Officials Go Over Plans For New School Building Program

Andover Selectman Officer At Republican Convention

Sec. Doherty Still In Post

School Committee Secretary William A. Doherty, who indicated at the last meeting he might resign his post in protest over changes in the minutes of the committee meetings, carried out his usual duties at Tuesday night's session. He read the minutes of the previous meeting and occupied his usual post as secretary during the meeting.

Near the conclusion of Tuesday night's meeting, member John S. Sullivan handed Secretary Doherty a paper which he asked the secretary to study in order to clarify the matter. Mr. Doherty took the paper with him. It is reported to be a draft of a motion which Mr. Sullivan will make in connection with the situation when the committee meets again in September.

Raytheon Plant Here Now Employing 7,277

Four hundred Andover residents are among the 7,277 employees of the Raytheon Missile Systems division in Andover it was announced this week by the firm. The monthly payroll at the local plant amounts to two and one-half million dollars.

Production at the plant is at an all time high. Community contributions made during the last eight months amounted to more than $90,000. Since August, 1957, employees of the Andover division have donated 1,827 pints of blood.

Registry Men Will Check Motorboats

Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles inspectors with police powers will be used to enforce the new state boating law, according to an announcement by Wilton Vaughn, director of the division of motorboats.

The inspectors are empowered to board boats for the purpose of inspecting the registration and for other possible violations of the regulations.

Reports have been made of boat law violations in some sections.

Taking part in the Republican National Convention at Chicago next week as an assistant chief sergeant-at-arms will be Selectman Philip K. Allen of Andover. The appointment was made by Republican National Chairman Thurston Morton.

Selectmen Allen will be one of four men to serve as assistants at the convention. Two of the men will be assigned to radio, television and press sections of the convention, while the other two assistants will be in charge of preserving order on the convention floor and checking the credentials of delegates.

Edward F. McGinnis of Illinois will serve as chief sergeant-at-arms.

Selectman Allen has long been a prominent member of the Republican party, not only on the local level, but state and national as well.

A former member of the Massachusetts senate, he has served as deputy assistant secretary of defense, chief clerk of the Armed Services committee, and executive secretary of the Republican State committee. He is currently chairman of the Andover Republican town committee.

CONVENTION SCHEDULE

The schedule of the Republican National Convention at Chicago which gets underway Monday is as follows:

Town Manager Will Request Estimates

During the joint meeting of the school building committee and the school board Tuesday night, Town Manager Thomas E. Duff announced that he intends to send a request to all town departments asking for a projected estimate of capital expenditures which may be anticipated within the next five to ten years.

When this information has been compiled, a more accurate picture of what capital expenses the town will face in the next decade will be available.

Capital expenditures for schools and sewer and water systems are in sight. What additional large layouts will be faced will be better known when the town manager has the reports of all departments in hand.

Plans for future school construction in Andover were discussed by the school committee and the school building committee at a joint meeting of the groups held Tuesday evening, the regular meeting night of the school committee.

An intensive study of all types of school construction is planned by the building committee, its chairman, Warren Lewis advised the meeting.

One of the first steps to be taken will be the carrying out of test borings on the Noyes property, Lovejoy rd., the area which is scheduled to be taken by eminent domain proceedings as the site for a new school in that section of the community. The cost of the test borings will be taken from the $12,000 appropriation made at the town meeting to finance preliminary plans for a new school.

Other early steps planned in connection with the new school construction will be the securing of an architectural firm, and preparation by Superintendent of Schools Edward I. Erickson of an educational program for the new school.

Construction of the best possible school at the lowest possible cost will be the objective of the school building committee, Mr. Lewis stressed. He said that the committee will be economy minded and will keep ever in mind the taxpayers who may be called upon to erect additional new schools in the West Andover area.

The chairman explained that the committee will inspect all types of school buildings in order to plan the most efficient for Andover. To be looked over will be multi-story type schools, the single story and the campus type buildings.

Consideration of the use of present facilities will also be made by the board, such as use of the Bradlee school on a temporary basis. It has been estimated that it will cost $75,000 to put the Bradlee school

Youth Loses Life In Foster's Pond

Despite heroic efforts of his cousin to save him, John Lawrie, 17, 50 Center st., Ballardvale, drowned Saturday afternoon while swimming in Foster's pond.

Lawrie, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lawrie, went to the pond with his cousin, Robert Partridge, 16, 5 Center st., Ballardvale, shortly after 4 p.m. in the victim's car. They walked along the shore for a while and then decided to take a swim near the dam. Friends said that Lawrie had learned to swim only this year.

The pair swam some 30 feet from shore when Partridge realized his cousin was in difficulty. He aided him to the surface and at the same

Contracts for the painting of school buildings were awarded by the school committee at Tuesday night's meeting. The work will include sections of the Junior High School and the original West School building.

