Where To Go ...

Just about the only place to go is your favorite vacation spot for the long

LABOR DAY WEEKEND, the last weekend of the summer season. Fall activities will soon be in full swing, and this next week looks like about the last chance to relax with nothing to do but—well, relax. Almost everyone is going away for the weekend, and the National Safety Council is urging everyone to DRIVE CAREFULLY. There is still time to visit that better-than-ever

TOPSFIELD FAIR which closes Saturday night. The pari-mutuel harness racing offers thrills galore, and there are hundreds of agricultural and livestock exhibits. (Don't miss the sheep). Have a nice weekend, anyway.

Locals

Mr. Rubine Kilburn and daughter Ruth, and Mrs. Dudley Young and son Allen, attended the funeral of Mrs. Walter Lawrence in Greenfield on Thursday.

Cynthia Dantos of Elm street returned home Sunday after spending the summer at Camp Hitinowa, Litchfield, Maine.

James Dolan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Dolan of Chestnut street spent the summer at Camp Bonte, Center Harbor, N. H.

Miss Constance Cole of High street, and Miss Eleanor Krushwitz of North Andover are spending the week at Rye Beach, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Davidson of Essex street, are spending the week at York Beach, Me.

Miss Jane Young has just returned home from a visit to Priscilla Tompkins at Hills Beach, Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. James Goodwin and family of High street are vacationing at Hampton Beach.

OUR COVER

The two babies putting their heads together on our cover are the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Keyes of Vestal, New York, at the age of three weeks and five days. The mother is the former Marguerite Richards of Boston road.

The twin on the left is Carol and the one on the right is Judy—we think. But how can we be sure?

Steve

Steve finished running the Townsman cover last Friday afternoon, ran off a few more jobs on his press, and then went off to his little family for the weekend.

This was to be an extra-special week-end. Sunday was Steve's thirtieth birthday, and with his wife and little girl from whom he had been separated for several long years of war, he headed for an outing at Salisbury beach.

Wednesday morning Steve was laid to rest in Bellevue cemetery while his little family and his many friends bowed their heads in a sad farewell. He had gone in swimming at Salisbury, and a young heart that had been strong enough to fight a grand fight on the battlefields of Europe, a young heart that had had the courage to keep secret its hidden weakness, suddenly gave in.

The Townsman Press closed Wednesday morning, and the fellows went over to the funeral. There wasn't one of them who didn't like him, there wasn't one reason why anybody wouldn't like him. His tall thin frame, with a head of curling blond hair, had been a familiar sight here for a year. We're all going to miss him greatly; We're going to miss that smile that broke so gradually and that was so very real. It will take more than time to heal the loss we all feel, for you see, Steve, to every single one of us, was just about the finest fellow we'd ever met.

Hussey's Pond Should Have Bath Houses, Says State

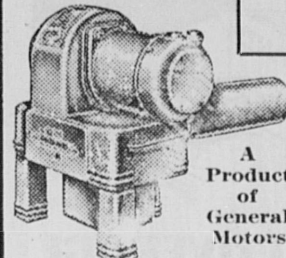

The State Department of Public Health has suggested to the local Board of Health that Hussey's Pond in Shawsheen Village should not be used for public bathing in the future unless bath houses with proper facilities are erected there. The suggestion was made after the usual check-up made at this time of year at the request of the local board. The water at the pond was found to be OK for swimming purposes.

The town recreation committee will be given a copy of the letter from the State Department by the local board so that plans may be made for the 1948 season.

The state engineer found the water and bath houses at Pomp's Pond both at the public bathing beach and at the Boy and Girl Scout camps in good condition.

AT THE LIBRARY

As book publishing tends to taper off during the summer months, so does library book ordering. The stream of new books never wholly dries up, however, and those listed below represent a rather varied selection which will appeal to many reading interests. Attractive as the new books perennially are, book users are urged to browse among the older books in the library's collection for interesting and important titles which they may have missed along the way. For subject interests, particularly, there is no more helpful tool than the library card catalog, an index which opens up the resources of the whole book collection.

