Long-Sought "First Portrait" of Lincoln Found in Memorial Hall Library

A long search for Lincoln's "first portrait" was terminated when Miss Miriam Putnam discovered it among the possessions of Henry G. Torr, bequeathed to the Memorial Hall Library in 1914. Miss Putnam is shown viewing the drawing with Mrs. Phillips Barry, wife of the artist's son.

Chance played an important part in the discovery of what is thought to be the first portrait of Abraham Lincoln drawn from life, back in 1860 when the great man was the newly nominated Republican candidate for President.

It was discovered hanging unobtrusively in the main room of the Memorial Hall Library where its clear, straightforward eyes have often crossed with the dreamy glance of a reader, pausing perhaps to consider the realm of the imagination into which the pages led. How often did a fleeting communion serve as a reminder that great courage and great strength, great deeds and the men who accomplish them can exist outside of books?

Lincoln, standing on the brink of his greatness, his far-seeing eyes looking into a troubled future, was impressive because Lincoln was an impressive man. Few gave thought to the uniqueness of the portrait. It was a picture of Lincoln and any picture truly characterizing the man is sufficient in itself. It does not need the story of the artist or of his meeting with his subject or the tumultuous period of history in which both were involved to give it importance.

And so the portrait has not received undue notice since it was bequeathed to the library more than thirty years ago.

It was just by chance that on February 12 of this year, while riding home from Boston on the train that Miss Miriam Putnam, perusing the Christian Science Monitor, happened to read an article by Horace Reynolds on "Lincoln's First Portrait." It told of a young artist, Charles Alfred Barry, journeying to Springfield, Illinois in June, 1860. Upon the request of certain prominent Republicans of Massachusetts to draw a portrait of Abraham Lincoln, then the party's candidate for president. "His intention," Mr. Reynolds said, "was to make a crayon drawing from life that could be used, on his return to Boston, as a study for reproduction on stone by 'an eminent lithographer'."

"They want my head, do they?" said Mr. Lincoln, "Well, if you can get it, you may have it; that is, if you are able to take it off while I am on the jump. But no quills in my nose. I've had enough of that, and don't fasten me into my chair."

"Mr. Barry didn't stick quills into Lincoln's nose," Mr. Reynolds went on to say. "He didn't fasten him into a chair, either. He followed the more modern method of observing his sitter at work, in the Executive Chamber in the State House."

Mr. Lincoln is quoted to have said to the sculptor Volk two months before in Chicago, "Mr. Volk, I have never sat before to sculptor or painter—only for daguerreotypes and photographs," which indicates that Barry's was the first portrait of Lincoln to be drawn from life.

Mr. Reynolds concluded his article in the Monitor by saying, "No one knows where the crayon drawing is today. When last heard of, it was in the possession of Mrs. Esther A. Hilton of Boston, who has since passed on. Copies of the lithograph are rare indeed. Drawing and lithograph form a record of some historical importance. If the original drawing is lost or destroyed, perhaps the photograph of it in the possession of Mrs. Phillips Barry, is the most authentic record we have of the first portrait of a truly noble man."

Accompanying the article was a picture of the lithograph by J. E. Baker. It was not unfamiliar to Miss Putnam, who had, many times a day, during the course of her duties at the library, gazed at a similar portrait of Lincoln.

As soon as possible she compared the similarity between the portrait in the Monitor and the portrait on the library wall and found them almost identical. On the lower right corner of the drawing was written, "Charles A. Barry, Artist, Springfield, Illinois, 1860." Believing in the authenticity of her discovery, she contacted Bartlett Hayes, Jr., of the Addison Art Gallery who carefully studied the drawing and agreed with her conviction.

Punchard Entered in State Tournament

The annual Massachusetts Schoolboy Basketball Tournament in Boston Garden next week will have a new entry when the Punchard team with a record of 12 wins against 3 defeats takes its place in the Class C competition. Coach McKiniry is to be congratulated for the showing his boys have made this winter, which influenced their debut in the State Tournament Basketball.

Punchard will make its first try at 2:15 Tuesday afternoon at the Garden against Somerset. The semi-finals will be held on Thursday afternoon and the finals of all classes will be completed on Saturday evening.

Ashland High, coached by a former Punchard athlete, Harold "Sol" Walker, has also been invited to participate.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET

Last Monday night, the Inter-Church Basketball League held its final meeting of the season and the first banquet of the organization in Memorial cafeteria. Over 200 fathers and sons sat down to a delicious dinner served by the mothers.

Our front cover pictures Arthur G. Schwarzenberg and son Allen enjoying the meat loaf dinner. Mr. Schwarzenberg has two sons who played on the West church team, but only one is included in the picture.

After dinner those present adjourned to the auditorium, where trophies donated by Harold Whitworth were awarded to the winning teams of the Junior, Intermediate, and Senior leagues. St. Augustine's lead in the Junior and Intermediate leagues. The Free church team won the Senior award.

Short talks were given by the ministers of the churches represented, with Charles McCullom, chairman of the banquet, introducing the speakers.

In behalf of the clergymen, Rev. Henry Smith, O. S. A., presented a gift to Donald Dunn, who supervised the inter-church basketball sports program.

Mrs. Phillips Barry, the widow of the artist's son was then notified and she brought to the library her photograph of the original, and the two were compared, both by Mr. Hayes and by Warren Beach, a graduate student in Museum, training at Harvard, who also holds the first fellowship in Museum training offered by Addison Gallery.

Mr. Hayes expressed his conviction that the portrait possessed by the library is the original of the photograph owned by Mrs. Barry since the lines and areas of tones are identical. Some loss of tone and line is evident in the enlargement of the photograph from the negative, which Mr. Taves accredits to the lack of expertness of the photography.

There is no reason to believe that a copy of the original was made, but should it have been, it is Mr. Hayes' opinion, there would not have been the line for line reproduction as a copyist would inevitably handle the drawing differently, nor would his hand have the same surety and the differences would be noticeable upon inspection. He said that the portrait in the library is done on old paper in the manner of the 19th century and that the photograph exactly reproduces the handwriting of the artist's signature appearing on the original.

During the course of the investigation, Mr. J. L. McDorison, Jr., a student of Lincoln's portraits, viewed the portrait and later wrote to the library, "I feel confident you possess the original drawing by Barry. If so, it is a treasure!"

The portrait was bequeathed to the public library by George Henry Torr of Andover, along with a collection of books.

Mr. Torr was born in Rochester, N. H., in September 9, 1825 and he came to Andover in 1858 as a bookkeeper for Smith & Dove Company. He served as president from 1893 to 1906 and as director until 1912. His death occurred on November 4, 1914 and the library records note on June 8, 1915, the bequest of Mr. George H. Rorr, giving to the library "his private library not otherwise disposed of, together with a portrait of Mr. Lincoln." A notation by Mr. Torr on the back of the picture states, "Portrait of Abraham Lincoln which was painted for a Boston Republican club by Charles A. Barry, Artist, Springfield, Illinois, 1860." No further records of the picture, and how it came into Mr. Torr's possession, have as yet been brought to light.

