Polio Strikes Local Couple
 John M. Erving, Jr., 28, 61 Salem street, and his wife, the former Ruth Anderson, 27, daughter of Edward A. Anderson of Shawshen, are both patients at Haynes Memorial hospital, Cambridge, victims of infantile paralysis, the first Andover residents to be stricken this year.
 Erving, a World War II veteran and a salesman for a New York food distributing company, was placed in an iron lung, while his wife was said to be less seriously affected. They have a daughter Pamela, who has not contracted the disease.
 Following an examination at the Lowell General hospital which revealed the polio symptoms, the couple was taken to the Cambridge hospital last Friday.

A little more than one-third of the registered voters in Andover went to the polls Tuesday to express their choice of party candidates to compete in the state election in November.
 Republican voters made up the great majority of the 2527 men and women who cast ballots during the day. A total of 1984 Republican votes were cast, while 543 ballots were taken by Democrats.
 Arthur W. Coolidge, who will be the Republican standard bearer in the fight for governor in November, ran second in Andover to General Daniel Needham, who made a personal appearance in Andover. For the other state offices, the Andover voters appeared to go along with their fellow party members throughout the state.

Eclipse Of Moon To Be Visible Here Monday

A total eclipse of the moon, the last total lunar eclipse visible in the United States until Jan. 29, 1953, will be watched by many Andover residents on Monday night, Sept. 25.
 The eclipse will start at 8:20 p. m., when the moon first touches the earth's penumbra or lighter, outside shadow. At 9:31 p. m., the moon will reach the earth's umbra or inner shadow. Then the earth's shadow on the moon will appear black by contrast and by 10:53 p. m., the shadow will completely engulf the moon in total eclipse until 11:40 p. m. The shadow will then begin to move off the moon until the eclipse ends in the early morning hours.

With a highway death toll in Andover of eight in less than nine months of 1950, highest fatality rate in any of the Greater Lawrence communities, Chief of Police George A. Dane, has ordered a relentless drive against all violators of the automotive regulations.
 Orders have been issued by Chief Dane to all members of the police department to crack down on speeders and all other violators. The chief's demand for greater safety on the town's highways came in the wake of the most recent death, that of Mrs. Nunzia Messina, 50, of 8 Cornish st., Lawrence, who died as the result of a car-truck crash at the junction of High and Haverhill streets Wednesday, Sept. 13. Mrs. Messina's husband, Antonio, 68, is in serious condition at Lawrence General hospital as the result of the same accident, which occurred when the Messina sedan was in collision with a heavily laden soft beverage truck.

White gladioli decorated the altar and the pews were marked with white satin bows. James J. Sayers was the organist and Herbert Hatem sang "Ave Maria" and "Mother at Thy Feet is Kneeling."

Escorted by her godfather, Robert Martin of Southbridge, the bride wore a satin gown with off the shoulder effect and lace ruffle, and a net skirt forming full train. Her lace edged veil of net extended into a cathedral train. She carried a cascade of ivy centered with gardenias.

Patricia Delaney of Stoneham, as maid of honor, was gowned in copper satin with net skirt, and hat of green ostrich feathers. The bridesmaids, Isabel Markey and Elizabeth Haseltine of Lawrence and Nancy Bandurski of Bayonne, N.J., wore similar gowns with copper bonnets trimmed with copper plumes. All carried cascades of English ivy.

Mrs. Lanouette chose a cinnamon crepe dress, lace trimmed, with a brown velvet hat for her daughter's wedding. Her corsage was yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother wore royal blue crepe, lace trimmed and a royal blue velvet hat. She also wore yellow roses for her corsage.

Did Settlement Work in London

Burnham Riggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Riggs of Cheever circle, and Scott I. Paradise, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Paradise of Hidden Field, returned recently from a summer spent as Winant volunteers doing settlement work in the slums of the London East End. They sailed from New York June 19, and returned aboard the M. V. Georgic which docked at New York Sept. 2. Two weeks were spent in travel in Britain and on the Continent, and the remaining seven were spent at their jobs.

