Assistant Grid Coach For Punchard Squad

The appointment of an assistant football coach at Punchard high school and the election of a new teacher at the Indian Ridge school featured the meeting of the Andover School committee held Wednesday evening at Goldsmith library of the high school.

Richard W. Weber, 29 South Lawrence, was named assistant to head coach Walter C. Roberts for the coming football season. He will receive $300 for his services during the gridiron campaign.

Miss Alma Freda Bisbee of Saugus was elected to the school system and will teach the first and second grades at the Indian Ridge school, succeeding Miss Jessie P. Brown who retired as principal of the school in June. Miss Dorothy Kyle will become the school's principal when the September term begins.

Miss Bisbee has been teaching in Southbridge, and also had experience in Saugus. She will receive an annual salary of $2900.

Assistant coach Weber is a former star athlete at Lawrence high school and St. Louis University. He played professional football with the Detroit Lions and later was freshmen coach at St. Louis. Presently, he is athletic director of the Lawrence Turnverein. Weber has an outstanding athletic and coaching record, and during World War II saw duty in Alaska, the Aleutians, and as a commando instructor in Scotland. He was a member of the Fort Benning, Ga., eleven which defeated Great Lakes Naval 21-12 in one of the most important service games in 1945.

Feature Shows For Playgrounds

Friday will be a special day on all the playgrounds where the instructors have arranged for various types of programs.

A doll show will be held at Ballardvale, a pet contest will be staged at the Central, a hat show will be the highlight of the Shaw-shen program, and other features will provide entertainment for the youngsters at Indian Ridge and West Parish.

A special request is made to parents not to send pre-school age children to a playground unattended or accompanied by another young child who is incapable of looking after it.

On various occasions instructors have been required to act as nursemaids to these tots instead of attending to their regular duties. A parent or an older child should accompany each tot.

Parking Meters Collect $5101

The parking meters for the first six months of the year collected $5101.91, which is slightly below the $5288.94, which they turned in for a corresponding period a year ago.

The meters in the past have been averaging $35, daily but collections for the past few months bring the average slightly below this figure. The meters are all paid for, and all the money collected goes into the general treasury fund of the town.

Formation of a new Air Control and Ground Observation corps is gradually taking place as part of the local plans for a well-organized civilian defense program.

This experienced group will form a nucleus around which Albert Cole Jr., co-ordinator of the corps, will build his complete organization.

Among those who have signed to date are: Almon M. Daniels, Arthur H. Covell, Mary D. Duggs, Robertina W. Jowett, Eileen Cross, May L. Noyes, Mary E. Burns, Frances F. Wade, Mary D. Winslow, Elizabeth F. Lawson, Mrs. Agnes Waldie, Margaret H. McFarlin, John R. Breckenridge, Edward Cole, Douglas R. Crockett, Herbert H. Otis, Fred H. Otis, James R. Mosher, James P. All set for a delightful time on the swings at the Central playground are Joyce Crompton (left) and her sister, Donna, (right), who are just waiting for their mother, Mrs. Hamil Crompton to furnish the big push to send them away. In the background Sandra Purgin is waiting to see how high Joyce and Donna will go. (Look Photo)

AT THE LIBRARY

The following books have been added to the Memorial Hall library and are ready for a few hours of leisurely, summer reading. Any book listed here may be put on reserve, if it is "out" at the time of request.

World And Paradise Maass
Set in 1629, the period in which the 30 years' war was raging, this is the story of Count Karl von Harrach who, wounded and desperate, stumbled into one of the few spots of peace where he was restored to health by the brethren of the valley and a lay-sister, Rosanna. The adventures and disasters of years cannot destroy the love that develops between them.

The Outlander Guevremont
The "stranger" who never told his name or his story, appeared one day at the door of a farm in Monk's Inlet, a village on the St. Lawrence, and from that day on all those who lived there had profound changes in their lives. The story could have been told of any place where those who are content to stay are confronted by those of the restless spirit.

The Green Bough Ritner
A family story of small Pennsylvania town in the early years of the century.

High Valley Clift
Salom, orphaned as a baby and adopted by Tibetans, is refused by Tibetans and Chinese, and finds himself a man without a country. Beautifully written story!

The Legacy Shute
A long trek of prisoners of war in Malaya, based on actual experiences of a woman and her friends in Sumatra.

The Hepburn Westcott
When Jamie Stuart dethroned his father, Patrick Hepburn, the hero of this adventure plus story, was battling his enemies and fighting his own soul in his love for Lady Jane Gordon. Author also wrote "The Border Lord."

