Andover Gift Shop to close after 30 years

JUDY WAKEFIELD
Staff Writer

The Andover Gift Shop — a long-running popular store for kids and adults with well-priced, eclectic inventory — will close at the end of the year.

With its prime business location on Main Street near the corner of Post Office Avenue, it's a retail spot to die for. No one knows that better than the current tenant.

Debbie Lane has run The Andover Gift Shop for over 20 years there.

"The space, with the nearby (traffic) lights, the big window and the visibility, was just spectacular," Lane said. "I dreamed about the space a lot before I got it."

For eight years, her shop was around the corner on Post Office Avenue. But 22 years ago, when the former tenant, Kitchen Concepts, left Main Street, Lane moved her business to what for her was a dreamy location at 4

Main St.

"I just loved it there...especially my customers. So many of them pushed carriages and cute babies to my store. I watched those babies grow up and now they have babies," she said. "That's what I will miss most. I loved my customers with all my heart."

But life has a tendency to just happen, she said, and she now lives three hours away in New Hampshire.

"It's just time to do this. But I am going to miss it," she said.

Her life has certainly had its ups and downs. A cancer survivor, she also stood by her husband as he suffered from the often deadly disease. He passed away in February 2008.

But she found love again. She returned to her hometown of Berlin, N.H. for a class reunion and reconnected with Gordon Dale, a dear friend who is also her son's godfather. She

Record-setting 91 percent turn out to vote

Finegold, Lyons, Moran elected in Andover

JUDY WAKEFIELD
Staff Writer

A record-setting turnout of 91 percent of the town's active voters cast ballots this year, but Andover voters didn't always get their way.

Andover backed Republican incumbent Scott Brown for U.S. Senate and he was defeated by Democrat Elizabeth Warren. The portion of Andover that is in the 6th Congressional District wanted Richard Tisei, but it appeared at Townsman press time that Democratic incumbent John Tierney had captured a slim victory. Andover voters in the redistricted 18th district wanted Barbara L'Italien to reclaim a state representative seat, but will be represented by fellow Andover resident Jim Lyons, a Republican. Voters in the 17th Essex wanted unenrolled Andover resident Kevin Cuff for state representative, and he was defeated by Lawrence City Council President Frank Moran.

Andover did get some of the men and women it wanted. Andover will have the president it wants, for instance. Incumbent Democratic President Barack Obama edged out Republican opponent Mitt Romney nationally, and also captured a victory in Andover, by 234 votes.

Andover also supported winners Niki Tsongas for U.S. Congress, Barry

Finegold for state senator and at least two of the three ballot questions. Question 2, known as the Death with Dignity question, was too close to call across Massachusetts at Townsman presstime.

"We are a purple town. You just never know with Andover. The town votes for the person, not the party," said Sen. Barry Finegold, a town native who was reelected and received just over 10,000 votes from hometown voters. He defeated Republican Paul Adams, who had been elected to the 17th

Essex state representative seat for Andover in 2010. It was a busy day at the polls as anxious voters greeted election officials when polls opened at 7 a.m. on Tuesday and voting stayed steady for the rest of the day.

Woman helps Sandy's victims

When Andover's Diane Dillon saw the destruction caused in New York and New Jersey by Superstorm Sandy, she wanted to help. Turns out, she's not alone - not by a long shot. After setting up a relief program called "Sending Sunshine," she has been swamped with bags of clothes, shoes, flashlights, cleaning supplies and other items meant to help people in need.

"There have been people in droves," said Dillian, early Tuesday night. "We just got a package from California and Florida. I don't even know these people."

The Harrington Moving Company offered the group 4,000 square feet at Dundee Park on Railroad Avenue, where Dillon and other volunteers are now collecting and sorting donations. The Burlington and Wilmington school superintendents are rallying behind the cause.

By early Tuesday night, Sending Sunshine had been given 2,000 bags of supplies, she said. It expected to stay open at Dundee Park from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day, through Sunday, collecting items including winter coats, boots, hats and items for babies and pets. People interested in learning more about how they can help can visit www.facebook.com/sending-sunshine2012. Dillon said she has been using social media including Facebook, Twitter and emails to spread the message. Andover and North Andover youth were at the polling places in those towns Tuesday handing out

Local veterans to be recognized for service

Joseph Bresnahan was involved in what a town book calls "one of the country's best kept secrets until a naval history in 1988 covered it in detail." He is among the Andover veterans who will be recognized for his service in World War II as part of the town's Veterans Day ceremonies, which will be held at several locations.

Andover also will dedicate two memorials for veterans at Spring Grove Cemetery this Veterans Day, Sunday, Nov. 11.

A "Twentieth-Century Veterans Memorial" will help mark the existing Spring Grove Veterans Burial Lot that until now has not had an adequate marker, according to Mike Burke, veterans services director. A second memorial will dedicate a "Veterans Memorial at Spring Grove" at the future Spring Grove Veterans Burial Lot.

The inscription on the Twentieth-Century Veterans Memorial reads "Here rest Andover's sons and daughters who ensured we remained free during our nation's most costly century. All gave some, some gave all. Let them not be forgotten." The Spring Grove ceremonies will begin at 11 a.m.

At Ballardvale Green at noon, "Heroes Among Us: Book IV," the fourth book in a series recording the stories of living World War II Andover veterans, will be presented to the veterans in that book. Books are available from the Veterans Services Office for a suggested donation of $15.

Andover veterans highlighted in this book are Robert T. Andersen, Richard J. Bowen, Joseph M. Bresnahan, Edward J. Broaddus, Robert H. Buchanan, Robert E. Burns, Frederick M. Childs, Salvatore DeYoreo, Paul C. Dow, James D. Hamilton, Robert S. Hamilton, John L. Howard, Jr., William C. Jakes, Peter O. Loosigian, John Meyer, Lawrence P. Morrisroe, Herbert R. Muller, Joseph J. Paliga, Jr., Philip Retelle and George J. Saideh.

Their stories are varied. Peter Loosigian, known for running his Andover farm, was a toxic gas handler during World War II, meaning he had to take care of an arsenal of 100-pound chemical bombs held in reserve for potential use. His unit secured and camouflaged these weapons in places such as New Guinea. The high humidity of this region caused the bombs' casings to rot, and they had to be disposed of, which the book straight-forwardly describes as "a very risky procedure."

Philip Retelle enlisted in the U.S. Navy in 1943 at age 17. He was sent for education and training, first at Dartmouth College. His first non-training assignment was doing convoy duty and anti-submarine patrol off the Virginia coast. After the atomic bombs were dropped, he was assigned a job in California working with German prisoners of war. He was discharged in March of 1946 and worked several civilian jobs.

But while at Hanscom Air Force Base in 1956, Retelle joined the Air Force

Reserve. He served with the Reserves until April 3, 1984, one day before his 60th birthday, which is the maximum age one can remain in the Reserves. He was in Panama that day, but his friends got him home in time to celebrate the milestone day. Bresnahan was the man involved in "one of the country's best kept secrets." His ship was one of several that on May 21, 1944 were being loaded with fuel and ammunition in advance of the imminent invasion of Saipan. An accidental explosion of ammunition killed 163 men and injured 396. After a fire started and an abandon ship order was sounded, Bresnahan jumped into the water and, according to the book, "kept swimming, dodging the flaming wreckage falling around him until he was finally picked up."

Veterans Day schedule

In total on Sunday, Nov. 11 the town of Andover will be memorializing Veterans Day at West Parish Cemetery at 10 a.m., Spring Grove Cemetery (off Abbot Street and Spring Grove Road) at 11 a.m. and Ballardvale Green (off Andover and Center streets near the Ballardvale Fire Station) at noon.

The brief ceremonies on Veterans Day will be followed by a luncheon at 1 p.m. at Masonic Temple on High Street.

A Veterans Day program will be held even if there is inclement weather.

If there is inclement weather - meaning moderate to heavy rain - a brief ceremony will be held at Elm Green at noon, followed indoors at the Masonic Temple.

Dillon said a moving company will pick up donations in Boston, Swampscott and other locations and bring them to Andover; a ski shop in Pittsfield is sending 40 jackets; another company is giving 40 trash cans. Donations will be sent to the hard hit New York City boroughs of Queens and Staten Island and to assist people in New Jersey. Dillon grew up on the Jersey Shore.

Tierney declares victory in 6th

Congressman John Tierney claimed victory at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, with a razor-thin margin separating him from Republican rival Richard Tisei in a 6th Congressional District race.

"You own this. This is your victory," Tierney told a crowd of enthusiastic supporters at the Hawthorne Hotel.

Tisei shut down his headquarters at midnight, but did not concede the election. Results at press time had Tierney at 48.4 percent and Tisei at 47.2 percent.

Election 2012

Finegold takes hometown, senate seat

JUDY WAKEFIELD
Staff Writer

It was an emotional state senate win for Barry Finegold as this election marked the first election that his older sister, Joni Finegold, could not congratulate him. A former U.S. Foreign Service officer, Joni Finegold, 42, died July 26 of non-smoking related lung cancer.

"I know she's looking down from somewhere," he said. "She would always call me after an election and say 'good job, bro' or something like that...It's just very emotional for me tonight."