The board ruled out an Andover man's low bid because it was not accompanied by the required certified check.

Loris Stefani, 244 South Main st. submitted an all inclusive bid of $2,170 for the work, but since he was ruled ineligible, the bids of the Highland Paint Service, Inc., of Lowell, for $3,196 and Charles Lundergan of High st., for $4,320.73 were considered.

The board voted to have Lundergan do the exterior of the West School at a cost of $557.80. The Highland Paint Service will paint the Junior High School girls locker room, $250; girls shower and locker rooms, $585; boys shower and locker rooms, $445; and team locker and coaches rooms, $400.

in condition for modern use. Mr. Lewis said that during a meeting with the State Building Assistance Commission last week, he learned that Andover will probably receive one third state aid in financing the new school a higher figure than the commission has previously made.

Construction from free cash was discussed. Should the town finance 50 per cent of the construction cost, the state would finance the remaining half on a five year basis, effecting an important saving on interest.

The group was informed by Town Manager Duff that town counsel is now making a search of the title of the land to be taken. Building committee members present at the meeting in addition to Chairman Lewis were: Arthur Peatman, Joseph L. Walsh and W. Rodney Hill. School committee members present were Chairman Milton Meyers, John S. Sullivan and Secretary William A. Doherty. Absent from the school committee were Robert B. Museum Seeks To Get A Huge American Lobster

In keeping with rising prices, Boston's Museum of Science has just taken its 20-year-old reward offer for a giant lobster and upped the ante ten times!

First mentioned in a Museum publication in December, 1940, the original offer of $10 for any lobster weighing more than 40 pounds live has never had any takers.

The new bounty of $100 carries with it certain conditions. First, to be eligible, the specimen must be a Homarus americanus, or American lobster, and it must exceed the 42-pound-7-ounce weight of the current record holder, now on exhibit at the Museum of Science. (That lobster, incidentally, is three feet long!)

Next, it must be weighed while live by a representative of the Museum. This is to insure that proper gauges and scales are used to measure it.

Finally, the winning specimen must be turned over to the Museum of Science for possible future exhibit.

Here in New England, the lobster is well-known as an epicurean delight and is an important factor in the huge fishing industry. Recognizing the economic value of the lobster, the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries still operates a lobster hatchery, the only one in New England. It is situated at Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard.

There, lobster eggs are hatched and protected in their early development stages. The hatchery is also a research station where experimental work is not confined to lobsters alone but also includes other marine species of commercial importance, such as hard clams and quahaugs.

In summer, when a housewife pours over a steaming cauldron, she's not brewing up a mess of "toll and trouble," like Macbeth's witches. It's an even bet she's boiling live lobster, perhaps the number one favorite on any seafood menu. Emerging from the pot a bright red with succulent meat, the graceful table lobster seems far removed from its days as a monster of the deep.

The Museum's Education Associate Edward D. Pearce says this marine animal with cannibalistic instincts lurks in rocky dens on the ocean floor to await its prey. As fish swim by, it clutches at them with its great bulbous-tipped claws, capable of rendering soft flesh, or the 1/4-inch thick shell of a quahaug dug from the silt.

These clam-digging claws are actually two of the lobster's 10 legs, the remaining eight being long and sharply pointed. These 10 legs are evenly divided on each side of the lobster's "chest." Where they are attached to the body, they are protected by the over-hanging shell, or carapace. Judging by human standards, you might say the lobster is an animal "turned inside out." It has its skeleton (shell) on the outside; its teeth inside its stomach; and its abdomen in what we would call its tail. When it swims, it swims backwards. Not only that, but it "changes its clothes," or grows a new shell, inside the old before discarding outer "garment."

This molting, or changing clothes, of a lobster is one of its more interesting features. When the flesh or tissue inside expands until the outer shell can no longer bear the pressure, the carapace splits down the back.

The lobster then draws itself up and pulls free. The new shell, larger than the old, has already developed and begins to harden immediately. During its lifetime, the lobster may go through many molts.

This is much the same process by which the animal grows a new limb. At the first molt after the loss of a leg or claw, a red knob appears where the break was. This knob grows with each succeeding molt until, after three or four times, a new claw has grown that is as good as the original.

It is difficult to describe a lobster in human terms. For example, it sees with periscope eyes; it feels and smells with antennae lashing out from its head; it tastes and also feels by means of bristles on its legs. The mother lobster carries her unborn young outside her body, the eggs forming in grape-like clusters under her abdomen where the gentle swishing of her tail circulates the water to give them oxygen. Said to be "in berry," these females are protected by law in Massachusetts, as are all lobsters under a certain size (3 3/16 inch carapace).

Classed as a lower animal, the backbone-less lobster nevertheless is considered one of the highest forms of delectable foods the world over. Try one yourself soon. You'll enjoy it.

EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

Who's Against Santa?

Will the country support Santa Claus at the election next November?

For that's exactly what the domestic portion of the Democratic platform reminded us of - more of everything, but without added cost.

Naturally folks in this part of the country, who know and like Sen. John F. Kennedy, will support him because they do know him.

But in the nation as a whole, where the planks in that party platform are real issues, we wonder whether voters will be voting for Kennedy, or for Santa himself.

It seems that the platform promises for improvement in every field - higher wages, better medical care, more work, improved educational facilities, help for the elderly, and many more - are designed to give the illusion that all this can be ours, simply by electing the Democrats. No cost, of course.

Yet common sense tells us that the tremendous social services contained in this platform will cost billions upon billions of dollars - and we will all be paying for them eventually.

But voting is not always a matter of common sense.

There's an old saying that "You don't vote against Santa Claus" - and we suspect the Democrats are depending on the truthfulness of this adage as they face the electorate in November.

They've Been On A Spot

Cooperation, to mean anything, must indeed be a two-way proposition.

And this is all that the Board of Selectmen have asked of Sidney P. White, in finishing off the loose ends at his dairy bar on Andover st. Apparently the work is continuing, and will eventually be completed.

We can't help but comment on what a tricky spot the Selectmen have been placed by having to spend so much time dealing with problems presented to them by Mr. White, as he attempts to get his business enterprise going. There have been uncounted hours spent in discussing the many difficult situations there - sewage, drainage, and other details.

And every time there has been a delay, or there has been some hitch in the plans, the Board has had to carry the burden of appearing to "delay" Mr. White because of political differences.

It isn't easy to do what's right, when this sort of public pressure is held over one's head constantly.

The Sunday permit is a good example. Mr. White did not have one for Sunday, July 3 - the weekend he opened. Normally you can not operate on the Sabbath without the permit, and cold logic would have required that the place be closed for the day.

Yet the Selectmen decided to make an exception, and validated a permit, so that the new business would not be unduly hampered on its opening. Imagine the cry of "foul" that would have gone up if the permit was not issued - and see the rather uncertain situation now, with a precedent established for not holding the line on the necessity of having Sunday permits in hand prior to the specific day.

The Selectmen have been on a spot, and they apparently have attempted to cooperate with Mr. White in this latest instance - when the lack of that cooperation could have meant the failure of a well-advertised opening.

It seems obvious that cooperation has been extended by the Selectmen, and the same should be offered by Mr. White.

There's been too much politicking over this particular business project as it is.

Down the Years with The Townsman

50 Years Ago - July, 1910

Frost was reported early Wednesday morning.

The tax rate has remained at $16.50 - a piece of good news for local taxpayers. The assessors said there has been an increase in the personal property valuations, making this possible.

Mrs. E. M. Todd and Miss Edna Todd left town this morning for their usual summer visit to Boxford.

The house owned by Fred Smith in Scotland District was again visited by thieves Sunday night and another quantity of tools taken. This is the second time the marauders have visited the home within the past few days.

A party of local fishermen spent part of Tuesday fishing in Lake Cochichewick in North Andover. The time was spent to little advantage, however, as the fish refused to bite. Considerable energy was necessary, however, to attend to the bites of the mosquitoes. Those in the party were Roy Rhodes, Harold Cates, Leonard Saunders, Harry Chadwick and Moses Farnum.

The property at 17 Main st. has been purchased by Joseph L. Burns. It is located between William J. Burns' store and the bank building.

BUZZINESS

25 Years Ago - July, 1935

Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning, Registry inspectors were busy checking on the big trucks hauling stone to the Lowell st. construction job. Many were reported to be overloaded, and to have faulty equipment.

The PWA School Building Committee is talking about Sept. 16 as the date for a special town meeting. The Committee says it needs another $30,000 for the project. The contractor has stated that the plant can be ready for use by next March.

The second break in the past few weeks was reported at the Rickard estate on North Main st. Police said it occurred sometime Saturday or Sunday. Five Lawrence juveniles have been held for the first break, but no one has been apprehended for the second one.

A million dollar Andover will has been found, after nine years. The document was allowed in Probate Court this week. The will was signed by Susan M. J. Sears but when she died some years later, the will could not be found. Her estate was valued at $1,383,106. The long-lost document turned up recently in the papers of her lawyer, who has been dead for some years. Both administrators named in the document are deceased.

10 Years Ago - July, 1950

Parking meters, during the first six months of the year, returned $5,101.91 to the town - slightly less than during a comparable period a year ago. The average return from the meters has been $35 daily, although this dropped off somewhat in the last few months.

Richard W. Weber of Lawrence has been elected by the School Committee as assistant football coach, under Walter Roberts.