When the Cathedrals Were White

Jenneret-Gris
A provocative book by the famous French architect Le Corbusier, who has examined the American city through its prototype, New York City. His revised plan for New York will be exciting reading even for those who do not agree with it. He believes the most profound needs of human nature to be sun, sky, space and trees, and his new architecture will, in making skyscrapers larger and more useful, restore an immense amount of ground, give the city green spaces, parks, excellent circulation, cut down traffic hazards and eliminate the tremendous waste of human energy daily expended in getting to and from work.

Growing Together

Bacmeister
This book is about Americans growing together as children and parents in the family and in the community. A helpful book for parents and the most recent addition to the library's excellent collection of books on child care and training.

Essays in Science and Philosophy

Whitehead
The twentieth century has produced few more able minds than Alfred North Whitehead's. The essays in this present volume, a cross-section of his writing, are divided into four sections: Personal, Philosophy, Education, and Science.

The River Jordan

Glueck
An illustrated account of the earth's most storied river by the director of the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem, an outstanding authority on the archaeology of Transjordan. Extraordinary collection of photographs.

United Nations or World Government

Johnsen
The most recent addition to the valuable Reference Shelf series, this number presents some of the outstanding discussions about the United Nations Organization and World Government. An endeavor has been made to include diverse viewpoints, both favorable and critical.

The Family

Burgess
Burgess develops the thesis that the family in historical times has been, and at present is, in transition from an institution to a companionship. The work has been divided into sections including: The Family in Social Change; The Family and Personality Development; Family Organization, Family Disorganization and Reorganization.

The Hidden Damage

Stern
Sent abroad on a government mission, James Stern, whose knowledge of Germany goes back to the 1920's, has painted a picture in a story-telling technique of the Germany he found immediately following the collapse of the Nazi regime.

Plays

Chekhov
Hartsdale House has issued this new edition, with woodcuts by Howard Simon. The plays included are: The Sea Gull, The Cherry Orchard, On the High Road, The Wedding, The Proposal, The Anniversary, The Bear, The Three Sisters.

Introduction to Russian Literature

Muchnic
Chekhov, Pushkin, Gogol, Turgenyev, Dostoevsky and Tolstoi are the subject of the essays contained in this book, which is an attempt to point out in the production of some of Russia's greatest writers, certain traits that might be used toward an explanation of her art and so, perhaps, of her people.

I Have Two Countries

Ojike
In his earlier book, "My Africa," Ojike wrote of his own country; in the present one, the author, who has been in the United States for the last seven years as student, lecturer, traveler, from his observations and experiences tells in a candid and delightful manner of his second country. It is the true story, as he says, of what happens to a stranger who comes to America, a stranger with a black skin. He believes that the American community provides the ideal opportunity for the growth of human understanding.

Telescopes and Accessories

Dimitroff
Written to appeal to students of science of all ages, the book gives a complete non-mathematical introduction to the field. Well-illustrated. One of the volumes in the Harvard Books on Astronomy series, edited by Harlow Shapley and Bart J. Bok.

"Permanencies"

"It may be claimed (and I admit the weight of the claim) that com- mon and general worldly pros- perity, and a populace well-to-do, and with all life's material com- forts, is the main thing, and is enough. It may be argued that our republic is, in performance, really enacting today the grandest arts, poems, etc., by beating up the wilderness into fertile farms, and in her railroads, ships, machinery, etc. And it may be asked, 'Are these not better, indeed, for America, than any utterances even of greatest rhapsode, artist or literatus?'"

"I, too, hail those achievements with pride and joy then answer that the soul of man will not with such, nay, not with such at all—be finally satisfied; but needs what (standing on these and on all things, as the feet stand on the ground) is addressed to the loftiest, to itself alone."

Communication...

The following is a copy of a letter sent by Edith Nourse Rogers to the sec'y of the Treasury:
Honorable John W. Snyder,
Secretary of the Treasury,
Treasury Department,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

As soon as congress convenes, I shall introduce and ask for immediate passage a bill to improve the paper money of the United States by using different colors for the different values. All paper money one dollar bills, two dollar bills, five dollar bills, ten dollar bills, twenty dollar bills etc. are now green. This sameness of color causes great inconvenience and many mistakes. The one dollar greenback is accepted but the two dollar bill is shunned. The two dollar green bill cannot be used in many parts of the country as it is considered unlucky. The corners are torn from it. It is known as a "hooker" because the person who accepts it is hooked for a dollar if the bill is not identified. Other countries use different colors to identify different values of paper money. The Post Office Department for many years has used colors to identify the value of stamps, green for one cent stamps, red for two cent stamps, blue for three cent stamps and other colors for other stamps. The use of colors to identify the value of paper money will increase efficiency and be a great convenience. I shall advise me whether the Treasury Department has ever considered the use of color, whether legislation is necessary, and any other information and suggestions you may have to secure the improvement. I believe congress will immediately pass any necessary legislation.