The 10,062 votes he received from his hometown helped him earn a victory over Paul Adams (R-Andover), who had represented Andover as state representative of the old 17th Essex District. Adams district was significantly redistricted and he decided to run for senate.

Finegold thanked his supporters for their hard work at his victory celebration at

"I am humbled and honored by this," he said. "It was an exciting day for all of us."

His focus when he starts his new term will be the issues of education and jobs, he said.

"I will work to create more jobs and will keep fighting to increase Chapter 70 (education) funds from the state," Finegold said.

The new I-93 interchange is another priority issue.

"It's a priority because it means jobs," he said.

JUDY WAKEFIELD

Republican Jim Lyons and Democrat Barbara L'Italien, both of Andover, battled a second time for the 18th Essex state representative seat. Once again, incumbent Lyons was the winner.

L'Italien won Andover by 575 votes, but Lyons made up the vote gap in other communities in the district. The new 18th Essex, which was redistricted, now includes most of Andover, meaning Lyons will represent many Andover residents he has not before.

"Our efforts and hard work paid off," Lyons said from his victory party in the barn located behind his house on High Vale Lane.

He said his focus on local aid during the campaign mattered to taxpayers.

"Taxpayers want efficient spending of their property taxes," he said. "That's what I heard from them."

"Taxpayers want efficient spending of their property taxes. That's what I heard from them."

Jim Lyons

He's a proud reform Republican who said he worked hard to increase state aid to Andover by 7 percent.

"Reform Republicans battled to increase local aid as a share of the state budget and we succeeded," he said.

He supports a sales-tax rollback to 5 percent as something vitally important to small businesses, particularly in his district.

"Because of our proximity to tax-free New Hampshire, the sales tax rollback will help consumers, locally-owned retail stores and working families," he said.

Patricia Snedeker, 82

ANDOVER — Patricia Anne Snedeker (née Honeker), died peacefully on September 8, 2012 in Pasadena, Calif. after a seven-month battle with renal cancer. She was 82.

Born in 1930 in Orange, N.J., Pat was the only child of William Honeker, owner of Fisher Cadillac, and Frances Wright Honeker. She grew up in East Orange, N.J., attended East Orange High School, and was a proud and active alumna of Wellesley College, Class of 1952, where she majored in Spanish.

During their 60 years of marriage they also lived in Princeton, N.J., Lincoln, N.J., Rumson, N.J., Wilbraham, Andover, and North Reading. 'Havana Nights' theme for Spirit of Giving 2012

The Rev. Cal Mutti is returning to Andover for the first time since he retired as pastor of South Church five years ago.

Mutti, formerly of Andover, will be part of the Spirit of Giving event at Ironstone, which is part awards gala, part fundraiser and part all-out party. This year's theme is "Havana Nights," which brings with it rum bars and casino-style gambling.

Challenge Unlimited at Ironstone Farm is hosting its tenth annual Spirit of Giving Awards Gala on Saturday, Nov. 17 — honoring Lowell's Al Lenzi, founder of Lenzi's Catering; Mutti; and WCVB Channel 5's Susan Wornick, of Natick.

"All honorees have played significant roles in Ironstone's development over the past three decades — and all represent a piece of its history," according to Executive Director Deedee O'Brien. "Andover's Cal Mutti gave Ironstone Farm what it needed most — the power of prayer and words. Called upon on many occasions to bless events, gatherings and new buildings — Cal brought the right words to the right crowds at the right times. His ever-inspiring observation of Ironstone Farm and its contribution to surrounding communities never ceased to result in a better understanding of the place and its gifts.

The Challenge Unlimited program at Ironstone Farm on Route 133 provides horse-riding therapy to children with a variety of physical or mental challenges. The annual Spirit of Giving Gala helps honor those who support the program, while also raising money for it.

Unlimited purchased Ironstone Farm from its founder and supporter Dick Donovan, O'Brien said she pledged never to be complacent. "That includes remembering the people who have made things happen from 'day 1,'" said O'Brien in a release. "Cal Mutti was our most eloquent messenger in expressing the essence of Ironstone Farm — and we will never forget.

Planned in the Havana Nights theme, Spirit of Giving 2012 will combine a '50s night life of casino gambling, rum bar and cigar rolling with the festive daytime fiesta of traditional Cuban food and salsa dancing. Gamblers can win over 100 prizes at the tables. Live auction items will be presented

Shila Hill RN, CDE, Certified Diabetes Educator

In our last column Daniel begins new medication. Now he will continue his care from a Home Health VNA nurse and certified diabetes educator.

When Daniel greeted me at the door I was thrilled to notice that he was walking comfortably. When asked during my assessment he stated that, since beginning the new medication for his diabetic neuropathy, he had a lot less foot pain. He's so relieved since his granddaughter's wedding is next week, "She promised me a dance" he said with a smile.

During this visit I concentrated on teaching Daniel all about his diabetes including the symptoms of complications - hypoglycemia, which occurs when blood sugar is too low, and hyperglycemia, which occurs when blood sugar is too high. His wife Ann joined us. It's important for her to learn about these symptoms in order to help if Daniel shows signs of distress. Also, Ann cooks most of their meals. Meal planning and carbohydrate counting is critical to blood sugar control. I taught them that carbohydrates such as grains, beans, starchy vegetables, milk and fruit should make up 45-65% of total daily calories. Using a meal chart, we planned out a week's worth of nutritious and satisfying meals making sure to include the right amounts of carbohydrates, fats and protein.

Before I left, Daniel and I talked about how to plan meals and time insulin injections when his routine changes, such as during special events like his granddaughter's wedding.

Next week: the dance, and on-going disease management.

ELECTION: Turn out may be a record

Traffic backed up around the town's two voting locations - Andover High School and the Andover Senior Center - early in the morning. But drivers were courteous and understanding, said Town Clerk Larry Murphy.

"The first voter at the high school arrived at 6:20 a.m.," Murphy said. "Overall, everything went very well at the polls."

Murphy said presidential elections typically mean high voter turnout and Andover is clearly a good example of that. In the last presidential election in 2008, the town had 88 percent of active voters turn out to vote, Murphy said.

"Our 91 percent is record setting," he said.

In fact, ballot boxes overflowed. Election officials followed standard procedure to empty the machines, said Murphy. Ballots are put in locked boxes.

Police officers hold the keys to those boxes.

"Absentee ballots are folded and sometimes cause trouble," he said. "We clean out the machines two or three times so it doesn't jam."

The process slowed down voting for a short time, but Murphy said voters were

Building community at Andover High

We have a feeling that as more people get to know new Andover High Principal Christopher Lord, they are going to be impressed.

When the Townsman did a page 1 story recently on the football team, which for the first time in years was undefeated and receiving a good amount of attention at the school, Lord praised the team -- but also noted other teams and a variety of other groups at the school that are doing superlative work. "Bowdoin College just sent us a silver platter because two of their top students graduated from Andover High. The college said are kids are very well prepared for college," said Lord, in part. "We celebrate all of our kids."

As a leader, he was right to do so. Education should always come first, of course. While football is king at many high schools, at Andover High there are many teams to reasonably celebrate, most notably the girls swim and dive, girls basketball, girls field hockey and boys ski teams. And Andover High should not focus only on its athletes, but support and praise its scholars, artists and student leaders.

During another interview at the start of school, Lord talked about the great number of clubs at the school. Some new community service groups have started at the school this year. Putting an emphasis on these other areas helps create a true community.

Building community clearly has been Lord's goal since day 1. He gathered a group together to help clean school grounds before the start of school, and seems like a person who will be able to rebuild the sense of community that should define any superlative high school.

Some Andover residents will have a chance to hear Lord's plans for the school tomorrow, Friday. The Service Club of Andover will host Andover High School Principal Christopher Lord at the Andover Country Club. This event is open and free to the public, although people were asked to RSVP by this past Tuesday.

Again, we suspect those who attend will find a leader they can get behind. That's important.

Most people say they move to Andover for its schools. There always has been strong support for the schools and for education from residents of all ages. During the past few years, however, the relationship between the community and the schools has deteriorated some. Last year, the Andover Fund for Education even cancelled its adult spelling bee that supports special programs designed by teachers, fearing a low turnout in the midst of a tough teachers union negotiation.

It will behoove everyone for that partnership between the community and Andover High to be strengthened again.

Welcome 'Sunshine'

Speaking of community spirit -- in this case community writ a bit larger -- we have to offer a note of praise for the Sending Sunshine effort started by Andover resident Diane Dillon.

After seeing the devastation causing by Superstorm Sandy, she decided to collect supplies that are needed by people in the hard-hit areas of New York and New Jersey.

Dozens of Andover youth has helped her in the effort, and the result has been over 2,000 bags of supplies -- so far. People can still bring items to the first building in Dundee Park, across from the intersection of Essex and Railroad streets, through Sunday night. The facility is open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day.