Mrs. Barry, whose husband was the artist's only son, stated that the original was lost sight of several years ago. The drawing which first went to the Republican club of Boston, later came into the possession of Mr. Hilton, a trustee of the club. The artist was unsuccessful in his attempts to reacquire the picture from the Hiltons.

In later years, in attempting to trace the portrait, Phillips Barry found that no mention was made in Hilton's will of its disposition, although it is possible that it became the property of their only descendant, a daughter, who spent most of her time in Paris. Mr. Barry's further attempts to locate it came to nothing.

The link between the Hilton's ownership of the portrait and Mr. Torr's acquisition of it, is missing and the missing data holds the key to the complete history of the portrait's possession.

Charles A. Barry, himself, lived until 1892, and the article written by Mr. Reynolds in the Monitor is based upon the artist's own account of the drawing which appeared in the Boston Transcript the year of his death. According to Mrs. Barry, he did a lot of magazine illustrations in his youth, also crayon work, and a few oils. For eight years he was head of the Boston Art education in the public schools, and first director of the Rhode Island School of Design. A very conservative and religious man, he terminated his position after disagreeing with the trustees over the use of models in the life classes.

What shall be done with the portrait is as yet undecided, but at the present time it is hanging in its usual place in the library, the same rough-hewn features with their pioneer strength, the same calm mien, the broad brow, firm chin and understanding mouth, are still the same as they were last year, and the year before, but the value of the reproduction has been enhanced.

It may be that in the future, the portrait will find its way to some museum more easily attainable by the public. Lincoln was a frontier man who could not be wasted on the frontier but was called to the center of the nation to give it heart. Now that the rarity of the drawing has been determined, will Andover feel that it can not rightfully hold Lincoln's "first portrait" within its small boundaries, or will it feel that, properly lighted and publicized, the portrait belongs in the town's Memorial for Civil War Veterans?

Lincoln was one of our nation's first internationalists. Is it not fitting that his portrait should be shared with the world?

News of Troop 3

The first March meeting of Troop 3 was held in the Christ church vestry at 2:30, Tuesday afternoon. A pleasant surprise awaited the girls as the Scout Director, Mrs. Marion Lebourveau, was there to teach them some folk dances. These turned out to be: "Skip to My Lou," an American dance, and a Polish toe dance.

The remainder of the meeting was then devoted to singing Girl Scout songs led by Miss Butler, the Troop leader. The meeting adjourned at 3:45.

Troop 27

Parents and friends are cordially invited to attend the next meeting of the troop on March 12 in room 3 of the Junior High school.

New Director

Mrs. John Lebourveau is the new director of the Lawrence district. She held the first meeting in the Memorial Hall library Tuesday evening, March 4, for the local leaders, to whom she explained the relationship of the individual troops to the district, state and national organization. Those leaders present were: Mrs. T. John Johnson, Mrs. Harrison Brown, Mrs. Frederick Peterson, Mrs. Arthur J. Smith, Mrs. Walter Curran, Mrs. Donald Nash, Mrs. Alfred Sughrue and Mrs. Ortstein.

Mrs. Franklin Bigelow and President Mrs. Walter Mondale represented the Central P. T. A., sponsors of the troops, at the meeting.

A second leaders' meeting is scheduled for March 20.

Red Cross Representatives To Canvass Andover Homes

One hundred and fifty-eight Andover women are making a canvass of homes in the community to allow every citizen the opportunity of becoming a member of the American Red Cross. Andover Chapter has always gone well over its quota, even in the war years when it reached a new high—when the services of the Red Cross expanded to all the countries where American Armed Forces were stationed.

The peace time work of the Red Cross is no less important. Services to the wounded and hospitalized veterans continue. Assistance to the physically-well veteran in making his post war adjustment continues. Production of garments for countries still suffering the effects of bombardment continues. Services within our community to citizens in need continue. The support of the District Nurse by the chapter continues for the present. The calls upon the chapter to fulfill local emergencies as well as national emergencies continue.

The work of the Red Cross goes on, past services are enlarged upon and new ones are instituted wherever there is need.

For these reasons and for others, the good citizen welcomes his Red Cross representative and is proud to put the symbolic sticker in his window.

Punchard Has Near-Win Over N. Y. In Close Game

In a nip and tuck game, that gave Punchard the lead at the end of the third quarter, Saturday night, the visiting New York team gained the point that counted in the last minute of the game when Harry Sudeuth, the Babylon team's star pivot, tossed in a foul point.

The two teams were evenly matched throughout with Punchard having a slight edge until the last quarter, and the large crowd present in the gymnasium saw a good show from the beginning.

The Punchard Jayvees defeated a hard fighting Junior High five with a score of 24 to 22 the same night that wound up the basketball season for the year.

Large Cast For "Peck's Bad Boy"

On Friday evening at 8:00 in the Memorial Auditorium, the Junior High School Dramatic Club will present the play, "Peck's Bad Boy." The cast has been working hard for several weeks under the direction of Miss Angelo. Proceeds from this production will be used to purchase uniforms for the boys' and girls' athletic teams.

Others, too, have been doing a great deal of work to make this production a success. A group of seventh grade girls spent many hours during their vacation last week helping Miss Marshall prepare scenery for the play. These people were Frances Dunlavy, Ann Merchant, Lucille Spinella, Dorothy Hastings, Nancy Penwell, Constance Markert, and Mary Fielding. Jack Morgan and Alan Wilson, also of the seventh grade, have been of great assistance in moving scenery and setting it up.

The publicity for the play has been in charge of Miss Stevens, assisted by Raymond Collins. A poster contest was held in connection with this, and three prizes were awarded to Frances Buckley, Dawn Dunn, and Kent Donovan. These and other posters are on display in several of the stores in town.

Ushers, in charge of Miss Stimpson, aided by Claire Ann Archambault, are Mary Green, Nancy Chadwick, Eleanor Bateson, Lolita Machon, Helen Glennie, Elizabeth Boloian, Edward Lawson, Bancroft Fredrickson, John McCarthy, Clifford Lawrence, and Frank Wright.

Others aiding are as follows: tickets, Miss Grover, assisted by Lewis Skeirik; lighting, Mr. Dimlich, assisted by Dorothy Dodge; scenery, Miss Marshall, assisted by David Morgan; and programs, Miss Dantos.

The cast of the play follows:

Defeated

The Junior High basketball squad played its last game of the season on Saturday, March 1. Their opponent was the Punchard Junior Varsity, who trampled them by a score of 34-22. They were older and a bit more experienced than our boys, who fought hard to keep in the game. Mr. Dimlich's club gave those Punchard cagers plenty of opposition during the first two periods, but not enough for those high school stars, the Floyd brothers. Our boys fought well and hard and we were very proud of them. John Ross led with nine points. The game record for the year is seven wins, six losses. On Saturday night at the Punchard game, the Junior High boys wore their new sweat jackets, purchased by the Student Government treasury, and they looked mighty good.

