Decades of service come to a close

The elections Tuesday marked the end of an era for Andover and Richard J. "Dick" Collins, first hired to come to Andover as an athletic coach and history teacher in 1959. Collins' fifth and final School Committee term ended Wednesday with the swearing in of the election's winners. See story, Page 13.

Colby-Clements. "We feel that that plan is moving forward and we're moving forward on the right path. Five years was important so she could continue to shepherd that."

Superintendent of Schools Marinel McGrath has been given a five-year contract extension that will keep her at the helm while the town decides whether to expand Andover High and build a prekindergarten building. The School Committee voted 4-0-1 last Thursday with David Birnbach abstaining, due to concern about the length of the contract. McGrath's current contract is a three-year contract. It will expire June 30. State law allows contracts of up to six years.

"When Marinel came in, one of the first things she did was complete the strategic plan for the schools," said Chairwoman Paula

A copy of the contract was not immediately available at presstime. McGrath made more than $202,000 last year, with about $3,000 in retroactive pay. She is the highest paid Andover employee. Her new contract does not outline how much she will be paid. Committee members said they will

Incumbents Vispoli, Salafia reelected

BY DUSTIN LUCA AND JUDY WAKEFIELD

Fewer than 5 percent of Andover's voters turned out to return selectmen incumbents Alex Vispoli and Paul Salafia back to the board for three years.

Voter apathy was the largest conversation piece following yesterday's annual town elections.

Vispoli took 843 votes in the race with 1,054 cards cast, awarding him a fourth term. Salafia took second with 646 votes, earning him his first three-year term. He joined the board two years ago to finish off voters in Andover, only 4.61 percent of them voted yesterday.

Candidates, officials disappointed with turnout

Standing at the high school's field house moments before the polls closed, Bruce said of the 4.6 percent turnout: "I wouldn't interpret it as a positive. The first question is, 'Why?'" Bruce said the town's charter needs an update.

Saturday school added to Good Friday makeup day

BY DUSTIN LUCA

After a half day of school tomorrow, Good Friday, high school students will also have a full day of school on a Saturday in April to make up last week's additional snow day.

The School Committee had voted previously to hold a half day of school tomorrow, Good Friday for the high school students. A fresh vote on the issue was approved 3-2 in favor of keeping Good Friday as a half-day for all schools as a result of the March 19 snowstorm. The committee also added Saturday, April 27, as a full day of school for high school students.

The high school faces one more makeup day than the

Matchmaking site founded by Andover woman

With a marketing and publishing background and first-hand knowledge of knowing how tough it can be to date past 40, a divorced Andover matchmaker brings lots of useful job experience to her new online dating site.

know how important that very first line is."

That's where the trouble starts for date seekers. Sloan said clients are slow to open up about themselves. Getting them to write an interesting online profile is tough.

"We help them write profiles with questions like, 'What did you do last Saturday night?' Writing is so hard for so many people," Sloan said, "but everyone has a story to tell that reveals who they are."

For $195, clients get a one-hour consultation by telephone or Skype and the writing begins. Sloan said she and her team get client to "stand out in the crowded online arena."

"First impressions count," she said, a line she also uses on her website.

There are many dating sites available online, but Sloan said that initial consultation with clients is what makes her site the best.

"We chat with each client and find out who they really are and what makes them special," she said. For more information, go to info@itsadateprofiles.com.

League of Women Voters reschedules budget forum to April 10

The date for the League of Women Voter's annual budget forum has been changed to Wednesday, April 10. The League of Women Voters of Andover/North Andover says that residents can prepare for Annual Town Meeting by attending the forum on April 10 at 7 p.m. in the School Committee Room, 36R Bartlet St., Second Floor of the School Administration Building. The budget forum brings together leaders of town government to discuss issues and answer citizen questions about the FY 2014 budget.

"Jon Stumpf, Finance Committee, will provide an overview of the key drivers of revenues and expenses and discuss components of the budget. Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski and Superintendent Dr. Marinel McGrath will present notable changes in anticipated revenues for FY2014 and look at specific cost increases as well as efficiencies and cost reduction efforts. Paul Salafia, Chair of the Board of Selectmen, and Paula Colby-Clements, Chair of the School Committee, will discuss the general budget situation and look at issues requiring resolution prior to Town Meeting," according to the League. "Each year, the League organizes this opportunity for residents of Andover to interact directly with town leaders in order to learn more about the budget, ask questions, and voice concerns in advance of Town Meeting."

The forum will be televised live and taped for rebroadcast on Andover TV, Comcast Channel 99 and Verizon Channel 43.

Residents may make presenters aware of concerns they would like addressed at the forum by emailing questions in advance. Additional questions will be taken from those who attend in person and can be emailed in during the forum. Whether you plan to attend in person or watch from home, send your questions to: VoterServiceAndover@lvw-andovers.org.

Rep. Lyons calls for state-level reform, not spending

State Rep. James Lyons of Andover has joined fellow Rep. Marc Lombardo of Billerica in calling for Governor Deval Patrick "to show his own political courage to end political patronage in his administration."

In a press release the two say that under the Patrick Administration, there has been an explosion of six-figure patronage jobs.

"Governor Patrick calls his $2 billion dollar tax hike 'a generational responsibility.' Governor Patrick has been irresponsible in his oversight of the tax dollars of the hard working families in the Commonwealth," Lyons said in the release.

"We need reform in state government, not unending tax hikes," said Lyons. "Every day news reports chronicle the scandals in the administration's drug labs, lack of oversight of pharmaceutical manufacturing, and political job hires. It's time to put a halt to these failures."

New IRS YouTube video

With the April 15 tax filing deadline approaching, the Internal Revenue Service created a new YouTube video to provide taxpayers more details and tips to check on their tax refund. The new video, How to Use the Where's My Refund?, offers in-depth information about how the redesigned "Where's My Refund" tool works on IRS.gov, according to Media Relations Specialist Peggy Riley.

The IRS expects this video will also be a helpful resource for taxpayers. The refund video is one of several YouTube videos the IRS created to help taxpayers navigate this year's filing season.

Townsman has Editorial Writer, Reporter of Year for national chain

The Andover Townsman editor and its full-time reporter both received awards in the annual Best Of CNHI journalism competition for 2012, the paper's parent company announced this week.

In the contest's non-daily division, Editor Neil Fater was named Editorial Writer of the Year for the national company, and Reporter Dustin Luca was named Reporter of the Year for entries published during the 2012 calendar year.

CNHI (Community Newspaper Holdings Inc.) is an Alabama-based media company that publishes community newspapers, websites and niche publications in more than 130 communities in 23 states. The annual Best of CNHI competition recognizes the works of the national company's journalists.

Luca also was named Reporter of the Year for 2011. The Andover Townsman won CNHI Newspaper of the Year in its division in both 2011 and 2009.

To win his award, Fater submitted six editorials, including those covering topics such as the town's handling of blight properties, the Town Yard project and the process through which a principal was hired for Andover High School.

Luca also submitted six stories in his entry, including news coverage of contract talks between the School Committee and Andover Education Association, the hiring of Andover

High School Principal Chris Lord and feature profiles focusing on residents and businesses.

