POMPS POND 2012

Town workers are used to running a mad dash to get Pomps Pond ready for its summer grand opening. But vandals made this year's preparation more difficult than usual.

The pond will open on time for its Saturday, June 16 unveiling, but vandalism caused some setbacks.

"We found a big chunk of the dock in the water. Vandals did it," said Recreation Coordinator Kim Stamas of the town's Department of Community Services. "We had to get a forklift down here to lift the chunk out of the water.

"I have no idea how they did it. It weighed over 1,000 pounds," she said.

Also, a motor boat was stolen. The motor was locked up elsewhere so thieves only made off with the boat, which was $100 parking pass for summer $ 75 parking pass for seniors $ 75 for pass purchased by June 17 $ 40 for senior pass purchased by June 17 said. In both of his prior leadership positions — principal at Horne Street Elementary, and assistant principal at Weston Elementary School in Manchester, N.H. – he worked through school renovatation projects.

The projects included a $1.2 million renovation project in Manchester done during the school year to improve ventilation and air quality and, in Dover, a large-scale renovation with additions made to a 1957 building.

Though they aren't the size of the $44 million replacement of Bancroft Elementary that will take place during the next few years, his believes his experience makes him more prepared for the task than others would be, he said.

Bancroft Principal Finalist Malcolm Forsman holds eight degrees, including an associate of engineering degree from the Wentworth Institute, a bachelor's degree in business from Southern New Hampshire University, a Master of Education focusing on elementary education from Notre Dame College in Manchester, N.H. and a Doctor of Education with a focus on leadership in schooling from the University of Massachusetts at Lowell. His work career began as an electronic technician from 1977 to 1987 for various employers. He then taught as a fifth grade teacher at Grinnell Elementary School in Derry N.H. for 11 years before becoming a coordinator and director of Graduate Enrollment Services at Southerr New Hampshire University for a little over two years.

In August 2003, Forsman became assistant principal at Weston Elementary School in Manchester, N.H. Since July 2008, he has been principal of Horne Street Elementarv School in Dover. N.H. gave him a shot. Thank God than that sent by many public relations professionals. Chartier graduated from Babson College last year with a bachelor's degree in business management. (No surprise, I suppose, there was a concentration in marketing.) He graduated as the Class of 2011's valedictorian, and collected a slew of awards including the Roger W. Babson Award, Babson College's most prestigious.

But none of those accomplishments is why he is an example to follow for those graduating from high school this month.

He's worth their attention not for what he's done, but for what he seems prepared to do. He's always ready to try something new.

"Doing exactly the same thing every day would be hard," he said the last time I spoke with him.

On Friday, more than 150 Andover people gathered in the Collins Center to watch 'Race to Nowhere" and discuss this documentary about American education. One of the issues presented is that many students are stressed enough that they are only cramming for tests. They don't enjoy learning and they don't retain the information.

Chartier appears to love learning because discovery is fun. It's how I wish every kid would approach the rest of their lives.

In college, as part of Babson's Honors International Experience, Chartier worked and studied for two months at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

He saw a flier posted on the Babson campus one day, talked with a professor and was picked to travel to the Arctic for 10 days as a member of a National Science Foundation Grant research team.

While many college students were sunning themselves on spring break, Chartier was, uh, enjoying temperatures that ranged from 40 to 20 below.

"We did break out our spring break bathing suits for a photo," he said. "Obviously, when you're stuck 10,000 miles from civilization, you bond."

He was able to see the Northern Lights, and go on a two-mile dog-sled journey. "On a cool level, the dog sledding was the best," he said. "We heard what these dogs could cover and it was something like 500 miles a day. That will make it up there on the life-experience list."

His research focused on the economic impact of the building diamond mines on surrounding indigenous populations. A focus was the ice roads, temporary roads created during colder weather often over bodies of Harvard Business School's frozen water, and made part 2+2 program that has the of popular culture by shows such as "Ice Road Truckers." Researchers stopped 200 cars during the day to ask for what they use the roads. They found out some of the roads' biggest benefits had nothing to do with diamonds or the economy. One woman said the road saved her husband's life because the road allowed him to get to the hospital in 20 minutes instead of 40.