Miss Judith Colmer of Yale avenue, attended the annual reunion of the Hampshire Camp for Girls at Atkinson, N. H., on Saturday.

Engineering Department Subject Of Discussion, In B. P. W.-Townsmen Get-to-Gether

We attended a meeting of the Board of Public Works Monday evening, by invitation. Any of you who think you would have liked to have been a fly on the wall shouldn't get your hopes up; we were received cordially, and the discussion was a non-acrimonious résumé of the town engineer situation about which we have written a thing or two in the past.

Had you been a fly on the wall, this is about what you would have seen and heard. We took a deep breath and knocked on the door; just as deep as our breath was the voice which said: "Come in." So in we walked, acting as if we weren't a bit nervous, we think. Possibly some of the members hadn't known we were coming, because we got the impression that underneath their breath they were saying: "How does that guy have the nerve to walk in here?" We wondered ourselves a bit as to how we had it.

Chairman Sid White asked us to take off our coat; the next thing we thought he might say wasn't forthcoming, so we didn't have to roll up our sleeves. John Kelly suggested we sit beside him, a request which we gladly complied with because it was the nearest chair to the door. On our left was Fred Doyle, just about to approve our bill for printing the town water bills; facing us were Eddie Doyle and Sam Caldwell, and down at the end was Sid with Superintendent Ted Lawson at his desk.

Sid stated that we had sent him a letter asking certain questions in regard to the town engineering position, and he had accordingly invited us to the meeting to ask them in person, which we did. What's going to happen, as was predicted last week, is that Article 24, which called for the establishment of a town engineering department at a cost of $5000, is going to be withdrawn; the announcement of withdrawal to be made by Mr. White at the time the regular budget is being considered. With finance committee approval, the sum of $1500 is to be asked for in the regular budget for engineering services, and then under Article 6, the sewer construction article, $27,000 will be requested, of which $3500 will be used by the town engineer, Mr. Gilliard. It was stated that the finance committee had wanted the $1500 split up between water maintenance, highway construction, etc., but the Board felt that this would be hiding something and would deprive the voters of a chance to act independently on the engineer problem.

The original plan as stated by Mr. White when Mr. Gilliard was made town engineer last October was to lay it on the table at town meeting in a special article to see if the town really wanted a separate engineering department. That was dropped because of the finance committee request. But the board had had the article inserted, with the feeling that other departments would want to avail themselves of the engineer's services. They figured that the assessors could use Mr. Gilliard instead of the Haverhill engineers for their survey work on homes, and this would absorb about $700 of the $5000. But it turned out that the assessors didn't want the B. P. W. choice for engineer; later in the evening Chairman Roy Hardy explained that his board did not feel that Mr. Gilliard was qualified for this particular survey work, involving as it did a constantly up-to-the-minute knowledge of building construction and costs, etc. The B. P. W. had figured that having been building inspector for years, Charlie could do the work, and they emphatically felt he should be given the chance. But that's the way the thing stands now; the B. P. W. said to the assessors, "We have an engineer; won't you take part of him?" and the assessors replied: "No, we don't want any of him." Who's right we don't know; maybe the voters will.

Well, that left a problem. Here's a town engineer, but only the B. P. W. wants him, so really he's only a public works engineer. The finance committee helped solve the problem by the $1500 and $3500 compromise arrangement, which doesn't save the $700 assessors' expense but does save, according to the Board, quite an engineering fee on the sewer work in addition to saving the job. It was stated that Weston & Sampson, the consulting engineers, who laid out the sewer project, have agreed to the substitution of Charlie for their engineer.

This sewer project is a lengthy one, and there's much more to be done on the water construction project. Probably the town will save some money by using Mr. Gilliard on these jobs. What bothered us was the future of the job under normal construction plans. But there is a future, according to the Board.

We asked what Charlie had been doing since October. Most of it, he has been bringing plans and records up-to-date, the Board estimating that they were a year and a half to two years behind. We were shown some of the books that have to be brought up-to-date, and also some of the blue-prints and plans on last year's water works. Those puzzled us a little. We wondered why if we had paid so much to Weston & Sampson they couldn't have prepared those plans as part of the job; we thought to ourselves that they must have made plans before they started the work; why should we pay a town engineer to make the plans all over again. Besides, all the plans said down in the corner: "Weston & Sampson, Consulting Engineers"; a blue print we were shown as a sample of the work Charlie was doing not only had the Weston & Sampson credit down in the corner, but it also said "February, 1946" and that of course was months before Charlie became town engineer. Our right leg began to twitch at that point, as if somebody were pulling it a little. A little questioning revealed, however, that the original plans were made by W. & S. with Charlie transferring the detail to the town record books.

Anyway, that's the kind of work the engineer will be doing, and of course it's very necessary work that everyone would rather have Charlie do than an out-of-towner, other things being equal. The Board told us that when the time came that there wasn't enough work for a town engineer to do, they certainly wouldn't be in favor of a town engineer, but they did feel that for several years there would be enough work.

There were other things discussed more or less in general. They pointed out the money they return each year, and the reductions in their budgets, but in our best editorial manner we generalized that it wasn't how much money was spent but how well it was spent.

It was all very pleasant, interesting and worthwhile. Of course there was a little propagandish budgetary flag-waving about the taxpayers' interests, etc., and we'd swear one of the members thought he was scaring us a bit with his pseudo-forceful talk, but, all in all, after subtracting the things that didn't mean anything from the things that did, we counted it an evening well-spent. As we were leaving, we were extended a cordial invitation to drop in at any time.

We probably will.

THIS SOBER TOWN . . .

Never, never, again!
We're going to stick to news-gathering in the future, no more nudes-gathering for us.
It was last Saturday afternoon. We were about to leave the cares of our business world behind for a few hours, when in strolled a couple of female members of our staff, bent on an errand of mercy to pub-lize those who need funds for er-rands of mercy, the Red Cross. They had contracted to decorate a few store windows in town for the annual drive, and so what could we do? We of course had to offer to help, especially since we were told that the job involved some picking up and toting around of display material which the advertising department at Sutherland's in Lawrence had kindly agreed to loan the local chapter. Models, or something, they said to be carried to the car, and you can't expect a couple of girls to do that.

So along we went in the assistant editor's car, and blithely the three of us walked up into the advertising office. The two girls paused a moment, but when we saw a couple of young ladies standing there stark naked, we almost turned quickly with a few profuse and confused "Excuse me's." But the ad manager was standing there as if everything was all right, and a second glance, which maybe we shouldn't have taken convinced us that the ladies were dummies, albeit very realistic ones. Two young men were standing near the door as if they wanted to get out of their job of carrying the models down the three flights of stairs to the car. They did it; we just weren't up to it.

