Family says going green was easy once inspiration, personal values were considered

> BY DUSTIN LUCA dluca@andovertownsman.com

A recently built two-story house on Lincoln Street has been lived in by a family of four since this past spring, but it has yet to generate a single electric bill.

With solar panels on its roof, a biomass-burning pellet stove keeping it warm during the winter and an outer shell made completely of Styrofoam and concrete, the house owned by Charissa Regano and Alan Kao is today's definition of a family going green.

Looking back at their old home, Regano and Kao say it's not hard to go green — you just need to do it for the right reasons.

"We've lived here for ten years in an older house," Regano said. "It was old and expensive to heat, and it was expensive to cool in the summer, so it was not very energy efficient."

Because they both have careers in environmental consulting, where they advise businesses on how to be ecologically conscious with their operations, Kao said that ever-increasing energy bills

School cuts not as big as feared

BY DUSTIN LUCA dluca@andovertownsman.com

As last school year was wrapping up in May, the district faced a large deficit for the upcoming academic year that would force the schools to reduce nearly 13 positions overall.

But that number decreased to just five positions, and a letter sent out to parents and staff within the Andover Public School system this week shed light on how, and why, the reductions occurred.

While explaining that the school committee helped matthe 2010-2011 academic year, Forgue said that some unanticipated staff going on leave and Committee. retiring helped save a number of positions.

Still, the committee wasn't pleased about having to make cuts in the first place.

"We are fortunate that it wasn't 12 or 13, but we are not happy that we had to reduce these positions," Forgue said.

Overall, the school's ability to fill vacated positions of highdollar teachers and faculty with lower-paying staff who have less seniority was able to generate badly-needed savings, Forgue said.

At the high school level, a total of 6.4 full-time equivalent positions would have been lost throughout a number of departments, with Art, English, Foreign ters by reducing its budget for Language, Physical Education and Guidance taking the larg-School Committee Chair Dennis est hits, according to data made available by the Andover School

For over a year, the Andover Inn at Phillips Academy has been closed to renovations, but this weekend it will open its doors to the public once again.

Its grand re-opening will coincide with Phillips' Community Day, and the inn's newly renamed Samuel's restaurant will start serving dinners later that evening, according to Kelly Scalia, general manager of the inn.

From the outside, the inn looks just as it used to, but almost everything on the inside has been rebuilt or refurbished, in some cases using parts of the old building, Scalia said.

Selectmen appoint John Hess as fifth member

BY DUSTIN LUCA dluca@andovertownsman.com

Following an application process that drew seven local residents to apply for an open selectman seat, the board voted unanimously to appoint John Hess, a previous selectman, to become a fifth member on an interim basis.

Following a failed vote put forth by Selectman Brian Major and Chairman Alex Vispoli to appoint Paul Salafia to the position, Selectmen Ted Teichert and Mary Lyman brought a vote to the table to appoint Hess.

unanimously. Hess, who was sworn in shortly after being appointed, last served on the board in 2007. "I served with John during my first three years on the board," Alexander Vispoli, chairman of the board, said. "He is a very collaborative person on the board." In his previous time as a selectman, Hess was involved with efforts in open space land acquisition and the development of sidewalks around town, Vispoli said.

Before he was a selectman, Hess also worked as a volunteer for the school committee After an initial vote of 3-0 in and housing authority. He then tion, which would have made the years, first as an elected one-year was elected as a state representa- board appointing a person to one of former Chairman Gerry Stative. Hess then served three full terms on the board leading up to the end of his final term in 2007. "I had a general interest in the town, I had a general interest in government, and a lot of people asked me to run," Hess said about his first time running for the seat.

More recently. Hess recognized a need for the town "to have someone with experience to fill in for a few months," he said.

'I'm looking forward to the debates that will surround the issues that will come up at the Town Meeting," Hess said.

Hess has no plans to run for two anticipated vacancies on the board that the town will vote on during its next scheduled meeting in March, he said.

Prior to the board voting on who would become their fifth member, local resident Mary Carbone voiced opposition to the

of its own positions.

"Today, the selectmen are being placed in a position of a lot of power, more so than they have had in a long time," Carbone said at the meeting, adding that the appropriate thing for the board to do would be to refer to the last town-wide elections, where candidates vying for a spot on the board competed against each other, for their next selectman.

The four of you were put in your seat by an election," Carbone said. "I don't think if it was any one of you, that you would want to be treated in this manner."

Following Carbone's statement, the selectmen voted on the appointment and selected Hess as their next selectman.

Hess's appointment as an interim selectman fills a position vacated by the departure said.

bile earlier this year, at a time when the town is gearing up for tackling a number of significant tasks.

Because of their itinerary leading up to the next election cycle, the top priority at Monday's meeting was making sure that "whoever was chosen would jump in and help us as a fifth member," Vispoli said.