"You would never think, in an economic study, that would be a big component, but it was," Chartier said. After defrosting, he was soon off with a group to Switzerland to help solve cyber security problems for some of the biggest banks in Switzerland.

"It was great to get to work with another culture, and each of these banks was based in another country," he said. "It was amazing how they all thought about these things in a different way from a problem-

was fun," he said during a recent weekend in Andover. 'One night we went to Austria, which is like going to Salem, N.H. from here."

Following graduation, Chartier was assistant director for the Bridging the Cultural Divide Through Entrepreneurship Program, where 44 Israeli and Palestinian students were brought to Babson to study entrepreneurship. He traveled to Israel and the West Bank in May to help with orientation before returning to coordinate the program.

Chartier is one of about 100 students admitted to students enter its MBA program after two years of work experience. He's been working as a business analyst at McKinsey & Company in Boston. That basically means he gets to do two things he loves: travel and figure out puzzles.

"Why you'd be brought into a company is because they have a problem. To see that (in person) is like watching a marketing textbook gone awry," he said. "When you're in school, you learn how things should work. With this, you get to see how it really does work."

He's spent eight weeks in Missouri, four months in Chicago, two months in New York, and expects to continue to see the country and tackle different challenges.

"I don't know what I want to be when I grow up. I think if you ever totally do, something's wrong, said Chartier. "I'm shocked every day by how much I didn't know. I think that's what I like about it so much."

June 17 is Father's Day. That is a day set aside to let dads, or those you think of as a dad, know how much you appreciate them. No matter what you call him-daddy, dad, pop, father, or papa—take time to let him know he is that special person in your life.

Father's Day is not about going out and buying him an expensive gift. Matter of fact, many dads would say spending the day with you is enough of a gift.

With that thought in mind the Kid will give you some ideas of things to do with your dad on Father's Day.

• Take Dad camping, even if it's only in your backyard.

• Does Dad like to bowl? An afternoon at the lanes could be fun.

• A trip to the zoo could be a good way to spend the day and learn about wildlife with your dad.

• Is there a new movie Dad might like? An afternoon at the movies is a cool way to spend time together. Don't forget to buy him some popcorn and a drink.

 Go on a bike ride with your dad. A stop for refreshments would be nice.

• You and your dad might check out several museums in your area.

• Does your dad like to fish? You might ask him to take you to his special fishing spot.

Now that you have some ideas, the Kid is sure you can come up with some on your own. No matter what you do, make and don't fight! sure your dad has a great day.

'DOING WELL ISN'T GOOD ENOUGH'

Rethinking education a tall order worth talking about

Between 150 and 200 people gave up their Friday night to watch the documentary "Race to Nowhere" and discuss how the topics explored relate to life in Andover. The movie explores childhood stress looking at such factors as academic competition, homework load, and overscheduling of students' after-school time.

While not everyone seemed convinced severe stress is widespread in Andover youth, most everyone agreed the movie addressed real problems that are affecting kids in town.

After the movie, one Andover High School girl told the crowd that, like some students in the documentary, she only sleeps about 5 hours a night because of her schedule, and it makes her less able to learn during the school day. A mom said that her second-grader is already "well aware of the word assessment." A boy said that, after failing math the previous year, he is learning and retaining much more in his new math class, where the teacher does not assign a lot of homework. Of course there were understandable differences of opinion, for instance with a teacher saying that homework helps students reflect on what they've learned and gives them a chance to practice it.

