A school bus drives through a barricade set up to block everything but school traffic on Beacon Street.

Downed wires block road

By Dustin Luca STAFF WRITER

Bad weather caused power lines to come down on Beacon Street Wednesday morning, prompting police to close down part of the street to almost all traffic while crews worked to repair utility lines, according to Andover

The downed lines were reported to police at around 9:30 a.m., and at the time it was unknown how long it would take crews to complete necessary repairs.

The lines came down just yards from the main entrance to West Elementary School. A road barricade at the end of Beacon Street allowed for traffic to the school to enter, but all other traffic was prohibited from moving through the area. Nobody at West Elementary School was able to comment on the situation, but employees of the school did say that the downed lines did not affect school operations, and police confirmed that the school was able to run unabated.

as some might have feared. Dr. Thomas Greene, who specializes in Victorian Literature and Cultural Studies at Northern Essex Community College in Haverhill, came to the center on Monday afternoon to discuss "Why are Vampires Sexy?" He ended up calming the audience.

The book Dracula (published in 1896) spawned an entire genre of written tales about night-walkers who drink the blood of the living, and the fascination about vampires keeps the stories alive, Greene

"Vampires are fascinating, from the 17th century up to Edward," he said. "Booklore calls them revenant legends...They come back from the dead, like ghosts, zombies and some mummies."

Greene explained that the label probably came about in London around the 17th century. Women were being attacked by so-called vampires and the men of that era banded together to fight them. Stories of blood and gore were rampant as the men defended their women.

Vampire personalities have shifted over time and the creatures have become more attractive over the years. Hollywood actors Brad Pitt and Tom Cruise played vampires early in their movie careers. But vampires have retained a troubling trait during the movie era – vampires don't die.

the Conservation Commission voted 5-1 in favor of allowing the program to move forward, while the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to support it.

Following the hunt, Bob Douglas, conservation director, said data will be collected and "an extensive evaluation" will take place.

"I think we want to see how it works. What are the results for conservation land when deer are hunted?" Selectmen Chairman Alex Vispoli said. "With something like this, I believe it is great to do a pilot for a year and see, what are the lessons learned?"

Douglas said there should be no concern for public safety because hunters must pass the management program's proficiency test and, starting in November, set up their tree stands on conservation land.

"People see a perception of danger of walking in the woods during the hunting season," Douglas said. "From a personal level, it has taken me a year of studying the bow hunting concept to understand all of the facts of the safety issue. Only through that study have I been able to realize how safe it is as a sport."

Police dogs, officers help teach health students

By Dustin Luca STAFF WRITER

In health class this week, high school students watched as police officers were attacked by police

The demonstration was part of an effort to share information on drugs and to show how Andover and North Andover law-enforcement canines are used in relation to drug searches and enforcement. Kids entering unfamiliar territory for the first time, such as parties with drugs use, may be caught off-guard and make poor choices, said Brian McNally, the school district's Health and Physical Education Program coordinator.

Through demonstrating drug searches, showing the students what the drugs look like and answering their questions, Andover Police Officer Mickey Connor said the demonstration prepares them for making better

Bancroft school plan, land purchases only issues for Special Town Meeting

Whether to build a new Bancroft Elementary School, to buy land near Fosters Pond and to acquire more land Blanchard Street are decisions that voters will make at the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting.

lease town land for solar-energy

Plans to relocate the Town Yard — a storage area for municipal vehicles, road sand, salt and more - were withdrawn from Annual Town Meeting this spring, and Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski later negotiated an extension to the agreement to buy the land.

But, for the time being, the plans are just not ready to be voted on, Stapczynski said.

Because it won't be featured at Special Town Meeting, the next possible chance for the town to decide the project's future is at Special Town Meeting in April 2011.

Stapczynski said it is the town's intention to bring the project to a vote next spring, but whether that will happen or not is currently unknown.

"We were hoping (it would come up in April), but we're not sure," Stapczynski said. "It is going to come up when it is

Similarly, a recent effort to lease land in town for solar farms also fell as the team leading the solar charge ran out of the time to put together the plans for four proposed solar farms around town, according to Paul Materazzo, director of planning.

"The solar team moved forward and had all of the information we felt was necessary to move forward," Materazzo said. "We just ran out of time."

The four sites, as of October, were an estimated 7.6 acres of land by 126 Tewksbury St., almost 12 acres on the corner of Andover and Woburn streets, 2 acres adjacent to Bancroft Elementary and an unknown amount of land between Sanborn Elementary and Interstate 93.

Now, with a few more months to work on the project, Materazzo said that residents can expect to see public forums and meetings about the project over the winter so the town can learn more about the plans before making a final decision.

Additionally, one of the four sites — many acres of land positioned between Sanborn What they won't debate are Elementary and I-93 — requires plans to move the Town Yard or the approval of the School Committee.

> 'They weren't prepared to get behind it," Materazzo said. "But they were intrigued by the energy side, and they were intrigued by the financial savings side (of the project)."

The order of the articles coming in December will soon be determined by the Board of Selectmen, according to Town Clerk Larry Murphy.