Several of the Andover Townsman's sister publications were also recognized in this year's round of awards. The Eagle-Tribune was named "Newspaper of the Year" in the contest's largest circulation category, to honor the newspaper staff last won in 2006.

The paper also won the Public Service award for the work of Reporter

Shawn Regan, who covered a former state trooper who struck and snapped a utility pole, drove from the scene with his airbags deployed, and was later found sitting by the side of the road in his SUV and smelling of alcohol. He was not arrested at the scene nor charged in the case until the paper disclosed the preferential treatment, which eventually led to disciplinary action against four police officers.

The Eagle-Tribune's

Fran Landry won Designer of the Year honors in the non-dailies categories for her work with the Derry News.

The Gloucester Daily Times won first place for its magazine Cape Ann and Andrea Holbrook won Designer of the Year in the small dailies category.

SCHOOLS: Good Friday, Saturday classes to make up for snow days

rest of the town's schools because a gas leak on Jan. 10 shut just that school for a day.

Assuming there are no more days lost to emergencies or inclement weather, the school year will end for all students on Friday, June 28 — the last day possible as ironed out under the School Committee's contract with the department's teachers union.

Though the vote passed, during discussion, committee and audience members focused heavily on the idea of using a religious holiday to hold school, even with an early release.

Members David Birnbach and Dennis Fergie opposed the Good Friday proposal. Birnbach also voted against it in the board's earlier 4-1 vote a few weeks ago.

During discussions, two possible Saturdays were targeted as being good days to hold school: April 6 and 27. Birnbach and Fergie proposed using both of those days as makeup days in lieu of one Saturday and Good Friday.

Annie Gilbert opposed idea

Assuming there are no more days lost to emergencies or inclement weather, the school year will end for all students on Friday, June 28.

however, largely because of the prior vote having already taken place. Because the School Committee already told the community that Good Friday would be a school day, it would be better to just stick with it, she said.

Town Moderator Sheila Doherty advocated for changing Good Friday back to a day off, saying she preferred "that we not go down the road of using Good Friday."

"As a community, Andover has always respected the holy days of its citizens, regardless [of their beliefs]," she said. "This is a terribly difficult situation."

Kerry Costello, Andover Education Association president, said she remembered one instance of the schools having class on Good Friday, so doing so this year wouldn't establish a precedent.

Costello added that there are several other religions followed by Andover residents, and not all of these groups have their religious days off.

"We need to be cognizant that there are other religions that celebrate holidays that are not given any exception," she said. "The Greek Orthodox, they celebrate Good Friday — but not on March 29."

"We could go down the list of other religions," she added. "Sometimes in the conversations, other religions get left aside."

One issue going into the prior 4-1 vote was whether too many faculty would put in for the day off to allow for religious observance. The deadline to take the day off was last Wednesday, March 20.

Forty-eight school staff put in for the day off, and to cover those positions, 28 substitute teachers were needed, according to Superintendent Marinel McGrath. The district was able to find 28 substitutes to fill the holes.

Moments before supporting Good Friday as a half day of school, School Committee Chairwoman Paula Colby-Clements said the idea of having school on a religious holiday wasn't a controversial one for Andover families.

"I'm feeling like our decision has to be based on what we think the will of the community is," she said. "I was very surprised at how few emails we received over that decision."

In fact, "what I'm hearing more from folks is they're more concerned about [what we do with] the calendar going forward, as opposed to how we're going to resolve the immediate problem," she said.

West Middle students team for Academic Bowl win

West Middle School became two-time reigning champions of the Greater Lawrence Education Collaborative's Academic Bowl.

The Academic Bowl is a yearlong competition between middle school students representing every public middle school in Andover, Lawrence, Methuen and North Andover as well as three parochial schools (Bellesini Academy in Lawrence, St. Augustine School in Andover and St. Michael School in North Andover). Students from one Andover school work with students from another community to form a team.

West Middle School and their Lawrence partner school - Parthum Middle School won 12 tournament points this year, tying for first place with the Wetherbee School in Lawrence and St. Michael School in North Andover.

"This collaboration nurtures the social and cultural bonds between communities; challenges, develops and showcases students' skills and talents; and

Matches were comprised of hands-on table challenges, where the students worked to solve physical challenges such as testing velocity of an object to solving scrabble challenges.

There were three buzzer rounds where students matched wits in a quiz-show format.

How to ease your child's fears

Parent to Parent speaker deals with kids' anxiety, phobias

Parents looking to help their children with fears can hear advice from an expert next Tuesday

Parent to Parent is hosting the talk "Decreasing and Preventing Anxiety: How to Talk to Your Anxious Child" on April 2, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the West Middle School auditorium on Shawsheen Road.

While childhood fears and worries are a normal part of growing and developing, excessive worrying and anxiety in kids and parents on the rise, according to event organizers.

"In our world today, children and adolescents are commonly exposed to traumatic experiences that they then need to make sense of. At times, our media outlets, family environments, and even the school playground milieu may all contribute to a child's sense of safety (or lack thereof)," according to the group. "These factors, in addition to a child or adolescent's temperament and genetic wiring, all play a crucial role when combined with their caregiver's parenting styles."

Parent to Parent believes this talk will help parents to see if their approach is helping or hindering their child's progress.

The speaker, Lynn Lyons, lives near Concord, N.H., where she maintains a private practice as a clinical social worker. Lyons specializes in the treatment of anxiety disorders in children and adults, which can include generalized anxiety, phobias, social anxiety and performance anxiety, said Parent to Parent.

This talk is appropriate for parents with children of all ages, according to organizers.

"Whether your child is stressed about school performance, friendships, or simply wary of new social situations, [Lyons] will provide you with specific techniques and concrete examples of how we as parents can guide our children through these tricky situations," according to a release.

Waste watchers: High Plain El. kids look to cut trash

BY CATHERINE BRAVO AND ROSIE SCOTT
High Plain Elementary Students

weighed 7 pounds, the compostables weighed 64 pounds, the liquids 12, and excess trash weighed 20 pounds.

Editor's note: The following, edited article was sent by Andover elementary school students who are members of the Hawk Talk newspaper at High Plain Elementary.

High Plain Elementary School students are trying to waste less food at lunch time, with a goal of zero waste.

The elementary school has adopted the same composting and recycling program that is being used at Andover High and Wood Hill Middle schools.

The effort started with a waste audit on Monday, Feb. 25. A group called the Earth-Watch Committee at High Plain Elementary sorted the school's trash into five categories: trays, recyclables, compostables, liquids and trash. The trays weighed 9 pounds, the recyclables

By sorting their trash, students report that they are reducing their waste by 80 percent.

High Plain's third-, fourth-, and fifth-graders started composting and recycling on Monday, March 4. They will be followed by kindergarten, first, and second grade in early April.

Compostables get picked up twice a week and taken to Brick Ends Farm in Hamilton, Mass., for large-scale composting. Students have to be careful not to cross-contaminate the compost with plastic.

Instead of using Styro-foam trays, the school has started using compostable trays. This has been an easy transition; last year, a Girl Scout troop at the school cleaned and recycled Styro-foam trays.