Riggs, who will enter Yale this fall, served as an assistant boys club leader for three weeks at High Hill Ferry in Clapton and for four weeks at the John Benn club at Stockwell road, Paradise, a recent graduate of Yale, assisted the rector at All Hallows church, Bromley-by-Bow.

The boys were part of a group of 35 American students who made up this year's Winant volunteer group. Named in memory of the former American ambassador to the Court of St. James's and founded in 1948 by the Rev. P. B. Clayton, vicar of All Hallows Berkyngechirche by-the-Tower, the Winant volunteers have a threefold purpose. They seek first to perform an important and material social service by helping to alleviate the shortage of club leaders and youth workers caused

The group, enthusiastic about their summer and confident of the importance of their work, are making plans for the recruitment of next year's Winant volunteers. Either Paradise or Riggs would be glad to describe the project to anyone interested.

At the end of the course the club will present a group of songs to the public.

Frank McCarthy, 22, of 12 Wolcott ave., will participate in an amateur hour telecast over WBZ-TV Sunday afternoon between 2:30 and 3 p. m.

Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. McCarthy, is a graduate of Pynchard High school, class of '47. A lyric tenor, he was class president in his junior year and participated in many school musical presentations.

During the past months, he conducted a popular 15-minute singing show over Portland's radio station WGAN where he was billed as the "Black Mask Tenor." At the present time he is planning to go to New York to audition for a show over the Columbia Broadcast System in October.

Sunday's show will bring out of retirement one of show business' real veterans, B. A. Rolfe. The maestro, who some 60 years ago began his illustrious musical career will act as master of ceremonies introducing the amateur talent, which will feature the Andover youngster next Sunday. Rolfe will be joined by Boston orchestra leader, Gene Jones, with a twin piano to provide the accompaniment.

McCarthy, if a winner, will compete for a guaranteed special audition on the coast-to-coast program, Ted Mack's original amateur hour. Every six weeks, the previous week's winner will again compete for a grand prize of $250 or a full term scholarship at Schillinger House. Winners are selected by an audience applause meter.

The Andover youth, who has been singing for seven years, is the featured soloist of the Andover male choir under the direction of J. Everett Collins.

While in New York auditioning for CBS head casting director Dorothy Killgallen, Frank also will appear as guest on the Arthur Godfrey show. He is now studying under William F. Flynn of Boston.

EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

OUR TRAFFIC FATALITIES

Andover has had another automobile accident with fatal results. The death that followed the crash at Haverhill and High streets last week was the eighth fatality of the year, equalling the 1930 record, the worst in the town's history.

The place where the accident occurred is, in the opinion of Police Chief George A. Dane, the best marked intersection in the town. There is a yellow blinker overhead, "Stop" signs on both sides of High street, and crossroad markers on steep-graded Haverhill street.

In none of these fatal accidents has a local driver been involved, but two Andover children have lost their lives. Police have been particularly active in their efforts to prevent accidents. So far this year they have brought 125 defendants before the local court, 25 in the Lawrence court, and have sent the names of about 150 violators of traffic laws to the registry of motor vehicles for action.

Chief Dane is also calling attention of parents to the fact that school children should cross Main street where a police officer is on duty or where there are traffic lights operated by push buttons. Police have observed too many children crossing Main street where they choose and the chief asks parents to warn their children against this dangerous practice.

HITTING THE POCKETBOOK

Along with the mobilization of men needed for the success of our arms in Korea a great amount of material will also be required. The further threat of Russian inspired aggression breaking out elsewhere is ever in the background as planners estimate it will take a long time and a major effort on the part of the United Nations to win.

In the meantime domestic problems gather momentum along with mobilization. The old story of rising prices and wages is forging to the forefront. On the basis of the U.S. bureau of labor and statistics living costs in June, just before Korea, stood at 170.2 per cent of the 1935-39 level. By mid-July these costs were at about 172 on the index. Now, after still more increases, they are at the highest level in history.

The costly necessities of military expenses piled on top of the extravagant peacetime government structure are hitting hard where it hurts most - the household pocketbook. The currency in that pocketbook is losing its value. Pressure is being put on congress to do something about it but there is disagreement as to the best course to follow.