Yours very sincerely,
Signed Edith Nourse Rogers
(Mrs. John Jacob Rogers)

Helping out on all the work around the farm

New England farmers have come to depend on the telephone for help in all phases of their work. They use it for such varied things as keeping in touch with buyers . . . arranging for feed and supplies . . . contacting the veterinarian and county agent.

Because we know how important telephone service can be, we're bending every effort to bring telephones to more rural families. Day by day, we're doing the construction and installation jobs needed for this big expansion.

As more of this behind-scenes work is completed, we'll be able to make improvements in service for everyone too. High on our list is the plan to reduce the number of people on party lines.

This Sober Town

Does anybody mind if we curse the kind of typographical grem-linish fate that made the word "Massachusetts" come out "Mass-achusetts" in last week's article on the misspelling of "banana" in Maine.

We're sure that something could be done to modernize cows, to have them keep pace with other improvements. We heard on the radio the other night about a man who had invented something he called "the-cow-without" for those people who don't like milk.

But cows do have to be milked, as one Andover man convinced us the other night. He was talking about an autumn trip to the White Mountains. Asked if he were going by car, he revealed that his sight-seeing trip was to be by plane. Somebody told him that he'd miss a lot that way, but there was a reason for it. "I have to get back here in time to milk the cows," he said.

There are two identical cottages side-by-side up at Hills' beach in Maine. The two families that live

The fathers' first names are Frances and Frank. The mothers' first names are—darn them, they've spoiled all the similarities—Doris and Anne.

Just to keep things straight, the Snows of Andover who own the two cottages call one Bell family "Ding" and the other "Dong."

"That man is alive today"

Kerins -

John Smith wasn't even sure he heard that muffled call for help, but he ran for the neighboring coal yard on a hunch. He and six other New England Electric System men had just halted their line truck across the way when Smith imagined he heard an agonized cry. He yelled to the others to follow — rushed to a coal car that was pouring its load into a pit beneath the tracks — saw a hand sticking out of the swelling pile.

Smith and his comrades tore at the coal with bare hands till the victim's face was uncovered and he could breathe again. Then, with a plank and a jack from the line truck, they halted the flow of coal from the car, which the coal company's employee had been unloading when he slipped and fell into the pit. A doctor and the chief of police, who had already been summoned by one of the New England Electric System men, now arrived and helped to dig the man out. An hour later he was free, and on his way to the hospital.

That man is alive today because Smith and his fellow New England Electric System workers knew what to do and did it — fast. That's one reason why we at New England Electric System train our employees to act in all kinds of emergencies — on or off the job; why thousands of New England Electric System men and women — including employees of your local Electric Company — are graduates of the regular Red Cross First Aid Course. We find that the ability to act intelligently when action is needed helps keep things running smoothly in the System — helps keep ours the "Service You Can Take For Granted".

Receive Cut of German Ship Prize Money

GERARD GAUDET
He gets prize money.

A share of prize money which might range anywhere from $115 to $500 will soon belong to Gerard Gaudet, son of Emmanuel Gaudet of County road, for his part in helping salvage the German cargo ship, Odenwald, off the South Atlantic coast in 1941.

The prize money amounts to $322,211, which will be divided among crew members of the cruiser Omaha, which Gaudet was aboard, and the destroyer Somers, which also figured in the action. The men interrupted efforts of the German crew to scuttle the Odenwald which was trying to run from Japan to Germany under the American flag.

Gaudet enlisted in the Navy in January, 1941, and was discharged October 22, 1945 with the rating of torpedo man, third class.

West Andover to Remain Bus-Less

There will be no bus service for West Andover residents, according to a letter received recently by the town selectmen from the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, advising them that the recent request for service could not be granted. The original petition had been signed by 300 residents of that section, whose dream it was that they might have bus service to their thriving community.

The bus company pointed out that revenues are on the decrease, and that several extensions now operating will soon be abolished.