The two inanimate ladies were loaded into the back seat, and then a Red Cross flag was draped over their hitherto undraped bodies. Coming out of the alley from in back of Sutherland's, just as we were crossing the sidewalk, the car balked on some ice, and for a couple of minutes we were stranded while pedestrians looked in the back seat rather curiously. We couldn't imagine why, because after all the flag was covering them, but when we got going again and looked in the back seat, darned if the flag hadn't dropped to half-mast! We used one of the arms from then on to give proof through the ride that the flag was still there.

After the girls had dressed one of the models in the Saturday-afternoon quiet of our office, they carried her down to Dalton's back-door and lifted her in feet-first. Charlie yelled to his assistant to get some aromatic spirits of ammonia, a lady had fainted; the assistant took one quick look at the two feet coming in horizontally, and rushed for the spirits.

Hereafter the Townsman motto becomes: "All the nudes aren't fit to carry." But then, we'd do anything for the Red Cross—well, anything that won't get our faces as red as the cross.

Last week we had one of those typographical errors that do much to stir the fancy. It said: "every good American citizen of Andover should make his way to the poles."

Future town election warrants will undoubtedly say: "Voters in precincts two, three, and four will vote at the North Pole; voters in precincts one, five and six at the South Pole."

Or did we mean that good American citizens should lead a dog's life?

"In my own way"

Again and again you hear it said: "I want to live my life in my own way."

It's a universal desire. But it finds its most active and determined expression in America. It is one of the reasons why 73,000,000 people in this country own life insurance.

The policies which these 73,000,000 own are symbols of our American spirit of independence. They are one of the proofs that we want to live our lives in our own way . . . that we want those dependent upon us to live their lives in their own way . . . that we want them to be able to do so in spite of possible emergency or disaster.

These policies, too, are the symbols of something more.

They are the evidence of our intent and purpose to shoulder our own responsibilities. And this perhaps is more important than all else. It is the willingness to shoulder our own responsibilities which enables us to work together and to live together, to create great industries, to build fine communities, to become good neighbors and good citizens, and to live our lives in our own way.

WHERE TO GO .. AND WHEN

Monday is town meeting night and the newly elected moderator, Arthur Sweeney, will pick up the gavel at 7:00 p. m., as he leads the large gathering expected at Memorial Auditorium through the articles of the 1947 Town Warrant. Whether the budgets will be cut, the salaries raised, new equipment bought or the old made to do is, expected to bring out a large number of taxpayers.

The "Yes" vote on the equal pay referendum indicates that the voters are not going to be niggardly, although economical. Perhaps one of the most interesting debates will be regarding the number of members to be retained on the school board. Arguments pro and con the present size have been circulating around town and no doubt will find their way to the floor Monday night.

It will probably be a full house, so come early and reserve your seat.

"Bachelor Bride"

For romance and adventure, the direction to go is WEST according to the advice prescribed in "Bachelor Bride", a two act comedy now being rehearsed by the dramatic group of the A. P. C. sorority. Presentations will be given on Thursday and Friday, March 20 and 21, in the South church, curtains rising at 8:15.

The romance an adventure is being sought by a New England school teacher whose trip results in her marriage to the wealthiest bachelor in town. The other women are out to "get" Mrs. Standish and go to some little bother to prove her a fraud. Luckily they only succeed in bringing a mighty attractive love affair to a climax as the curtain goes down on a "They lived happily ever after" ending.

The play is under the able direction of Mrs. Gordon Colquhoun and Miss Marion Hill is in charge of tickets which may be secured directly from her or from any member of the cast.

The roles are taken as follows: Priscilla Standish, Mrs. Nancy Shea; Mrs. Cheney, Miss Frances Videto, Mrs. Jameson, Mrs. Margaret Robjent, Marilyn Jameson, Miss Ruth Anderson, Mandy Sue, Mrs. Mildred Wribht, Mrs. Oakley, Mrs. Betty Fitzgerald. The masculine part of Prof. Latham will be played by Mrs. Ruth Taylor.

Its an exciting play with a romantic plot.

Best regards, Blondie, Dagwood & Family

Flower Show Next Week

Working day and night against the opening bell Monday afternoon at one, the construction crew of the 76th New England Spring Flower Show has gone into high gear at Mechanics Building. Carpenters are building houses, waterfalls, fences and brooks, plumbers are turning on water that will tumble and splash or mirror surrounding flowers, electricians are arranging lights, and painters are splashing colors around. As soon as they complete the framework of the Show, gardeners will move in, cover the wood and canvas with soil and peat moss, and then arrange the million bulbs, plants, shrubs and trees that make up the 100-odd gardens, features and displays that comprise this year's preview of Spring.

Flower Show week this year will run from Monday through Saturday, daily, ten to ten, save Monday, which is one to ten.

The Show is built around the theme, "Gardens for Better Living." There are multitudes of new gardeners in New England now, most of them eager to continue their Victory gardening pleasure and profit. Any gardener, no matter what his needs or his pocket-book, will find both information and inspiration at this Show. It will help him garden better, and that means live better.

Junior High Play

"Peck's Bad Boy" is Friday night at 8:00 p. m., and those who have forgotten the date will do well to hustle up to the Memorial auditorium and see if there are any more tickets available. It's going to be a good show!

Spring Frolic

The Punchard Alumni is sponsoring a Spring Frolic at Memorial gymnasium on the evening of March 21. It is not yet publicised just what a spring frolic consists of, whether the March lion and the lamb will do a polka together, or whether all the gamboling will be done by the Punched Alums present, but it sounds like a good time. Tickets are only fifty cents and may be purchased from committee members Harold Bendroth, John McGrath, Ruth Anderson, Mary Gates, William Broderick, James Doherty, James Ryan or Betty Buchan after next Tuesday.

Vote Light As Incumbents Return To Office

All the old faces are back in office, and there are two new ones as a result of Monday's election. The vote was light, but there was considerable interest, with some of the incumbents apparently having engaged in a little last-minute worrying.

Most notable features of the results were the closeness of the public works vote and the interesting display of strength by Elizabeth L. Buchan, the woman candidate for selectman. In her first entry into politics, Miss Buchan received 923 votes for the town's highest position, selectman, with incumbent J. Everett Collins polling 1517. For assessor she received 933 to Mr. Collins' 1493.

Leon Davidson had not been considered too seriously as an aspirant for public works, but he polled 1000 votes to Sid White's 1340. In this contest, there were an unusual number of blanks for a two-entry race for an important position, over 100 voters apparently having preferred blank to White or Davidson. A stronger candidate might well have won the election.

In the five-cornered race for the three school positions, Mrs. Partridge topped the field easily, having a 280 lead over Mrs. Baldwin. The latter had a 63-vote margin over Vincent Stulgis, who became the new addition to the school committee, filling the position left vacant by the retirement of Gordon Thompson. In fourth place was Norman Miller with 1066, and Harold Wennik was last with 1000.