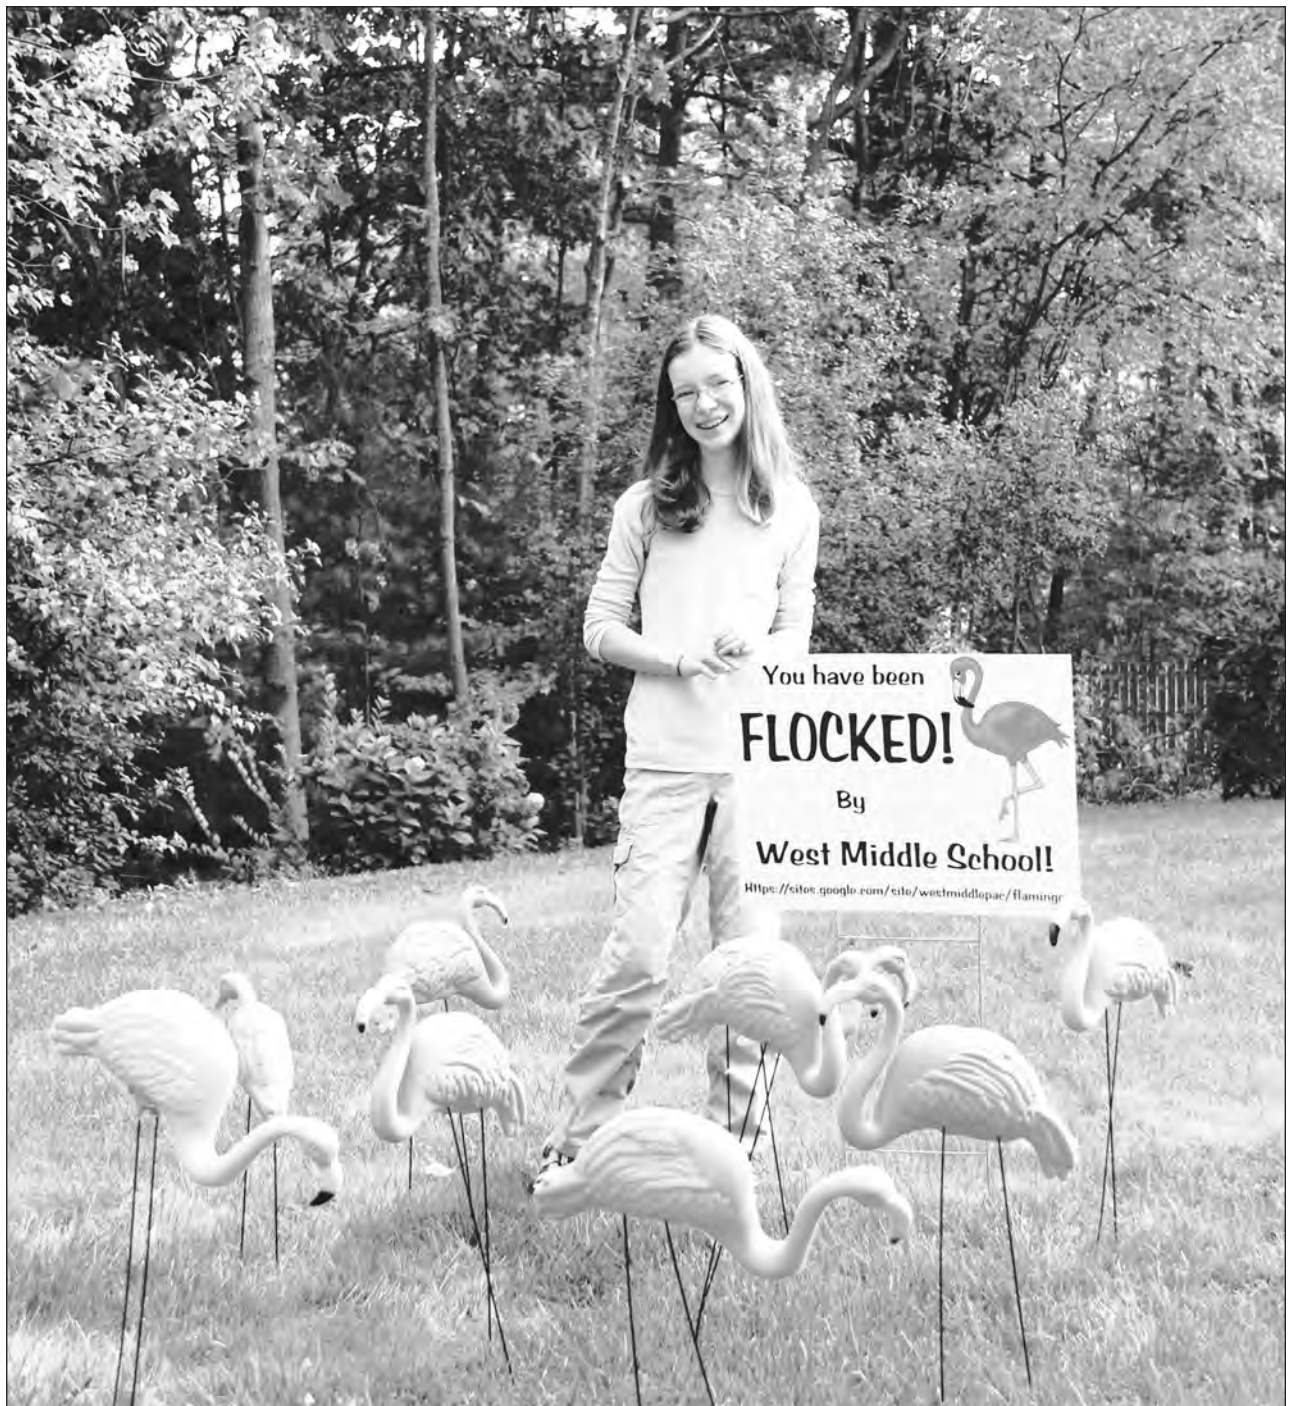

We're glad to see the support offered by so many, and hope the efforts truly help those in dire need, as a new storm forecast for this week may make matters worse for those in New York and New Jersey.

With exercise, it's not the time, it's the intensity

On Fitness

Question: What is the best bang for the buck? What do you think is most effective for weight and fat loss: long moderate cardio, weight training, intense interval training, yoga, or something else?

JAMEY LACHIANA
Yang's Fitness Center

Answer: If your goal is to become more "toned," have less body fat, and more strength, working out at medium to high levels of intensity while using proper form is the way to go. Many people spend far too long on cardio equipment or around the gym watching TV, talking on the phone, or "resting." Utilizing exercise intervals of high intensity and recovering at a medium intensity is a fantastic way to not only decrease blood pressure, increase metabolism, increase heart strength/circulation, but also burn fat and increase muscle strength as well.

The very lowest of levels of fitness to the highest of competitive athletes should be using interval training. Don't spend an abundance of time on cardio equipment unless you're running or biking competitively. Twenty minutes of 80-90 percent of your max heart rate is better than 45 minutes of 60-70 percent. Heart rates vary from person to person based on health and fitness levels.

Interval training can be used with calisthenic exercises and weight training also. When weight training, try changing up the amount of weight and repetitions you normally perform. Too often do I see people doing the same exercises, weights, and repetitions with little to no change after months or sometimes years of paying for memberships to a gym. Do your body a favor and change your exercises every 8 to 10 weeks.

It's not how much time you spend working out, it's the quality of the effort you put into it.

Opposition to meat prepared according to Islamic law

Editor, Townsman:
Finally some juicy news for all meat lovers! Something new in Market Basket on Route 114 in North Andover got my attention recently. I saw the "Halal" label on chicken. I rushed to ask the store manager: "Do you know you have Al-Mazraah Halal chicken on your shelves? Do you know what Halal means?" He did not.

So I proceeded to explain to him that the only way Muslims are allowed to eat the meat is if the animal is slaughtered according to Islamic law and moral code, known as Sharia ritual. The animal must be slaughtered while it is still fully conscious -- because it must be able to hear the Islamic prayer -- that way its meat can be cleansed. Only then does Allah permit Muslims to eat the meat. So the throats of all animals -- be they chicken, turkey, beef or lamb -- must be slit open to let the animal bleed to death, hopefully without severing the spinal cord. (God spared the pigs; pigs are dirty no matter what and can not be cleansed by any prayer, Allah decided.)

The "Halal" method of slaughtering animals has two purposes under Islamic law. First, the animal can hear the prayer. Second, because the animal is not shot in the head first before slaughtering, there is no chance for the "toxins" produced by the body to be released into the tissues. So, they claim, it is healthier for humans to eat. They also claim that this way the animal doesn't really suffer...Makes me wonder how did they find this out?

The ritual is as old as Islam itself, perhaps older. I am sure they had all the lab tests back in the 700s AD to back up their claim. Just kidding! Of course they did not. Yet it is indeed the claim of today's more sophisticated Muslims, whose rationale directly challenges Western civilization's laws against animal cruelty.

I find it disturbing that the political correctness and the pseudo-human rights activists always find a way to get an exemption from such well established law. Such exemption has obviously been allowed here, in the U.S., since the package states "made in the USA". I can not tell you how many disapproving looks I receive when in the winter time I wear my rabbit coat. We are all aware that rooster fights, dog fights, and all kinds of animal abuse will bring criminal charges, but to make an animal suffer inhumanely in spasms as it is dying is just fine if it is done as a concession to Islam.