The articles that will be presented in December are as follows:

PUBLIC - NEW BANCROFT CONSTRUC-TION: To raise the funding necessary to build a new Bancroft Elementary School on the existing Bancroft Elementary site.

PUBLIC - BANCROFT EASEMENT: To transfer the care, custody and control of a portion of Bancroft Elementary's land from the Board of Selectmen to the School Department.

PUBLIC - FOSTERS POND GRANT: To authorize the use of up to $480,000 appropriated at the 2010 Town Meeting to acquire land near Fosters Pond.

PRIVATE - BLANCHARD STREET PURCHASE: To see if the town will appropriate $350,000 for the acquisition of land at 3 Blanchard St., which includes necessary costs of demolishing buildings on the site.

Carbon monoxide. It's colorless. Odorless. And deadly. It affects thousands of households each year. How? It forms and accumulates when a heating system lacks proper ventilation, chimneys are clogged with debris, or when fuel-burning appliances aren't properly installed or maintained. That's why it's important to recognize symptoms of carbon monoxide exposure.

Take action. Install one or more ANSI/ULapproved carbon monoxide detectors in your home — preferably near bedrooms. Be sure to have your chimney or heating flues checked annually before each heating season. And pay close attention if you've had major renovations recently.

AT_AT_20101028_1_04

Signs of carbon monoxide poisoning include:

- persistent headaches
- ◆ nausea
- ◆ dizziness
- blurred vision
- confusion
- rapid heartbeat

If you suspect the presence of carbon monoxide, please go outside and call 911 immediately.

Used toy fair can help reuse toys, stuff stockings

If your holiday shopping mantra is to save a few bucks this vear, or vou believe in the "reuse and recycle" campaign, you may want to check out a used toy fair on Saturday morning.

That's when Community Giving Tree hosts its annual gently used toy fair at Coolidge Hall at the Topsfield Fairgrounds. Trucks and a bus from a Tewksbury church stuffed with gently used toys and baby furniture arrived this week as volunteers aisles ready. The 5,400-squarefeet at Coolidge Hall is now packed with toys.

"It's a great time of year to do this, just before the holievent. "You can shop and get some great bargains.

She said $5 bargains will be plentiful. Shoppers can fill a bag with Army men or Matchbox cars or books, put a pretty ribbon on and place the package under the tree. Toddlers will be thrilled.

There are also bikes for young kids, baby furniture (including high chairs and car seats) and sit-on toys.

Leslie Levenson is the founder in 1991 by several parent voluncollection, and spent the summer Middleton and North Andover.

Local firefighters are top chili chefs

By Judy Wakefield STAFF WRITER

In this era of television cookoffs and celebrity chefs, there's a fivemember chili team in town that's dominating local chili cookoffs. Could a throwdown with master television chef Bobby Flav be

The Andover Fire Department Chili Team earned top honors at recent chili cookoffs in Amesbury and Haverhill besting fields of 12 and 15, respectively. Local fire departments and emergency medical response teams, including hospitals and ambulance services, competed.

Chili is a fire department staple. While firemen never know when the alarm will sound, they do know that a bowl of warm chili is often waiting for them upon return.

"It's a one-pot meal, easy to make and hearty," said Andover recently at Andover's central fire fireman Bruce Belbin, who is on station on North Main Street. But the chili team. "The guys love

'There wasn't a drop left," Deldotto said of the 20 gallons of chili made for the Amesbury cookoff.

Repeal alcohol tax, but don't gut local aid with Question 3

Beacon Hill has no one but itself to blame for that fact that a question with potentially catastrophic consequences is on the ballot this November.

Question 3 would roll back the sales tax from the legislative-approved rate of 6.25 percent to an unreasonable 3 percent. Those going to the polls next Tuesday should vote no, but at the same time must turn out those who refuse to take the difficult steps necessary to get the cost of government in Massachusetts under control. They key is to find a Governor and legislators who not only support an appropriate tax rollback, but have the knowledge and offer some plan as to how they would handle the considerable cuts to government and its services that are necessary. Calls to gut the government with no specifics about priorities and no plan on how to make the cuts are not enough.

Our guess is that a measure to reduce the sales tax to a more realistic 5 percent | the rate in effect before the latest money grab | would have passed overwhelmingly at the Nov. 2 election, just as it has before. And it's heartening to see many legislative candidates along with gubernatorial hopeful Charlie Baker talk about rolling back several taxes.

Question 3 has served some useful purpose in sounding a wake-up call for those who believe the public's patience and willingness to pay are limitless. But depriving state government of an estimated $2.5 billion a year | money that's used to build schools, provide public transportation and shore up the budgets of our cities and towns | would be irresponsible at this point. Voters would be better off electing those who are willing to take on the public employee unions and other special interests and make meaningful changes in the way government operates.

However, voters would do well to repeal the alcohol sales tax, in part because these products are already subject to a separate excise tax that is passed on to consumers. This amounts to double taxation (some on Beacon Hill are no doubt wishing they'd thought of it sooner), and has put Andover package stores and others near the New Hampshire border at a tremendous competitive disadvantage.