Vicissitudes of a spelling bee

Andover community members enjoyed the typically entertaining adult spelling bee last Friday, sponsored by the Andover Fund for Education.

For whatever reason, teams in the third round seemed to have the toughest opportunities, yet succeeded in spelling an impressive number of words.

Before pronouncing the 10th word of the round, "legerdemain," reader Stephen Murray, principal of West Middle School, said "I was hoping we wouldn't get to this word."

Two words later as he pronounced "eremology" and read that it means a study of desert features, he mouthed "Oh my gosh!"

West Elementary School's team, "West Spellementary" won the round and went on to win the championship. The winning word was subboreal.

Gone, not forgotten

The honors continue for the boys gymnastics team at Andover High School – even though there is no more MIAA-supported team.

The team won the state championship last month just as the sport was being cut by the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association. Seven high schools in the state — including AHS — had to end their MIAA boys gymnastics programs. MIAA said there were too few male gymnasts for the sport to continue in its current form.

But Coach Steve Sirois said town gymnastics pride runs deep and the accolades are continuing. AHS boys gymnast team members were expected to be honored yesterday, Wednesday, March 27, at 7 p.m. at Orange Leaf on Park Street.

The team was to arrive at the yogurt shop in a limousine driven by Garrett Katter, Sirois said. They were to enjoy a free frozen yogurt, and the public was invited to stop by and meet the champs.

"The town is very proud of this team," Sirois said.

Buy running gear, support research

A "Ladies Night" fundraiser to help two Andover mothers running the Boston Marathon to raise money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation will be held at the Boston Running Company on Main Street next Thursday, April 4 from 8 to 10 p.m.

Sue Kiley and Ellen Mcglynn will be running the Boston Marathon (again) and chose to run for JDRF, because their neighbor's son Gavin was diagnosed almost three years ago. These two women and Gavin's mom, Mimi LeBrun, are hosting the fundraiser.

The store is providing a 20-percent discount, and 10 percent of proceeds will go to JDRF, according to LeBrun.

"I've contacted other Diabetes moms in Andover and we have put together a slideshow/videos of our children living with Type 1 Diabetes. This is exciting for us to be able to get the word out and build community awareness," reported LeBrun. "Many local businesses have donated raffle items, food, flowers, etc."

The one Massachusetts hospital recognized three times for nursing excellence.

Journeys in Home Care

Darcie Trudeau, OTR-L, Occupational Therapist

Dominic continues home occupational therapy

Dominic was continuing to use MYOMO, a new neuro-robotic device, to strengthen his right arm weakened by his stroke. At each visit Dominic's arm is stronger and he is able to complete more activities on his own, like putting on his shirt and jacket.

When I met Dominic, he was worried about being too much of a burden on his daughter. He couldn't make his own lunch or take care of himself like before. During today's visit Dominic and I worked on learning different ways of maneuvering around the kitchen. I showed him how to use a reacher to get a cup from the floor, and helped him arrange items he frequently used in the refrigerator to be within easy reach. He learned to use his strong left arm to fill a kettle to make tea. We tried different techniques and adaptive equipment to help him safely carry objects while maintaining his balance and accomplishing the tasks that were important to him. Dominic had to concentrate on each step and every motion of the activity. Again and again we practiced. It was hard work, but by the end of my visit he was more comfortable and confident in the kitchen. "You'll be just fine Dominic," I said. "Just wait 'til you hold that new great granddaughter of yours. All this work will pay off then."

Since Dominic still needed help getting in and out of the shower, dressing and going up and down stairs, I made arrangement for a home health aide. A home health aide would help him with those tasks so that his daughter could go to work without worry.

Next week: Speech therapy begins.

Better communicating schools' plan will serve all well

The Andover School Committee has selected its leader for the next five years, extending the contract of Superintendent Marinel McGrath. It has a strategic plan. It stood up to the teachers union leadership, creating a contract that is better for taxpayers and should allow for a little more money to be spent on new ideas instead of the status quo.

What it needs now is community support for its future plans, which will only come from an understanding and knowledge of them.

For the Andover Public Schools to truly reach their full potential again, the whole community needs to be engaged.

The School Committee missed an opportunity to involve the community in the schools by not actively seeking input as part of its decision to extend the superintendent's contract. Hiring the superintendent is one of the most important things the committee does. The committee followed the law and posted its executive session agendas. But few people are scouring executive meeting agendas to learn what the committee is discussing in meetings that they cannot attend. The committee could have provided a better opportunity for Andover people to offer comments about what they would like to see from the town's school leader. If nothing else, people would have felt more a part of the process, which could have created more support for future plans and budgets. More feedback might shape a plan to best reflect the community's desires.

We've said before that Andover schools are at their best when teachers, parents and other community members are all pulling in the same direction for the students. Historically, Andover residents with and without school-age children have been big supporters of education, voting to approve large budgets and construction projects.

One bellwether of how the schools are viewed in the community is the Andover Fund for Education's annual adult spelling bee, which raises money to support teachers' special projects. Last year, for the first time in its 15-year history, the bee was not held. This was because there was so much disappointment around the teachers contract negotiation that few were interested in the event. The bee's cancellation was the ultimate sign that the Andover school community was fractured.

This year, the bee was no less a sign of the current state of affairs. There was an AFE Spelling Bee, and the enthusiasm in the room was high. But most of the teams were Andover school teams, with only a handful of teams made up of community members such as members of town service clubs. Previous years had more teams from the community at large.

For the Andover Public Schools to truly reach their full potential again, the whole community needs to be engaged. We hope that with the superintendent now signed for the next five years, a strategic plan in place, and a teachers contract resolved, the school system will focus more on communicating its goals to the greater community. Now is the time. We'd like to see dozens of community members involved in the bee next year, and, more importantly, involved in the schools throughout the year.

WEB QUESTION

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION

School Superintendent Marinel McGrath has a new, five-year contract. Is that amount of time appropriate for the schools system's leader? Too long? Not enough?

■ TOO LONG: Most unions and employees get less than five years and go to negotiations faster. That should be the case here.

■ JUST RIGHT: McGrath needs time to enact her strategic plan, and five years gives her a chance to dig into it substantially.

■ NOT ENOUGH: The maximum allowed is six years. The School Committee should have offered that to maximize McGrath's potential.

■ I don't know, or I have no opinion.

LAST WEEK'S QUESTION

Last week, we focused on the frequent snowy weather hitting Andover as spring officially started and asked you, "on a scale of 'OK with it' to 'ripping my hair out,' how tired are you of winter?"

26 web readers weighed in, and their responses were:

■ I'm ripping my hair out. Go, global warming!: 27 percent.

■ It was nice while it was in season. Now it is spring: 23 percent.

■ I'm OK with it. What's the big deal with a little frozen water?: five votes, 19 percent.

■ Enough snow already! Haven't we seen enough?: five votes, 19 percent.

■ If I see one more snowflake, I'm moving: three votes, 12 percent.