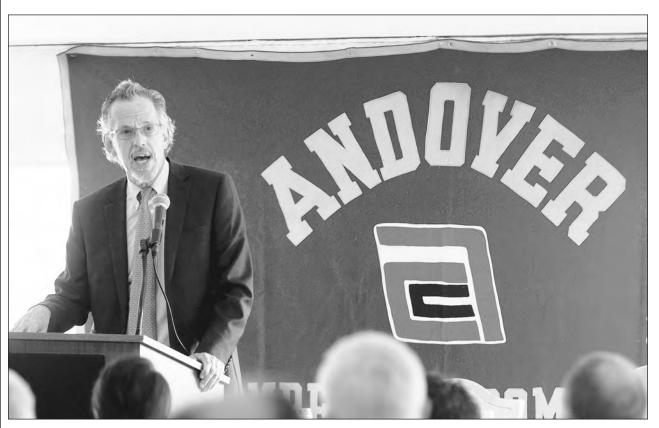

Perhaps the most interesting conversations addresses our societal pressures that shape the decisions of all students, teachers, parents and administrators. A mother and teacher who grew up overseas said that in Germany there is not the same emphasis on making sure that every kid goes to college. She said if her child learns to be a mechanic "God bless them because I really need to keep my car running, and I can't go to my doctor and I can't go to my lawyer for that." Here in Andover, residents can attend the Greater Lawrence Regional Technical High School and receive top notch training in a variety of fields. America needs a variety of workers. Not everyone needs a degree from liberal arts college to earn a good living, do something they love and live a happy life.

It's good to see the community discussing current techniques and considering ways to improve the current approach. Society has changed a lot since the current American educational system was created, and educational philosophies and societal thinking must change to keep American education close to the top. A continuing discussion on such issues is a first small step.

Town needs to watch US Rep. John Tierney now

Part of Andover will soon be considered part of the U.S. Congressional District currently served by Congressman John Tierney, so residents may want to begin paying more attention to his votes. If Tierney is looking to shed his image as a classic Democratic taxand-spender, he missed an opportunity this month. The occasion was a House vote on repeal of the 2.3-percent tax imposed on the manufacturers of medical devices. This industry, a major employer in the Bay State, was singled out by the Obama administration to help pay for its healthcare initiative approved in 2010.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule on the law's constitutionality this month. But there has been a growing consensus within both parties that regardless of the outcome of the court challenge, the medical devices tax was unfair. Last week's vote was 270-146 in favor of repeal, including 37 Democrats. Congresswoman Niki Tsongas, who currently represents all of Andover, voted in favor of repealing the bill, noting the harm it could do to the "smaller, innovative medical device manufacturers" that have their businesses in this region. She suggested an alterative way to fund the healthcare initiative. Tierney did not support the repeal, stating, "While I support our medical device manufacturers, this particular bill hurts regular, middle-class Americans by eliminating affordable health insurance for hundreds of thousands of families." The problem is cutting jobs in one of the state's important sectors would also hurt the middle class.

Secretary Paul Reville, of Mass Executive Office of Education, told Andover Chamber of Commerce last Friday that one of Massachusetts' main advantages is its brain power but that more needs to be done across the state. "Schools alone are not enough to develop our children," he said. "It takes a more potent effort than we can provide in six hours a day... We need whole communities to come together."

Keep student-loan rates low by repealing oil subsidies

U.S. Rep. Niki Tsongas

I fondly remember the celebratory day that my husband Paul finally paid off his student loans. This was after we had a daughter and he had been elected to Congress! I'm reminded of this moment as we now debate whether or not as a nation we should make an investment in higher education by holding down the interest rates for public student loans

At the end of this month, the interest rate that college students pay on loans that are backed by the federal government are scheduled to jump back to 6.8 percent. double. That means that the already high cost of college will become more expensive for students who are without the means to access a higher education independently. At a time when a college education is needed more than ever before to access good iobs and when our economy is dependent on the expansion of a highly skilled work force, Congress simply cannot allow this rate increase to take effect.

In the last decade alone, the cost of a college education has risen nearly 30 percent, a trend that has forced students to borrow unprecedented sums of money, often at extremely high interest rates. This year, for the first time, total outstanding student loan debt has passed $1 trillion, and it now exceeds outstanding credit card debt.

In 2007, even before the Great Recession and in acknowledgement of the skyrocketing cost of higher education, Congress passed a bipartisan bill that over time cut the interest rate on subsidized student loans in half, from 6.8 to 3.4 percent. That bill is set to expire at the end of the month, and rates will to the aggressive steps that the federal government has taken to keep interest rates low for other entities that are important to our economic recovery. The interest rate for a 30-year mortgage is at 4 percent and the Federal Reserve Board is lending to banks at almost zero percent. this is the best path forward Student loans should also be kept at a lower rate as our economy recovers.