Question 1 calls for repeal of the sales tax on alcoholic beverages. Vote yes.

needs to be done and what specifically they plan to do about it. It is my name-three-things test of leadership.

Those who say they will do everything about everything need reality training before becoming a candidate. Those who blame their opponent as their major strategy probably have nothing constructive to say. The "I'm going to cause a revolution" candidate thinks that is a sure ticket to the Promised Land. Can't you just imagine how the incumbent legislators eagerly await Ned New Guy, the latest to shake things up and repair the from our representatives

The system has been broken for 40 years and the multitude of Ned New Guys fall into line three months after elected. The Sir Galahad on the white horse has never slain the dragon and loses courage in doing what he promised to do. It is called the need to be reelected.

I will vote for someone who I feel can begin the process as an American, stay an American and proposes to make things better for all Americans. It might even mean telling us we are not keeping pace with the world and sacrifice, courage, and our best thinking is essential in maintaining our way of life.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Developers' use of 40B drives need for repeal

Editor, Townsman:

Vote YES on Question 2 on Nov. 2 and support the building of real affordable housing.

Voting YES will result in the repeal and reform of Chapter 40B. A YES vote sends a message to the Massachusetts Legislature that citizens want their tax dollars and other resources utilized to build real affordable housing, not fair market value luxury condominiums such as the Lodge at Ames Pond in Tewksbury where a two-bedroom rents for up to $2,483 month or the Charles River Landing in Needham where renting a two-bedroom can cost $3,544 a month.

Chapter 40B was enacted in 1969 and was effective in its early years because it was mainly used by nonprofits and religious groups to build low-cost housing. Back then 97 percent of 40B housing built was affordable housing. Now only 27 percent of the housing built is affordable, the rest is fair market value housing sold for for-profit developers' financial gain.

Proponents of Chapter 40B claim to have created $9.25 billion of economic activity in the past 10 years while producing 8,140 units of affordable housing. That means $662,162 in economic activity was used to produce one affordable unit! That is an abysmal record of production. Can you imagine if these billions in economic activity had been directed to education, public safety, local aid, healthcare or real affordable housing. Communities would have produced the required amount of affordable housing and much, much more.

Although 40B has been around since 1969, everything changed in 1999, when qualifying funding sources were greatly expanded and for-profit developers began flooding in. Chapter 40B has become such a sweet deal that now big box developers come into Massachusetts from as far away as Texas and build luxury apartments and condominiums under 40B. Additional loopholes such as expiring use clauses (limiting the period of affordability) and the allowance of commercial development in 40B permitting have added to the building frenzy. Chapter 40B developers are able to ignore local zoning, wetlands, historic and other municipal bylaws and regulations. The 40B developers receive special tax credits, loans and sales tax exemptions. Yet, they are horrible at creating affordable housing. To repeal and reform Chapter 40B -Vote YES on 2.

Smaller, smarter health-care reform

Editor, Townsman:

The upcoming elections confront a divided electorate, with splits among relatives, friends and generations. Some consider it a battle of big government control, versus freedom of choice and enterprise. Any policies that do not stand up to historical or economic scrutiny are sure to fail, and the bigger they are, the harder on us they will fall. In moving forward, we should consider this morsel of wisdom from American historian Daniel Boorstin:

The main obstacle to progress is not ignorance, but the illusion of knowledge."

Nowhere today is this observation more pertinent than in the federal government's titanic new health-care reform law. By its nature, it is doomed to provide just the opposite of what its proponents have promised. For upwards of 95 percent of our citizens, it will reduce access, reduce quality, and increase costs in premiums and or taxes. We have already seen these results from the earlier health-care legislation in Massachusetts, and similar results are now beginning to surface in insurance markets across the country. The history of socialized medicine in other nations has likewise been ugly. The one thing that such policies deliver is a bloated government bureaucracy, perhaps for generations to come. There are far better ways to improve health care, even for the poorest among us.

may be the top issues for this election, the chronic long-term effects of Obamacare could be a bigger disaster for this country. The PPACA should promptly be defunded, repealed and replaced with a smarter, less costly solution one that emphasizes patient and doctor choices in a more open national market, along with critical tort reform, and reductions of fraud and waste in Medicare and Medicaid. Minimal government regulations should enhance quality and protect consumers through voluntary standards, rather than new mandates and programs. Entitlement "safety nets" must be limited.

A simpler, smaller, smarter approach to health-care reform will ensure that we and our children enjoy the best health care in the world, while avoiding generations of the nanny-state problems that are plaguing Europe right JONATHAN HARDER

Solar power expensive, can leave eyesore

Editor, Townsman: Dear Paul Materazzo,

This letter is in regard to the proposed 10-year lease of townowned property for photovoltaic (PV) electrical generation. The implication of the write-up in the Oct. 21 Townsman is that there will be no cost to the town and we will be making an important step towards "green energy." I concur the PV generation is "green" but greatly differ that there is no cost. As an engineer who looks at the whole picture, I believe there is a significant cost.