And here are a few mysteries: Something About Midnight, Olsen; The Motive, Piper; The Bulldog Has the Key, Bronson; Death Knocks Three Times, Gilbert; The Case Of The Seven Bells, Bush.

The Beginner's Book Of Needlecraft Bolander
Knitting, crocheting, weaving stitches, hooking, embroidery, smocking, etc.

Handicapped Child Stern
Studies problem and treatment of children who are crippled, victims of cerebral palsy, epilepsy, blindness, deafness, speech difficulties or handicapped otherwise.

How To Have A Better House Haagen
This is one of the best of the modern would-be home builder.

Uttermost Part Of The Earth Bridges
Lucas Bridges, bom on Tierra del Fuego, has left us this fine record of his life on the island and the native tribes whose cause he understood. Fascinating!

Car On R. R. Tracks, Man Is Fined $50

A Lawrence man, whose automobile ran along the Boston and Maine railroad tracks here at 1 a. m. on July 7, was fined $50, in Lawrence District court Friday.

Joseph A. Corey, 44, 159 Ferry st., Lawrence, pleaded guilty to charges of operating under the influence and drunkenness when he appeared in court for the second time following a continuance. Earlier, he had pleaded not guilty.

Corey was arrested by Patrolman William Tammany of the Andover police who investigated a report that an automobile was on the railroad tracks near the railroad station. The officer testified that the small truck had been hit by a train and some damage caused to the fender and tire. When Officer Tammany arrived on the scene, he found Corey behind the wheel smoking a cigar.

Merrimack College To Admit Women

Merrimack college will become coeducational starting with the fall term next September, the Very Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Ph.D., president has announced.

In making the announcement Father McQuade issued the following statement: "We have had numerous and insistent requests to make Merrimack college co-educational ever since the college opened in 1947. Each year since the requests have magnified. In response to these many demands and after careful thought and consideration we made the decision to enroll women next September."

Applications are now being received for enrollment in the liberal arts and science courses. New courses will be added next year and the curriculum will be augmented to meet the expanding student body.

Young women who wish to enroll are required to have a high school diploma and in addition must have 16 acceptable units of high school credit. For the present only freshmen will be admitted.

Students interested in entering in September are requested to write to the registrar for further information.

EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

THE PAUSE THAT REJUVENATES

Andover, like so many other historical and picturesque New England towns, is now enjoying its annual mid-summer hiatus. Everything and everyone has slowed down to enjoy that laziness which is an acceptable condition at this season of the year.

Of course all of the necessary services continue to be provided. Merchants serve their public, but many familiar faces are missing. Folks are off enjoying themselves at the seashore or up in the mountains.

The ever watchful police and firemen go about their duties as usual, while other town departments function efficiently, despite the fact that vacations make many an office short handed. No one wants to hurry, it just isn't the thing to do in late July. The youngsters are sporting coats of tan which reflect the many hours spent in abbreviated costumes at the bathing beaches, while the operators of those sporty convertibles have acquired a hue not unlike that of the early American redskin.

Even the serious crisis caused by the war in Korea does not create the excitement which would have developed, say in January. This is the time of year when the usual cares are pushed into the background, and the old man does not pause to contemplate the cost of it all.

This is a period when the weekly editor must get out and dig. He can't depend upon the lodges, clubs, churches and schools to provide him with those choice items that make such popular reading. Instead, he's on the go to find out if Nellie Jones is disporting at Hampton beach, or if Johnny Smith has gone off to a boys camp.

The last couple of weeks in July and the coming month of August is no time for work, which is one reason for the popularity of this stretch of the calendar. And that's not bad; it's good.

Folks need this letdown in order that they will come back with more bounce when the cooler weather of autumn beckons them to the resumption of their humdrum tasks in life.

As summer's final month of August looms just ahead, there is the suggestion that everyone join in a community chorus of something like: "Enjoy yourself, it's later than you think."

Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo. - H.G. Wells

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

By LEONARD F. JAMES

STOCKHOLM -

Last week we voiced the strong suspicion that the North Korean invasion was Russian aggression by proxy. That suspicion seems to be thoroughly confirmed by a subsequent statement by the Soviet foreign Office. In substance this new doctrine goes far beyond Korea.