"On the short term, we're preparing for the capital improvement plan as well as setting the tax rate," Vispoli said, adding that November elections, upcoming work at Bancroft Elementary School, the ongoing I-93 project and next years town meeting are all significant items the board will be working on in the months ahead.

"I expect somebody like John to take a big part, to roll up his sleeves and dive in," Vispoli

Phillips Academy.

"It had some significant structural problems," Porter said.

Several of the building's systems, including it's electrical, plumbing and heating mechanisms, were in need of work, Porter said.

When it opens on Saturday, the inn will contain 30 guest rooms, a number of meeting rooms and a restaurant. All rooms will have safes, independent temperature controls and a view of either the campus or courtyard right outside of the inn, according to Scalia.

The number of rooms has increased from 23 to 30, and they all have their own bathrooms, whereas the old inn had five bathrooms that the guests rooms shared, Scalia said.

Additionally, a bar that used to be in the inn's lobby has been relocated and changed to a lounge bar in the restaurant, and a greeting party now takes its place in the lobby.

As construction was underway, the Phillips community was asked to generate ideas for a new name for the inn's restaurant, which for a long time had no name until it was recently called "Brasserie", according to Porter.

"They decided that they didn't want to keep the name," Porter said. "They wanted to find a name that worked better for the restaurant.'

The name Samuel's honors the founder of the school, Porter said.

The restaurant itself has also changed and features a "traditional New England menu with a modern flare to it," and the facility has been redesigned to be more casual, Scalia said.

"They wanted to welcome everyone in the community, and they had to bring it down a notch so everybody would be more comfortable in this atmosphere," Scalia said. "There isn't a whole lot of competition in the area as far as restaurants are concerned."

With the facility's grand reopening just days away, Porter said he is eager to see how the community receives the changes to the Andover Inn.

"We're excited that we've been able to do this, and we

The event offers a 5-mile route that is just right for family and corporate walk teams, as well as individual walkers.

Greg Smith, a member of the Lazarus House Advisory Board said, "the whole idea of providing transitional housing is to help people get back on their feet. It's that vision that keeps my wife, Nancy and I walking. Especially when we realized that the Hike for Hope is a big part of the budget that keeps the programs running. This year, I raised $1,000 in one day by posting it to Facebook and Linked-In from my personal fundraising page on the www.hikeforhope. org website. People tend to want to help others, so it's not difficult to get donations."

Funds raised at the Hike will go to Capernaum Place, a transitional housing facility with 18 family and two single-handicapped units, it is currently filled to capacity. The maximum length of stay at Capernaum Place is two years. During this time residents work with caseworkers, take life

Great women know great ways to give back

andovertownsman.com

"Great Women to Know" is a local women's networking group that brings unstoppable energy, unmatched time management, and inspired leadership to help each other and the girls of Esperanza Academy in Lawrence.

Esperanza students eat three meals a day at school, on a food budget that is stretched thin. GWTK collects Market Basket gift cards to purchase high quality nutrition, and, for Thanksgiving, made sure the girls ate a bountiful turkey dinner together. To enhance the girls knowledge and skills regarding nutrition, Merit Tukiainen, Owner of Night and Day, and Lisa Simmons, Prudential, Howe and Doherty REALTOR are teaming up to develop and deliver a cooking curriculum this year.

What better way to learn about future professions than from people who are practicing them? On Feb. 2, GWTK hosts a nod to Groundhog Day, called "Shadow Day" — at the school and in the community. Esperanza students spend the day learning about and participating in GWTK members' businesses.

This year, older girls were hosted at the Medical Offices of Elizabeth Harris, MD and Rehka Quazi, MD; at Andover Animal Hospital with owner Diane Tower, and at Elements Therapeutic Massage with owner, Cheryl Arbia.

Kathy Moramarco, of Moramarco Chiropractic, hosted two girls to learn about starting and running a business. Joyce Perocchi, Esq. and Paula Colby-Clements, Esq. took girls to Lawrence District Court to meet a judge and learn about the trial process. They also learned about the legal rights of animals with Professor Diane Sullivan Esquire of Massachusetts School of Law.

Other members pitched in to provide much needed support to this rather complex logistical effort, taking full advantage of the wide array of skills and talents of this dynamic group!

As this new school year begins, Great Women to Know are focused on making the start of the year great for the girls at Esperanza. You can help in many different ways! Here's just a few:

■ Dollars for Duds: Planet Aid, located at Whole Foods in downtown Andover, provides the proceeds of all clothes donated at that spot to Esperanza on a per pound basis. Clothes can be worn, stained, and tattered and are still accepted. Make the new school year a time to clean out your closets and put those unwanted clothes to work for the girls of Esperanza.

■ Promote Uniform-ity: The girls need gently used khaki pants, in an assortment of sizes.

