Graduation Friday Night At Andover High School

The first graduating class from Andover High School will receive diplomas Friday night in traditional ceremonies in the new building. Special awards and announce-ment of scholarships will highlight the program, as the senior class of 116 takes part in its final academic activity. Mono ressays and the addresses by valedictorian and salutatorian will follow the theme "Are Our Cultural Values Deteriorating?" Sheila Serio, salutatorian, will discuss "Beginning an Ideal Cul-ture" and Ruth Borden Slade, the valedictorian, will speak on "Cul-tural Re-awakening; The Rise of the Individual". Honor essayists Priscilla Ann Terrio and Judith White have developed the topics (Continued on Page Ten) (Continued on Page Ten)

POMP'S POND STICKERS

POMP'S POND STICKERS AVAILABLE FRIDAY Residents of the town may obtain stickers, allowing them to use Pomp's Pond fa-cilities, by applying at the police station Friday and after. The Pond will be open, starting Sunday. Frank Mar-key, secretary of the Recrea-tion Committee, said resi-dents must show their car re-gistration in order to obtain a sticker for the windshield. No car will be admitted to the Pond area without displaying this evidence of residence in the community. The other recreational acti-vity, the playgrounds will start regular season activi-ties June 30.

Seek Methods To Control Growth; Hundreds Of Houses Are Planned

Vets Team Is Facing Trouble  Some means of controlling the town's growth is being sought by official town boards, which Tues-day night were told of preliminary plans for 3-500 houses in the west Andover section.

Is Over $2,000 Forty-eight property owners in Shawsheen Hylands are involved in the sewer betterment assess-ments, estimated by the Board of Public Works. The lowest assessment on a entative basis is $893, while the most to be paid is $2,097. The figures are estimated on the high side, according to Water Supt. Donald Bassett. This is done be-cause the law will not allow an increase in the assessments once they are filed in the Registry of Deeds. But reductions can be made at a later date. Thus it is routine, he explained, to estimate the betterment assessments at a maximum, hoping there will be an opportunity to adjust them down-wards later.

The Board signed a contract for the work Monday night, sending he document on to Town Counsel vincent Stulgis for approval as to ts form. The Susi and DeSantis to. Inc. received the contract on hid of $83,015.55. Assessments are based on $5.23 her front foot and five cents a square foot for a depth of 100 cet.

square foot for a depth of 100 feet. The BPW also debated at con-siderable length the possibility of charging indirect betterments against the developer, who has eight lots on which he may build when the sewer is installed. Mem-bers, urged to take action by Mr. Bassett, discussed methods by which the assessment can be made but arrived at no conclu-sions. They felt, however, that any developer should pay some share of the over-all sewer cost, just as home owners are indivi-dually paying an assessment based on over-all cost. In years past, a developer put in his own sewer in the development, but did not pay to enter the town sewage system. pay t system