Attorney Arthur Sweeney, runner-up for moderator a year ago, was successful in this election over John F. O'Connell. Last year's moderator, Rev. Frank E. Dunn, has moved out of town.

The only other contest was for constable, but the three present constables, George Dane, Lew Smith and George Sparks, won easily over Benjamin Brown.

Andover's voters favored equal pay for women teachers and men teachers by the sizeable margin of 1280 to 618. This it was estimated last week would mean an increase of about $2000 in the school budget.

Precincts two and five produced the largest amount of dissenters, or anti-incumbents. In two, O'Connell led Sweeney by two votes, and in the Vale precinct he led the winner by 14. Collins had only a six-vote margin over Miss Buchan in precinct two, and in five he led by only 14. In these two precincts, Wennik led the other two men, and in precinct two, he was even ahead of Mrs. Baldwin.

Only 2488 votes were cast out of a total registration of 6914.

The first returns from the precincts came into the town house at 7:40, and the last precinct reported at 8:20. This is one of the earliest reports on the election returns in the town's history.

League Sponsors Town Tax Study

How much do you know about the way in which your town goes about raising money?

At home you would never dream of planning to buy this, that or the other thing without first knowing how you were going to get the money. Yet all too often there is a tendency to push for improvements in community services without first evaluating the financial resources for the support of such projects and the tax picture.

The way in which, the money is raised is no less important than the amount. Do taxes fall fairly on all members of the community? Is the administration efficient or haphazard? Is there waste through use of outworn or careless methods? Is there poor overall management of local finances? Can these things be improved?

These questions and many others will be answered in a series of tax studies sponsored by the committee on structure and administration of government of the Andover League of Women Voters with Mrs. Ralph Spector as chairman.

The first meeting which will be attended by Thaxter Eaton, town treasurer, will be held Friday afternoon at 2:45 in Memorial Hall library. Chairman of the Board of Selectman Roy Hardy will be present at the second meeting to be held in the Library at the same time on March 14. A third meeting is also scheduled during which the members will consider an evaluation of the material brought out in the study.

Mrs. Spector has been assisted in arranging the meeting by Mrs. Reginald Holt, chairman of Economic Welfare, Mrs. D. Kingman Webster, chairman of Local Affairs, and Mrs. C. Edward Buchan, chairman of the Education committee.

League members and their friends are urged to attend these meetings for a better understanding of the town budget and the property tax which is the main source of funds for the community.

Historic Tableaus

Given in Village Program

"Great Moments in American History," arranged and produced by Mrs. Henry W. Inman and Leicester G. Inman and presented by the dramatic department of the Shawshen Village Woman's Club, Monday night in the school auditorium, was attended by a large group of members and guests. Mrs. Chester Wells, president, presided.

Mrs. Philip Costello, chairman of the dramatic department, was the narrator, who gave a brief history of each tableaux. Various members of the dramatic group participated in the tableaux.

Appropriate music by the First-

Calvary church choir of Lawrence, with Raymond Wilkinson at the piano and Mrs. Dorothy Cornwell and Myra Stone as soloists; all under the direction of J. Everett Collins, was greatly enjoyed and added much to make each painting complete.

Authentic costumes, unique lighting, repetition of history that will live forever, and splendid music went to make up a program which drew comments of "very good and beautifully done."

The tea table was artistically decorated and Mrs. Walter C. Caswell was hostess chairman.

Exchange Students' Letters Report Privations In Britain

(Reprinted Through the Courtesy of The Phillipian)

The following letters were written by Andover alumni who are now at school in England. We hope that they will arouse more interest in these exchange scholarships with English and other foreign schools, and that they will give some idea of conditions in England. The following excerpts are from one of Danny Anderson's '46, letters. He is now attending Wellington College.

"For over two months now I have been a student at Wellington, and I must take this opportunity to write and thank you for this scholarship and tell you of my condition.

Food Adequate

"Wellington is a wonderful school. Although not as sumptuous as Andover, it is beautiful and its facilities are more than adequate. Contrary to what I was led to believe before I arrived, I have quite enough food, and good food too. Everything is different here. I have thirty hours in class a week, but much less work when out of class. They have no soccer at all here, so I spend my afternoons on the Rucker field, which is the best sport I know. I like it more each day.

"The boys here are wonderful. They have been good to me in every way and not once have I felt as if I were a 'foreigner.'

In the following letter, from Andy Flues, at Christ's Hospital, some different opinions of conditions are expressed.

"I have been at Christ's Hospital for roughly three months now, so I feel that I am in a position to make some comments on the life in an English public school.

"Within a week after my arrival at this school, I had been made a monitor and a Grecian, a very kind and generous action on the part of this school and quite typical of the way in which I have been received over here. Everyone has gone out of his way to make me feel welcome and 'at home' here.

Life More Ascetic

"The life in an English public school is definitely a good deal more ascetic than in an American prep school. In the first place their appointments are neither as luxurious nor as modern as our own. Fortunately, Christ's Hospital has one of the best central-heating systems in England. But it seems to me that all Englishmen have a mania for opening windows regardless of the weather outside. At first this caused me a little concern, and I could be seen practically every morning following my housemaster about and discreetly closing the windows which he had opened. I soon became quite accustomed to colder temperatures indoors, and now I find myself inclined to agree with the English that our rooms are often kept too warm.

"... I have not had much of a cold and consider myself to be in fair health save for a bit of diarrhea caused by the extremely unpalatable 'kippers' that we have every morning. Yes, I have stopped eating them.

Clothes Situation Critical

"Do you find the boys shabbily dressed? ... Things have been worn a great deal, yes, but I would not say 'it is a land of odds and ends and well-mended tatters' ... Clothes are worn and mended, granted, the situation is critical ... but every man does not look like Walt Donnelly or Jim Fitch. Any real American coming here should know that even neckties are rationed, and bring his own supplies so as not to deprive someone who may really be in need.

"... Our main meal usually consists of a boiled potato, greens, a piece of boiled fish, black bread, a tiny bit of butter, tea and an apple. For supper we have a tablespoonful of beans or spaghetti on toast, bread and jam or butter, as long as our week's ration lasts, which is from Monday night until Thursday night (then we eat it dry the rest of the time). Since we are a school, we have a small glass of milk every night and we are luckier than most ... It (ice cream) was almost tasteless and with it we had two small bananas, about the size of 'frankfurters.' The little boys went wild over it. What is a subnormal dessert in America is a rare treat here ... I am extremely lucky. I have had six eggs in six weeks."

The following letter, written by Walt Aikman to his family, answers some more questions on life in England and points out many specific customs of English schools.