My question is: What is the percentage of Muslims living in this area for Market Basket to justify putting this on their shelves? My own (politically incorrect) answer would be as many as there were in Cambridge last year when school officials established a Muslim holiday; another day off in public schools. The percentage of Muslims? Next to nothing.

I am concerned that many who shop regularly in Market Basket have absolutely no idea what "Halal" means. They will just see chicken and buy it. The result would incorrectly "show" a greater demand for "Halal" meat than there actually is.

Recalling another jazz player

Editor, Townsman:
"Music in Andover Part II" by Gail Ralston (an Andover Stories column) mentioned Daniel Pinkham, a 1940 graduate of Phillips Academy but overlooked another who graduated 10 years later.

Hayden Higgins and I were kindergarten classmates at Briggs Allen on Abbot Street. Hayden was the first graduate of his 1950 class to see service in the Korean War. Upon discharge he began his music career in jazz and changed his name to Eddie Higgins. He could have joined professional jazz groups but chose to play in his adopted city of Chicago and record his unique style of jazz.

Preschool students in Ann O'Donnell's class at Shawsheen School vote in a mock election last week. They are, from back to front, Sabrina Fairfield, Elizabeth Dang and Hannah Arnold. Shawsheen students favored Barack Obama, giving him about 60 percent of their votes.

Young students at several Andover schools cast their ballots as part of a national mock presidential election by students this week, teaching kids about the importance of voting.

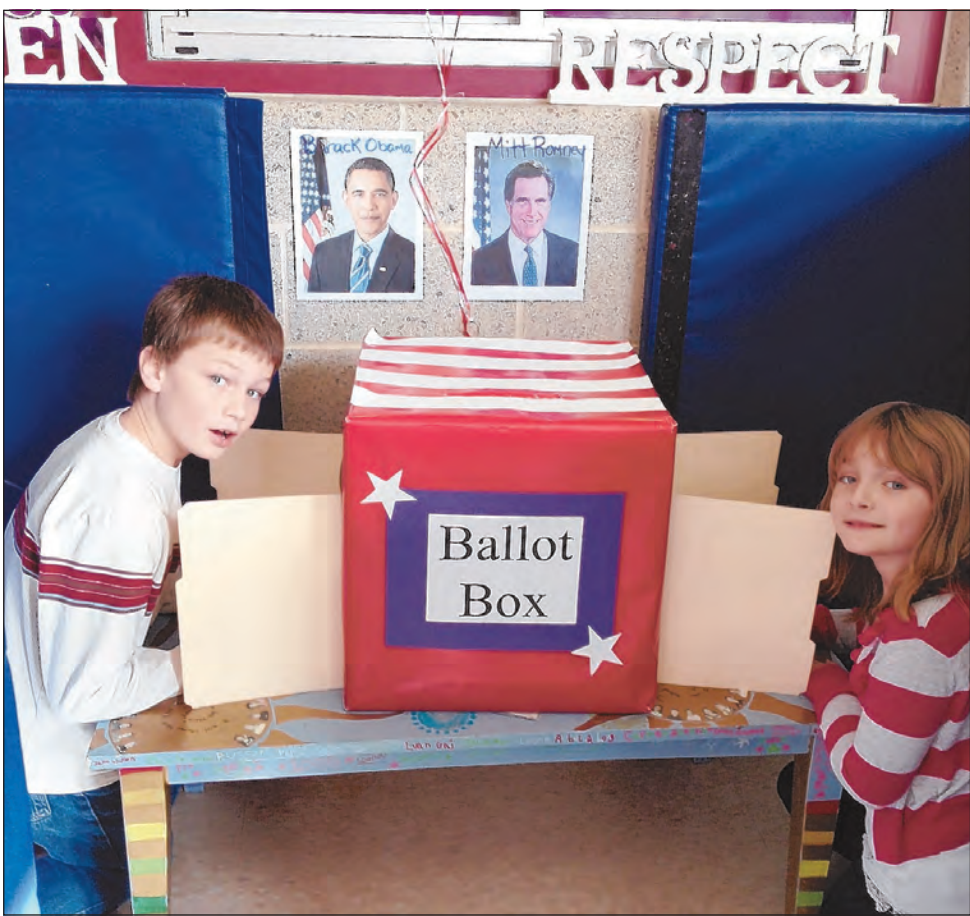

Among the schools were Bancroft Elementary, High Plain Elementary and Shawsheen School, and the private St. Augustine School.

Shawsheen School students voted in the 2012 Your Voice Mock Student Election on Thursday, Nov. 1. Shawsheen is a preschool through grade 2 school, and 18 classes made their choice for president. The young students' votes were added to over 5 million other student votes from around the country. Shawsheen students were surprised at how simple it is to vote and they happily wore their "I Voted" sticker for the rest of the day, according to Shannon Hartnett, the coordinator of the event.

She reported that the Shawsheen election went to Barack Obama with 60 percent of the votes (155 votes for Obama, 104 for Romney).

Shawsheen students also created posters to show how they feel about voting. "Think Big! It's Your Country! It's Your Vote!" was the message from second-grader Charlie Buoncontri.

Kindergarten student Leila Almeida said, "I want a president who is smart, strong and brave." First-grader Shane Garvin summed up his feelings by writing "I am proud to be an American."

Andover native Reczek pursues medicine, music

By NEIL FATER

Andover native Adam Reczek started performing his songs while in college, and he hasn't really stopped since. He calls it his "only real constant."

When he spent a semester in New Zealand, he did a lot of street performing there. Now that he's returned to Andover, to complete a pre-med program at the University of Massachusetts Lowell, he's still writing and performing.

Reczek recently offered a free show of his music at West Parish Church.

Reczek graduated from Andover High in 2007 and attended Saint Michael's College in Burlington, Vt.

He says that's "where I first started playing regularly and became an active part of the music scene up there by the time I graduated in 2011 with a business degree. I never really wanted to study music, as I thought it would suck the fun out of it."

Q&A

When did you first take an interest in music? First pick up an instrument?

I got my first guitar (an electric) for Christmas in eighth grade. I started giving lessons to kids around the neighborhood and in neighboring towns as a sophomore in high school and I have continued that in some capacity on-and-off to this day.

I started writing towards the end of high school but didn't start performing until college, and then I started doing it as often as possible. I recorded two albums in college and, earlier this year, decided to really commit to the quality of my recordings and built my own studio in the basement of my parents' house. My latest album "Butt-toned from the Bottom Up" was the result, and I couldn't be happier with it.

Did you find your interest in music common as a kid growing up in Andover?

There was a lot of musical interest among my peers

Andover High to take plunge into musical satire

It doesn't sound like a place anyone would want to visit, but for more than a decade audiences have been glad they came to see it.

It's "Urinetown," which Andover High School will produce for its fall musical.

The Tony-winning satirical musical will be presented by Andover High School's Drama Guild at the Collins Center for the Performing Arts, on the right side of Andover High School. There will be four performances: Nov. 15, 16 and 17 at 7:30 p.m. each evening and Nov. 18 at 2 p.m.

Tickets are available online at ticketpeak.com/ahs, at the door, or by calling the box office at 978-623-8666.

The comedy musical satirizes the courts, big business and capitalism, social irresponsibility, populism, bureaucracy and municipal politics, according to a release. The show also parodies the Broadway musical itself including specific high profile shows such as Les Misérables.

Urinetown debuted in 2001, was nominated for 10 Tony Awards and won three. Two main characters, Bobby Strong and Hope Cladwell, were both included on New York Theatre Monthly's list of "The 100 Greatest Roles in Musical Theatre," according to a release from those involved with the Andover High production.

Emily Brownholtz stars as Little Sally, a thoroughly irreverent, intelligent street urchin, a quasi-narrator who constantly questions the logic of Urinetown the Musical, being staged Nov. 15-18 by the Andover High School drama guild.

Maddie Brouillard as the brutal urinal warden Penny Pennywise prepares to clobber Officer Lockstock, played by Michael Hanscom.

Officer Barrel (Conor Meehan) is dismayed as his partner and secret crush, Officer Lockstock (Michael Hanscom) appears to have eyes for the winsome Hope Cladwell (Emily Wivell).

Town youth use theater to teach lessons from the past

A quartet of Andover youth are using drama to help stop bullying and remind people of the lessons of the past.

The Hall siblings, Katherine (Doherty Middle School eighth-grader), Caroline (Doherty sixth-grader) and Joseph (Bancroft Elementary fourth grader) performed in "Terezin: Children of the Holocaust" in New York City during the weekend of Oct. 19 to 21. Katherine also performed the weekend beginning Oct. 26.

Katherine has been touring with Terezin for four and a half years, Joseph for two and a half years and Caroline for 18 months.

Nathan Ladd, 13, who attends the Montessori School in Andover, worked as the production stage manager for the New York run of Terezin.

"The show tours schools, other organizations and theaters with the goal of remembering and honoring the 6 million people lost in the Holocaust, particularly the children, and to combat intolerance and bullying in a unique and memorable way," according to their mother, Mary Hall.