Passover: The questions we ask

Rabbi Robert S. Goldstein

Temple Emanuel of Andover

During his first few weeks at a new congregation, a newly ordained rabbi grew curious and slightly irritated at what appeared to be a tradition unique to the community. Each week when a certain prayer was said in the service, half the congregation would rise and the other half would remain seated. Those standing would glare in disgust at those seated, and those in their seats would scowl at the people standing.

The eager young rabbi, wanting to make peace among his people and bring some decorum back to services, suggested that they resolve the dispute once and for all.

A representative from each faction was chosen, and along with the rabbi they visited the oldest member of the congregation, now living in a local nursing home. The man was frail, but his mind was sharp and his memory was clear. The delegate from the "standers" asserted, "Wasn't it always our custom to stand for this prayer?"

"No," said the wise old gentleman. "That was not the tradition."

"Then we are supposed to sit," proclaimed the representative from the "sitters," a sound of victory in his voice.

"No," said the sage. "That was not the tradition."

At that point both men resumed their argument exactly where they had left off.

The old man looked at the two bickering men and declared, "That's the tradition."

The richness of Judaic tradition and the endurance of the Jewish people have less to do with a strict adherence to ancient customs and more to do with a general discontent with the status quo and a never-ending search for truth; a quest fueled by the questions we ask and the answers we seek.

Jews the world over are in the midst of the week-long celebration of Passover. The holiday began last Monday night, March 25, with the Passover Seder, defined by many as being the classic Jewish experience. The Seder opens with four questions asked by the youngest participant at the table. The time-honored ritual continues as the leader reads through the haggadah, answering each of the child's questions while family and friends experience the Exodus story by tasting the Israelites' suffering: their tears (salt water), the bitterness of their servitude (horseradish)—even the mortar they used to build Pharaoh's store-cities (chopped apple and nut salad).

But the story does not end there. Each year, we conclude the Seder with the words: L'shanah ha'bah-ah b'Yrushalayim...Next year in Jerusalem. This is less a geo-political statement and more a call to action. It gives voice to our cultural DNA, expressing dissatisfaction with the injustice and oppression that still exist in our world and the hope that the questions we ask of ourselves will inspire us to work toward Tikkun Olam, the repair of the world our faith requires of us.

The world is in constant motion. Styles change, sensibilities and customs come in and out of vogue. And what is right for one generation may be wrong for the next.

Some values, though, are timeless. Every human being deserves to live without fear, released from the bondage of poverty and deprivation. This is a truth that never changes. So too are the questions we ask: what can we do to make the world a more peaceful and just place for all who live on this earth? Those are the questions that are eternal and worth arguing about.

Rabbi Robert Goldstein is the rabbi of Temple Emanuel on Haggets Pond Road in Andover.

Leave police dept, in civil service

Editor, Townsman:
The town of Andover Board of Selectmen's legal maneuver to remove the Andover Police Department from the Massachusetts Civil Service system is outrageous, illogical and self-serving. The selectmen desire unwarranted, subjective and complete control over what the police officers do while performing their many and difficult duties and total silence from the Police Department members.

The citizens of Andover deserve an exceptionally professional Police Department that is under the restraint of Civil Service. Civil Service administers to the members of the police department promotional examinations. Civil Service administers entrance examinations to citizens and other important services to the town. The Civil Service examinations are designed by professionals especially for the police service. Civil Service professionalized the police services in this Commonwealth, and the police service in the town of Andover.

The selectmen in their effort to remove the Police Department from Civil Service is against the board's ubiquitous management policy to reduce the town's operating budget. i.e., the selectmen voted to reduce the budget by turning off street lights. If the decision to withdraw from Civil Service is favorable to the selectmen's wishes, the town will have to employ a firm to design and administer examinations, another needless expense. The Feb. 28 Townsman newspaper, in its editorial on consultant fees printed, "Officials might consider whether they should spend taxpayers' money on them [consultants] less frequently."

The Civil Service system removed politics from the police service in Andover. In the event the selectmen has their way, they could subjectively select who was going to be a police officer or the police officers who would be promoted in town. If some citizens had a son or daughter who wanted to be a police officer in Andover, they would have to befriend some selectmen, the town manager or the chief of police; campaign contributions inter alia are always helpful.

The Board of Selectmen's desire to remove the Police Department from the Civil Service is similar to hiring an outside contractor to perform certain duties at Spring Grove Cemetery.

In the Spring Grove Cemetery case, the selectmen placed citizens in danger of being a victim of certain crimes and civil actions in torts. The Board of Selectmen by taking the Police Department out of Civil Service would place the citizens at risk of civil actions in torts. The outsourcing of the employment positions did not improve the cemetery and removing the police department from Civil Service does not improve the police service to Andover.

If the citizens of Andover want a Police Department that is subjectively and baselessly controlled by the Board of Selectmen and the town manager, they should contact the selectmen and tell them to secede from the Civil Service system. If the citizens of Andover want a Police Department that is professional and enforces the Massachusetts General Laws fairly, evenly and in accordance with the equal protection clause of the fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution they should contact the selectmen and tell them to that the police department needs to be under the restraint of Civil Service.

Night of fun, fundraising and some darn good spelling

"Subboreal," which means "very cold, nearly frigid," was the winning word at the Andover Fund for Education's 15th Andover Spelling Bee last Friday night. It allowed West Elementary School's "Spellementary" team to freeze out the other three teams in the finals to become the 2013 champions. Spellementary team members Kelly Doherty, Tracy Galat, Viji Menon, and Martha Tubinis won the championship round after a lively and light-hearted contest during which they competed against 10 other school teams as well as seven community teams.

The other finalists were the LexicoLeagues, a team of League of Women Voters members; the South Elementary Beastly Spellers; and the West Middle School "Westwords" team, also referred to in the program as the Spell Raisers.

Sanborn Elementary School was awarded the Spirit Trophy, given to the school supported by the most enthusiastic fans. Another West Elementary School team, "The Sting," won the trophy for Best Team Costume.

A popular annual fundraiser, the AFE Bee offers local schools and community organizations an opportunity to support educational innovation in the Andover Public Schools by entering teams of four adult spellers. Many local students come to watch the competition and cheer loudly for favorite teachers. Before the championship round, elementary school teams march around the auditorium in a free-wheeling and exuberant "Spirit Parade."

Live music was provided by Left Hand Blue, a local rock band featuring former Andover High students Matt Minigell and Carissa Johnson and current AHS student Sean Duggan.

All proceeds from the Spelling Bee fund AFE's innovation mini-grants to Andover Public School educators who propose creative classroom projects designed to reinforce and supplement the core curriculum.

'Genius' season to close with chamber concert April 7

Free to those 18 and younger

Concluding its year-long "Portraits of Genius" Season, Andover Chamber Music will offer works for harp, strings, clarinet and flute, by Debussy and Ravel.

"These two composers created a new tonal language that has been called a musical counterpart to the Impressionist paintings and Symbolist poetry. They are considered the most influential French composers of the early 20th century," according to a release. "Both were grand originals in the history of music, visionaries who dreamed a new world of sound and then brought it into being."

Principal harpist of the Boston Symphony, Jessica Zhou will make her Andover Chamber Music debut for this concert in which harp plays a prominent role. She'll be joined by five other internationally acclaimed string players hailing from Italy, Sweden, Australia, and France, who have performed as soloists with major symphonies.