■ Make their Meals Count: Doherty Pick up a Marketbasket, Whole Foods, or Stop and Shop gift card to be used to purchase high quality protein and fresh produce.

DonateTechnology Tools: On your Back to School shopping rounds, pick up some graph paper, flash drives, or a TI-80 Calculator.

■ All donations can be made and receipts obtained locally at:

BUSINESS BRIEFS

The Philips-owned buildings in Andover have earned LEED certification from the U.S. Green Building Council, the leading authority on sustainable building practices. Through the Existing Buildings Rating System, owners and operators of existing buildings document building operations and improvements that use less energy and reduce the impact on the environment. Buildings that receive a high EBRS rating receive LEED certification. This achievement is especially significant since Philips is one of the largest industrial sites in the State of Massachusetts (and among the largest in the country) to achieve LEED certification for existing buildings. Philips in Andover is also one of a select few in the country who have achieved this for a multibuilding industrial/office site.

LEED-certified buildings save money, reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and contribute to a healthier environment. Some of the specific initiatives that contributed to Philips' certification include:

■ installing energy-efficient Philips lighting;

usage by collecting rain water tributes to our "green" culture.

Spin-a-thon benefits ALS residence

Fitness For You Inc., a health club located in North Andover, hosted its fourth annual 24-Hour Spin-A-Thon on Saturday, Sept. 11 to benefit those living with ALS, Lou Gehrig's disease. The "Spin To Win: The Fight Against ALS in memory of Fran "MOOCH" Muccio" generated more than $22,000 in donations, superseding the previous years' totals. More than 500 individuals participated in the event.

Proceeds from the 24-hour Spin-A-Thon benefited residents at the Steve Saling ALS Residence at the Leonard Florence Center for Living. The center is the only residence in the country dedicated to caring for individuals living with ALS. Using state of the art technologies in a home environment, the ALS Residence provides a specialized dwelling to assist those living with ALS in their quest to remain as independent as possible.

THE TOWNSMAN Thursday, September 30, 2010 7 Arts & Entertainment She's not in Andover anymore; she's on Broadway

By JUDY WAKEFIELD STAFF WRITER

Watch out Broadway! The director of Andover High School's drama department affectionately calls Catherine Charlebois a triple threat.

"Catherine is part of a long list of very talented students who came through AHS at that time. She had it all — she was a great singer, dancer and actor what is known as a 'triple threat,'" Susan Choquette wrote in email.

So, it's not surprising that the multitalented Charlebois is basically living her dream. She is a "universal swing" for all the time." the Broadway Company and is appearing in their show, "Wicked," now on Broadway.

Ironically, Charlebois first saw the show in New York City when she was a junior at AHS.

"I love the show," she said. "I loved the music, the story...and I remember thinking how a show like that is perfect for me," she said. Fast forward to 2010, and Charlebois has not one, but six roles to study for "Wicked." As a "universal swing" she has to be ready to step into any of the six roles on a moment's notice. If someone gets sick or injured, it's Charlebois to the rescue. And, she loves it.

'I just go wherever they want me to go," she said. "It's a lot of work, a lot of studying, but it keeps you on your toes

It's a great way to see different cities, although spare time is minimal when you have six roles to study. "Wicked" opened last week in Boston at the Boston Opera House, but Charlebois said she won't fill in for that show. She'll be in the when she was a sophomore), Tommy Broadway version of the popular witch story that pits wicked Elphaba against good witch Glinda.

A 2005 AHS graduate and a graduate of Syracuse University, the now 23-yearold will always be remembered for "her strong work ethic and attention to detail," Choquette said.

"She was a director's dream. I never had to tell Catherine something more than once in a rehearsal. If I gave her a stage direction, she simply wrote it down, executed it and that was that. I didn't have to tell her again or remind her at the next rehearsal. She just got it done," Choquette said.

When Charlebois was at AHS, she was in all the musicals — How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying (in the ensemble), Les Miserables (as Eponine

(she played Sally Simpson), Little Shop of Horrors (as one of the three singing street urchins) and Beauty and the Beast (she played Belle).

With a positive and cheerful personality, Choquette often brings her name up to current students as a former AHS actor who had one of the strongest work ethics of anyone she has worked with.

"I am so pleased that she is experiencing success as a performer," Choquette said.

Reviews on the AHS drama department were just as flattering.

"AHS is great. I gained confidence and had the chance to learn so much...being part of an ensemble or learning a role. It was great for me," Charlebois said. "It prepared me for what I want to do.'

District names Andover High interim principal

BY DUSTIN LUCA dluca@andovertownsman.com

Following the recent deparcipal of Andover High School, an interim replacement has been named to fill his shoes: Dr.

Thomas Sharkey. In a letter sent out to the community on Tuesday, Superintendent of Schools Marinel McGrath said that Sharkey will start working at the school on Oct. 4.