First, the capital investment for PV systems (acres of cells, a DC/AC conversion system, since the PV system produces direct current but our homes use alternating current; a tie-in line and switch gear to connect to the grid; and, perhaps, an access road) is very high ($/kwh) so we are lookwhich come from our taxes. The net cost of PV power (cents per kwh) is much higher than present costs (more than twice) so While jobs and economic woes our economy is burdened with an unnecessary energy "tax" that inefficiently drains money from the economic system. This is made truer by the limited sunlight hours in New England and the obvious impact of snow cover on generation. Further, the PV experiment really doesn't teach us something we don't already know, but just lines the pockets of the developer and gives him/ her a free ride for publicity.

Finally, and very importantly, if the town does decide to go this way, we must insist that the developer, at the time of construction, put aside and escrow fund sufficient to compensate the town 100 percent for the cost to dismantle the system and return the land to its native state. Without this fund, the town will always be held hostage for renewals by the specter of ending up with an eyesore that destroys the land's natural value. We are also protected by the escrow fund if the developer "goes under" (and many such projects do) with the same unacceptable result.

Parent: Don't cut taxes; class sizes already up

Editor, Townsman:

Recently Andover High School held its Parent Night where parents meet their students' teachers in their classrooms. I was shocked to see that four of my student's classes have 30 or more students. The rooms are packed with desks. In the past, class size seemed to top out at 24 to 26. This means less meaningful educational time for our students and a significant workload increase for teachers. (Almost all are dedicated, caring people.) All this, at a time when American education falls behind other major countries.

Meanwhile there are people advocating ballot Questions 1 and 3 to remove billions from the state budget by reducing the ing at large facilitating grants sales and alcohol taxes. Everyone should consider the impact before voting.

Andover native takes crash course in being hero

Duane Innes, a 1979 Andover High graduate whose family still lives in town, is being hailed nationally as a hero for a very unlikely reason - he caused a traffic accident. Innes intentionally pulled in front of a vehicle on Highway 167 and let it hit his bumper to slow it down to save a man's life. The car had been drifting across lanes of traffic, and Innes saw that the driver, 80-yearold retiree Bill Pace, was slumped over the steering wheel.

According to news reports, Pace had had a heart attack a few days earlier, and did not know it. His resulting poor circulation caused him to pass out behind the wheel. If Innes hadn't stopped his truck, it is now doing well and back to volbelieved Pace would have died in a collision at an approaching intersection.

As part of the Massachusetts Appeals Court's continuing outreach program to communities outside Boston, the court will hear oral arguments at the Massachusetts School of Law in Andover in a special session on Nov. 2. This is one of several stops outside the John Adams Courthouse in Boston, where the court ordinarily sits.

A panel of three justices of the Court will hear oral arguments in six appeals. The sitting is open to the public and begins promptly at 9:30 a.m. Seating is allotted on a first-come, first-served basis. Oral arguments for each case take approximately 30 minutes.

Various area high school mock trial teams – none from Andover – as well as MSL students, will view the sitting. The mock trial teams will be from Winthrop High School, Saint John's Prep, Cushing Academy, and Bishop Fenwick. Immediately following the session, the members of the panel Chief Justice Phillip Rapoza, Hon. Joseph Trainor and Hon. Super-Couponing Tips

Jill Cataldo saves hundreds on groceries by making the

Q: "My favorite supermarket refuses to accept any coupons printed from the Internet. This is so frustrating for me because I would prefer to shop at this store rather than its competitor. The other store does accept printable coupons. I read a statistic recently that printable coupon use is becoming one of the most popular ways to get coupons, but what are shoppers supposed to do if stores don't accept them? I don't want to shop at the other store, but I'm almost forced to, because they'll take the printable coupons."

A: I receive so many e-mails like this one that it's worth revisiting the topic. Printable coupon use has skyrocketed. According to Nielsen, in 2009 it was the fastest growing category of coupons redeemed, jumping 263 percent over the previous year. There are a multitude of legitimate, manufacturer-issued coupons available on the Internet, both on manufacturers' sites and popular coupon portals and destinations.

Why do some stores refuse to accept Internet-printed coupons? Coupon fraud is the reason. Most stores do not yet have the technology to determine which instances of a printable coupon are legitimate and which are photocopies. Photocopying a coupon printed from the Internet is one of the easiest forms of coupon fraud. A photocopy of a coupon looks almost identical to the original. But, if a store receives multiple photocopies of the same coupon, once those coupons go to the clearinghouse for redemption with the manufacturer, duplicates are weeded out and the store only receives reimbursement for the legitimate one. The store takes a loss on each fraudulent photocopy it mistakenly accepted.

If a certain store or chain has ongoing problems with customers who pass photocopied coupons, it's likely to create a blanket policy of "no Internet-printed coupons" to try to stop the

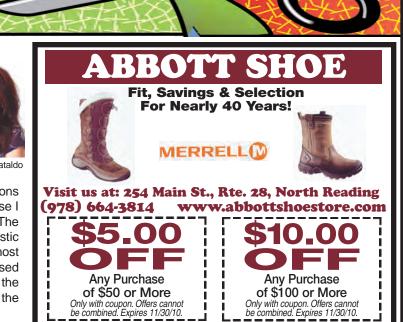

This helps neither shoppers nor the manufacturers, who very much would like shoppers to use coupons to buy their products. I suggest first trying to determine if the no-Internet-printables rule is, indeed, the store's corporate policy. I've heard many stories of cashiers who refuse to accept printable coupons when the stores they work for have a corporate coupon policy that clearly states they should be accepted.