There will be two performances: April 7, at the West Parish Church in Andover, at the intersection of Route 133, Reservation Road and Shawsheen Road; or in a Brookline home on Easter Sunday

Long before Antonio Banderas brought a new Zorro to the screen, Douglas Fairbanks Sr. starred in the first Zorro film, "The Mark of Zorro" (1920), which will be screened with live music on Wednesday, April 3 at 7 p.m. at the Rogers Center for the Arts, Merrimack College, 315 Turnpike St. in North Andover.

See the one that started it all

Original silent 'Zorro' to screen at Merrimack College

It was the original swash-buckling blockbuster — a film that turned actor Douglas Fairbanks into Hollywood's first-ever action hero. Now, people can see the silent film just as audiences did back in 1920, on the big screen and with live music to accompany it.

"The Mark of Zorro" will once again fill the silver screen next Wednesday night, April 3 at the Rogers Center for the Performing Arts on the campus of Merrimack College, on the Andover-North Andover line. The screening, the latest in the Rogers Center's silent film series, will feature live accompaniment by Jeff Rapsis, a composer who specializes in creating scores for silent films. Rapsis says he achieves a traditional movie score sound for silent film screenings by using a digital synthesizer to reproduce the texture of the full orchestra. Admission is free and open to the public.

The program will be preceded by a discussion of the film by noted author and historian Christopher DiGrazia that will start at 6:30 p.m.

"The Mark of Zorro," a major hit when first released, tells the story of young Don Diego Vega, the son of a wealthy ranch owner in Spanish California of the early 19th century. Witnessing the mistreatment of the poor by rich landowners and the oppressive colonial government, Don Diego assumes the identity of "Señor Zorro," a masked figure of great cunning and skill, and vows to bring justice to the region.

The film stars Douglas Fairbanks Sr., who until "Zorro" had focused on playing traditional all-American leading roles in romantic comedies. The film launched Fairbanks on a series of historical adventure films that went on to rank among the most popular spectacles of the silent era, including "The Three Musketeers" (1921) and "Robin Hood" (1922). The original Zorro film was so popular it inspired one of Hollywood's first big-budget sequels, "Don Q, Son of Zorro" (1925), also starring Fairbanks.

Fairbanks, one of the silent screen's most popular leading men, was the inspiration of the character George Valentin in "The Artist," the recent Oscar-winning Best Picture.

Critics have praised "The Mark of Zorro" for its tight story, fast pace, and exciting action sequences, which include many stunts performed by Fairbanks himself. Steven D. Greydanus of the Decent Films Guide wrote that the silent Zorro "...contains some of the most jaw-dropping stunts I've ever seen this side of Jackie Chan." Film writer Leonard Maltin described it as "non-stop fun."

This genre-defining swash-buckler was the first movie version of the Zorro legend. The story has since been remade and adapted many times, most recently in 1998 as "The Mask of Zorro" starring Anthony Hopkins and Antonio Banderas.

"The Mark of Zorro" was the first film released by the newly formed United Artists studio, formed in 1920 by Fairbanks with fellow silent film superstars Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, and director D.W. Griffith. The silent version of "Zorro" also played a key role in the formation of the DC Comics Batman character; in the original 1939 story, a young Bruce Wayne sees "Zorro" on the same night that his parents are later murdered, which leads him to adopt Zorro's mask and cape as a basis for his own transformation into Batman.

"The Mark of Zorro" will be screened on Wednesday, April 3 at 7 p.m. at the Rogers Center for the Arts, located on Walsh Way on the campus of Merrimack College. Admission is free. For more information, call the Rogers box office at 978-837-5355.

ELECTION: Low voter turnout causes concern for candidates, officials

"If anything, this should be a signal that voters aren't involved at the local level," he said. "We should be looking at our charter and our form of town government."

Town Clerk Larry Murphy said he "didn't expect a big turnout, but I frankly hoped for something better than this."

"There was only one race, and you had two incumbent selectmen against a non-incumbent challenger," he said. "That didn't seem to draw a lot of public attention."

There were no challengers for School Committee, Housing Authority, moderator or Pynchard Free School trustee.

Even those who won the selectmen's race didn't seem enthusiastic about the turnout.

"I believe the selectmen race is one of the most important races to every citizen, because it is so direct," Salafia said. "When is the last time a U.S. senator had a direct effect on every citizen? This vote should be very important to them, and I'm discouraged that the turnout is so low."

"When we talk about what could have been, I would say there are people that didn't even know there was an election today," Vispoli said. "How do we notify [the public of the election] or get the word out?"

Vispoli said local media was partially to blame for that. Salafia extended his concerns to a lack of candidate forums that, in previous years, were key avenues for those in the race to project their platforms.

While there are normally three or four forums before a town election, only the League of Women Voters hosted the candidates this year, according to Salafia.

Even the voters who came out to the polls had something to say about the turnout.

"There is only one contested race, so it's not that surprising that people didn't turn out," Peach Tree Path resident Dan Ossoff said, "but I wish people would turn out to vote."

"I believe the selectmen race is one of the most important races to every citizen, because it is so direct. When is the last time a U.S. senator had a direct effect on every citizen? This vote should be very important to them, and I'm discouraged that the turnout is so low."

Paul Salafia, selectman

Winners talk of future progress

But that isn't to say Vispoli and Salafia were disappointed with the outcome of the election.

Both said they were humbled by the voter confidence they received, and they're eager to continue the work they've done on the board in previous years and continuing the initiatives they've championed while on the board.

"We've got some very significant challenges ahead of us," Vispoli said. "One is to finally solve the Town Yard issue at a reasonable cost. We've got several facilities that need attention."

Salafia said he plans to help the town arrive at a Town Yard solution and to be there as the Cormier Family Youth Center begins construction.

He also hopes to "re-energize the I-93 project," he said, calling attention to the tri-town effort to build a new Interstate-93 interchange on the corner of Andover. "If we can re-energize that, that would be great."

Marilyn Fitzgerald, Andover representative for the Greater Lawrence Technical School's school board, said she voted for Vispoli and Salafia because "I feel the two incumbents have done a very good job."

Ossoff also supported the incumbents, saying "they're well-intentioned people that are trying to do the best they can for the town."

Ballardvale Road resident Linda Lecomte said she voted for Bruce "just to shake things up a bit. He has run a couple times. He is just not the status quo."

Speaking to the 305 votes he received, Bruce said he was "fine with that number votes. And, I'd like to thank those voters."

Yesterday marked the fourth time Bruce has run, and he plans to return for a fifth shot at the board next year.

"I think the board has a lack of intent. It's self-serving and about special interests," he said.

Colby-Clements leads school race

Of the other four races on the ballot, School Committee incumbent Paula Colby-Clements led the two-seat contest for the committee with 748 votes. Candidate Barbara L'Italien, the lone challenger in the race, took the second seat with 657 votes.

Three other races were on the ballot, each for one seat and each with one candidate. Sheila Doherty, an incumbent for moderator, received 823 votes to return to her position for this year. Under the Housing Authority, candidate Janice Burkholder received 787 votes. For the Trustees of Pynchard Free School, candidate Randall Hanson received 811 votes.

