Should the new South Elementary School be named after Steven T. Byington?

T. Byington?
Two recent letters to the editor of the Boston Globe suggest this as a fitting gesture on the part of Mr. Byington's townspeople.
Wrote long-time correspondent Harold C. Porter of Woburn: "As a passing thought regarding the demise of the "Sage of Ballard Vale", what more fitting tribute could his fellow townsmen bestow on this great scholar than to name the new elementary school now being built near his home the Steven Byington School? Just a passing thought."
And in response to the "pass-passing thought."

And in response to the "passing thought", Eugene Bertram Willard of Everett addressed this communication to the Globe editor: "The suggestion of the letter writer that the new elementary school now being built near his late home in Ballard Vale be named the Steven Byington School is a step in the right direction.

is a step in the right direction.

"The undersigned wants to join the thousands of 'Sage of Ballard Vale' admirers in agreeing that such naming of the school would be a fitting memorial".

Accurate Town Map

The Planning Board is discussing the possibility of having a large, accurate map drawn of the town showing roads, parks, unaccepted and accepted streets.

The map would be about six by accepted and accepted streets. The map would be about six by 11 feet and would cost about $1500. At present, the Board said, there are no maps showing these things in sufficient detail and accuracy, but the proposed map would be taken directly from reductions of the aerial photos taken for tax maps. The money could come from an unspent balance in the "master plan" account, the members believed. They also said the Selectmen have shown conthe Selectmen have shown con-siderable interest in getting the

The gifted child, it was explained, may fall into two categories — the one with special ability in one field, such as math-

One of the associated problems of class grouping is the social aspect. The discussion pointed up the parental outlook — with parents often calling to insist that the child be placed in a group despite the child's lack of ability to do the work of that class, in the opinion of school officials.

do the work of that class, in the opinion of school officials.

High School Headmaster Lindsay March pointed to the annual science fair as an outlet for the specially-gifted child — an opportunity for the student to do work ahead of his class.

Mr. Kellmurray also pointed out that he now is marking two English students on a college level, with their knowledge, because of their special ability.

All the teachers were agreed that the youngster with an inquiring, alert mind is more of a challenge than the student who gets all A's every term. Those with abundant curiosity, who delight in debating ideas, offer the greatest stimulation to the teacher. Mr. Kellmurray pointed out, though, that the student, who should be free to debate ideas, youngster himself continues his growth according to his ability. This is a "live, learn and share together" philosophy, commented Central's Principal, Miss Catherine Barrett. Guidance Director Bernard Kellmurray, insisting he doesn't believe murray, insisting he doesn't believe in "14 year-old college freshmen", never-the-less urged special class groups in the higher grades when-ever that is possible. This means more teachers, he agreed and probably depends on an expanded school population as well. For there now are many courses in which there is only one, relatively small class, making it difficult to set up a second small class just for advanced students.

Some colleges, in joint agreement with the specific high school, recognize credits from the special classes when the students enter, Mr. Kellmurray pointed out. And he suggested this might offer some students an opportunity to broaden themselves in college beyond the usual student. Others, entering, for instance, a medical course of study, might be saved up to a year's time and expense through this program.

The medical world knows Mr. Asimov as author of textbooks on biochemistry; young people have read his juvenile books, without realizing that he is the Paul French who wrote "Lucky Starr And The Moons Of Jupiter". College students tnink of him as an associate professor teaching biochemistry at Boston University. But to the general reader, he is one of their favorite writers of science fiction.

Only normal difficulties have ome up, Bassett reported, indicating that the job should go accord-ing to schedule. One troublesome spot may be reached in the sand pit, he commented, because it may be necessary to shore up the 1200 feet of trench. While digging in sand is good, he continued, it always raises the problem of extra work to keep the soft sand from tumbling back into the trench.

The well itself, Bassett said, has been closed in and packed and the workmen are now developing it. They will move to the Abbot well the first of next week, he said, to begin work there.

Meanwhile, consulting engineers Camp, Dresser and McKee are preparing specifications for the pump and chemical feed houses.

The structures are apparently the final major project in getting the two wells permanently tied into the system.