Let's assume that your store does indeed have a policy of not accepting any Internet-printed coupons. There isn't much that you can do other than to take those printable coupons to the other store in town and use them there for the items you wish to buy. It's always worth expressing your feelings on this issue to both your store's manager and the store's corporate office. If a store hears from many shoppers asking "Do you really want me to take my business to Store X across the street, which does accept printable coupons?" perhaps the policy will change.

In time, I believe that stores holding out on accepting Internet printable coupons will be forced to change in order to remain competitive. A large grocer in my area had a policy of not accepting printable Internet coupons for many years, but the store recently amended the policy to allow two printable coupons for the same items per transaction. This is a fair compromise, because most sites online allow shoppers to legitimately print two of the same coupon. By only accepting two like coupons per transaction, the store also reduces the risk of being slipped dozens of illegal photocopies.

To read up on your store's policy on Internet printables, check the store's corporate website or e-mail the customer service department. CTW Features®

Survey says — Andover singer's family loved Feud appearance

By Judy Wakefield STAFF WRITER

Watching the Family Feud television show has sentimental meaning for Cherie Martorana of Andover. It was the last thing she shared with her dying mother.

"My mom was not a big game show watcher, but she loved Family Feud," Martorana said.

With their mother in their thoughts, Martorana's brother read about Family Feud producers hosting Boston-area auditions at Bernie & Phyl's in Saugus last spring. The close-knit Martorana family auditioned. A total of 1,500 people turned out and just 30 were chosen, including the Martoranas.

"We played a mock (Family Feud) game and just had fun. We're an Italian family so we're very animated," Cherie Martorana said.

The family, who hail from Reading, was flown to Orlando, Fla., in August for their taping of the show. Family Feud episodes featuring the Martoranas aired Oct. 18, 19 and 20.

"It was a great family time for us. We had so much fun being together," Cherie Martorana said. "And (host) Steve Harvey is so nice and so funny.'

They were all thinking of her mom, Sarah, who died of Parkinson's-related complications in June 2009. Winnings were pooled to make a donation to her favorite animal rescue group, because she loved animals.

"We're taking a family vacation with my Dad in the spring," said Cherie Martorana, who also lives in New York City. She is a professional singer in New York with an '80s tribute

While contestants have to wait 10 years before making another appearace, this family pledged a return.

"Survey says, the Martoranas will be back," Cherie Martorana laughed.

End of one career

announced I was retiring from my fulltime job last week. It hit me the way I thought it would; I'd had a long time to think about it and that softened the blow. I'd heard that retiring was on the top 10 list of life's most stressful events (just after serving time in jail, which I've managed to avoid, so far), so maybe the concept hasn't fully settled into my

I've spent the last several years working for the American Cancer Society, a great charity. They've been good to me, and I've given them the best I had. I've been lucky to work with some terrific people, and with a company with a fine mission statement, which reads, "The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based, voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from many people we can help. The cancer, through research, education, advocacy, and service."

As it happened, my retirement was announced in Lubbock, Texas, where we had our annual leadership meeting. Lubbock is a nice place. Texas Tech is there along with a lot of cotton and ranches. The cotton makes it look like there is snow on the ground, and some of the ranches are so big that one rancher I met uses a helicopter to herd cattle.

My CEO, who is one of the best people I've ever worked with, announced my retirement at a hotel reception. That was fitting because my job has made hotels my second home. I won't much miss hotels: same rooms, different views.

I've been lucky, I've worked for a company I liked, and I've had interesting work as a lawyer. There's been plenty to do.

After my CEO said some nice words, I was ready with a speech. I talked about the fact that an organization's most important job is remembering its mission, sticking to it, and adapting the mission to circumstances. Sometimes economic conditions and government makes it hard. For example, the privacy laws have turned doctor's offices into paper farms, and it's one of the silliest thing we've ever done. Another adaptation example is so many organizations and individuals having to reconfigure our situations because of these bad economic times.

Aside from necessary adaptation, I stated that many organizations are not careful about sticking to mission. You should concentrate on what you do well. Sometimes you have to add things to your mission to keep up with the rest of the world and your competition, but when you do, make sure it is a fair add-on and won't detract from your mission. The American Cancer Society has added an international mission statement to its regular mission that says, "The American Cancer Society's international mission concentrates on capacity building in developing cancer societies and on collaboration with other cancer-related organizations throughout the world in carrying out shared strategic directions." I've struggled with the concept of the Cancer Society becoming a global organization, but I think it's a good idea because we are so good at what we do and there are so big issue is that mission expansion requires money expansion. The money expansion should be scheduled ahead of the mission expansion, and that money, along with the service, should come substantially from where the mission is expanding. That's where the collaboration with other organizations comes in.

Whether you are a for-profit organization or a nonprofit organization, you have to pay for what you do and plans as to how to pay have to be in place before expansion starts.