Earlier this year, Democrats in the House of Representatives offered a budget that would have prevented this rate increase from taking place. House Republicans rejected this proposal and passed a separate budget which kept the interest rate on track to double this July. Mounting political pressure in recent weeks forced vital to our economic future Republicans to finally heed as developing a trained and a call from the President educated workforce. Keeping borrowing costs at more and Democrats in Congress to bring up a bill to prevent reasonable levels will help this increase. Unfortunately, strengthen our national comthey hastily assembled and mitment to providing affordpassed a flawed bill that able college opportunities for all qualified students. would avert the scheduled loan rate increase but which would cut funding for pre-Niki Tsongas is U.S. ventative health care services for women and children Congressional District, which in order to pay for it. the House that would block the interest rate increase and is paid for by repealing taxpayer funded subsides for oil companies that are currently enjoying record profits, and while drivers across the country are paying record prices at the pump. I believe to ensure that the student loan rate is paid for in a way that is fair and doesn't put other essential services at risk.

Before coming to Congress, I spent nearly a decade working at a community college and during that time I had the opportunity to witness firsthand the extraordinary difference that a college education can make in a person's life. There are few issues as

Downtown getting more delicious

It's official. The Lawrence pastry bakery Fisichelli's is coming to Main Street. Owner Nina Fisichelli Gaffny said she's opening a small shop on Main Street where Chic Consignment used to be. Just 800-square-feet, Gaffny said it's a great size for an Andover location. She initially considered Olde Andover Village (Townsman, April 19) but opted for a smaller space. She has to go through the town's permit process and plans to open in August.

Meanwhile, a cupcake business is eyeballing Olde Andover Village while a pizza company is looking at the former Dominos Pizza location on Park Street. Dominos moved to a more prominent location in Park Street Village earlier this year.

Those businesses just submitted (permit) applications," said Planning Director Paul Materazzo said. "We'll see what happens."

Scouts see field planning from ground up

When the new Devermond Field complex is ready, and they get to play on it, a group of 10-year-olds will have a much better idea about how the baseball diamonds were created.

Architect Chris Huntress, of Huntress Associates Inc., spent some time at the site of the future fields with a group of Cub Scouts from Pack 79, Den 8. He is the architect behind the new Deyermond Field being constructed on Blanchard Street.

The Scouts are working on completing their requirements for their engineering badge and were told about the plans, the materials, and the equipment involved in the construction of the field. The boys learned that one of the more vital parts of the project was the attention to detail involved in the drainage of the three baseball fields and one soccer field, according to the Pack.

100 Years Ago – June 14, 1912 For the present the visiting nurse may be found at the Andover Home for Aged People, Punchard Avenue, the telephone number being 373.

Tickets for the swimming pool have been selling rapidly this week, but not all those who signified their intention of joining the classes have as yet secured their tickets. This should be done as soon as possible.

Edward Sturgis met with an accident on Thursday afternoon when the dogcart in which he was driving overturned and he was thrown out. No serious injury resulted.

A generous offer of a free entertainment for the children at Wonderland ought to be supplemented by enough more of gifts and interest to give the town a good time. Go to the lower town hall next Monday evening at eight o'clock and take your friends with you.

Miss Adel Duval, teacher in the John Dove school, and her sister from Lawrence, are occupying the house on Elm Street formerly the home of the late Mrs. Hill.

75 Years Ago - June 11, 1937

The Colonial Theatre on Essex Street will close after the last performance tomorrow night for extensive alterations which, according to manager Samuel Resnick, will leave practically nothing but the old shell of the present building. The main auditorium floor is to be dropped, and a mezzanine with restrooms, office, etc, added. New seats will be installed and the entire structure will be thoroughly air-conditioned. The façade will also undergo a complete change.

Considerable opposition has been heard to the petition of Paul Ward for a license to conduct at liquor establishment on North Main Street in Marland village. he petition calls for a transfer of Ward's present license from his now discontinued Essex Street establishment to the vacant store in Marland Village.