A third major project in town—the Woodland rd, water main installation—is going about as scheduled this week. More than half completed, the job has been considerably slowed down by ledge.

Metas Monday

A meeting vital to the success of the Church Basketball League will be held next Monday, Nov. 18, in the Free Church at 7:30 p.m.

The Nominating Committee will present a slate of officers for the new year and the treasurer's report will be heard.

All church representatives or coaches must inform the League of the number of teams from his church, so that the schedule can be drawn up. The season opens Dec. 2.

Illustrated Talk

At November Club

An illustrated talk will highlight the second fall meeting of the November Club Nov. 18.

Members will gather at the clubhouse on Locke st. to hear Miss Miriam Putnam, librarian of one of their favorite writers of science fiction.

In his talk, Mr. Asimov will stress the relation of science fiction to other types of literature, and will point out its significance to our own times. But, in answer to the question "Is the tone of your talk to be a light one?" Mr. Asimov guaranteed it to be "light, fluffy, guaranteed to give no mental indigent".

would seem that he has had little time to indulge in that pastime. He has published 17 books of fiction and eight of non-fiction. This year he has had six books to his credit. It is suggested that guests at Open House plan to come earlier in order to have some time looking over the book display. Doors will be open by 3:15 o'clock.

The public is most cordially invited by the Library staff to arrive early, stay late and remain for light refreshments.

What Do You Think?

A news story this week tells about the feelings of Steven Byington's friends that the new Ballardvale school be named in his memory.

Many persons in Ballardvale feel that way - and they point out that names like "South" are inanimate, cold names. The "Steven Byington School", they feel, offers the community a chance to honor one of its noted citizens and at the same time choose a name that has meaning.

We'll be happy to hear from townspeople with ideas on this subject.

And while we're mentioning letters-to-the-editor, we might comment that several letters have been received here recently without signatures. We can't print any communication that is unsigned - so if you have a letter you want published, be certain to sign your name.

Tough Road Ahead

The shocking news that Sylvania-Corning Nuclear Fuel Corp. would abandon its option on West Andover property left many men and women asking: "What now?"

And it's a good question.

The town has an excellent industrial commission but the handicaps now are many.

It wasn't very long after this commission was created that the nuclear fuel firm became interested in the West Andover site. Most of the commission's activity was directed towards getting the firm to buy the land and settle here. And once that apparently had been accomplished, the new town agency could plan for the future, Actually, though, if Sylvania-Corning had come as planned, there would have been little need for planning because a firm such as that one attracts many smaller companies to the Now, however, we're right back where we started in industrial development. The industrial commission will have to change its approach, its planning.

We hope the group has lots of energy, for we feel it will take a lot of work, perhaps some money and certainly some time to persuade light industry to settle here.

We unfortunately are in a financial period when many firms are waiting to see what happens. They're hesitant to spend millions on expansion - and that means an industrial site such as ours is harder to develop.

The latest move - towards cooperation with the industrial development group in Lawrence - is a good one.

It's obvious that most manufacturers look at an entire area when considering a new site, not just the town in which the land lies. There is much that the Greater Lawrence area can offer an industry that the town of Andover, alone, can not offer. That's why this development task should be undertaken cooperatively.

two near-misses, the Blue Devils went scoreless.

On the first of these goal-line stands by Methuen, the entire illue Devil backfield was replaced for three of the four downs but failed to move the six yards needed for a TD. The second stand came soon after, when an intercepted Methuen pass brought the ball back within scoring distance. Again the Rangers held and a Methuen pass interception moved the ball out to the 42.

Methuen began the scoring Monday, before an over-flow crowd at Highfield Stadium. They marched 62 yards for the TD, behind quarterback Larry Waite.

But overshadowing the Methuen ground gaining in the first half were Jim Bennett's sparkling dashes of 47, 25 and 36 yards — all scoring touchdowns.

Methuen's halfback Bert Tkach and fullback Joe Catalano did most of the carrying, while Waite passed. But the Blue Devils, knowing Waite's reputation, kept him of balance much of the afternoon.