The drama group has performed at many local schools including Phillips Academy, Governor's, Waring, Beverly High, Amesbury High and Pentucket Middle School.

The Hall children and Ladd travelled overseas to perform at the Fringe Festival in Edinburgh, Scotland in 2011, where the cast earned a five-star review and was asked to return. The cast has been invited to perform in Germany.

In 1835, first train to Andover cheered wildly

Bill Dalton

Most of Andover turned out on June 6, 1835, and wildly cheered the arrival of the first train to come to town. Three years earlier, Andover resident Hobart Clarke had decided Andover would benefit from having a railroad after watching one near his brother's home in Utica, N.Y. Arguably, the first engine-powered train was one owned by the Mohawk & Hudson Company's line running from Albany to Schenectady, N.Y., in 1826. This railway was probably the one that Clarke watched in 1832, although steam-powered trains were an invention whose time had come and soon were popping up like giant puffing bugs scuttling over the landscape. The original engine-powered trains were built for runs of a few miles, and although there may have been planners theorizing about long-run railway lines, the early train runs became longer and longer because people like Hobart Clarke pictured them benefitting towns like Andover and connecting them to other railways with short runs. When Clarke returned to Andover, he put together a group of potential investors in 1833, and they held a public meeting at Locke Tavern in a building still standing on the corner of Main and Locke streets. It was voted to petition the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for the right to build a railway line to Wilmington, where a line was already being built from Wilmington to meet the Boston & Lowell Railroad. The Commonwealth granted the petition later in 1833. The original investors formed a company shortly after. They were Clarke, Abraham Marland, Amos Abbot, John Smith, and Amos Pettingill, all of whom served as directors of the company. One thousand shares of stock were issued at $100 each, and there may have been other smaller investors. Work was finished in 1836, and the railroad company and line was pragmatically called the Andover & Wilmington Railroad. Although no one alive today ever saw the original tracks in place, they started at the train station (also occupied by Walsh's Tin Co.) that later became the Colonial Theater, then the Andover Playhouse, then an adjunct to the Old Town Hall, and finally part of the parking lot for the Memorial Hall Library. The original depot was located diagonally across the street from the old post office, which made the delivery of mail and packages convenient. From the depot, the tracks took a direct route that made sense in those days, and we must remember there were many fewer houses. They ran from the depot to behind where the Baptist Church is, then diagonally along Central Street to the front of the Rose Cottage at the corner of Chestnut and Central streets (where Lafayette once slept), to behind where St. Augustine

School is now, then under School Street, where a bridge was built to support the street, across Phillips Street, along the south side of Abbot Street, through Spring Grove Cemetery, "across the plains of Ballardvale" (as Bessie Goldsmith mentions in her booklet cited below) to a station in Ballardvale, and finally into Wilmington. Nathaniel Whittier, the original superintendent of the railway, constructed and ran the workshops that employed 75 men near the Essex Street depot to service the trains. His house was near the corner of Whittier and Summer streets, and Whittier Street is named for him. M.C. Andrews, a young man of 19, was the first conductor and the only passenger on the first train that was greeted by cheers.

In my early teens, I first saw a part of the old track bed. The Warner family of Ballardvale showed me a long stretch of rail bed and it amazed me as it was so far from any other tracks in Andover, but more than that, it made me wonder about a lot of things that must have happened in Old Andover. Today, if I had a time machine, the arrival of the first train in Andover is one of those events I'd visit. (The above facts are taken from an "Andover Townsman" article written by Kay Noyes on April 19, 1956; "The Townswoman's Andover," Bessie Goldsmith, Andover Historical Society, 1964; and a fact or two discovered by me.) Bill Dalton writes a weekly column for the Andover Townsman. His email address is Bill-Dalton@AndoverTownie.com.

Kiwanis Club members and Andover High students clean bridge for Veterans Day

Kiwanis Club members and Andover High students who have joined the new Key Club at the school helped get the Captain George L. Street Bridge ready for Veterans Day. On Saturday, Nov. 3 they brought brooms and enthusiasm to the Greenwood Road bridge overlooking Route 495 to give it its annual cleaning.

Every year, the Kiwanis Club of Greater Lawrence organizes this kind of event to coincide with Veterans Day. This was the fifth year it cleaned up the George L. Street Bridge. Street, who served in the Navy for 29 years, was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military honor, while commanding the submarine USS Tirante during World War II. He was the recipient of the Navy Cross, two Silver Stars and a Presidential Unit Citation recognizing the entire crew of the Tirante. His Pacific exploits inspired the 1958 movie, "Run Silent, Run Deep," which starred Clark Gable. The movie was based on a novel by Edmund "Ned"

Beach, Street's executive officer on the Tirante. Street lived in Andover for 30 years, until his death in 2000 at the age of 86. Helping with the clean-up Saturday were members of newly formed Andover High School Key Club Alex O'Rourke, Emily Wilson, Amy Bordogna, Rachel Major and Keara McCartney.

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

COMPILED BY SUSAN MCKELLIGET

100 Years Ago - Nov. 8, 1912

Buchan & Francis will close their store tomorrow afternoon from 12 to 6 o'clock to allow all hands to see the game. Will be open in the evening.

Miss Annie Buchan, head book-keeper at Marland Mills, entertained at a Hallowe'en party last Saturday evening the girls who are employed in the office of various branches. John Converse and H. Bradford Clarke entertained a number of their friends at a Hallowe'en party last Friday evening in the Converse barn, d'Arcy Road. Games suitable for the occasion were played, and dancing took place. Music was furnished by an orchestra composed of a harp and two violins from Boston. Refreshments were served.

Thanksgiving Eve the firemen hold their annual entertainment and ball. As usual, the Colombian orchestra will furnish the music, Gile and Wheeler will present "My Yankee Cousin" and the "Widder's Proposals."

The many friends of Mrs. George Germaine will be grieved to learn that she is confined to her home on Central Street with rheumatism.

From the list of names of those contributing to the Home for the Aged, which was published last week, the two following names were omitted: Mrs. John P. Torrey, Mrs. H.H. Tyer.

75 Years Ago - Nov. 5, 1937

A destroyed camp and a burned toe resulted from an early morning fire today at a camp owned by Donald McDonald on Rattlesnake Hill Road. The place had just been entirely remodeled, and the two workmen from Wilmington who had been doing the remodeling were sleeping in it. One of the men received a bad burn on his toe when he stepped on an ember on the way out.

The School Committee on Tuesday evening, lacking an opinion from the attorney general and the state department of education, voted to lay the matter of transportation of five Vale [Ballardvale] children to the parochial school on the table until the end of the school year, at which time it is expected that a report will be presented on the public school age requirement.

The annual Red Cross drive will start on Nov. 11, Armistice Day, and continue until Thanksgiving Day. The roll call headquarters will be located in the American Legion rooms where a telephone, Andover 1496, has been installed.

Miss Nan Lindsay was awarded an electric refrigerator on last Saturday evening at the conclusion of the Clan and Auxiliary Fair in Fraternal Hall.

50 Years Ago - Nov. 8, 1962

Andover held true to its traditions Tuesday, piling up majorities for most Republican candidates. And there was more-than-usual agreement on two ballot questions. An overwhelming "no" vote was recorded on the graduated income tax issue, and against the legislators' pay raises. Nearly 88 percent of the voters - 8,527 - trekked to the town's six polling places. And long after they had gone home, and probably to bed, election officers continued to count their ballots.

Pike School is planning to move into its new facilities by September 1963, according to an announcement this week coincidental with the signing of construction contracts. Headmaster William H. Harding, indicated that the total cost of the new structures is $700,000.

The Zoning Board of Appeals has closed a public hearing on the proposed 139-unit Ballard View mixed-income housing project amid controversy surrounding possible hazardous waste at the Ballardvale site. The ZBA will consider a report from Normandeau Engineering that recommends more soil tests be conducted on the land, which brothers Steven and James Feinberg hope to develop as condominiums. Andover High School Assistant Principal Wilbur Hixon is one of three finalists for the position of principal at Andover High. Hixon began his tenure in the town school system 29 years ago as a social studies teacher. Mary Lyman, director of personnel for the town, said the volunteer screening committee selected to review candidates interviewed seven semi-finalists last Saturday and chose three finalists based on those interviews.

'Andover's Got Talent' and generous heart

The Andover band Random Acts came in a strong second at Saturday's Andona talent competition, but will most likely be No. 1 in the hearts of Andover youth who will benefit from the show.

That's because the band ended the Andover's Got Talent event by making a donation of about $500 in scratch tickets.

One of the band members happened to win the "Magic Mic" raffle, which was a microphone stand covered with the scratch tickets. Just as the contestants were leaving the stage on Saturday, the band asked to make an announcement. Members came to the stage and "announced they had decided that each band member would be taking one scratch ticket from the prize and would be donating the rest of the scratch tickets and any winnings from them back to the Andona Society. It became evident through this 'Random Act' of kindness, where this band got its name," according to Andona member Colleen Goddard.

"It was a very successful event, but there was room for improvement, too," said Goddard on Monday of the first Andover's Got Talent. "At the end of the day, it was an incredibly fun event... I would definitely watch for Andover's Got Talent II."

