Cole Not To Be Part Time Head Of Civil Defense

Albert Cole Jr., director of civil defense, appeared before the board of selectmen Monday night to discuss the future set-up of that agen-cy and said that he was much pleased that he was to be trans-ferred back to his old position as deputy fire chief and was not in-terested in acting as civil defense director on a part time basis.

The selectmen recently notified Mr. Cole that they would not request an extension of his leave of absence from the fire department which had been granted to allow him to devote his full time as director of civil defense.

Meanwhile the selectmen received a letter on the subject from the Allied Council of Veterans organizations of Andover which read in part:

"Civil defense, designed by our government . . . has been adequately provided for by the voters of our town and efficiently carried on by a director who has now been, apparently, relieved of his duties. "At the town meeting in March,

Has Done Good Job

Albert Cole Jr., is returning to his duties as deputy chief in the fire department after having served faithfully and well as director of civil defense since the office was established in October 1950.

During that time he has placed the local agency on a firm basis ready to take over civil defense functions in time of emergency. The various units are well organized. The auxiliary police and fire forces, the first aid and communications divisions are well trained and equipped for their part in the event of trouble. The auxiliary police force, too, has on several occasions assisted the regular police in duties outside its prescribed work, such as at parades and in other celebrations.

In declining to ask further extension of his time from the fire department the selectmen are making no reflection on his work. They realize that in his zeal to do a good job he put considerable time and effort in the work with good results. Their decision is based more on the recent town meeting in which the voters showed a desire for economy, and also on the fact that in the several hundred cities and towns of the commonwealth there are only 15 full-time

Mr. Cole was present at a conference with the selectmen when the situation was discussed. Although not definitely asked to take over the job on part time the letter the selectmen sent to him said they would be pleased to talk over with him the continued operation of the department at his convenience.

The selectmen consider the matter still unsettled until a volunteer part-time worker is found for the job.

we shall be exposed to new ideas and to conflicts of ideas. From our divergent experiences, patterns of thoughts and beliefs will gradually emerge with which we shall be identified permanently; and we must exercise the upost and we must exercise the utmo care to see that the texture of the pattern is strong and firm.

one respect, we have a de cided advantage over our predececessors; and we must make the the most of it: in times too recent still to be called "history", so many forms of outrage have been perpetrated in the world, that we should, at least, be able to recognize their signals and thus avoid them. The short-sighted neglect of our national defense which once prevailed under the name of isclation seems definitely to have been abandoned. Now we are witnessing the mid-century version of "making the world safe for democracy". We can and do hope for its success.

Soon, however, more than mere hope will be expected of us. When the national election campaign be-gins four years from now, most if not all of us will be voters; and our role will be changed from that of interested spectator to respon-sible citizen. All of our interests, and objectives, in the meantime, must be irrevocably linked with that prospective community and national life which is the heritage of all.

This day

Tonight, however, we cannot turn all of our thoughts to the future. This is an occasion which brings to our minds many thoughts of the twelve years now receding into memory. There were good days and bad; but it is a sobering thought that most of us - 80 people — who have spent a good share of our lives together will probably never again all be assembled in the same place, and as we think of each other, of our long school associations, our teachers, and friends, we cannot escape some and friends, we cannot escape some feeling of regret that all of this must now end. But we have faith that these years and these associations will bear rich fruit in the years ahead. As the product of them, we face the future, alert and confiders.

town, it is that of using constructively the talents granted to us - however diverse - in a manreflecting credit upon our es and school and (we devoutly hope) upon ourselves. A paragraph from a recently published article in The Christian Science Monitor embodies this theme of ours, and points up a philosophy eminently suitable to our generation of high school graduates: "The time for thinking doesn't stop with the earning of a diploma, it is only begun; need for learning doesn't end with graduation, it has only started; and your greatest service to yourself and to your community, your country and your world, cannot and should not be limited to what you do to earn a living — how-ever engrossing and rewarding that may be."

It is most important that every member of this class be prepared to accept the serious responsi-bility of the young adult in the world of today. Practical applica-tion of the values thus far gleaned at once the opportunity and obli-vacuum, rather than something to be put to work for the individual and common good.

Conversely, those who discontinue studies at this point, must remember that—clear thinking will be demanded of them as the price of success in modern living. Therefore, what we must all strive for is balance in our lives, particularly in a world which seems to have forgotten balance in its rush to extremes. We think of our own generation as one facing a world enormously chaotic and problema-tical. But what generation before us has not held precisely the same view? The times in store for us are, indeed, complex and per-haps unprecedented: but let us never admit that they present difficulties which cannot be over-come by good judgment, moderation, tolerance, and justice.

