then you are ready for a walk."

Hudson — Afoot in England. "The point now is that in walking even in the poor way, when, on account of physical weariness, it was often a pain and weariness, there are alleviations which may be more to us than positive pleasures, and scenes to delight the eye that are missed by the wheelman in his haste, or but dimly seen or vaguely surmised in passing—green refreshing nooks and crystal streamlets, and shadowy woodland depths with glimpses of a blue sky beyond—all in the wilderness of the human heart."

Stevenson—Travels with a Donkey. In his delightful account of a journey taken in the mountains of southern France, accompanied by the unreliable but lovable donkey, Modestine, Stevenson describes in this manner the pleasures of a night in the open: "Night is a dead monotonous period under a roof; but in the open world it passes lightly, with its stars and dews and perfumes, and the hours are marked by changes in the face of Nature. What seems a kind of temporal death to people choked between walls and curtains, is only a light and living slumber to the man who sleeps afield."

Books For Russia

The Memorial Hall Library will serve as a collection center for Books for Russia, a drive sponsored by Russian War Relief.

Russia needs a million books in English to restock the libraries pillaged by the Nazis and to meet the demands of the readers eager to learn about America and England. Enduring peace is built on friendship and understanding and books are the best kind of bridge builders.

In his recently published book Patterns of Soviet Power, Edgar Snow writes that he found "The hunger for knowledge of English and American culture far greater than any time in Russian history. . . . Before the war the Russians had always had a certain respect for German culture but little of that was now surviving except a reverence for German music, and for Goethe. Seen from Moscow, England and France were all that was left of continental culture, the only sources from which Russian intellectuals felt they could draw inspiration. They deeply sensed the need for enriching their own literature by opening new doors to England."

The books requested by the Soviet people, according to Russian War Relief, are of the type generally regarded as "good books." Only books originally written in English are desired. Paper books will not be accepted, and all books must be in good physical condition. Bookplates are provided and anyone donating a book or books may write in his name and address, thus "providing a permanent reminder on Soviet Library shelves, of America's collective and individual friendship."

A son to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilkens, 23 Center street, Ballardvale, at the Lawrence General Hospital Monday.

CHRISTAS MAILING

In order that Christmas parcels may reach our boys and girls overseas on time, they should be mailed between September 15 and October 15, the earlier the better. Packages to China, Burma, India, the Middle East and the islands of the Pacific should be mailed as early as possible because of the distances involved. These dates apply in particular to Army personnel, as Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps parcels may be mailed throughout the year without a special request.

Not more than one Christmas parcel will be accepted for mailing in any one week when sent by the same person to the same addressee.

Parcels should not exceed five pounds in weight or 15 inches in length, and should be packed in a strong container, such as metal, wood or solid fiberboard. Each box should be tied securely with strong cord, as sealing tape may become loosened.

Christmas cards for Army personnel overseas may be mailed at any time, but it is advisable to get your cards in the mail before November 15, in order to be sure that they will be delivered in time for Christmas. Cards must be sent in sealed envelopes and at the first-class rate.

No Evading

Over a thousand Andover boys are going to be back in Andover within the next year, boys who gave up their jobs to make our town and other towns all over the world safe from aggression and international banditry.

Some of them left good jobs; some of them fresh out of school had not had a chance to secure employment before they went into the service of Uncle Sam. But a place has to be made for all of them, whether they had been dislocated or not.

Early in the war and even during the war this obligation to take back men who gave up their jobs was in general considered a very serious one by nearly everybody. But in the latter part of the war there was a tendency to take it more lightly, and undoubtedly there will be some chiseling, some excuse-making, by employers who have found replacements better than the men who left. To try to evade the obligation is to take advantage of a situation that the employee was far from being responsible for; had the war not come along, he would still be in his old job and the more desirable replacement never would have been found.

The fellows that left to enter the service did so because they had to, they felt a definite duty to. To most it meant a real sacrifice, the uprooting of business and home ties, the loss of a couple of years of what could well have been spent in progress in a business way. They left; they probably would rather have remained at their work. It is up to employers now to do their part, as the employees did theirs, without chiseling, without evading. In some cases it won't be easy; in some cases it will be a sacrifice — but over a thousand boys left Andover willing to make the supreme sacrifice, and their employers now should do everything in their power to restore them to normal living, to put them back where they were a couple of years ago, to let them resume their old place in the economic world just as if the war had never happened.

Let's not have any unemployed servicemen in Andover.

HURRICANE WARNING!

Since 1926 seven hurricanes of disaster proportions have swept over various sections of the United States. All of them struck in September. Two hit Andover.

Less spectacular but more frequent, our Nor'Easters and summer wind showers take their toll in ripped roofs, smashed windows and toppled chimneys.

Some day soon the wind may choose to demonstrate its destructive force on your property. Be prepared and be protected. The cost is small.

This is the first paper collection this Fall and surely your papers must have piled up since the last collection. All that is asked of you is that you tie these papers neatly into bundles; have them on the curb outside your house and we'll do the rest! To be sure, we've seen V-E Day in May and V-J Day in August, but don't forget that we still need to save our papers for salvage. These paper collections will be continued every six weeks until the shortage in paper pulp has been eliminated.