Should Avoid

Should Avoid Contamination, from a planned sub-division of the Wild Rose Farm, was brought to light Monday night at a meeting of the Board of Public Works. Water Supt. Donald Bassett said the Board should call official attention to the plans for use of the brook sometime later for a water supply. Developer Harry Axelrod has preliminary plans before the Planning Board for well over 100 houses on the farm. The BPW, perusing the plans some time ago, made several suggestions as to streets. But Bassett felt that some assurance should be required that the stream running out of the some assurance should be required that the stream running out of the farm, into Fish Brook, will not contaminate that potential source of drinking water. He called at-tention to the expanding school population, which he said will mean that the new high school will be filled to capacity within a very few years. Addition of more voungsters to the system, he felt, will mean building a new high school and converting the present structure to junior high use. "We have to face it", he told the meeting, "and we may have to do something about it quicker than we want to think about". Speaking for the Board of Health, Robert Walsh said he believes the Wild Rose Farm area can be de-veloped without trouble, providing close attention is paid to the sep-tic tank and leeching field instal-lations by the developer and the town. A question of the possible contamination of Fish Brook, a future water supply, was also raised and it was suggested that this would not happen if proper care is used. Water Available Water Available this would not happen if proper care is used. Water Available Water Supt. Donald Bassett said the water report by Camp, Dresser and McKee shows using Fish Brook in 1965. And he predicted there would be ample water for the proposed developments, al-though a few distributional prob-lems may arise. But Bassett said the report figured on growth in the area, plus the normal increase in water use by expanding industry in the town. He felt that the 1965 date would still be valid, unless there should be an influx of in-dustry that demanded great quantities of water. The problem of sewering the west Andover area was discussed briefly. And there was general agreement that the town probably will not feel like voting extensive sums for trunk mains for many years. The Board of Health was pointed Agreement that the town probaby will not feel like voting extensive sums for trunk mains for many years. The Board of Health was pointed out as the source of real authority, as that Board must approve all septic tank installations. Area Disapproved Exploring some of the antici-pated costs, the meeting turned to Albert Cole Jr., chairman of the Land Acquisition Committee. He said a 30-acre site for a new school in the middle of the pro-posed area had been located, "but the Finance Committee wouldn't approve purchasing it". He said it is still available at a "reason-able" price. Study also has gone into locating a fire station some-where in the section. The Board members left no doubt of their concern over the potential growth and left little doubt that some type of control should be worked out. At this time, the BPW has estab-lished a rule that only 50 percent of the houses in a development may be serviced with water in an 18 month period. But Bassett said there is plenty of precedent, if such a question reached the courts, to be reasonably certain that the town would be required to furnish the water within a year or

He said it is his belief that taxes paid on the new construction have been of material help in keeping the tax rate down. He urged that the study be made, as a means of settling the often-stated premise that new homes don't pay for themselves. Supt. of Schools Edward I. #### EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

It Is A Tough Decision

There are several interesting ramifications of the plea from South School kindergarten parents to the School Committee that their youngsters be transported both ways.

Going beyond the immediate problem - which is serious enough to the parents concerned - it is obvious that the School Committee must make up its mind: either stick with a decision, once made, after consideration of the facts; or back off from that decision in the face of considerable parental pressure, without new facts being added which might change the picture.

This problem, in itself, is complicated. For one school of thought says it is the job of the School Committee or any other elected body to respond to the wishes of the electorate. Others claim it is their duty to make the decisions, as wisely as possible, then stick with them despite any concerted effort to have changes made. Thus the School Committee would appear to stand condemned by someone, no matter which decision it makes. In a third sense, those who advocate strict economy will certainly be critical if the purse strings are loosened.

In a completely different field, we are compelled to wonder how many of the parents present at the meeting last week also attended town meeting. How many spoke up for the School Committee budget?

We are not attempting to impugn anyone's motives. But it so often is true that economy is fine until it hits home. Then individuals who have urged it - either by public statement or by silent consent - suddenly see the significance of their position in a different light.

It is easy to be sympathetic with the parents' request. Their problems in transporting the youngsters one way, either from the morning session or to the afternoon one, are many. And the question of the justice in expecting some residents to transport their youngsters, while those in higher grades are publicly transported, is also debatable.

Thus it becomes difficult to appear to be against giving five-year-olds a ride. But this is a position the School Committee may occupy. We should remember that, if this is the case, it isn't because the members, as individuals, are not sympathetic. In this case, it will undoubtedly be because the money just isn't available.

And for that, town meeting can take credit.

Old Days?" When you worked 24-hour days, with one whole day off in six? When the pay was $18 a week? Fire Lt. Albert Cole philosphi-cally shrugged "What could you do? You had to live and eat. At least you knew where the money do? You had to live and eat. At least you knew where the money was coming from every week". This week, as he went into his 40th year with the Andover Fire Department, Cole reflected a little on the changes time has accom-plished — not only in hours and wages, but in manpower and equipment. equipment.