As is to be expected, the statement begins by repeating the allegation that hostilities in Korea were started by a "provocative attack" by South Korean troops. But it proceeds to justify North Korean aggression quite independently of this "provocation." The argument runs that the North Koreans have as much right to arrange at their discretion their internal national affairs as did the Unionists against the Confederate states in the United States in the 1860's.

Russia Recognizes Aggression by Proxy

This argument prepares the ground, of course, for far wider implications. Its apparent purpose is to give official Soviet approval of North Korean aggression. But it goes far beyond this. For the statement generally condemns any attempt "to throttle the struggle waged by peoples for national unity and for democratic rights." And it must be understood that "democratic" as Russia uses it means whatever is momentarily appropriate to Moscow.

Put simply, Russia is saying that whenever a group starts what is according to Moscow a fight for such ends, any intervention against the aggressor is a "hostile act against peace" even if authorized by the United Nations. And what of Russia? It invariably adheres to a policy of strengthening peace the world over and to its traditional principle of non-interference in the domestic affairs of other states. Moscow conveniently ignores communist fifth columns and armed police of the East German type.

Russia Rejects U.N. Anti-Aggression Concept

In effect, this statement officially heralds a new phase in Russia's bid for world power. By it Moscow repudiates two concepts to which she has paid lip-service since 1945, two conceptions which were slender ties of peace between two worlds. The first of these is the United Nations concept that armed aggression be unconditionally ruled out as a method of national policy, with the corollary that it is the responsibility of all to repress it when it breaks out. The second concept now thrown overboard is the Yalta-Potsdam agreements which established certain geographical demarcation lines between Soviet and western spheres, pending a peace settlement. Thus in one sweep, Russia denies the right of the world to unite against aggression, and claims for her satellites the right to disregard agreements.

Russia has no leg to stand on in its legalistic quibbles. She participated in the pre-United Nations agreement that aggressive war had become an international crime. Her argument that she had no representative present when the United Nations agreed to assist southern Korea in no way detracts from the right of other nations so to act. In August 1947 during the troubles in Indonesia, the President of the Security Council declared that "those who abstain intentionally are not considered to have caused a veto." That ruling was made in the presence of Russia and was never questioned then or at any time prior to June this year.

Cold War is Stepped Up

Moscow's actions are a plain warning that had better be read quite clearly. Moscow serves notice that in the perverted name of Russian-style "national unity of democratic rights", aggression on the recent model can be staged wherever a communist underground can get a footing. Such a group can immediately adopt this slogan and go to work for Russia. The present danger spots are clearly Iran, Greece, Yugoslavia and most emphatically Germany. Next to Korea, Germany is the most evident example of a Moscow-dominated army in process of being trained and armed by Russia.

If ever defense should be on a global scale it is now. For it is axiomatic of Russian policy that wherever weakness is found, there lies opportunity. And we might as well face the fact right now that perhaps only our atomic weapons can be a deterrent. The time has come to stop side-stepping the question of whether we should use them. Russia has got the jump propaganda-wise by adopting the resolution of the Partisans of Peace that whoever uses the atomic bomb first should be labelled the aggressor. Let's not be confused by such nonsense. For that resolution implies that if any invader used millions of troops and every weapon except atomic ones, and that other nations in resisting that aggression decided to use the atomic bomb, then those nations would be the official aggressors.

Perhaps the time has come to announce our firm determination to use it once Russian troops cross any European border. The International Committee for the Study of European Questions has so reported to the prime ministers and foreign secretaries of the Western Powers, feeling that the decision might be beneficial if due notice is served by the United Nations.

We must surely have at last wakened up to the fact that we are dealing with a ruthless, unprincipled and rapacious opponent whose ambitions are only excited by weakness. There is no defense against it except strength and an equally ruthless determination to use any means to attempt to save the free world from domination. From Greece, to the Berlin blockade, to Czechoslovakia and Korea the road is evident. And now Russia shows its intentions with greater clarity. Aggression by proxy if successful can lead to open aggression. Hesitation and weakness on our part invites disaster. We had better be ready to lead from strength. Only then may we never have to lead at all.

Receives Welcome

A California family received a royal welcome to Andover recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jewell of 3 Cedar rd., were awaiting the arrival of her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schoening and daughters Joyce and Diane of Piedmont, Calif., early this week.

Shortly after midnight, a police cruiser spotted a California car proceeding cautiously southward from Shawsheen Village. The cruiser stopped them. "Can we be of help, California?"

In short order the tired westerners were told to follow them to the door of the place they sought. It was a very happy experience for all concerned and will not soon be forgotten.