I finished my speech with the idea that we should never rely on assumptions. For example, in 1990, it was widely predicted that Japan would become the world's No. 1 economic power by 2010. If you'd bet on that assumption, as a lot of people did, you would have lost out big time. Although it will recover, today Japan is a medium-sized economy.

I've had a good run with a great charity. I've been lucky, and I know it. It was a good way to end that career.

Youth makes candy apples, lemonade for Halloween charity

By Dustin Luca STAFF WRITER

An Andover child will run a lemonade, hot cocoa and do-ityourself candy apple stand out of his driveway to celebrate Halloween and pay tribute to a friend who never got to wear his costume.

Honoring friends who have fallen to neuroblastoma, a form of pediatric cancer, 7-year-old Nolan Howard decided this year to move his annual lemonade stand to Halloween afternoon in memory of Cian Crowley, who his family said never had the chance to go trick-or-treating.

'Cian didn't make it to Halloween, but he had a costume that Nolan loved," a chicken costume, Ivy Krull, Nolan's mother, said.

This year marks the third year Nolan has run his lemonade stand. Last year, the stand brought in more than $3,000 from residents over the course of two days, Krull said.

The money went to the Lemonade Stand Foundation, a charity that works to find a cure for all childhood cancer.

Selectman J. Everett Collins was badly shaken up but escaped other injury Wednesday morning when his machine skidded struck a tree and turned over in Grav. Maine. The local selectman was driving through a heavy rainstorm when his car skidded on the wet roadway. He tried to avoid hitting a tree, but the car struck a rock which made it veer off and strike another tree. Mr. Collins crawled out of the overturned car and went to a nearby farmhouse where he called for a wrecking car. He will be home tonight.

Town officials will have to make up their minds next Monday night whether to take the John L. Noyes property on Lovejoy road for a school site or not. The "fish or cut bait" session, to which all interested boards are invited, will be told that Mr. Noyes has not permitted the town to take test borings on the 32-acre site. [Editor's note: The town would go on to build Sanborn Elementary School on Lovejoy Road.]

A basic salary schedule increase of $400, on top of the increments already scheduled, has been recommended to the School Committee by the teachers' wage and salary committee. The suggested plan would set a minimum of $4,600, compared to $4,200 now.

Kevin J. White, Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, visited Andover Tuesday afternoon. He met with members of the Democratic Town Committee and interested citizens at the Shawsheen Plaza.

The state will only put a few pheasant into the Harold Parker State Forest, and these will be placed on the west side of Jenkins road. In response to residents' complaints, backed up by those of town officials, the state has agreed to a limited stocking of the area.

Memorial Mass for miscarried children and their families

Join us for a Mass in memory of miscarried children on Saturday, Nov. 6, at 9 a.m., at St. Augustine Church, 43 Essex St., Andover. All are welcome, especially mothers, fathers and families of miscarried children who would like to honor their children and heal from the loss of their passing.

Miscarriage is a painful experience that is much more common than, perhaps, many realize. Miscarriage reportedly occurs in 20 percent of all pregnancies. However, according to some sources, the miscarriage rate may be closer to 40 or 50 percent. For many, miscarriage is an experience they have never talked about or shared. Shawsheen River: Legends and witches

Andover Stories

Gail Ralston, Andover Historical Society

From the early days of Native Americans to the writings of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Shawsheen River has captured people's imaginations. This winding body of water even figured into the witchcraft hysteria of the 1600s.

The name Shawsheen, often in old records spelled "Shawshin" or "Shawshine," is derived from native language, meaning "Beauty's Pathway" or "The Great Spring." A 1938 newspaper article told of an old Indian legend: the story of the love of an Indian maiden for her absent sweetheart. Taken from The History of Lawrence by Maurice B. Dorgan, we read the story of "Sheen," the Indian name for "beauty":

"Sheen's lover had gone far south to fish and hunt. Tired of waiting and fearful lest harm had come over him, Sheen resolved that she would travel through daylight and darkness until she found her sweetheart."

Sheen eventually found his wigwam, and as they rejoiced in their reunion, "there burst forth from the ground a fountain of pure water." This stream ran back along the path Sheen had traveled. Taking this as a good omen, the Indian brave and his bride set out by canoe, crying as he paddled, "Shaw Sheen" -"Beauty Pathway," thus giving the river its name.

During the witchcraft hysteria in Andover in 1692, the Shawsheen was supposedly the waters in which the devil baptized his converts. One account in Sarah Loring Bailey's book,

Historical Sketches of Andover, told of the confessions that claimed "the devil had baptized them in the Shawshin River...on whose borders they held midnight meetings, stealing out of their houses and riding through the air on sticks."

One accused resident, Samuel Wardwell, confessed to a period of melancholia at which time he was, by spirits, "induced to make his signature in the book of the devil and baptized in the Shawshin River."

In the late 1800s, New England Magazine published a story about the "Witch of Shawshine." It begins with the owner of a grist mill located on the Shawsheen River. This young bachelor was kept constantly busy by pioneer settlers who brought their corn to be ground into meal. After a point, however, the miller began to take days off, traveling downstream. His disappearances were explained when it was announced he was to wed Miriam Gray whose father's home was on the banks of the Shawshine in Cochichawick.