It is our first responsibility to maintain armed forces adequate to the perpetuation of our liberty and our form of government. At the same time the planners in Washington should be made realize that they must put an end to inflationary policies and slash needless non-military expenditures that add their load to the taxpayers' burden.

All of us are always going to do better tomorrow - and we would, too, if only we started today. - Unknown

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

By LEONARD F. JAMES

The other morning at breakfast we figured out on the tablecloth that the government had just thrown another $400,000 down the drain. And at the same time spent what must have been a very sizeable sum on FBI boys junketing all around the countryside. Maybe the money was well spent. Or you might say that the government never really had the money to throw away. Some would say that morals had been preserved. But that all depends on the point of view.

The FBI had just nabbed nine men between Beverly Hills and Utica, and proudly destroyed $2,000,000 worth of unsold lottery tickets. By our own count we estimated that twenty percent of two million is roughly four hundred thousand. And the government could have collected that tidy sum very painlessly. Just sold the tickets and charged the winners one fifth of their take. But that would perhaps not be respectable.

The line between respectability and the shabby is a little difficult to draw. The average citizen likes a bet now and again. If he goes to the pari-mutuel window then it's proper and legal. But if he does the same thing in less ostentatious fashion he's running afoul of the law. One solution would be to legalise certain kinds of bets through the government window. It can be done.

Government Taxation—And Painless!

A few weeks ago we saw a magnificent ballet performance for a dollar and a half in a modern air-conditioned theater fitted with seats that were built for comfort and stage visibility. The theater was financed entirely on the proceeds of a state lottery. The Parisians got a fine theater, and many a Frenchman made several thousand francs on a dollar or two outlay. We got interested in the matter and decided to make a few enquiries. To our surprise we found out that the lottery in France has had a career dating back several centuries, and that many a famous public building owes its beginning to a lottery.

Building By Lottery

Apparently the whole business started out with the royal blessing in the sixteenth century, originally to lighten taxation and for the worthy purpose of abolishing the very unpopular tax on wine. What the kings did with their shares is not recorded, but the rest of the cash seems to have been used to advantage down the centuries. The Pantheon, now dedicated to the great men of France, started off as a church. Louis XV, taken ill at Metz, vowed to erect a splendid new church to the glory of St. Genevieve, patron saint of Paris, if he were restored to health. True to his word he had it built—quite painlessly from merely a portion of the funds derived from three state lotteries. Similarly the Ecole Militaire, to train gentlemen in a military career, was built quickly from the proceeds of another state lottery. And the famous Hotel-Dieu, one of France's oldest hospitals, started in the same humble way.

The present Loterie Nationale was instituted in 1933 to finance ex-Servicemen's pensions. In later years the money was used to subsidize industry in former German Alsace-Lorraine, and for charitable purposes. Today the whole proceeds, minus the cash prizes, go to the general budget. The price of a weekly ticket is roughly two dollars and a half, or the tenth of a ticket for thirty cents, retailed by government licensed agents. For the full ticket the first prize is somewhere around $43,000, or on a five-dollar ticket the handsome return of $64,000. From time to time a super "tranche" or slice offers a chance to pick up some really sizeable rewards.

Prizes On Government Bonds

Monthly lottery day in Sweden brings out the police for special duty. No riots, merely queues lined up outside the stores authorized to sell the state lottery tickets at two and a half dollars a time. The buyers get several hundred chances at prizes ranging from the lowly five-spot up to a cool twenty-thousand dollars—all minus the state's take of twenty percent which goes into the general budget.

Unlike the United States government, the Swedish authorities waste very little money on advertising the sale of government bonds. For the price of a bond the buyer is entitled to a chance on yearly prizes for the holder of the lucky bond numbers. More bonds, more chances.

This looks like a pretty sensible approach to a practical problem. The FBI isn't going to stop gambling however much they run around the country. The average fellow likes to place an occasional bet, and he'd certainly rather do it above board than to some petty thug on a street corner. In Europe the government uses the word "raffles" which is much politer than "gambling," many a crook is eliminated, and quite a few citizens get the cash to buy a boat or go on a fishing trip. Those who don't win the first time cheerfully subscribe to government expenses, and wait for the next turn of the wheel. It seems to us that the lottery is a pretty close relation to good old private enterprise. Maybe the French and Swedes have something.