Boys climb Scouting ranks after overnight event

Members of Troop 76 went to sleep last Friday as boys. Shortly after they woke up, they became Boy Scouts.

On Friday night, March 22, into the early hours of the morning, Scouts of Ballardvale's Troop 76 spent an overnight session at MetroRock North, an indoor rock climbing facility in Newburyport. The location in Newburyport is at the base of the giant windmill off Route 1. This was the troop's fourth visit and overnight in as many years. The idea was brought up by a Scout and it has been a staple of the troop's annual schedule ever since.

Saturday morning, March 23, the Troop attended and took part in its Cross-Over Ceremony as part of Cub Scout Pack 76's Blue and Gold Banquet, held at Old Town Hall. The Cross-Over is when the Webelos II Cub Scouts receive their Arrow of Light, the highest award in Cub Scouts. They then cross over to Boy Scouts.

Nine Webelos received this award. Before they received their accolades Den Chief Justin Bacchi and other Troop 76 members applied ceremonial paint to their cheeks.

In addition to their Arrow of Light, Packmaster Brain Major presented each Scout with an arrow handmade by Navajos. As they crossed over they were greeted into Boy Scouts by Troop 76 Scoutmaster Don Milligan and Assistant Scoutmaster Craig Milligan. They were then given an official BSA neckerchief slide to wear with their new Boy Scout neckerchiefs.

Troop 76 meets Friday nights at the Ballard Vale United Church, 23 Clark Road in Andover. Pack 76 meets at the Andover Sportsmen's Club on Middleton Road in North Andover.

RELIGION

First time special musical observation of Good Friday

Experience John Stainer's "The Crucifixion" sung by the combined choirs of three Andover churches. In their first collaboration the choirs of South Church, West Parish Church and Christ Church will sing this glorious oratorio composed by Stainer.

Laura Weiss, minister of music at South Church will be directing while Barbara Bruns, minister of music at Christ Church, will be guest organist. James Giessler, lyric tenor, and Matthew Wight, bass, will be guest soloists and will add the extra depth of their professional voices to the choirs which are already locally known for their musicality. Giessler and Wight both have extensive experience in sacred, choir and opera music performance. Throughout the service Stainer's work will be enhanced with the use of multimedia art.

Stainer composed "The Crucifixion" in 1888 during the time that he held the prestigious position of organist at Saint Paul's Cathedral in London. It is his most well known work and includes several hymn tunes which continue to be sung today with "God so Loved the World" likely being the most recognized, according to organizers.

The public is invited to join in this musical experience. The service will be Friday, March 29 at 7 p.m. at South Church, 41 Central St. in Andover. A voluntary goodwill offering will be accepted following the service.

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

COMPILED BY SUSAN MCKELGIGET

100 Years Ago—March 28, 1913

Eaton's poolroom and several local stores were raided on Saturday morning by Chief Mears and agents of the Watch and Ward Society, and nine slot and card machines and so-called gambling devices were seized. Four machines were taken from the poolroom, one from Brennan's bakeshop in the Musgrove building, three from John Svenson's on North Main Street, one from McKenzie's in Abbott Village.

L.D. Pomeroy has announced that he will not accept the appointment of police chief, owing to business responsibilities. No further appointment has been made by the selectmen.

Miss Sarah E. Higgins has moved from High Street to Harry A. Ramsdell's house, 16 Summer St.

Mrs. M. A. Murphy, dressmaker, will open rooms on Main Street, near Morton street, at an early date.

Miss Marion Dearborn has been confined to her home on Elm Street by an attack of the grip.

75 Years Ago—March 25, 1938

Phillips Academy's bird sanctuary is to become an arboretum. On Monday work was started on dismantling the bird houses and cages, and the birds were being shipped to game clubs in Attleboro, Hingham and Worcester. The sanctuary has had a ten-year history, with 100 birds having been there when it was first started. At times there have been as many as 2,000 birds there.

An attempted burglary at the office of Dr. William Fleming was thwarted last Sunday afternoon about 3 when Mrs. Sanderson who lives in an apartment near the office, heard the noise of breaking glass. She came out into the hallway, and the thief, apparently one of a group that has been making visits to dentists' offices after office hours, fled down the stairs and up Chestnut Street.

A truck was badly damaged and a house and lawn were slightly damaged Sunday morning when the truck, stopped while making a milk delivery, rolled down Harding Street hill. It rolled across the concrete front walk of the Seacole residence, ran over a hedge and lawn and crashed into the side of the house.

50 Years Ago—March 28, 1963

The Tyer Rubber Co. warehouse on North Main Street is currently being shown to prospective buyers, but President Wallace Brimer said he has no specific announcement to make regarding its sale.

The Planning Board will authorize a study of the Route 495-Route 28 area, to determine policy on zoning. Mrs. Virginia Hammond, board secretary, said the consultants will prepare an outline of what may be expected, and possible zoning to meet the demands of the area. The work will be done locally, rather than waiting for a planned study by the Central Merrimack Valley Regional Planning See YEARS AGO, Page 13

CAN YOUR TOOTHBRUSH MAKE YOU SICK?

Do you pay attention to your toothbrush's cleanliness? If not, you may be exposing yourself to harmful bacteria. According to new research, the average toothbrush can contain more than 100 million bacteria (including the infamous illness culprits E. coli and staphylococci). In fact, the average person's mouth is not really all that clean with since it is also filled with bacteria; however, there is certainly no need to compound the situation with a dirty toothbrush. To keep your toothbrush clean, first, keep it out of toilet flush range. Also, keep it stored upright and away from other toothbrushes. Wash your hands before brushing, and don't use a cover for the toothbrush (which prevents the toothbrush from drying out). Keeping a clean toothbrush is just as, if not more, important as actually brushing. Consider this, if your brush isn't clean, how can it make anything else clean? Visit DENTISTRY BY DESIGN at 19 Barnard St. where our staff provides the very best care for you and your family or call us at 978-475-5333. Make dental hygiene and toothbrush cleanliness a part of your daily routine.

PS: Rather than microwaving, dishwashing, or spray-sanitizing the toothbrush, simply replace it every three months or when the bristles begin to fray.

GOING THE DISTANCE End zone reached for Collins, Andover football, track legend

By DUSTIN LUCA
STAFF WRITER

In 1959, the school department hired Richard "Dick" Collins to teach history and coach the Pynchard High School's football and track teams. The man who would be named to state coaches halls of fame for both football and track ended his introductory season on the gridiron with a 0-7-2 record.

Forty-seven years later, the field house at Andover High School was named after the man, a legend in the facility's hallways.

But even then, the town hadn't heard the last of Collins. He returned to the School Committee for another two terms, the last of which ended this week.

On Tuesday, the seat once held by Collins — who did not seek re-election this year — was taken by Barbara L'Italien, who sought her first term on the committee after serving eight years as a state representative. Paula Colby-Clements, the committee's current chairwoman, was also re-elected to a three-year post.

When asked how he felt about his time on the board ending last week, Collins simply said, "I wish it wasn't." "I'd love to keep serving, but I don't want to go through another election," he said, laughing. "I don't like the election part, standing out on the street with a sign."