Sharkey served as headmaster to Lawrence High School before being named the interim principal, a quality that McGrath said makes him "the perfect leader for our high school."

"He is a visionary school ture of Jonathan Harris as Prin- leader who is committed to ensuring that every student has unlimited opportunities to succeed," McGrath said in the letter. "He knows well the legacy of our high school and lastly, as a community member and long-time resident, Dr. Sharkey knows our community well."

Dr. Sharkey and McGrath could not be reached immediately for comment.

were themselves reduced, and a slight reduction in the school's Marketing Department was added, bringing the total number of reductions to 4, according to data.

At the elementary school level, the West, South and High Plain Elementary Schools were all slated to lose entire positions, with West Elementary taking the biggest hit: Three full-time employees would be lost coming into this academic year, according to the information released. Ultimately, West Elementary lost only one position, a teaching spot in the first grade, and the other two schools didn't lose any, according to data. Unfortunately, the cuts will have a lasting impact on the school system, according to Tom Meyers, president of the Teachers Union.

"Every avenue of research says that class size has an impact on student performance," Meyers said. "Every teacher would say there is more stress on the job, because you are trying to keep

'This is the second year of cuts here at the high school, and it has had a significant impact," Meyers said. "If you increase class size, then you impact learning in a variety of ways."

As some concern around town was raised about an extra $384,723 in funds from the 2009-2010 academic year not going toward minimizing the severity of cuts at the school, Forgue said that using funds leftover from one year's budget can't be used for another, even if they are returned to their original source.

"We can't take that money and use it for the next year," Forgue said.

In the future, Forgue said he hopes they can restore the lost positions.

"The school committee and leadership team is running a number of efforts and initiatives to restore these positions in the future," Forgue said. "This is a long-term effort we are involved in. It is going to take a few years vision but it really is not. This is we are in, just ask, what three the first step.

The second, and more important step, is to clearly state what you plan to do in the process of making those things better. Many people can suggest how to make things better, it is that person who rolls up his sleeves and is a critical part of the solution who truly leads. These two things comprise the double vision of leadership. He continued.

In the interview for a job or if you are in a position of authority, share your double vision. Some may think you are presumptuous and even boastful. Most will find the approach most refreshing.

If you move into a community or contemplate such a move, apply the double vision standard to the elected and appointed officials. They are the formal leaders of the community. You will be able to quickly judge the leadership score quite easily.

things do you suggest to make the world a better place and what are you going to do about it? If the answer has no real content do not embarrass them, just search for people who exhibit real leadership. Just remember in spite of everyone else, you must have those triple solutions and a plan of attack, If you don't, you are not a leader.

As the years passed, I have found his method quite helpful. Just yesterday I was looking at my garden, planning for next year's wonderful experience. What three things can be done to make it a better garden? What will I do to make it better? My mind wandered from the garden to the outside world. I thought of the dilemmas in every community in our country. I could name some things to make things better. Dr. Mesics forgive me, I am retired. But alas, I am no longer in a position of authority and not a community leader. Wherever you are, I want you to know, name three things with a plan, regarding personal effort, has been a life-saver both on and off the playing field these many vears.

ANDOVER — As youngsters, then-neighbors Andy Coke and Jimmy Walsh often played pickup football in the yard and dreamed of heroics with Andover High.

"Jimmy and I used to be neighbors," said Coke. "So being on 222 yards and a whopping five the defense with him is just like being in the backyard playing, and pretending to be here (on the varsity team).

On Friday, the two delivered a night better than either could have dreamed up while playing with a Nerf football.

Behind a career day by Coke and a game-clinching lastminute interception by Walsh, Andover opened its MVC schedule with an impressive 39-32 victory over previously-unbeaten 190 yards in the first two games Tewksbury.

"It was fantastic," said senior quad-captain Ned Deane. "I got a little nervous there at the end, but we buckled down when the pressure was on. Coke was unbelievable and Jimmy made them pay at the end."

The junior carried 29 times for touchdowns, benefiting from the "jumbo" power-I formation added to the playbook during the week for the Golden Warriors who had gone exclusively shotgun the first two weeks.

Coke blasted his way through gaping holes throughout the game, tallying 156 yards and four touchdowns on 15 carries in the first half alone, including two scores in a matter of just 16 seconds. He had combined for of the season.

Simon Voorhees cruised to a firstplace finish in 15:17 for 2.87 miles as Andover snapped Methuen's 26-meet winning streak, defeating the Rangers in a dual meet for the first time in 11 years on Wednesday.

The score ended in a 28-28 tie, but Andover was awarded the win because sixth runner $\operatorname{\mathsf{Tim}}$ Lyman finished in front of Methuen's sixth man.

"To come over here and beat them here is a big accomplishment," said Andover coach Leo Lafond. "The big difference this vear is that our kids really prepared in the summer and were ready to go."