Collins Re-Nominated Adams Runs Third

John Adams of 15 Stratford rd., who was a candidate for secretary of state, polled a very large vote in Andover, and elsewhere, but in the state-wide results ran third. In the fight for high sheriff of Essex County, the incumbent, Frank E. Raymond, ran well ahead of his Republican rival, Arthur Flynn of Lawrence, in Andover. District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg also was in front of Trial Justice Charles W. Trombly of North

Andover on the Republican ballot, while the reverse was true on the Democratic side where both names also appeared.

The three representatives to the General Court, J. Everett Collins of Andover, and Frank S. Giles and William Longworth of Methuen, were re-nominated with large pluralities.

While more voters went to the polls this year than voted in 1948 at the state primary, there was a larger number of registered voters in the town this year. In 1948, a total of 6957 voters were eligible. At that time there were 1685 Republican and 347 Democrat ballots cast, for a total of 2037.

Wreck of the truck involved in the fatal crash at High and Haverhill streets last week showing how it crashed utilities company pole as it toppled over and littered the immediate area with broken tonic bottles and cases. Police Will Campaign Against Auto Violators

The accident occurred about 4.30 p. m., and drew a large crowd to the scene. Police report that the auto in which the couple were driving northerly on High street and a truck owned by the Royal Crown Co., of Salem, operated by Edward B. McCable of Lowell, going westerly on Haverhill street, collided at the intersection.

The Messina car was struck on the right side and rolled over into a field. The truck swerved and overturned against a telephone pole, strewn the place with tonic bottles.

Officers Robert V. Deyermond, Joseph E. O'Brien, Roy A. Russell and Calvin C. Deyermond were quickly on the scene together with Andover and North Andover ambulances.

The passenger car had been hit in such a way that Mrs. Messina was pinned under the door. The ladder truck from the central fire station was summoned to help extract her but spectators had moved the car before the apparatus arrived. She was removed to the hospital and died early next morning.

Andover's accident toll of eight makes up half of the 16 traffic deaths in Greater Lawrence since the start of 1950. Lawrence has had six deaths, North Andover two and Methuen one, so far this year.

Warns Parents About Children Crossing Streets

Chief of Police George A. Dane stated today that the officers on duty are experiencing considerable difficulty at times with children crossing the streets at various places that are unprotected, instead of crossing where a police officer is, or at the traffic lights which are easily operated by push buttons.

This is especially true on Route 28, which includes Main and North Main streets. The police are now seeking the cooperation of all parents to instruct their children to cross this heavily travelled Route 28 only where a police officer is on duty or at the traffic lights where they can use the push buttons to cross in safety.

Chief Dane requests that parents in the Union street area instruct their children to cross at the traffic lights at the junction of North Main and Union streets. This location now has a police officer there from 8 to 9 a. m. each school day and also when the children are getting out of school at noon and in the afternoon. Please warn your children not to cross North Main street at Poor street.

Another difficulty arises up town where the children cross Main street at any location they choose instead of crossing at the square where a police officer is on duty, or at the traffic lights at Main and Chestnut streets where there are push buttons to control traffic.

Children have been observed going to the central schools walk up Main street on the west side and cross the street from west side to east side diagonally from the post office on up to the A.&P. These same children passed by two places to cross in safety, one in the square and the other at the traffic lights. Children also come down the east side of Main street heading for St. Augustine's school and cross to the west side in this manner, instead of proceeding on the east side until they reach the traffic lights at Chestnut street.

Chief Dane further stated that the police and the school teachers are doing everything possible to instruct children about safety and request the parents to assist also by instructing them where to cross in safety.

Unusual Pictures At Art Gallery

An exhibition of unusual pictures, composed with printing inks, a roller and stencils, opened last week at the Addison Gallery, Phillips academy. It may be seen daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. week days, and 2.30 to 5 p. m. Sundays, until Oct. 1.

