Consider Four Sites For New High School

Four sites for a proposed new th school were discussed last Thursday night at an executive session of the school building committee with members of the school board. The two committees will meet Friday night to continue their discussions of the situation.

Two of the proposed locations ere under discussion at a meeting earlier last week. One proposal was that offered by the building committee for a corner of the play-stead east of Whittier court and south of Rogers brook. The school this location and suggested a lo-cation bordering on Chestnut street east of Whittier court and north of

Competitive Distribution

A wealth of evidence proves that retail competition has become intensely competitive, and that retailers of all kinds and sizes are wooing the consumer with the ut-

An interesting example is found in a Wall Street Journal news story. Traditionally, retail business lags during the summer, especially in areas where the weather is hot and humid. This year merchants in New York, Chicago, Detroit and elsewhere are going to extraordinary efforts to boost summer sales. Promotion is being stepped up, bargains are being advertised, prizes and premiums are being offered, and so on.

The time has passed when all a merchant had to do was open his doors, sit back, and wait for an eager public to rush in and empty his shelves. Good retailers in the small towns no less than the great cities recognize that fact and are acting accordingly. Wares must be aggressively advertised. They must represent a good buy to the consumer's critical eye. Stores must be attractive and service courteous. And every merchant must everlastingly try to do a little better job, to offer more compelling inducements, than his competitor down the street or in the next community.

This is competitive mass-distribution in action. And this is one of the reasons for our world-beating living standards.

TREATING SERIOUS BURNS By Science Features

When investigators checked into the causes of death in mass fire disasters ten years ago they found that very few people with severe burns on one-third or more of their bodies survived. Today, after major research projects have developed new medical approaches to the problem, 75 per cent of those suffering from serious second- and third-degree burns do live.

Luminous Ceilings Combine Beauty With Usefulness

Luminous ceilings that hide fire-fighting sprinkler systems, but fall out of the way if fire starts, have been made from an oil-derived vinyl plastic. The thin plastic strips are hung below the real ceiling, diffusing the rays of fluorescent lamps, which shine through in a bright, glareless light. Besides their attractiveness, they help muffle sounds in superlight. Besides their attractiveness, they help muffle sounds in supermarkets, specialty shops, offices, and banks where they have been used. Although they hide electrical conduits, air conditioning ducts, and other rough construction, they do not interfere with the sprinkler system required for fire protection. If a fire starts, the vinyl softens and falls out of the way. Combining beauty with usefulness is an everyday story for oil-derived plastics as new uses for them are discovered by industries in America. industries in America.

WHO is to blame?

Someone is hurt or their property is damaged thru an accident in some way connected with your property or your business operations. Who pays? That may be up to the courts. You may not agree with them that it was your fault. But it is certainly your responsibility if you do not have proper liability insurance to take care of any court judgement. Let's talk it over.

Sportsmen To Hold Shooting Events

Members of the Andover Sports-Members of the Andover Sports-man's club, Inc., who attended the all-day fishing party off Plum Is-land last Sunday returned with 110 king-sized mackerel. Over 200 pollack were caught but returned to the ocean.

The club will hold a twilight trap shoot at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 27. The archery shooting usually held Monday nights, and the small bore shoot usually held Wednesday nights will be combined with this event. The archery, which will be held indoors, will be open to women. The small bore shoot will follow and refreshments will be served.

The club extends a welcome to all visitors and sportsmen who wish to attend and participate in these events.

SPORT AWARDS

Two local boys were among the 310 members of Harvard college spring sports teams this year who received letters or numerals. Leo H. Daly, 40 Morton st., received major numerals in freshman out-door track, and Charles Flather, 45 Abbot st., received a minor letter in varsity sailing.