Warrior junior Ryan Cooney took a pivotal fourth in 16:03, seven seconds ahead of Methuen sophomore Mike O'Donnell.

National Silver and Bronze medals for local teen rowers

When you pick up a new sport in March, you hardly expect to win a silver medal at a national championship four months later. But that's just what happened to Andover resident and Central Catholic High School junior Rachel Corbett.

For teammate Zoe Zimmerman, the journey was a bit longer, but no less remarkable, at just nine months. Zimmerman, a junior at Andover High School, rowed briefly when she was in eighth grade at West Middle School and returned to competitive rowing in earnest in August of this year.

Corbett and Zimmerman compete for Essex Rowing Club of Methuen, a non-profit organization focused on advancing the sport of rowing throughout the Merrimack Valley.

Competing together in a quad, Corbett, Zimmerman, Bolduc and Guinee went toe-to-toe over the 2000-meter course with a crew from the USRowing Junior Women's National Team Sculling Development Camp. The camp draws top athletes from across the country to develop within the national team system. Most crews would be intimidated by such competition, but for the Essex quad, it was simply fuel for the fire.

"Our girls have a lot of chutzpah. They wanted to win and weren't going down without a fight, no matter who they were up against," said Coach Travis Gardner.

The intense racing between the two crews drew them to finish

"We were back and forth for the first 1500 meters before [the Development Camp team] made a big move with 500 meters to go," said Gardner. "They did that against us Pengeroth and Guinee crossed in the preliminaries and we made it up at the finish. But in the finals, we ran out of course."

The Essex girls finished with a time of 7:39.75, just 0.39 seconds behind the first-place crew. While disappointed at missing national gold by such a small margin, the fact that they earned silver at a national championship was not lost on the Essex team.

"I thought it was really exhilerating and I could feel when we made our move at the end that the boat was really moving together and we gave it our all," said Zimmerman. "At the finish even though we lost, ing.org.

"They put the jumbo package in during the week, and it seemed to work pretty good. On my second touchdown I realized we had something really working."

But Coke wasn't done there. He ran approximately a quarter of the plays at quarterback, completing both of his passes, including a 10-vard touchdown on a shovel pass to Brian Miller (4 catches, 42 yards). Coke also returned a kickoff 47 yards to set up his last score of the day.

"Coke did it all," said Deane. "This is the best game I have ever seen him play. He was finding the holes, even if they were tiny, and getting the tough yards. He was running down hill and was just doing it all."

But it took a stellar interception by close friend Walsh to close out the win.

The Golden Warriors led 26-0 with 2:47 left in the first half. But Tewksbury rallied to cut the lead to one score and take possession at its 29-yard line with 1:13 left in the game.

'I was covering my man on the other side of the field," said Coke. "I thought Ben Cook was going to get to the ball, but Jimmy has such knack for making interceptions like that. He always has, from back in youth football."

As Tewksbury QB Sean Connolly (20 for 35, 331 vards) attempted to squeeze the ball into a receiver, Cook knocked it into the air and Walsh dove over the lunging receiver to clinch the game with an interception.

"We were a little nervous," said Deane. "But Jimmy made the play when it counted. He is the leader of our defensive backs even though he's just a junior. He was an unsung hero in the paper this week, but I don't know if he's unnoticed now."

She loved being outdoors, and took every opportunity to bask in the sunshine and fresh air, and so was doing what she loved best when she died.

Jan was preceded in death by her parents, "Ginny" and "Bill" Hartford of Andover. She is survived and sorely missed by four sons, Jeff Baker (Gloria) of Truro, Nova Scotia, Joel Baker (Megan) of Vancouver, B.C., Randy Baker (Rhonda) of Medford, and Tom Baker (Heidi) of Vancouver, B.C.; by six grandchildren, Ben, Max and Sarah, Nina, and Sidney and Sebastian; by her brother, Bruce Hartford of Missoula, Mont.; by her sister, Sheryl Hartford Gould (John), of Birmingham, Ala.; and a host of friends and people whose lives she touched around the U.S. and Canada.

Jan graduated from the University of Massachusetts as an English major, and was a prolific writer throughout her life, leaving many journals, notes and letters behind as a legacy for her family. She met her husband. David Baker at the University, shire and Andover until 1974, farm in Nova Scotia so that Jan could become close to the earth that she so loved, and could teach her sons her love of nature. After leaving the farm, she continued to champion the environment for the remainder of her life, always mindful, and teaching others to be aware, of the importance of caring for our planet and all living things upon it.

While living in Ontario, Jan studied theology at St. Paul University, lived a few years in Montana where she studied at the University in Missoula, and received her Masters of Theology from St. Paul when she returned to Canada. She was a deeply spiritual person, and kept God in every aspect of her life on a daily basis. In her love of God, her family, and of nature, she was always a mentor for everyone she knew.