These pictures are the work of a Dutch journalist and commercial printer, H. N. Werkman, who abandoned these careers to become a painter. He was able to draw on his professional experience and compose pictures which are neither prints nor paintings. They are distinguished by their curious texture and rich colors.

Do You Know Massachusetts?

DO YOU KNOW THAT . . . Departments that contributed most to the 25.7% increase in sales of Boston department stores during July over those a year ago were: television and radio up 369.5%, major household appliances (refrigerators, stoves, etc.) 119.8%, hosiery 99.7%, domestics (muslins and sheetings) 93.3%, furs 83.2%, linoleum 78.8%, mattresses, springs and studio beds 59.6%, rugs and carpets 50.2% . . . While all 14 counties in Massachusetts gained in population between 1940 and 1950, only seven increased more than the balance of births over deaths. The seven counties that showed a net in-migration of residents were: Norfolk 36,947, Plymouth 8,997, Hampshire 8,623, Barnstable 6,443, Hampden 4,669, Middlesex 2,286 and Nantucket 40 . . . Of the 20 municipalities having 50,000 or more population in 1950, only two, Brookline and Newton had a net in-migration during the past decade . . . The national school lunch program in Massachusetts last year provided noon meals for nearly 250,000 pupils in public and private schools and afforded a market to local farmers and distributors for about $5,000,000 of produce . . . Medford and Somerville have been added to the Massachusetts cities that have obtained approval of their reservations for grants under the federal slum clearance and urban redevelopment program . . . Committees in Princeton, Townsend and Charlton are studying the desirability of establishing a town planning board in their respective communities.

STATE PLANNING BOARD

Evening Study Courses Open At P.A. Oct. 6

The 14th annual session of the Andover Evening Study program will open at Phillips academy Oct. 6, and continue through Dec. 7.

With an average enrollment of about 500 this adult education program has given courses to 3596 different individuals in Andover and surrounding towns. It is open to men and women especially those whose formal education has been limited.

The teachers of this program, almost all of whom are instructors at Phillips academy, give their services without remuneration. Proceeds from the registration fees are donated to educational and charitable organizations here and in neighboring towns. Registration is $1 independent of the number of courses taken, plus $1 for each course taken. After Oct. 2, registration fee is $2.

Alan R. Blackmer is chairman of the board of directors. Other directors are John M. Kemper, Frederick S. Allis, Jr., A. Graham Baldwin, John S. Barss, Alston H. Chase, Roscoe E. Dake, Bartlett H. Hayes, Jr., and Leonard F. James.

Booklets describing the courses are available at the Memorial Hall library.

not only to care for its own needs, but also to lend full assistance to other communities." It is in this mutual-aid phase of the program that Red Cross chapters are now working, as well as preparing to train the very essential first-aiders, nurse's aides and other relief workers.

On Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 2.30 p. m., a meeting will be held in the November Clubhouse for presentation of the program of the Red Cross Volunteer Services in Andover. Mrs. David M. Thompson, who is in charge of volunteer enlistments, reports that she is encouraged by the response already made to expand the services here. Though attendance at the meeting puts no one under any definite obligation, the need is so great that it is hoped a number of women will be interested in signing up for at least a limited amount of service.

On Tuesday, October 3, at 8 p. m., the annual meeting of the chapter and the directors will be held at the Veterans' Bureau rooms in the Town House. At this meeting the activities of the chapter during the past year will be reviewed through the annual reports, elections will take place, and plans for increasing the effectiveness of chapter service to those who may need its help will be discussed. Members have been urged to attend and all who have paid the annual membership fee for 1950 are eligible.

As blood shipments to the armed forces continue, appeals from the blood centers become more urgent. The Red Cross chapter cannot do its share without everyone's help. Normally healthy people between the ages of 18 and 60 can safely give blood; those excluded from such humane service can help recruit donors or work as volunteers in preparation for the next bloodmobile visit to Andover, on November 8 and 9.

The new $400,000 Alumni gymnasium, completed last spring, has now been furnished and equipped and will be available for use in the athletic program this fall.