Sports in All Weather

"In this letter I will answer various questions that have appeared in your frequent, welcome letters. 'Have you had the rain that you expected?' No, we have a great deal of fog, and I suppose rain at night, but the weather has not been too unpleasant. I have worn a raincoat several times and have carried an umbrella when I was not sure of the future ... However, I do not like to carry one, for it is an Athletic Club privilege to carry a rolled-up umbrella ... Now, Mama, comes the part that will make you worry. We are not allowed to wear overcoats, raincoats (macintoshes) down to athletics, regardless of the climatic conditions. Games take place every day regardless of weather. ... But all winter long, snow, hail, ice, sleet, or rain, we play Harrow footer and Rugby footer (in the fall). We wear our bluers (the blue coat we wear during the day) over our athletic clothes ... down to athletics and have to leave it on the ground. It is a little hard to leave it lying on the ground when it is raining and then have to put it on wet, but I am used to it now. Days at Andover, when all games would have been cancelled, are never considered bad here.

War Surpluses For Veterans

According to information received from Washington by John E. Millea, Boston Regional Director of the War Assets Administration, the WAA will offer fifteen million potential veteran-purchasers approximately $58,000,000 worth of war surpluses set aside exclusively for veterans and simplified the procedure by which the surpluses may be acquired.

The 33 WAA Regional Offices have been permitted to establish their own regional set-aside lists from items available in their inventories and that are not ordinarily available in the commercial market at the present time.

Along with these additional set-aside items, a simplified procedure has been established whereby World War II veterans can purchase for their personal use items from the set-aside inventories by presenting their honorable discharge papers or release papers.

On the national set-aside list of 101 items there is offered to veteran-purchasers approximately 28 million dollars' worth of motor vehicles, medical and dental equipment, typewriters and office furniture, and physiotherapy equipment.

As an example, WAA cited the March set-aside list for one region which contains binoculars, motion picture cameras (16 and 35 mm.), graphic cameras, studio cameras, printers, enlargers, driers, microscopes, cash registers, adding machines, dictaphone machines, laundry equipment, driers, pressers, extractors, walk-in refrigerators, reach-in refrigerators, air compressors and projectors (16 and 35 mm.). The March set-aside list for another region was confined to field glasses, watches, bicycles and concrete mixers.

WAA Administrator Robert M. Littlejohn emphasized that in no instances shall items abundantly available in regular trade channels be included on regional set-aside lists, nor will these lists include items which come under any FWA, HE, CPA, WAA, or other emergency directives or regulations.

To Lead Meeting At N. Y. Convention

"Education for Citizenship" is the theme of the 21st annual convention of the Secondary Education Board, a national organization of more than 250 independent schools, being held March 7 and 8, in the Hotel New Yorker, New York City.

The Rev. A. Graham Baldwin of Phillips Academy, is chairman of the section meeting on "Religion," on Saturday afternoon. Topic for this group meeting is "What Foundations for Citizenship Has Religion to Offer?"

Mr. Joseph Staples, also of Phillips, was a member of the nominating committee for new officers for the coming year.

Past - Present - Future?

PAST—DEPRESSION years of the early thirties, NO JOBS, BARTER AND EXCHANGE OF MERCHANDISE—BANK CLOSINGS (you may have been caught with not even care-fare money in your pocket at that time)! BUT, LOW, LOW, prices where food was concerned. We want you to take a look at our store window, the prices listed on a 1932 "AD" will make you "GASP FOR BREATH."

PRESENT—Today, prices generally, are coming down from "HIGH WAR LEVELS"—One thing however, which everyone should remember is "COST AT SOURCE". Until production takes care of that "BUG" everything will be "HIGH"—F'rinstance remember when you could buy a new automobile for $700.00 or $800.00?

FUTURE?—We're tackling it right now, and we will not have completed our FIRST YEAR in business until April 1! With a new source of grocery suppliers and a determination to be more helpful to our customers in PRICE, SERVICE, and ACCOMMODATION, we will be giving you "THREE-FOLD" offerings, something that other concerns cannot "GIVE" and besides, REMEMBER, they'll be more "HOT" "COLD" "WET" STORMY DAYS IN THE FUTURE.

MEDICAL CENTER PLAN

An interested group gathered Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Claude M. Fuess in Andover to hear Dr. Charles Davison May, a pediatrician who heads the Out-patient Department of the Children's Hospital in Boston, speak about the Medical Center Plan. Dr. May recently returned from four years with the Harvard unit of the 5th General Hospital. He made everyone realize how wide spread its service will be in expanding existing services and in creating new units; for example, there is to be one especially for the care of adolescents. He also told of the opportunities there would be for research in this first medical center where in the world. Dr. May was

Barnard Essay Contest

Punchard students who are going to write a Barnard Essay, (the Seniors are required to write one, and some Juniors are also) are beginning to make detailed outlines and consult books on the topics about which they will write. Some day next week they will spend the entire day writing the essay. They will sign a pen name to their opus and it will be judged impartially, by the judges. Usually the eight best essays are chosen to be delivered at some later date, and judged by another set of judges on their merits as an oration. The best fun of the whole affair comes when the first set of winners are announced in assembly. The title of the essay is read with the pen names. Some of the pen names are extremely humorous.

Red Cross Course

The students who took the Red Cross First Aid Course are now taking their exams. The present exams are in bandaging and are to be followed by a written test on the whole course. The marks are averaged into the student's gym marks. If an underclassman fails the course, he will be required to take it over again next year.

Babylon Game

Well, Punchard lost the first game in its new rivalry with Babylon High School, Babylon, Long Island, N. Y. The score was close—35 to 34. The Babylon boys stayed at the homes of our boys. Next year we hope the tables will be turned and Punchard will win in New York.

Joint Assembly

Friday, Punchard students will be privileged to hear Mr. Samuel Russell Eves, a modern minstrel. Mr. Eves plays the piano and the accordion, and will favor the joint audience from Punchard and the High School with many selections of a varied nature. This assembly promises to be one of the high lights of the school year, and will be paid for out of the joint activities association funds.

The Junior class is holding its second dance of the year, Friday evening, March 14. The admission is 50c, and Harold Phinney and his collection of popular orchestras will supply the music. The tickets were printed in the print shop of the Junior High school by a member of the Social Committee. The dance is being held mainly to help raise money for the Junior-Senior Prom to be held in May.

Senior Class Book

If you are in business, you have probably been approached by a member of the Senior Class Book Committee and have been politely, but firmly, asked to buy advertising in this year's book. The students are out soliciting advertising, they have written some of the articles, and some of the pen and ink drawings are now completed. It is hoped that the books will be done in time for graduation.

Vacation

Vacations are now over, and most of the students are back in class with glum looks on their faces as they recall the days of doing nothing, skiing, or some other favorite activity. But then, vacation is only eight weeks off. The next one is the April vacation, coming during the last week of April, and then it's the good old summer time.

Budging the Budgets

We liked very much one part of the finance committee's report, and there was another part that we didn't pay too much attention to. We liked the comment on the school department, but we didn't think that the comparison between the rise in school department and library costs and the less-precipitous rise in public works costs meant much of anything.

It's not what you spend; it's what you get for what you spend. In public works we've invested considerable sums in equipment with the department's promise that these capital investments would cut the operating costs. We don't expect a rise in public works normal appropriations except for wage increases; if we're paying more now than we did, we should be getting a great deal more work done. Are we? The average citizen doesn't know, and can't know. We hope we're going to, as the new superintendent gains more experience in his job.