A "Cross the Equator" club is booming at Pomp's Pond. The members undertake to swim the equivalent distance from Andover to the equator. Some have swam to the Port of Boston and are now "headed for New York Harbor".

Merrimack College will be co-educational, starting in the fall. There have been many requests that this policy be adopted since the College opened in 1947.

The annual playground outing will be held next Tuesday, with some 300 youngsters all ready to enjoy Canobie Lake Park for the day. Buses will leave all playgrounds in the morning.

Mrs. Gertrude Hart, Mrs. Ethel Wilson and Miss Margaret Lane of the library staff are enjoying their annual vacation.

Books On Presidency

In keeping with the present interest in the election of our next president the Memorial Hall Library has prepared a display of books and materials which give information on the men who have shown their willingness to serve in the office; other books show the over-all magnitude of this job of running our country. Books about candidates, some by the men themselves may be seen in the display; and histories of the major parties, one book on the third parties, studies of the presidency over the years, and a few titles that tempt the reader to consider getting into politics, himself. Here are a few, selected from the exhibit: The President's Cabinet, Fenno, an analysis of the great office from Wilson to Eisenhower; Hats In The Ring, the making of presidential candidates, Moos; Putting First Things First, Stevenson; Challenges We Face, Nixon; Truman Speaks, Truman; The Kennedy Family, Dinneen; Stuart Symington, Wellman; Nelson Rockefeller, Morris; What I Think, Stevenson; Democracy And The American Party System, Ranney; Profiles In Courage, decisive moments in the lives of celebrated Americans, Kennedy; The Republicans, a history of their party, Moos; Splendid Misery, the story of the Presidency and power politics at close range, Bell; I'd Rather Be President, Ellis; This Is Humphrey, Amrine; The Fabulous Democrats, Cohn; The Republican Era, 1869-1901, White; The American Presidency, Rossiter; The Presidency Today, Corwin; The American President, Hyman; The Rise Of The Vice-Presidency, Williams; The Democratic Party, Kent; This Is Nixon, Keogh; Prophet In His Own Country, the triumphs and defeats of Adlai Stevenson, Davis; What It Means To Be A Politician, Bullitt; Let's Go Into Politics, Baldwin; Politics In America, Brogan; The Lady And The Vote, Sanders; Third Parties In American Politics, by Howard P. Nash Jr. The last named book is of particular interest to Andover readers, as the author was a resident in this community for a number of years and much of his research was aided by his use of the local library.

All books displayed may be borrowed for home use.

Explains Disability Rider Available To WW II Vets

Veterans in good health and under 60 who hold World War II GI life insurance may add a total disability income rider to their GI policies at a small additional premium cost.

William J. Blake, manager of the Veterans Administration regional office in Boston, explained this GI insurance benefit in response to numerous queries.

He said policyholders who become totally disabled from any cause before age 60 and while their rider is in effect, will receive an income of $10.00 per month for each $1,000 face amount of their GI policies.

Payments under the rider begin after the total disability has existed for six consecutive months, and continues for the duration of the disability, regardless of its length. No payment may be made for disabilities incurred after age 60, and no premium charge is made for this benefit after that date.

If the veteran is in good health and under age 60, the rider may be attached to any NSLI policy, except for a limited number sold to service-disabled veterans since April 1951.

Although a physical examination is required of those whose age at their nearest birthday is 41 or more, Blake pointed out that these policyholders may be examined by local physicians, provided VA medical application forms are used.

Blake said that the premium cost of the rider varies according to the policyholder's age, type of policy, and its face amount.

Information and application forms are available at any VA office.

time shouted for assistance but his cries went unanswered, he later related.

Partridge said that the two started for shore and he thought that Lawrie was out of trouble and was following him. Exhausted, he crawled out of the water and saw that his cousin was gone.

He notified other swimmers and some of them went into the water. At the same time a call was sent to the police and fire departments.

Thomas Cummings and Michael Frishman, lifeguards at Poms Pond, were transported to the scene and undertook the search for the body. They were joined by John Sweetland, a skin diver and a call fireman in North Reading. Soon, two boats, operated by Andover firefighters also moved out from shore and assisted in the search. The body was found in 10 feet of water some 30 feet from shore in a half hour.

Lawrie was taken to the Lawrence General Hospital in the fire department ambulance while a resuscitator was applied. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

Lawrie was a native of Lowell and a graduate of Andover High School. He was employed by F. I. Carter and Sons, florists, of Tewksbury.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Gloria Jean and Deborah J. Lawrie; two brothers, Donald C. and William K. Lawrie Jr.; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gray of Tewksbury; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Lawrie of Andover; also several aunts, uncles and cousins.

The funeral was held Wednesday from the Lane Funeral Home, 68 Park st., Andover with a high Mass of requiem at 9 a.m. in St. Augustine's Church. Burial was in Tewksbury Cemetery, Tewksbury.