Expectation turned into consternation when the miller brought his bride home one Sabbath Day. Miriam "appeared in a cloak of scarlet, her bonnet gay with plumes of a matched red against her dark eyes and hair." This was clearly in contrast to the subdued dress of the members of the congregation. Fearing she was a witch, the neighbors shunned her and the miller began to lose business. This prejudice continued until a scourge of distemper visited the village. With no thought of herself, Miriam went to the aid of her neighbors and tormentors and nursed many a child through the illness. The disease was finally arrested and the grateful people forgot all about the "Witch of Shawshine."

The Shawsheen's waters were even memorialized in Oliver Wendell Holmes' poem, "The School Boy," written and read at the centennial celebration of the Founding of Phillips Academy:

"Still in the waters of the dark Shawshine, Do the young bathers splash and think they're clean?" As modern Andoverites canoe down this same river, do they keep their eyes peeled for signs of witches?

I believe we need to cut across the board, so no one specific service is completely cut.

Possible to cut taxes and not affect local aid?

If revenues continue to increase as they have for the past 3 months, then yes, we can cut taxes. I think we need to target tax cuts for small business to get people working again. My priority for local aid is increased funds for education to reduce class size.

Specific programs to cut?

There are more than $1 billion in available cost-savings the legislature has purposefully avoided for two years. I would reform enormous subsidies added to our debt load, privatize MassHealth, bring transparency to quasipublic agencies whose combined budgets are over $9 billion, and consolidate 100 agencies that address business permitting and

Possible to cut taxes and not affect local aid?

Yes. Beacon Hill always threatens local aid cuts without tax increases—then raises taxes and cuts services anyway. I support local aid because it funds core services that define why government exists, and

No. In only four years, Beacon Hill raised taxes eight times, made our corporate income tax the 2nd-highest-in-the nation, increased spending 10 percent and cut local aid 12 percent. I will continue fighting for local aid, lower taxes on businesses and families, and less spending, as I have done throughout my private-sector career.

SPENDING AND IDEAS

Employees' salaries, benefits and pensions

Public employee salaries and pensions must match those of employees in the private sector for similar work. My opponent is a 20-year state employee and union leader of SEIU local 509 and has been endorsed by many public employee unions and Boston special interest groups. Cap version of cap and trade, both of pensions, end pension doubledipping and move toward definedcontribution pension plans for a tidal wave of regulation on state employees, allowing them businesses.

This essential modification will allow commu-Spend time on these issues nities to reduce healthcare costs and allows employees to choose plans they need and can afford.

"One Big Idea"

I have proposed reducing all taxes, including our 2nd-highestin-the-nation corporate income tax, which would facilitate the long-term investments required for sustained growth in our Commonwealth. I have a record of building coalitions for pro-business, pro-taxpayer solutions and I would work tirelessly with my colleagues to address our structural problems.

Not enough attention?

We need significant reform of state mandates and formulas that lead to never-ending tax increases and spending. Among those are the healthcare mandate and Massachusetts' own which increased unemployment through huge tax increases and

I support revitalizing the economy with the 5-5-5 Tax Rollback, reducing the sales, meals, and income taxes to longstanding 5 percent levels.

Possible to cut taxes and not affect local aid?

We can reform government, reduce bureaucratic spending, cut tax rates, and protect local aid. That's a question of priorities. In budgetary matters, my goal is securing funds for local communities rather than state bureaucracies. Communities are best positioned to set local priorities, and should not be micromanaged from Beacon Hill.

SOCIAL ISSUES

Spend time on these issues?

I believe there exists a broad consensus across political and ideological lines that we must first address issues of economic growth and government reform. I intend to focus on reducing high unemployment, increasing economic activity, eliminating the ballooning budget deficit, and controlling bureaucratic spending.

SPENDING AND IDEAS

Employees' salaries, benefits and

As an example of shared sacrifice and civic responsibility, the Legislature should reduce its own and other officeholders salaries across-theboard by 10 percent. Pensions for legislators should be eliminated or, at minimum, significantly reformed. Elected office should never be considered a means to private enrichment at public expense.

By establishing this model for public service, we can also implement reforms to rein in salaries and pensions of highly compensated political appointees.

"One Big Idea"

My campaign emphasizes economic revitalization as the engine of job growth. This requires ized workforce. (Union contracts streamlining and reforming government combined with the 5-5-5 Tax Rollback. We can neither deficit-spend nor tax-hike our way to prosperity. Government must provide a regulatory and economic environment that encourages small business expansion and job creation.

Not enough attention?

We should re-evaluate the state's mandatory health insurance regulations. Look at your Massachusetts Income Tax Form 1. The form's first dozen pages are monopolized by bureaucratic questions and calculations determining family insurance mandates. Only an out-of-control bureaucracy would imagine that multiplying regulations in a complex tax code improves health Paetec Holding Corp., a company which provides data, voice and Internet solutions to business-class customers nationwide, opened an expansive, high-tech data center this summer in Andover. This new flagship center is meant to help customers maintain their critical data, server operating applications, network, and communications assets. It also represents a major step forward for the company towards supporting cloud computing, it said.