Library Appropriation

The finance committee spoke in a rather aghast manner of the increase in library costs, but the public doesn't mind that too much because they feel that whatever money they give Miriam Putnam to spend, it will be well spent.

The public can't know everything; they delegate supervision of the departments to elected boards, and the administration of the departments is in turn entrusted to paid superintendents. Nobody has to worry much about our library; the library trustees went out of town to get the best possible librarian they could. She's done a grand job; if we give her money to spend, we do so knowing it's not going to be wasted, not a cent of it.

Public Works Appropriation

In public works the board made a shift the past year, something of a compromise in which the department was reorganized to fit the present personnel. We would have liked the board to have had the courage to shop around and get somebody outstanding who could be engineer and superintendent both, even if we had to pay over $100 a week to him. This coming Monday the voters have a chance to act on that decision of the board, but there's not much that can be done about it. The board says that with the special sewer work this year and the necessary work in catching up on town records, there is plenty for the town engineer to do. We might as well see how it works out for a year; if Charlie Gilliard can do it, we'd like him to do it. The new superintendent should have longer than a four-months' trial, too. There has been some noticeable improvement in the attitude of the workers, but let's have more. What we'd like to see is Superintendent Lawson being given an absolutely free hand for the rest of the year to go ahead and run the department as he sees fit, without feeling that he has to ask advice of any member of the board. We'd like Ted to do a real house-cleaning all the way through, and we know it would be difficult because having worked in the department for years, he has old friends whom he wouldn't like to discharge. But his first loyalty is to the town, not the employees—and if the latter want to show their loyalty to Ted, they should do everything in their power to do a good job. We hope Ted will in turn delegate some of the responsibility and authority to some good department foremen. And the best thing that could happen to the department would be for the Board to meet on Mondays as usual for the few weeks after town meeting to take care of awarding contracts, etc., and then to meet only once a month thereafter as the school committee does. Give the superintendent a free hand; he gets paid for running the department; let us see how he can run it without having the five board members to worry about.

And the Schools

And now the school department. What we liked about the finance committee report was the note:

"The appropriation of $265,131.00 for the School Department is approved as necessary to provide for that department as presently operated. We believe, however, that without impairing the process of educating our children the cost of maintaining the department can be reduced by consolidation of schools, revamping the grouping of school years and a critical appraisal of the value and indispensability of each of the department employees. The necessity of seeing that we get value for our money is shown by the following table:

Year	School Budget	Pupils Enrolled
1932	138,708.00	1470
1937	185,098.00	1478
1942	203,784.00	1475
1947	265,131.00	1412

We were told, when the new school buildings went up, that there would be very slight increases in operating costs, that no new subjects were planned. But look at that 15-year increase in costs: 58 fewer pupils, and costs almost double. Of course salaries have gone up, and salaries are the biggest items in a school budget, but still, double costs can't all be accounted for this way.

If it took $400,000 to run the school department and give our youngsters an A-1 education, Andover would be delighted to do it. But the town isn't too happy about its public schools, and not at all sure that it will get $265,000 worth out of the $265,000 it is expected to appropriate this year.

We'll get castigated for this, and we'll probably lose a few more friends, but sometime someone has to publicly say that our schools, particularly Punchard and the Junior High, aren't up to snuff. The system needs the fine-tooth-combing that the finance committee recommends, a recommendation which we understand the school committee is planning to comply with. We'd like to suggest that rather than the school committee working alone on this survey, a separate committee consisting of some members of the school board, some of the finance committee, and some representatives of the public at large be appointed by the moderator to study the matter. Sometimes a committee can be too close to a problem to see it in its proper perspective.

We think a great deal can be done in reducing school costs and in giving our children a better education, a better upbringing, a better set of values than they're now getting. Somebody's going to have to be hardboiled; somebody's going to have to really say what he feels; somebody's going to have to get hurt—BUT every year 1400 Andover youngsters are going to get a mighty good education, and every year Andover's taxpayers won't have to cough up $265,000 to make that education possible.

Be Fair with Dick

Dick Abbott, tree warden, has some more special articles this year. They're contained in a supplementary warrant, to be acted on at the end of the meeting. Unfortunately the Taxpayers' Association gave a blanket disapproval because of its policy against special town meetings, but what actually happened was not the tree warden's fault; his requests should be judged on their merits and with the same consideration that all the other articles get.

It will be late in the evening. People will be tired and will want to leave. Dick is not a forceful talker. But let's be fair and give our tree warden just as much of a hearing and just as much objective thought as every other department gets. It will be the easy way out to say "No" to his three articles; let's say "Yes" if we feel that he needs what he has asked for.

Leave It Unexpended

We haven't spent that money for the grader. It's been ordered for a year or so, and there's no definite promise yet. We assume that under one of these last articles concerning the fate of unexpended appropriations, this grader appropriation will be mentioned by Town Treasurer Eaton.

It's a big investment for a machine that probably we won't have a great deal of use for, now that we have the bulldozerish tractor that arrived a few weeks ago. You'd be surprised how few communities have such a machine, and with only about nine miles of good road left in Andover, we can't see where we should spend many thousands of dollars for this piece of equipment.

We can do without it. Let's.

Whose Business Is It?

Saturday night we received a telephone call that disturbed us considerably. It wasn't because we don't like telephone calls that come in on a Saturday night when we're trying to make a game bid on a hand that we shouldn't even have opened with; the subject of the call was one of the things that can't fail to excite the ire of anyone who wants to earn the right to be really called an American.

A fellow named Stulgis was running for school committee. His biographical sketch told of his educational background, which included St. John's Prep, a Catholic school; his church affiliation is with Andover's Christ church, Episcopalian. The phone caller wanted to know why, and we explained that he had gone to St. John's because of its excellent educational rating.

We suppose it's the same way everywhere, but in Andover we want to be better than everywhere. In Andover too often in the past religion has been a factor in local elections. Too many Catholics vote for a Catholic only because he's a Catholic; too many Protestants vote for a Protestant only because he's a Protestant; too many Catholics vote against a Protestant only because he's a Protestant; too many Protestants vote against a Catholic only because he's a Catholic. With some people—and we're glad it's not the majority—qualifications don't count, religion alone does.

Bigotry is insidious; it's catching. Some people suspect that one creed is supporting a member of their own creed, and to offset it they'll support the member of theirs. Let's clear our minds of these un-American thoughts; let's elect people because we think they are the right ones for the office, not because they belong to a certain faith. Their religion is their own business, not the public's; it certainly shouldn't enter into any pre-election talk or into any election-day thinking and acting.

Can't we in Andover prove that we're Americans, real Americans, by being above such things?