In a very real sense, every one in this class will be continuing

SALUTATORY Ry Karolyn Erler

Karolyn Erler

Parents, teachers, and friends:

It is an honor and pleasure, on behalf of my classmates, to welome you to our commencementexercises. On this occasion all of us have mixed feelings; but of appreciation, sorrow and anticipation are strongest.

you, parents, teachers, and friends, we owe sincere appreciation for without your untiring ef-forts, your patience and your will-ing cooperation we could not have successfully accomplished our welve years of education. You have prepared us for our future not only by giving us knowledge in certain specific areas, but also by stilling within us a code of conact based upon love and respect one's fellow man. This day is also marked with the unmistakable sorrow of losing the friendships we have acquired wing the past four years. During ese years, we have worked to-ther, shared ambitions together, ether, shared ambitious to-nd fought down minor failures to-ether. But tomorrow fails to hold ther. But tomorrow fails to hold sterday's meaning of "together", et a bond has been fashioned nong us as classmates that time ill find indestructible. Also we now that our separate paths will ad us to many new friends. This ill be accomplished through our nicipation of the future. This wijcipation is icipation is coupled with the self-confidence that is instinctive youths who must familiarize selves with the everchanging terns in life. Punchard

Punchard has continued to velop individual initiative and intain a high standard of educaon. Credit for this goes to you, e citizens of Andover and the culties and adminstrators of the school, past and present. Es-pecially, this year, was this class conscious of the unpleasant scan-dals that shook our country. The demand for investigation into places of corruption has, we feel, been a nation-wide awakening to an awareness of the old saying, "Truth conquers". This maxim ould be an inspiration especially to us who are about to make our mark in the world. Now, more than over, the value of high personal character and achievement is being recognized through the revelation of the Washington scandals. By disclosing the undercurrent of corruption in our government, the ethical training, which our school and which we feel every school should give its students, has taken on a more significant and meaningon a more significant and meaningful definition. Fortunately, Punchard has never-lost sight of the value of early training in honesty and the wisdom of truth. These factors and the wisdom of belief is apparent today.

So in leaving Punchard, we thank her not only for the skills she has given us in certain specific fields or for the moments of happiness alone that she has afforded us, but also for the effort she has made toward showing us right from wrong; in developing our leaves to the state of the stat right from wrong; in developing our about June 23, 1952 for a new factory building.

The new structure will be two-story, 75 feet by 240 feet, giving a total of 36,000 square feet of floor space, it will be located north of and adjacent to the existing factory buildings on Railroad st.

It is planned that the new space will be used partly to provide needed additional facilities for the manufacture of special rubber pro-manufacture of special rubber products; partly for higher efficiency in the expanding production of established items; and partly to house an improved and more complete laboratory.

If steel deliveries are not too much delayed by strikes the new building should be ready for occu-pancy by the end of 1952.

accompanying adults enjoyed the entertainment, the exhibits, and the pink lemonade provided by Mary Barbara Carlton, Charlotte John-son, Ellen and Susan Kenney, and Janet Wilson.

The directors of Andover chapter, feeling that the people who have expressed appreciation of Red Cross services by their gifts deserve to know how these funds are allocated, have released for publication the following financial report. Of necessity it covers only eleven months, as the fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30.

Services to the armed services, veterans, and civilians - $1073.44 a. Servicemen, veterans and families, 126.57, b. Civilians, 93.74

c. Communications, 107.11, d. Curran milk Fund, 716.02.

Blood Program - - - 477.92

a. Pro-rated share of Mass. blood program, 327.80, b. Cost of blood-mobile visits to Andover and distribution of blood to local patients, school, 90.00, b. First Aid instruc-tion, 5.45.

Home Nursing — supplies and other expenses in providing train-ing courses to the public — 35.98 Volunteer service group 881.97 a. Canteen, providing refresh-ments at Bedford Hospital, etc. and for Andover Bloodmobile, wisits and for Andover Bloodmobile visits and Disaster feeding, 290.37. b. Motor corps, gas and oil for transportation of patients to hospitals and clinics, blood donors to and from the bleeding center, volunteers etc., 287.28. c. Production, supplies for garments for hospitalized vets, 102.94. d. Supply - recreational supplies, entertainment for Bedford, 201.38.

General administration - 4199.96 a. Salaries, executive secretary, 1895.84, custodians (2 part-time), 224.00. b. Amortization of station wagon, 300.00. c. Rent, 600.00. d. Other, telephone, office supplies, etc. 1180.12.

etc. 1180.12.
Estimated expenses for the month of June will bring the total close to the chapter budget for 1951-1952 of $8000. Of the portion sent to the national organization, 70% returns to the community through the disaster insurance, blood, and service to the armed forces programs.

Boosters Hold Annual Meeting

The Boosters' club at its annual meeting made available $400 for scholarships to be awarded Pun-chard seniors, made arrangements for a P.H.S. baseball team banquet and elected officers for the ensuing year. The scholarship winners were announced at the graduating exercises Tuesday night.

The baseball team banquet will take place in the school cafeteria at 6 p.m., Monday, June 23. All interested are urged to attend.

Re-elected president of the club for another term was J. Everett Collins. The new first vice presi-dent is Walter Pearson and Emory Wescott is the second vice president. Henry Dolan was elected secretary and Robert MacIntyre, Punchard teacher, was elected a director to fill the unexpired term of Walter Pearson.