The center not only serves companies in New England, but those nationwide with a need for geographic redundancy or a presence on the East Coast for reduced latency. The twostory, 92,700 square feet facility includes nearly an acre of raised floor space available for customers to collocate their servers, routers, and other communication equipment.

"Moving business applications from the desktop to the cloud will bring efficiency not possible before," Arunas Chesonis, chairman and CEO of Paetec, said in a release. "With our expertise in telecommunications and data convergence, we're in a lead-

EARLY DECISIONAndover star Boudreau verbally commits to Boston College

By David Willis Staff writer

Nicole Boudreau informed the college at the end of a visit that she would need some time to consider

That time, as it turns out, was just a couple hours.

"I said, I need to think about it," said Boudreau. "I went to dinner with my father, and we talked about if I wanted to wait and see what other schools offered.

"Then I called them on my way home from dinner and accepted the scholarship."

With two seasons left in her already legendary high school career, Andover High superstar junior Boudreau locked up her college plans by verbally committing to play Division 1 basketball at Boston College on a full scholarship.

"She has every chance to be an outstanding college player," said Golden Warriors basketball coach Jim Tildsley. "Boston College looks like a great fit. Nicole was very highly recruited. My phone didn't stop ringing from the end of August."

Boudreau's decision ended a stressful recruiting process for the 2010 All-Scholastic Division 1 Player of the Year. It intensity increased this year, especially once the summer arrived.

"It was extremely overwhelming," said Boudreau. "I'm glad I I don't have to worry about it anymore. This summer was huge. I was in Florida for a while so Division 1 schools could see me play (in tournaments). In September it really picked up. I couldn't even guess how many colleges contacted

"She doesn't have to worry now," said the coach. "She has two years to prepare and get better. When someone knows what they want, they should make the decision. I think she made the right one."

Boudreau is coming off a tremendous sophomore season, in which she averaged 19.8 points per game and 6.5 rebounds per game while helping lead Andover to a 25-3 record and the Division 1 state

She was named All-Merrimack Valley Conference, losing out on MVC Player of the Year honors to Central Catholic's Katie Zevenitch, who is about to start her freshman season with Boston College.

Boudreau is best known for her picture-perfect 3-point shot, knocking down 88 3-pointers a season ago in just 26 games. That after a freshman season in which she averaged 18.3 points a game, also knocking down 88 3's and earning All-MVC honors.

"She has a number of traits that can make her a top Division 1 college player," said Tildsley. "There isn't a better shooter around. But she also has great basketball savvy. She knows the game as well as any player I have ever coached.'

Andover's backcourt now consists of two Division 1 college players. Boudreau is joined by senior point guard Natalie Gomez-Martinez, who verbally committed to play college basketball at Division 1 Marist College over the summer.

"How many teams around have two Division 1 players in there backcourt?" said Boudreau. "But I like the whole (Andover) team a lot. I know that college will be a tough transition, but I am going to work on my game and do all I can to get METHUEN — Despite the outcome, Andover coach E.J. Perry expressed pride in the performance of his squad.

"We're not satisfied with the way the game worked out," said Perry. "But I am not complaining about the effort of the team."

With 59 seconds left in the contest, Golden Warriors quarterback Tom Dempsey lofted a perfect pass into the corner of the end zone that Ben McQuaide hauled in for a 13-yard touchdown to cut the lead to a single score.

However, Andover was unable to recover the subsequent onside kick, and after pushing powerhouse Methuen to the limit the Golden Warriors fell 21-14 on Friday.

The Rangers are the No. 5-ranked team in Eastern Mass., and the top team overall in the Merrimack Valley Conference.

Andover had no trouble moving the ball for most of the first half, combining for 204 total yards. However, the Golden Warriors put themselves in a hole when they failed to score on all three trips into the red zone, including being stopped at the goal line on the final play of the first half.

Every drive we were getting into the red zone," said Perry. "But we didn't come away with any points, and that is a problem. But we did do a much better job of scoring in the second half."

Andover came out and forced a Methuen punt to start the second half. The Golden Warriors then drove 74 yards, capped by a tremendous 28-yard run by Andy Coke to cut the Methuen lead to

The Rangers responded with a score of their own, but back came the Golden Warriors as Dempsey tossed the touchdown pass to McQuaide with 59 seconds left. But that is as close as they would

The Golden Warriors forced Methuen to scramble on defense throughout the game by having Andy Coke take the majority of snaps at quarterback, alternating with Dempsey. Coke had previously been the starting running back and occasionally featured

The junior responded by carrying 20 times for 138 yards, tied with Methuen's Ryan Savastano for the team-high, and the first Warrior score. Coke also showed some ability with his arm, completing 8 of his 9 passes for 42 vards.

'We mixed it up a little bit with Coke," said Perry. "He did a great job running the ball as always, and did a nice job throwing by going 8 of 9. Tom also made a couple nice throws.'

Freddie Scribner, who had not carried before this season and just returned from an injury, saw time at running back when Coke was at quarterback and added 12 carries