Public Life and Private Life

We received a communication over the week-end from a reader who thought that our treatment of school committee candidate Wennik last week was not fair, and Mr. Wennik's advertisement in another paper implied that he had assumed we meant a great deal more than we did. When Harold came to our office a few minutes before he took out nomination papers, he told us in his usual dramatic and lengthy manner that he did not want to run but so many delegations had asked him to, that finally he had acceded to their requests.

THE ANDOVER TOWNSMAN, March 6, 1947

He asked us then if we would support him, and we said "No." Our refusal to support him was founded on the impression we've had of Harold for a long time, as shown in our response to the communication as printed below. Anyone who knows the type of reading matter contained in the Townsman knows that we don't bother with anybody's personal life, but do deal vigorously with their qualifications for public life. If Harold or any of his friends thought we were casting any shadows on his private life, he or they needn't have; people's private lives are their own, and under our newspaper philosophy are no business of our readers.

Because our answer to the communication sums up our attitude about people running for office and is more specific about our objections to Harold as a school committeeman, we are printing it in part herewith:

"Harold's done a lot of work in town, and we've supported the work he's done. But we're electing a school committee, and we and many others, including, we can assure you, a lot of people with whom he's served on committees, cannot feel that he would be any asset to the committee. . . we believe that his lengthy talks—his tendency toward dramatizing, would make working on the school committee very difficult for the other eight members.

"In anything we write in The Townsman, we consider The Town of Andover above anybody's personal feelings and even above whatever damage it may do us in losing friends. In this instance the town, the school system and the children it serves were far more important to us than Mr. Wennik's, yours, or anybody's else opinion about us. The future of a great many children depends in good part on the school committee; it is important that that committee be just as good as we can make it. To us Mr. Wennik would not have added to it. To others he may have appealed differently, but we have a newspaper here that we've been carrying on alone for years with a determination to serve Andover and only Andover; we would be shirking our duty if we were to hide our true feelings.

"Suicides, divorces — all the other personal things that other papers fill their column with—we're not interested in. To us it's none of the public's business. But it is the public's business when someone is running for office, and when that someone is not equipped in any way to fill that office; someone has to have the nerve to tell the people bluntly. We happen to be that someone. Personally we feel that telling people publicly is far better than the underhanded behind-the-back gossiping that goes on in a small town at election time.

"Any person who runs for public office runs the risk of having it said publicly in The Townsman that he's not qualified for that office; anybody who is in public office runs the risk too of having it said publicly in The Townsman that something he supports was not in the public's interest. That means anybody, no matter who he is, or whose friend he is, or how much he has, or how much harm he could do us in any way. And we can't tell you how nice it is to know that you've done your job without equivocating or without letting the town down.

"Harold's a friend of yours; you've worked together. Harold was a friend of ours, too — but he was running for school committee, and we thought of the schools and the children, not of you or Harold or ourselves."

For Fewer School Committeemen

For economy's sake, for the purpose of expediting school committee business, let's at town meeting vote to reduce the school board membership from nine to five.

It's a grand idea, a sensible idea that will rid the town of an unwieldy board and will provide the town with a board of more quality and less quantity. It's an idea that was presented at town meeting once before and defeated for a variety of reasons that had little to do with the arguments pro and con. The man that presented it that night was just retiring from the committee, and some of the town meeting voters couldn't disassociate that fact from the larger issue.

Let's not let it go this time for lack of proper presentation. Won't some citizens who are interested in a forward step in town governmental organization speak for this article Monday night? Let's do it now.

*Creeper up Mister...

New Books

Woman of the Pharisees Mauriac
Written during the German occupation, the book bears the mark of restraint as the author brings us a new story on the old theme of a "good" woman whose nobility leaves no room for human frailty. Her pious and intense desire to impose her own judgment on those around her builds itself into a pattern that brings its inevitable reward.

Tomorrow Will Be Monday

Marlett
Three sisters, separated into different homes, yet strongly linked together, work out their varied destinies in highly individual ways.

Andromeda Marmur
A thrilling episode of a tramp steamer trying to escape Singapore in the face of advancing Japanese. Each person aboard the fated vessel is aware of the growing dangers, and each reacts in his own way. This is good writing.

Day of the Conquerors Busch
On VJ Day, Mark Gregory returned from his post as foreign correspondent to find that his own world is about to tumble about his head.

Uneasy Spring Molloy
Widowed at forty-six, lost in the complexities of bringing up his family in the season of no available help, aware that his own life is not yet finished, the leading character of this story takes a brief fling at finding a solution satisfactory to himself as well as his children.

Mr. Adam Frank
Mr. Adam is an extremely popular man, so much in demand by diplomats from all over the world, and countless numbers of hysterical women, that the U. S. Government makes him Public Property Number 1. The author takes a broad poke at the world in general in this bit of irony.

Confessions of a Story Writer

Gallico
Gallico sets down twenty-four of his own favorite stories, and tells how each came to be written. In a way, this is an autobiography of Gallico, with a good deal of self-revelation. Superb writing!

Nearby Yates
A charming story, slow in tempo, of a small New England town — its school, and especially its incomparable school-teacher.

One Basket Ferber
Edna Ferber has gathered thirty-one of her short stories, including some of her old favorites — "Nobody's in Town," "The Gay Old Dog," etc.

The Reasonable Shores Stern
"Mother's run away!" From that world-shaking sentence a young girl tried to adjust her thinking and her actions, and act with a maturity beyond her years.

Do I Wake or Sleep? Bolton
Three characters make the 24 hours of the story alive with tension as the plot develops in Flushing Meadows, at the time of the World's Fair in 1939.

The Fair Field Moore
In a style that resembles Dickens is this story of an English market town from 1910-1940 — a town that depended for its very existence upon the surrounding fields and farms, hamlets and villages. The characters that walk through the pages are real, yet the flavor of the book is quaint and unusual, as the hero traces his life from boyhood to the career of auctioneer's assistant.

NON-FICTION

Thank You, Mr. President Smith
Smith is a United Press White House correspondent since before Pearl Harbor and has travelled over 125,000 miles as reporter-shadow of Presidents Roosevelt Truman.

Modern Radio Servicing Ghirardi
Practical text on the theory, construction and use of modern radio servicing in all its branches, and tested methods of selling radio service to the public.

A River Never Sleeps Haig-Brown
Do you enjoy sun and water and fish and fishing? From January through the October run of salmon, Haig-Brown carries his reader along with the zest and spirit of the real thrill of the rod.

Betrayal in the Philippines Abaya
On July 4, 1946, the Philippine Republic was supposedly granted the long-awaited independence. Two months later the young journalist author of this book came to the U. S. This is the story he brought with him, this expose of President Roxas and other collaborators who, as he tells it, joined the Japanese puppet government but were later exonerated by powerful American interests. The author claims America now has allowed another nation to be added to the last vicious outposts of fascism. This book will be a source of much debate and questioning, without any doubt.

My Young Life Temple
An autobiography of the child who not long ago was the darling of all movie-goers — Shirley Temple. The book is well-illustrated, and is entertaining reading.