ARRANGEMENTS: Jan's ashes will be buried with her parents at the West Parish Garden Cemetery on Reservation Road in Andover on Saturday. Oct. 9, with a graveside service at 11 a.m. All are welcome to attend, and to celebrate with her family the life of this very special woman.

Green leanings are part of Andover's heritage

Andover was "green" long before the color turned into a movement.

The town was a pioneer in conservation, land use planning and recycling — Andover activists were leaders of the long campaign to pass the state's bottle bill back in the 1970s.

Andover remains active today in promoting land preservation, clean air and water and the reduction of waste. Earlier this year, it was named one of the state's 35 "Green Communities" for its efforts.

Inside today's Townsman you will find a special section that speaks to the local tradition.

"Being Green Made Easy" is a guide to local green initiatives — both public and private — and local activities tied to the global action day on Oct. 10 (10/10/10).

You'll also find tips on some things you can do. We hope you'll check it out.

And for a real life example of putting green ideas into practice, check out the story on Page 1 of today's edition on a Lincoln Street family who traded in an older home for a new home in the cause of energy efficieny.

The new house built by Charissa Regano and Alan Kao is insulated by an outer shell of Styrofoam sandwiching concrete; it's powered in part by rooftop solar panels; and it's heated with the help of a biomass-burning pellet stove.

In building the new home, Regano and Kao were following the advice they've been giving to businesses — they are both environmental consultants.

"We're trying to lead by example," Kao told reporter Dustin Luca.

The effort was more about doing the right thing than saving money on energy -- it would take years and years to recoup the $400,000 cost of the house.

"A lot of people ask us what the payback will be, but that isn't important to us," Kao said. "There are hundreds of ways to be green. You just have to find the ways that speak to you, the ways that mean the most to you."

Said Regano: "What we are doing to the earth today, we pass on to the kids. I'd hate to have them grow up without certain animals around, and certain plants around."

Andover's heritage of concern for the environment is one of the things that makes the town a special place to live and we're glad to see it live on.

Going Green

What is your household doing to go green?

1. We are recycling materials like cardboard, bottles, tin cans and more.

2. We are conserving energy in our house to lower our carefficient, through adding systems like solar panels and using less power-thirsty appliances.

5. We have no plans to go green at this time, though that may change in the near

Route 495's arrival showed human costs of progress

Andover Stories

By Don Robb Andover Historical Society

In the early 1950s, Massachusetts was developing plans to improve traffic flow on two major highways near Andover. One proposal was to relocate Route 28 so it would run from Stoneham to New Hampshire through West Andover, and was realized when Interstate 93 was built in 1959. 6. We do not plan on making Also considered was a plan to relocate Route 110. That proposal ultimately became Interstate 495, completed in 1965. Like Interstate 93, Route 495 also caused significant disruption to the town and its inhabitants. One result of the arrival of Route 495 was that the town lost taxable property as home sites and farms were acquired by eminent domain for the building of the road. More significant, though, was the impact on Andover families who were displaced by the new highway. Several West Andover farms lay in the path of the new highway. Sometime in the late 1950s, recalls resident Joan Patrakis, her family heard noises off in the woods at the end of the familv farm on Chandler Road. Surveyors were cutting a path to lay out a new highway that the family had never even heard of! The farm where Patrakis lived had been bought in the early

"You have to treat your employees like customers. When you treat them right, then they will treat your outside customers right. That has been a powerful competitive weapon for us. We've never had layoffs, we could have made more money if we furloughed people. But we don't do that. And we honor them constantly. Our people know that if they are sick, we will take care of them. If there are occasions of grief of joy, we will be there with them. They know that we value them as people, not just cogs in a machine."

1900s by her grandfather, but in 1961, the family, like many in the area. received notice that their land was being acquired for the highway. The next year, they left the farm that had been in the family for three generations. Her uncle, who had taken over the farm, managed to buy other property farther along Chandler Road, and her parents were able to move their home to another location on the same road. Still, for the family, it was an upsetting experience.

Some of her other neighbors were not so fortunate, because the price paid for the taking was not usually enough to purchase comparable property. Patrakis remembers that several neighbors, including her aunt, ended up renting homes in Lawrence.

One proposal that the town rejected was a plan to have High Plain Road dead-end at the new highway. (Some residents argued that it wouldn't be such a bad idea, as if would slow the growth in that part of town.) Nevertheless, a bridge over the highway was constructed there. Another proposal, to locate an interchange at Beacon Street, was also discarded.

West Andover in the 1950s was a sparsely settled farming area, but the new highway also affected more densely populated sections of the town, since it went right through Shawsheen Heights, northwest of Shawsheen Village. In the Heights, two streets (Loretta and Emilie Roads) entirely disappeared, and several others, including Highland and Woodland Streets, were reduced in length. All the residents of these streets were forced to relocate.