Collins, now 81, has been a familiar face to Andover academics for 54 years. After serving with the U.S. Marines until 1955, he came to the district from Rhode Island after hearing about an opening for two coaching positions at then-named Pynchard High School.

But the school's initial offer wasn't the one he wanted.

"They said they'll look around for a teaching position so I could coach, and I said, 'no way,'" he said. "Make me a teaching offer and a coaching offer."

His coaching offer was then paired with teaching history. From there, the offer became "the best move I ever made in my life," he said.

After his first season in charge of the school's football and track teams, with football tallying losses like they were war bonds and the track team doing only a bit better, a mentor to Collins told him "we were going in way over our heads."

The northeast conference was a tough division, but Collins "handled it and stuck with it, and everything came out well," he said.

In the '70s, the football team picked up two straight state championships and enjoyed a 40-game winning streak. At the same time, the track team went through 88 meets before picking up a single mark in the loss column.

Former selectman Jerry Stabile played during both of the football team's championship years. To him, it felt like a scene out of "Remember the Titans."

"When we got to football games, during a regular season game, we'd have a caravan of cars, we'd have two buses," Stabile said. "We'd pull in and have more people coming to their games than the home team would have."

It was a rallying point for more than just the team, according to Stabile.

Current high school football Coach E.J. Perry recalled being a child in the crowd as the mid '70s football teams cemented their legacy in Andover. One of three Perrys who were personally connected to Collins, he often saw the team from the inside as well, he said.

"There's nothing like being 8 years old, being marched out of the locker room with all the kids getting high fives," he said. "In the day, they were like rock stars around Andover. You knew who they were."

"You look back, and you'd like to say, 'Who are my mentors?' Who are the people who really had an impact on your life in a positive way?" Stabile said. "I'd say Dick would fit in a short list of a small group of guys, including my father, who had a direct impact on the trajectory on my life and the success I had."

To open its regular meeting last week, the School Committee honored Collins with a reception and, after the meeting was called to order, a moment to reflect on his time in town through committee and public comments.

Kerry Costello, Andover Education Association president, taught with Collins at the high school before she became a school psychologist and a ranking official in the Andover Education Association — a union that spars with the School Committee during contract negotiations.

"We didn't always agree, but that's OK," she said.

Acknowledging Collins' athletic career, Costello likened life to being a marathon. "You only win a marathon by dogged performance, by pacing yourself, by keeping your eye on your own personal goal," she said. "Thinking that way, Dick, you were a distance runner, a marathoner."

Town Moderator Sheila Doherty also commented at the meeting, saying that "everybody talks about how much you're loved. I can tell you, from years and years and years of hearing Mr. Collins' name, how much he was feared."

"There wasn't a student in that school who would miss a practice because of Mr. Collins," she said. "They'd have to answer to Mr. Collins — but with that fear was respect."

Sitting in his living room this week, dressed just as formally as he would for School Committee business, Collins admitted that he "was known for kicking kids in the pants."

Somewhat, anyway. "Well, only kicked one or two," he said, chuckling, "but I threatened it a lot. My punishment was running up the hill."

With Collins now returning to retirement more than two decades after first entering it, he feels he still isn't done. He'll still be a frequent guest at school meetings, track meets, football games and the like — albeit from the stands instead of on the field.

"I'd kind of like to stay on. But I am looking forward to coming to meetings," he said, "and watching from the outside."

A complex legal picture faces the town, as it defends different groups of municipal officials in the suit brought by Arthur Collins and James Wilson involving Florence Street property. Nationwide protests against the Reagan administration's latest action in Central America didn't bypass Andover, and last Saturday's rally may not have been a one-shot deal. The Greater Lawrence Central American Solidarity Association, the group that staged the protest in Andover, intends to continue to argue for an end to military aid to the Contras. "Clearly, we'll be protesting to affect the upcoming legislation for Contra aid," Tom Meyers, Doherty Junior High School teacher and CASA member, said.

In a tale of two campaigns, Phillips Academy's efforts to renovate/convert Draper Hall into apartments seems to be gaining momentum while neighborhood opponents to the plan may have lost a bit of steam this week. If approved at Town Meeting on April 4, the revised bylaw would allow large buildings of 50,000 or more square feet located in residential-A zones to be converted into multi-family dwellings.

Over 15,000 Andover residents are eligible to vote in the townwide election Monday, March 28, at Andover High School's Dunn Gymnasium. Candidates include Moderator—James D. Doherty (incumbent), John Doyle; (incumbent)—James Barenbim, George Danneman Jr., Edward L. Martin, Gail L. Ralston (incumbent), Lawrence S. ## DOING IT FOR ALEX

McLaughlin takes on Boston Marathon in memory of friend

By DAVID WILLIS
STAFF WRITER

While 11 years have passed, Ashley McLaughlin still takes time each day to remember her close friend Alexandra Miliotis.

"Alex is still such a strong influence on my life," said McLaughlin. "She is always on my mind. I am still best friends were her twin sister (Arianna). Anytime I see her, I think of Alex."

On March 15, 2002, 16-year-old Alexandra Miliotis passed away following a 10-month battle with leukemia.

Now more than a decade after her tragic passing, Miliotis' legacy lives on in the hearts of McLaughlin and many that knew her from Andover.

McLaughlin will honor her friend's memory on April 15, when she runs the Boston Marathon for "Alex's Team," the charity long ago set up for Miliotis.

"It's really moving and inspirational for me and my entire family to see Ashley do this," said Arianna Miliotis. "Ashley was very close with Alex and I from the time we were little kids. Ashley and I are still very close, and we find ways to remember my sister. Ashley has always been so dedicated, and I think her running the Marathon is the quintessential example of her dedication to her goals, her friends and her family. It's very emotional."

For McLaughlin, the Marathon was a perfect way to honor her friend, and fulfill a lifelong dream.

"I felt it would be a great way to keep her memory alive," said McLaughlin, now a teacher at Waltham High. "I have always wanted to run the Boston Marathon, and to do it for Alex makes it all worthwhile. It's important to remember her struggles and keep her spirit alive."

The Marathon makes a fitting tribute to Alex, since sports has always played a major role in the bond between McLaughlin and the Miliotis sisters.

"We were about 6-years-old when we started playing soccer together," said McLaughlin. "We were on separate teams. Then we started playing basketball together, all the way through freshman basketball. Alex was very athletic. She was always happy and smiling."

"When she got sick, I don't think I could really comprehend what was happening. To this day, it is still the worst thing any of us have experienced. You feel so helpless. You can be there for moral support, but you can't fix it."

Following Alexandra's passing after a battle with the illness, it was sports that kept McLaughlin close to her friend, and gave her a way to honor Alex.

"When we won our (Division 1) state (basketball) title (2003) it was on the one-year anniversary of Alexandra's death," said Arianna. "That was very powerful. Alex never got to play high school sports, but it felt like something we did together."

"When Ashley was a captain the next year, she would always link Alex into her inspirational speeches. Over the years we have found time to be emotional and really express that love we have for each other."