For when Lt. Cole went to work for the town, June 9, 1919, there was one truck and a pair of The crew numbered four - three but every week. And that, Cole recalled, was a mighty important factor in those days. For when he went to work for the town, Tyer Rubber Co. was working four and sometimes three days a week - making it pretty tough to make ends meet. "I was standing on the corner on one of those extra days off", he remembered, "when Capt. Lester H. Hilton asked me if I wanted to work for the department. I said sure and went to work" Charles Hill was chief then and Capt. Hilton - the only perdays. For when he went to work

Capt. Hilton – the only per-manent captain in the regular force manent captain in the regular force then and since - was one of the full-time men John Collins and William Baker, with Cole added, brought the crew to four. Hilton, the father of present Chief H. Lester Hilton, later was appointed deputy chief. It was that same year, 1924, that Cole was ap-pointed lieutenant. The job wasn't quite so bad by that time, for the town had added four men and approved two shifts. The men worked two 10-hour days, followed by a 24-hour day. Then they had a day off. Horses Still Used

Horses Still Used

Horses still Used Looking back on the early days of his career with the depart-ment, Cole remembered how the one remaining pair of horses was used for watering down the streets, or were harnessed to the dump trucks doing street work. And when the fire whistle blew, the drivers would hustle them back to drivers would hustle them back to the station to make the run. Some-times they'd leave the dump cart where it stood and ride in bareback; sometimes they'd jettison their water cargo and race back, neir water cargo and race back, pulling the empty watering cart. And occasionally, if the fire seemed to demand it, an extra pair of horses was quickly ob-tained from a neighboring stable, to pull one of the three-horse-drawn pieces of equipment. The old steamer was one. Cole The old steamer was one, Cole remembered how Ira Buxton, then a call man, would fire up the boiler as the steamer left the station and have 40 pounds pressure built up by the time the equipment was passing Tyer Rubber Co.

Buxton is the only man nov living, with the exception of former Chief Hill, who worked on the department, as a call man or regular, when Cole first started there. Chiefs Emerson and Buchan, under whom he also worked, are both gone.

Took Their Lunch

Back in those early days, the department escaped one tiresome job it now must do. Grass and brush fires were the responsibility of the tree warden, Cole explained. When one was reported, someone would locate the warden; he'd take a wagon and scout up a group of men to go fire-fighting. They'd all go home, get their lunches and take off.

"Sometimes they'd be out there days at a time", Cole commented. "We'd take their meals out and provide what help we could."

Small gallon and a half tanks were in use in those days, using water, soda and an acid. When there was water somewhere near, he men would keep on the run praying the chemicals on the ire, scuttling back to the wagon the fire, to get more soda and acid, then to to get more soda and acid, then to the water hole or well - possibly a hydrant - to fill up with water. "They were all right on grass fires", Cole said, "but no good in the woods. There it was shovels and hand equipment".

Lauded for Work As time went by, the department took over ambulance duty from the police department. And Cole was required to that detail for 12 years. The first ambulance was a Studebaker, he recalled. But that appeared to be considerable improved over the Police Depart-ment's Ford beach wagon, which Cole said had jump seats that folded down to make room for a stretcher stretcher. "Sure, I saw lots of accidents.

Sometimes the people were in-jured, sometimes dead. But none of it bothered me too much. You can't let it bother you. It was the kids that were hard, hurt or and they couldn't tell you about it."

It was during this tour of duty on the ambulance detail that the following short news item appeared "Lieutenant Albert Cole of the Andover Fire Department has won much deserved praise by the manner in which he has handled accident cases while assigned to the town ambulance during the past seven years. He was one of the firemen who took the first aid course and his knowledge of what to do in an emergency has been invaluable and numerous occasion An outstanding example of that fact was furnished in a recent Shawsheen Village automobile accident, when a Lawrence man received serious head cuts. Tem-Shawsheen automobile porary treatment to staunch the flow of blood, given under Lt. Cole's directions, was so effec-tive that it was heartily approved by the doctors upon arrival at one of the local hospitals. It was one of numerous cases when his ability has worked out to good advantage." Fire Prevention