Across Main Street, Fletcher Street was eliminated, as were houses at the end of Binney Street. Here again, residents found themselves forced to resettle. In all, some 50 homes were removed in the area.

Louise Roberge and her children lived in one of the houses that were taken. Because the payment she received was insufficient, she had to move to Lawrence. Her children had to withdraw from Andover schools, and couldn't even have an Andover library card.

"We had a nice neighborhood on Binney Street," she recalled in a 1996 interview. "I prayed a lot, and after the children were in bed, I would draw the blinds and cry."

Though the federal government paid 90 percent of the cost of Route 495 (the other 10 percent came from the state), the human costs of this progress were paid by the Andover families whose lives were uprooted by the coming of the highway.

"Andover Stories" is a weekly column about interesting local people and events, told in anticipation of the Andover Historical Society's 100 anniversary in 2011.

Nice chance to socialize Editor, Townsman:

I wonder how many people are aware of the wonderful intergenerational opportunity that has been provided this past year. Every Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m. a growing group of people have gathered in the Old Town Hall on Main Street for socializing with free refreshments generously provided by our local Starbucks and Riverbank. This is a service that was clearly needed for new acquaintances to be made and old friends to gather while doing Saturday morning shopping in town. Also, beyond our social chatting, we had an opportunity to talk with the Town Manager and others who took this opportunity to inform us about current events.

Despite the many town services, the opportunity for intergenerational exchanges seem few, and the COA generously decided to host this gathering during the past year to provide this service. As it continues, I hope that many more people will take advantage of this valuable opportunity.

Reasons for departure To the Editor:

In the wake of Mr. Jonathan Harris' abrupt resignation from Andover High School, there are several salient points to consider.

First, the current school committee eliminated all stipends for clubs at Andover High that for clubs to have advisors, the faculty involved must act on a voluntary on basis.

Second, the current school committee ordered Mr. Harris to expand class size limits from 29 students to 35, a patently perverse pedagogical ploy.

Third, the Andover School Committee as currently constituted gave back nearly $400,000 to the Town of Andover, a quantity which could have saved all of the faculty cuts at AHS. While the rumor mill and gossip mongerers will cast aspersions on the character of all those they touch, I believe that Mr. Jonathan Harris has left Andover High because he has refused to preside over the dismantling of our beloved Andover High School.

Congratulations to Adams To the Editor:

Last Tuesday night, I called Paul Adams to congratulate him on his victory in the Republican Primary for the 17th Essex District. Paul campaigned extremely hard and his victory was well deserved. I will support him as he continues his fight against the entrenched power structure on Beacon Hill. I want to thank all of my family and friends for their tireless efforts on my behalf, especially my wife Jean, and daughters Catalina at the end of last school year. This means and Isabel. I know that the past 6 months have not been easy for them and I am sorry they have to suffer the pain of this loss, when I was the one who chose to run for office and subject our family to the public scrutiny that accompanies it. I will be forever grateful to the old friends and new, who have joined us on this journey. I will never forget what you did, when there was nothing in it for you. You never wavered in your support and stood with me every step of the way.

While I did not grow up in Andover, I have never felt more a part of any community as I do at this moment. Over the past six months the residents of this town have shown me nothing but courtesy and kindness. You welcomed me into your homes, shared your concerns for the future, and encouraged me as I sought elected office. If there had ever been any doubt as to the choice of town to raise our children, there remains none today.

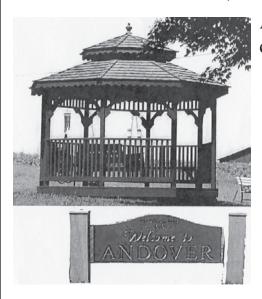

In every aspect of life, there are winners and losers. This time we came up short, but I would never trade my life, my family, my friends, this community I love, for any political victory. I consider myself as lucky today, as I did when I woke up last Tuesday. Difficult times provide an opportunity to show character and I hope my children are just as proud of their dad today, as the day we started this campaign. Thanks again Andover, and God bless.

Spring opening for Stop & Shop

The most-asked question at Andover Day had to be the one regarding Stop & Shop's opening in Shawsheen Plaza. The opening has been pushed back to the spring of 2011. Company officials had previously said the target opening day was in November.

"We've completed a comprehensive detailed plan of what needs to be done...it's an old building and we hope to open in the spring of 2011," said spokesman Bob LaRochelle.

After 40-something years, the plaza no longer has a supermarket. Market Basket was formerly located there. It closed in June as Stop & Shop bought the plaza.

Meanwhile, the North Reading Stop & Shop is moving closer to Andover. LaRochelle said that store, located on Rte. 28 just over the Andover town line, is opening between late October and early November.

Sitting in a portable folding chair close to the stage and wearing sunglasses, a woman named Carmen from Pelham, N.H., was taking in the Andover Day live music after taking in some downtown shopping.