James D. Doherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Doherty of Harding Street, was awarded his A.B. degree, magna cum laude in government, on Wednesday at Boston College. Mr. Doherty didn't miss a single class in his four years at Boston College.

Sonny Malley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Mallety of 17 Arundel St., had a birthday party on Tuesday afternoon. Many games were played and lovely gifts were received.

The pupils in kindergarten and first grade of the public schools and St. Augustine's Parochial School received their second drink of oral polio vaccine June 11, 12 and 13.

Council 1078, Knights of Columbus, has received permission to use Lowell Street land for its proposed new building. The Board of Appeals listed a number of restrictions, while giving an affirmative decision.

Fire Chief Henry L. Hilton and Lt. Joseph E. Driscoll, State Fire Marshal's Office, think incendiarism or vandalism caused this spectacular Shawsheen Heights blaze last Saturday night. The home, off Topping Road on Woodland Street, was vacant due to Route 495 land takings. The structure was destroyed, and firefighters had a big job keeping flames from spreading into the woods.

Sunday morning's sparkling sunshine brought with it warm wishes and high hopes for the 387 young men and women who would graduate from Phillips Academy this day. 68 local residents graduate from Phillips Academy. The commencement ceremony was held outdoors on the Phillips campus. The women wore white and carried a red rose, while the men wore blue blazers to produce a dazzling array of colors. The class of '87 was the first to observe a Memorial Day in the school's 209-year history.

The DPW has completed a master plan that would extend water to many of the areas that are now not serviced, but will be only done when residents make a request at Town Meeting, it is voted in favor of, and they are willing to pay the betterment fee. Robert McQuade explained two possible fire protection plans that would solve the problems in these areas, either get town water to them or consider water tanks which are used in many industrial areas as a second choice.

In the winter he was a member of the indoor track team, but was primarily a sprinter and shot putter, a trend he expected to continue when he went out for spring track this season.

"My main event was going to be shot put," he said. "But I felt like I had kind of peaked in that, and I was eligible for another event.

"(Friend and football teammate) Joey Comeau was doing javelin and I figured, why not try it and have some fun hanging out with him."

Rain gives relay best of both worlds

BY DAVID WILLIS STAFF WRITER

FITCHBURG — Three of the four members of Andover's 4x800 relay faced one of the most difficult decisions a high school senior could face.

With the All-State track meet postponed from Saturday (June 2) to Monday (June 4), The trio would have to decide if they would compete at the track meet or walk in their graduation.

But fortune would be on the side of Ryan Cooney, Pat O'Sullivan and Will Klein, as the meet was postponed again to Tuesday (June 5), meaning they could walk in their graduation one day, then were free to place second in the 4x800 at All-States (7:58.96) the following day.

"We were pumped," said Cooney, the anchor. "Obviously we were looking for the win, but you sure can't be mad at second at All-States."

Even if the rain had not intervened, however, the Golden Warriors would have been on the track.

"On Friday we had a meeting at the school,' said Andover coach Peter Comeau. "I told them the decision was theirs, but I reminded them, I didn't remember who sat to my left or right at my graduation, but I remember the members of my relay team. "Cooney said he was in, then O'Sullivan said he was in and Klein said he thought he could influence his parents. It was never a question for them."

Led by Cooney and junior Mike Maldari, both members of the relay that also finished second at All-States last season, along with O'Sullivan and Klein that earned spots on this squad during the winter, the Golden Warriors finished in 7:58.96, the best time in the area this season and just

Pike students boost Bellesini through basketball

A tuition-free Lawrence academy for boys will have new gym equipment thanks to the work of two Pike School students in Andover.

Pike middle school students Alex Chaban and Connor McKernan organized a spring basketball clinic at the Pike School to benefit the basketball program at Bellesini Academy in Lawrence. Alex and Connor came up with the idea for the "Baskets for Bellesini" fundraiser, which featured Andover High School Basketball Coach Dave Fazio and the Hooptown Team, according to their school. They created flyers to promote the program, and a special email address to field inquiries and registrations.

The clinic provided sessions for recreational, intermediate