Andona members were still scratching tickets Monday, and, while there was no million-dollar winner, the tickets earned Andona an additional $166.

Random Acts was founded by Andover's Eric Egerton and Andy Ducharme who have played music together for 20 years. The current lineup for Random Acts included Dave Giust on vocals and guitar and Jeff Bostic on drums.

The winner of the Andover's Got Talent competition was picked by the audience, but guests at the event had a tough decision, said Goddard. Only one vote separated the first and second place contestants.

The first place prize of $250 went to mother of two, R&B/Pop sensation Felicia Taylor.

Random Acts, an Andover classic rock cover band that often plays Park Street Pub, took second. Coming in third place was Andover's Kenny Chan and Alison LaTerza.

Goddard praised the work of "Philips Academy phenomenon Scott MacDonald and Ben Lagman aka MacDonald Showcase DJ & Lighting, who directed all of the sound and lighting for the event," and, Andover Selectman Dan Kowalski, who served as master of ceremony. "Andona contributes the enormous success of this event to these individuals," she said.

Alison LaTerza and Kenny Chan perform on stage during the fundraiser. This was the first year for the talent competition.

There was plenty of dancing during intermission and silent auction bidding during the Andona Society's fall fundraiser "Andover's Got Talent." Andona members also opened the evening with a "flash mob" dance.

Local UNICO chapter drives home charity

UNICO of Merrimack Valley, celebrating its 23rd year as a chapter of UNICO National, recently announced that it has raised and distributed over $450,000 to local charities during its years.

A charity golf tournament was held at the Haverhill County Club on Sept. 24 as the club's annual and only fundraiser. The event raised another $28,000.

The co-chairmen of the event, Larry Ardito and Al Torrisi and their golf committee worked tirelessly to make this event a success, according to a release.

"The weather couldn't have been more cooperative, since we enjoyed a perfect 75-degree New England summer day. What a spectacular way to raise money for a worthy cause and have fun too," said Ardito in a release.

According to Al Torrisi, "we distributed over $35,000 to organizations and individuals this past year alone. Some of the local charities include: Lazarus House, Boys and Girls Club of Lawrence, COR Unum, Bellesini Academy, Esperanza Academy, Ironstone Farm, Essex Art Center, Prof. Center for Child Development, Family Services, Lawrence History Center and Foster Kids of Merrimack Valley, in addition to St. Ann's Home."

"While we do have a great time playing golf, especially on such a beautiful day. It's only through the generosity, dedication and hard work from the golfers, members, volunteers and sponsors that really make the difference between success and failure. This is our only fundraiser, and it's very important to our club and to the benefactors of our efforts, that this event continues to raise the money we need to support the community," he said in a release.

UNICO Merrimack Valley had pledged $60,000 over the past three years for the St. Ann's Home capital campaign. Through a matching grant from the Peter Lynch Foundation, the total amount that was received by St. Ann's Home was $150,000.

St. Ann's Home has been providing services to disadvantaged children since 1925.

UNICO National is the largest Italian-American Service Organization in the United States.

'Landscape' focus at Essex Art through November

The Chester F. Sidell Gallery at Essex Art Center is presenting "Landscape," featuring paintings by Caleb Stone, Julia Purinton, and Eugene Quinn, through Nov. 30. An opening reception was held Friday, Oct. 26.

The gallery is located on the first floor of Essex Art Center at 56 Island St. in Lawrence. Gallery hours are weekdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and people can call for additional evening hours (978-685-2343). The gallery will be closed Nov. 12, and Nov. 21 to 23.

The center offered these biographies of the artists:

Caleb Stone studied at the Lyme Academy College of Fine Arts in Old Lyme, Conn. Since then has been regularly teaching workshops and classes, traveling and painting. He works in both watercolors and oils. He has been the recipient of numerous awards including the John Stobart Fellowship Award, the New England Heritage Award, the Wood Award for Excellence in Watercolor, the Land and Light Gold Medal, Best in Show Manchester by the Sea and most recently achieved Elected Artist at the Lyme Art Association.

Stone grew up in the art colony of Rockport and was exposed at an early age to plein air painting by his father Don Stone. His attraction to the French and American impressionists and choice of art as a career grew from and was nurtured by this environment. He currently resides on Cape Ann.

Julia Purinton studied fine arts at Harvard College and at the School for Visual Arts in NYC. After many years of corporate and residential mural commissions, her primary focus has shifted to landscape painting. Narrative rather than purely descriptive in intent, her work often elicits emotional responses to changing seasons and shifting light, her preoccupation with transience a reminder that the natural world is both cyclic and impermanent, and our experience of it both fleeting and enduring. Purinton regularly participates in group shows on the North Shore, open studio events in Boston, and her paintings can be seen at Chameleon in Newburyport, Mass.; Redmond Bennett Gallery in Dublin, N.H.; Carspecken Scott Gallery in Wilmington, Del., and Pandion Gallery, Fisher's Island, N.Y. Selected clients include the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Historical Society, Essex National Heritage Commission, the Trustees of Reservations, Essex County Greenbelt and The White House.

In the tradition of the tonalists, the luminists, and the artist-travelers of the Victorian Age, Eugene Quinn's work conveys truth and beauty found in the natural world. He paints outdoors in all seasons rendering the feeling of particular places at a particular moment be they grand or simple, in lands far away and on the street where he lives, moved by experiences foreign and familiar. Quinn earned degrees in fine art and art history at Providence College all the while pursuing his interests in science and architecture. Then after years of part time study at the Art Students League and the New York School of Visual Arts, he learned essential technical training from John Phillip Osborne at the Ridgewood Art Institute. Over the years he has won more than 50 awards at juried competitions across the country.

RECZEK: Musician gains inspiration from travel and new experiences in Andover during my high school years and there were even a few coffee houses set up through the school or through AYS [Andover Youth Services] that I took part in, but beyond that there was no real community built around it. After living in Burlington [Vt.] for four years, it became more obvious how much a music scene in town was lacking.

You spent some time in New Zealand?

I did. I [spent] five of the best months of my life living in New Zealand during a semester abroad. Not only did I do a lot of busking -- street performing -- down there, but my journeys and adventures down there gave me an endless supply of ideas for songs. New Zealand continues to be one of my greatest inspirations.

Family still here? What made you come back to Andover for the West Parish show?

After I graduated I started a post-baccalaureate pre-med program at UVM and moved back to Andover to finish it at UMass Lowell; this is my second and last year of that.

I chose to pursue West Parish as a venue because I wanted to be able to have a free, public venue for a concert of original music in Andover, something I have never really seen in all my time here. West Parish proved to be not only perfect for those needs, but to have amazing acoustics and other intangibles which suited it well to the situation.

So what's the grand plan? Do you plan to be a doctor or another medical professional who does the occasional gig on the side?

I'd like to go to medical school within the next few years. Between now and then I'll be looking to work for a while to start working on my ever-accumulating loans and interest. If I can work some travel into that it would be ideal, sort of a Kerouac or Steinbeck-type ideal behind the next few years while still not fleeing from the responsibilities of reality too much.

Music is the only real constant; I'll always have it. If something comes of it, great. If not, I have a pretty good game plan I'm always trying to make better.

show will continue through the end of January.

Illuminations is a rotating art exhibit housed in the Massachusetts General Hospital Cancer Center and many of its affiliate locations.

The exhibit is intended to offer enlightenment and encouragement to patients, families, staff and friends of the Cancer Center as they receive care, provide care, or accompany loved ones.

Illuminations has transformed generic waiting areas into a virtual art gallery of revolving exhibits that feature works by numerous regional and national artists, according to a release.

CONQUERING DEMONS

Therapist opens Eating Disorder Center on Main Street

By NEIL FATER
Editor

Karin Lewis has lost a parent. She's been a graduate student. She has suffered serious injuries and the death of a friend when a fourth-floor balcony collapsed. But she says the toughest thing she ever did was overcome anorexia nervosa.

"The thing I'm the proudest of is recovering from anorexia. I wear it like a badge," she said, noting she's had no issues with eating healthy for the past 17 years.

Lewis, a 1987 graduate of Andover High School and therapist, has returned to the area and opened the Eating Disorder Center of Andover, with co-owner and nutritionist Rhys Wyman. The center is at 68 Main St., above CVS.

"I think people have a misconception that once you have it, you always have it. That's a crock. You can fully recover," Lewis said. "I've been through the loss of a parent and I never returned to my eating disorder to get through it. People need to know they can get through [difficult patches] and not use an eating disorder."

Lewis' own personal story is this: After her years at Sanborn Elementary, West Junior High and Andover High, she went off to Emerson College to be a writer. While she believes she looked confident on the outside, she said she had issues with growing up, with her looks and with feeling that she did not belong. At 20, she decided she would make a real effort to lose about 10 pounds.

"I started losing weight and people noticed and started saying how great I looked. I was like, 'Really?' because I felt horrible inside," she said. Soon she was turning away food and over-exercising.

"I never felt like I was good enough.

Co-owners Karin Lewis and Rhys Wyman will have an open house tonight, Thursday, Nov. 8, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. to show their new treatment center to the community and potential clients. The Eating Disorder Center of Andover is at 68 Main St., Suite 5.