"I got something at Irrestibles," said Carmen, who did not want to give her last name. "And, now it's time for the music...this is great." The president of Andover's downtown business group also thought combining downtown shopping with some live entertainment was pretty great. Downtown retailers did just that last Saturday, Sept. 25, as the second Andover Day event was held. And, the numbers prove it was a hit. Elaine LeBlanc-Baker, president of Andover Business Center Association, said 10,000 people were on Main Street, visiting 95 business tents. The girls took Home Economics ("home ec") and the boys took Industrial Arts, know as "shop." We had mandatory physical education, as well. It was the 1950s. Can anybody argue today against kids taking physical education and some practical courses. Fact is, if kids spent half their school days on these subjects, they'd be guaranteed to be learning something they could put to good use and make them healthier in later life.

I don't know about home ec, but maybe it was the fact that many of the boys didn't take "shop" seriously that doomed it to disappear from school curriculum. We should have been more closely supervised. When you stick a bunch of freshlyhormoned teenage boys in a room together surrounded by blunt and sharp objects, not to mention lots of glue, there is a good chance of trouble breaking out. It did.

A fine gentleman, whose name was Carl Gahan, taught our shop class. He dressed the was overdressed. But he didn't spend much time in the class once he taught his lesson, and the dust from the work began to accumulate. Perhaps the reason being that he'd been "gassed" in World War I. Being gassed meant he'd ingested mustard gas from the Germans into his lungs. It could kill you and was caustic, raising horrible blisters on one's skin. When you look at World War I movies, mustard gas was the reason soldiers wore gas masks.

In any event, the gas showed no obvious ill effects on Mr Gahan, although we certainly understood his absence from being around sawdust and glue. However, our understanding did not curtail our poor behavior. At the front of the shop room was an ancient desk, perhaps dating before World War I. In fact, it was marked up enough, it may have been a survivor of one of the battles. Well, one of our genius band of brothers thought it would be a good shop project to saw the desk in half.

And so, it was done. The desk had four corner legs only so it would fall over once severed, and we miscreants bought some time by applying light tape to the underside of the cut to temporarily. There was very little guilt in the room, for it was generally thought to be an act of furniture euthanasia, although, of course, we didn't use such big words. The main saw-mark was covered with a desk blotter and the desk was already enough of a wreck that the new scar probably wouldn't be noticed.

Within minutes of class breaking up, every boy in school knew of the escapade, and we all waited impatiently for the word that the desk had fallen apart. Finally, toward the end of the day and perhaps near his allotment of daily patience, Mr Gahan emphatically slapped one edge of the desk while he sat under it and watched the two halves fold away from him, leaving him seated with the wreck of the desk on each side of him.

Well, it was shop class, and within a day the desk was just another project, and it was repaired so miraculously it lived on for many years.

Another escapade is worth noting. In the back of the shop class was a walk-in closet used to store and lock tools when school was out. Naturally, most every time the teacher left the room one of the boys would be

In the military

Air Force Airman John A. Maedel graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas.

The airman completed an intensive, eight-week program that included training in military discipline and studies, Air Force core values, physical fitness, and basic warfare principles and skills.

Airmen who complete basic training earn four credits toward an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

He is the son of Nancy Maedel of Methuen, and Craig Maedel of Andover.

Maedel is a 2008 graduate of part of her lifelong commitment Andover High School.

DALTON: Damage in shop sheet rock, looking perhaps like Banquo's Ghost. He'd pounded his way through the closet door locked in the closet for the rest with a hammer and freed himself. We all thought it was just the regular old sounds he made. Mr. Gahan was a good man and took it all in stride. The remainder of the year was spent on wall repair, and we did a Smart Start Tutoring has enjoyed great success since opening in 2005. The owner, Cathy Wallace, has been tutoring for the past 25 years. Prior to that, she taught in both private and public school systems.

Smart Start Tutoring offers tutoring in all academic areas for Grades 1 through 12, as well as, one-on-one tutoring for SSAT, ACT, ISEE, and MCAS. There are certified Wilson trained reading teachers as well as a total of seven tutors with education degrees. They will assess your child to determine the appropriate program. Tutoring in foreign languages is also available.

Smart Start Tutoring, LLC

Smart Start Tutoring offers a "kid-friendly" atmosphere with a comfortable waiting room for parents, clean well-equipped offices, private tutoring rooms and tutors to fit your child's personality and needs. They also provide a snack if your child needs to come right from school.

Smart Start Tutoring is currently scheduling SAT prep courses for both individual and group instruction.

Smart Start Tutoring is located at 21 Central St., Andover, a convenient downtown location with walking distance of most schools. Their hours of operation are Monday through Friday 2:00 pm to 8:00 pm. Contact Smart Start Tutoring by telephone at 978-470-4920, email at smartstarttutoring@hotmail.com or on the web at www.smart-start-tutoring.com.