The Marathon

Basketball proved to be a major part of McLaughlin's life at Andover and beyond. She finishes her outstanding career high school career with 1,150 career points. She then played four years for Division 1 Holy Cross, starting her final three seasons.

But after graduating from college in 2008, she noticed something was missing.

"I have played sports all of my life," said McLaughlin, who moved back to Andover last year. "Since my college career ended, that competitive fire, that working towards a goal has been missing. Running the Marathon has always been something I wanted to accomplish, and I thought that would be a great accomplishment."

But as a life-long basketball player, training for long-distance running presented a new and unique challenge.

"Basketball really helped me with the mental discipline aspect of it," she said. "But not really the physical part. During the week I have been doing a lot of cardio and speed workouts. Saturdays are my long run day. I've run 18 and 20 miles. But the hardest was actually 15 miles. Mentally, running for that long is tough. But once you get over that, 18 is just a little longer."

"A lot of times I will start by running up River Road, go up past West Elementary, past the high school and Sanborn School, then over to Wood Hill."

Now just over two weeks away, McLaughlin is dreaming of receiving her race bib — which will read "In honor of Alexandra Miliotis" — and take the starting line for the Marathon while running with the Leukemia, Lymphoma Society.

"I'm getting a little bit nervous," she said. "I think it's going to be pretty emotional. I think it's going to go by very fast. To run such a long distance, and have my family, friends and Arianna there at the end will be awesome."

Arianna, for one, can't wait to welcome her friend at the finish line.

"It really is so moving that she is going to do this," said Arianna. "Ashley has been so important to 'Alex's Team' and she is so close to our family. When she crosses the finish line, it's going to be very emotional and I will be so proud of her."

Perry excited to take over volleyball team

By DAVID WILLIS
STAFF WRITER

An amazing 112 wins, six state championships and 0 career losses.

That is the eye-popping record of the new Andover High boys volleyball coach while he was leading the powerhouse Salem (N.H.) boys team.

He also happens to be a name that is very, very familiar to Andover sports fans.

Current Golden Warriors head football coach and Andover sports legend E.J. Perry will kick off his first year as the school's boys volleyball coach when the Warriors open their season on Monday by hosting Lincoln-Sudbury.

He takes over for Dave Kuykendall, the coach of the last three seasons, who had to step down due to work obligations.

"I love being back in volleyball," said Perry. "I think it's one of the most athletic sports there is, and I never lost that volleyball fire when I left to come back to Andover."

Perry never lost a volleyball game as coach of Salem, with a 112-0 record, claiming the state's first six state titles. He was also the Blue Devils' boys basketball coach at the time, winning two Class L state titles.

"The athletic director at the time (Jim Davis) thought basketball and volleyball were a good combination," Perry said. "I talked to a lot of people. I went to a lot of clinics and watched videos to learn the sport. I had a lot of great people around me like Dan Young, who is the coach at Saint Anselm now."

"A lot of good players wanted to play basketball and volleyball, and once we got it rolling there was no stopping Salem. I want to continue that success at Andover" the 2009 season to follow his dream and take over as football coach at Andover High. That, of course, has worked out extremely well with a pair of Merrimack Valley Conference titles and playoff trips in three seasons.

E.J. Perry has been named Andover volleyball coach.

But a bit of the volleyball itch remained in Perry.

"(Andover athletic director) Don (Doucette) came to me and asked if I wanted to apply for the (volleyball) job," said Perry. "I had never lost a volleyball game at Salem, so I decided to apply and it all went from there."

Perry is also familiar with the MVC volleyball scene. He spent four years as head coach at Methuen (2005-08). He also has a valuable resource in longtime Golden Warriors girl sand boys coach George Sullivan.

"George was a teacher and coach (in football) of mine," said Perry. "And he's the grandfather of Andover volleyball. He's been very helpful. I've talked to him and he came to a practice and our play date."

"Volleyball is a game about running, jumping, hitting and teamwork. When you have good athletes playing it, it's a very fun game. We want to build this program and have fun doing it."

The Andover eighth-grade boys travel basketball team recently took home the state title. Representing the Merrimack Valley League, at UMass Lowell, the Warrior went 4-0 in the tourney, beating Dartmouth, Pittsfield, Silver Lake and Bedford.

They averaged 67 points per game, and allowed just 46 a game. The leading scorers were E.J. Perry, Chad DiCenzo, Andrew Selima, Daniel Walsh and Cedric Gillette.

The Andover Health Department has announced activities for the month of April set to bring attention to National Public Health Week. Public Health Week celebrates the work local health departments do on a day-to-day basis to care for the citizens they serve. The theme for 2013 is "Public Health is ROI: Save Lives, Save Money." ROI stands for "Return on Investment."

The Public Health Museum in Tewksbury also is holding several events that are free and open to the public. Visit their website for the schedule: publichealthmuseum.org.

As part of the effort, upcoming Andover health events include the following:

In case of inclement weather the flags will be placed on graves at 11 a.m. on Sunday, April 21. For more information, call the Andover Veterans Services Office at 978-623-8218.

CONTRACT: New five-year extension for superintendent

evaluate McGrath at the end of the school year and determine any raise then.

"At the end of the year is when we do a performance review which ties to salary," said Colby-Clements. "Clearly we talked about whether the performance warranted five additional years and we certainly thought that it did."

"Marinel has done a great job being a leader, bringing the leadership team, the principals, together to think as one district," said Colby-Clements. "She also has been very receptive to bringing in new programs. The EdEx program (taking courses online) is an example of that at the high school."

"We wanted to have some consistency given everything we've been through in the past two to three years," said committee member Dennis Fergie, referring to the difficult teachers contract negotiation, and turnover in leadership positions. Andover has a new Andover High principal, assistant superintendent and director of student services, which is the top special education position.

Fergie also noted the ongoing Bancroft Elementary construction project, and the Town Meeting warrant articles concerning possible building projects for Andover High and a new prekindergarten building. McGrath will continue to oversee those and relatively new initiatives such as offering online courses at Andover High, and potentially creating a preK pilot program with Merrimack College.

Colby-Clements and Fergie said they had not discussed having a public comment period for the community as part of the decision to offer a new contract.

Colby-Clements said the contract had been the stated reason for three executive sessions. The agendas noted their topic was "to discuss successor contract for superintendent."

"We get feedback on a regular basis, and we get feedback when we did our evaluation last June," Fergie said. "But I don't believe there was an official public session around the extension."

Fergie said residents could have commented at the School Committee meeting on Thursday, March 21, when the item was on the agenda and the vote was taken.

Colby-Clements said that during McGrath's next five years she expects to see the strategic plan advanced, with an emphasis on providing professional development, on offering world languages at the elementary-school level, and on beefing up the fine arts in part through the return of a K-12 fine arts coordinator.

"From my perspective, I would like to see further refinement of the budget process. The top priority by far is to move forward on [an expansion] for the high school," said Fergie.

During the next five years, Fergie said he also wants to see a solution for the town's prekindergarten program, and for online courses to be extended as one part of curriculum innovation, which also could include offering more interdisciplinary courses and pursuing partnerships with local colleges to offer more diverse courses.