"We're very proud of our space. We're right above CVS. We're right here in town," said Lewis. "It's a very warm, non-judgmental environment. I just want people to see it. I think they'll have a very different idea of what therapy is like."

Last month, Lewis and Wyman hosted an open house for fellow health care professionals. Lewis is a therapist and Wyman is a dietitian who work with people with eating disorders.

OPEN HOUSE TONIGHT, NOV. 8

Then I got to college and became the best [at losing weight], until I abused it and it became an eating disorder," she said. "Other things were too difficult for me to look at. I thought I was very good at this and obviously went too far."

Lewis said that by the time people started to tell her she looked unhealthy it was too late. She couldn't stop herself from restricting food and exercising too much. Eventually, she collapsed, was taken to the hospital and was taken out of college.

"It was very different 20 years ago. There were no treatment centers," she said. "I struggled on my own to get through it. My family struggled on their own with it."

Eventually, with the help of therapy, she was able to realize she was focusing on her weight rather than dealing with the issues that were truly bothering her, such as a fear of having to grow up and fit in.

At 26, Lewis was on a balcony that collapsed and broke the bones in her face. The life-changing event sent her back to graduate school, where she quickly realized she wanted to focus on helping those with eating disorders.

Lewis met her co-owner, Wyman, the dietitian who works with people with eating disorders, about three years ago. One day at dinner, she told him about her plans to open a center. By the end of dinner, they were partners, as Wyman was excited by the idea of group therapy and being able to help more people with their nutrition, said Lewis.

"Clients adore him. They feel so safe with him," said Lewis.

Lewis lived in California for 17 years before returning to Massachusetts and opening a practice about two and a half years ago. She just completed the Department of Public Health survey that allows the new Eating Disorder Center of Andover to be a licensed facility.

Lewis believes that, because she can speak from personal experience, her clients can feel confident she understands, and that they can succeed.

"I wasn't afraid of dying of an eating disorder. I was afraid of living [as I was]," she said. Medical scares or people yelling at those with eating disorders won't change their behavior, said Lewis. But, day by day, people can learn how to deal with it.

"The eating disorder didn't start overnight and you can't resolve it overnight," said Lewis. "For me, it was a lot of therapy. Hence, that's why I'm a therapist."

"It's a torturous disorder. It's a debilitating disorder. And it doesn't have to be that way," said Lewis. "It's an emotional struggle and there shouldn't be any [judgment] associated with it."

John Anton's Cleaners earns international drycleaning award

For the second consecutive year, John Anton's Cleaners, 357 North Main St. in Andover, has earned the Seal of Approval for Quality Garment Cleaning and Customer Service.

The Massachusetts-based cleaner passed all the rigorous cleaning and customer service evaluations, according to a release. Earning the Seal of Approval signifies that John Anton's Cleaners has successfully removed a complex array of stains, maintains high quality cleaning standards and consistently demonstrates superior quality and customer service.

This international award program is administered by the Drycleaning & Laundry Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based group. To date, approximately 140 companies around the world have attained the Seal of Approval, according to the release.

"Finding a good cleaner who will consistently treat you like a valued customer shouldn't be a guessing game," Drycleaning & Laundry Institute spokesperson Mary Scalco said. The 24-year veteran of the cleaning industry noted,

"By becoming a Seal of Approval cleaner, John Anton's Cleaners proved there is a difference between quality cleaners and their competition. Now customers know where to find a cleaner who will treat them and their garments properly - every time."

Each year, Seal of Approval Drycleaners must renew their status with the program by successfully completing stain removal and cleaning performance tests. In addition, each business must meet other requirements such as continuing education, community service and offering superior customer service as evidenced by the company's standing with the Better Business Bureau.

The Drycleaning & Laundry Institute represents the interests of the cleaning industry, clothing manufacturers and consumer advisors in identifying those cleaning plants that provide the highest level of clothing care. The group began accepting applications for the Seal of Approval Award of Excellence for Quality Garment Care & Customer Service in 2005.

TOOTHPASTE FACTS

Before the invention of toothpaste in its modern form, the ancients formulated their own versions from the ingredients such as crushed eggshells and powdered pumice. It was not until the 1890s that Colgate introduced the first tube of toothpaste. By the 1950s, enamel-strengthening fluoride was added to toothpaste as an effective decay-preventative element. Today, whitening toothpastes are slightly more abrasive than regular toothpastes, which, along with ingredients like peroxide, help them more effectively remove stains. In any case, the primary purpose behind tooth-brushing is to remove plaque, which coats teeth on a daily basis. Unless this pale yellow biofilm is removed, it will continue to build up and harden, and acid produced by the colonized bacteria will attack tooth enamel.

With so many types and brands of toothpastes, how do you choose the one that is right for you? Your best bet is to speak with DENTISTRY BY DESIGN. After a comprehensive exam we can help you determine your toothpaste needs. Visit our office at 19 Barnard St. where our staff provides the very best care for you and your family. Contact us at 978-475-5333 and schedule your entire family a check-up. We take great pride in improving your smile and dental health.

P.S. The wavy layer of toothpaste that sits atop your toothbrush bristles is known as a "nurdle".

WORTH THE WAIT

Senior goes from JV backup to varsity star

BY DAVID WILLIS
Staff Writer

Liz Wait had reason to jump for joy Monday even before her unbeaten Andover volleyball team kicked off its post-season campaign with a win.

That was because, approximately an hour before game time, Wait was informed by coach George Sullivan she had been named one of the top 15 Division 1 players from across the state by the Massachusetts Coaches Association.

"It is honestly something I never dreamed would happen," said an overjoyed Wait. "I never thought I would be something that would be winning awards, even on my team. As couple years ago I wasn't a starter on the JV team."

Just over a year ago, Wait was scared she would not even make the varsity team during her junior year tryouts after spending two seasons on the bench with the JV team. But this season, Wait has emerged as one of the top volleyball players in the state, winning league co-MVP honors and leading her team to a 21-0 record through Monday.

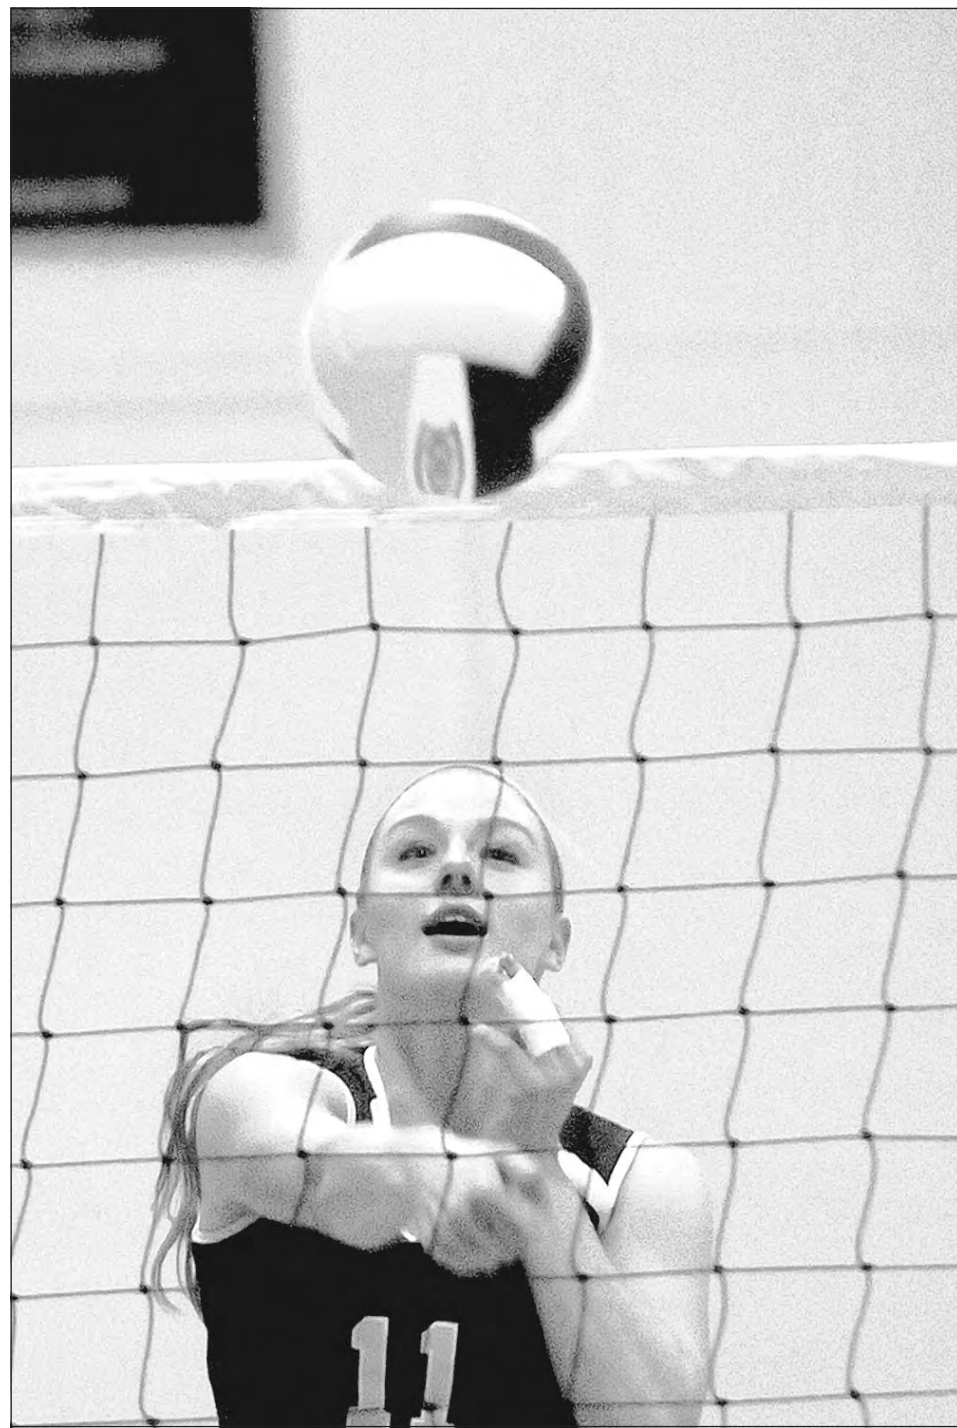

"She has come a long way," said Sullivan. "I was talking to her mother and Liz was really afraid she was going to be cut last year. But she has been so passionate and so dedicated to the game. She has been a dream to have."

After struggling to find playing time on the JV squad in her first two high school seasons, Wait knew she had her work cut out for her last summer when she prepared to try out for the powerhouse Golden Warrior varsity team.

"I had no idea what was going to happen, so I pushed myself with one goal in mind of making the team," she said. "I woke up early every morning and worked out very day, even when I wanted to sleep in. I played club volleyball all year. I told myself, even if I was just sitting on the bench, I wanted to be on the varsity team. And if I didn't make it I would know I gave it everything I had in my heart."

Once tryouts for the 2011 season kicked off, Wait immediately impressed the coaching staff.

"She came out and was ready to rock and roll," said Sullivan. "She had done so much work. Everyone was saying, 'Wow, this kid is great!' We knew we had to find a spot for this kid."

At the same time the Golden Warriors, as it turned out, were also looking to find a new middle hitter to replace graduated star Moira Cronin. Despite the fact that Wait had never played middle hitter before, playing outside and right side hitter throughout her career, and at 5-foot-8 standing shorter than a traditional middle hitter, the then-junior was given the opportunity to win the position.

"I was excited because I got to start with a clean slate with the coaches," she said. "Since I am shorter I had to learn it's a mental game. It's not all about how tall you are and how high you can jump."

"You see pictures of Central Catholic's (6-foot-1) Amanda Williams in the paper and her elbows are above the net. I had to learn about hitting to the open spots. But it also motivated me to jump higher because I am shorter."

Wait not only settled into the position, she excelled, earning All-MVC honors in her first varsity campaign. But that was just a preview of what Wait would accomplish this season.

Through the end of the regular season this fall, Wait led the Golden Warriors in kills (157), leading the team in all but five matches this season, overall blocks (101) and solo blocks (64). She was at her best against archrival Central Catholic, when she scored 17 kills and seven blocks in a key victory. That all while leading the team on a surprise unbeaten run. For her efforts, she was named Merrimack Valley Conference Division 1 co-Player of the Year last week, and this week took home the honors from the Mass. Coaches Association.

"It really is a dream come true," she said. "I never saw myself winning awards. I love volleyball and I always wanted to be a member of this team. I am so happy I have gotten to do that."

Wait and the rest of her team now hope to keep their perfect season alive with a run at the Division 1 state title.

"As good as we were I never thought we'd be undefeated," she said. "We may not have the best player we have ever had at certain positions, but we have lots of players that are willing to do anything they can to help the team. If we keep doing that and playing the way we can, who knows what we can accomplish."

Maggie D'Innocenzo continued her outstanding season by winning the 100 breaststroke (1:08.66) and swimming on the winning 400 freestyle relay, while Ashlee Korsberg took the 200 freestyle (1:54.38) and 500 freestyle (5:01.72), sister Alexa Korsberg won the 100 butterfly (1:01.20) and was second in the 200 freestyle (1:58.65) and both swam on the 400 freestyle relay.

After splitting their matchups in the regular season, Andover and Chelmsford battled to the finish in their Division 1 North quarterfinal matchup. But with no time left in overtime, the No. 4 Lions scored on a penalty corner to eliminate the two-time defending champion No. 5 Golden Warriors on Sunday 3-2.

Briana Smith and Meagan Keefe scored for the Warriors, but a golden opportunity to take the lead in the second half went for naught as Andover missed on a penalty stroke.

Keefe was a force up front, drawing several corners, while Weezie Gross and Jackie Torres dominated midfield play. Sweeper Emily Gibson also

Golden Warriors fall short in showdown with Lowell

BY DAVID WILLIS
Staff Writer

It's a rivalry that has delivered a trio of the most memorable finishes in the state in recent memory.

In the last three years, the Andover vs. Lowell matchup has produced an historic eight-overtime thriller and two more games that have been decided by touchdowns in the 70 seconds of play.

Unfortunately for Andover, the Golden Warriors ended up on the wrong end of the 2012 installment of this heart-stopping rivalry, as Lowell struck for a touchdown with 1:04 to play to earn a 42-35 victory last Friday.

Andover had taken the previous two clashes, including the 88-82 overtime classic two years ago and last year's 26-21 victory that current Brown University running back Andy Coke decided with a touchdown with 32 seconds remaining.

"This has been a great rivalry over the last few years," said Lowell coach John Florence. "Andover played a great game again, but we made a few more plays down the stretch."

Turnovers proved Andover's undoing.

The Golden Warriors lost five fumbles, and Lowell was able to take advantage.

"We told the kids that the only team that can beat us was ourselves," said Warriors coach E.J. Perry. "And the turnovers cost us. Sometimes you have those days."

Despite the struggles, Andover still looked in position for another dramatic victory.

After Lowell took the lead with 5:38 to play in the game, Andover struck right back.

C.J. Scarpa hit Will Heikinen on a 35-yard bomb, then a play later Scarpa connected with Cam Farnham for a 6-yard touchdown to tie the game.

Freshman kicker

Oliver Eberth booted his first career the extra point to give the Golden Warriors a 35-34 advantage.

But Lowell had a late rally of its own, and retook the lead with 1:04 to go in the contest.

Andover managed one last surge, with Scarpa hooking up with Farnham for a 17-yard gain to the Lowell 35-yard line with 52 seconds left.

But a sack and a personal foul penalty pushed the Warriors back to their 45, and Scarpa was sacked again before he could throw up a desperation Hail Mary on fourth down.

The loss made the Golden Warriors 8-1 on the season,

The Shockers rush the field after Taylor Edler's walk-off home run earned the team its fifth straight DCS Fall League Championship.

Shockers, Brewers take DCS fall softball titles

The Park Street Pub Brewers and the Cladagh/Pub Shockers each claimed a title in the Department of Community Services Fall Softball League for their respective divisions.

The Brewers defeated Broadcom in a 2-0 series sweep while the Shockers "settled a longstanding rivalry with the Misfits by defeating them 2-1 in the series at Recreation Park," according to DCS.

After the Misfits put up a nine-run inning in the top of the fifth, the Shockers retaliated with an eight-run bottom of the inning to stay within striking distance. Down 19-17 in the seventh, the Shockers' Jim Ogborn, who went 4-4 with four home runs on the night, knocked a two-run homer to even the score followed by Taylor Edler's walk-off home run that sealed the Shocker's fifth straight DCS Fall League Championship.

The DCS Softball League is a co-ed league run for adults during the fall and the spring. Contact Bill Letourneau at 978-682-2525, for more information or to start a team.

Saluting our four-legged veterans

On Nov. 11, Americans salute the veterans who served to protect our nation.

Did you know that we have four-legged veterans, too? This week, the Kid salutes the dogs who serve with our forces.

Dogs have partnered with people throughout history in times of peace and war.

The United States military did not use dogs on an official basis until 1942.

A group called "Dogs for Defense" was formed in the 1930s to promote the abilities of a canine force. After World War II began, this group helped the military train the dogs it needed.

At first, dogs were used for sentry duty. The military quickly realized that the dogs were also useful as scouts and messengers. Dogs were trained to find and rescue injured soldiers and downed airmen.

In later wars, dogs were used for sentry duty and on patrols. In 1971, military and law enforcement agencies began training dogs to sniff out drugs and explosives.

Dogs have been a vital part of our military efforts in the Middle East. In fact, the Navy SEAL team that went after Osama bin Laden included a dog named Cairo.

Dogs in the military are called Military Working Dogs, or MWD for short. The dogs are trained at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas.

Today, our fighting forces have about 2,300 working dogs. About 500 dogs are trained each year. The most popular breeds are German and Dutch shepherds and Belgian malinois.

Today's military dogs can be outfitted with life jackets, bullet-proof vests and surveillance equipment. The Kid will learn more about that next week.
