Town budget battle

Manager's 'first step' could almost double taxes

> By BILL KIRK bkirk@andovertownsman.com

For the second straight year, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski's preliminary budget proposal for next fiscal year is running up against criticism from some selectmen and townspeople.

Stapczynski offered an early look at a proposed $5.6 million budget increase for fiscal year 2016 last week during a presentation of his 2016 Capital Improvements Plan (See related story, page 6).

As proposed, the fiscal 2016 budget would represent a 3.3 percent hike over the current budget, increasing from $164.4 million to nearly $170 million.

The plan calls for spending up to the Proposition 2 1/2 tax levy as well as allocating

"I have been going to the Thanksgiving game for as long as I can remember. So for this to be the last time on Thanksgiving Day, if we could end it with a victory would be awesome and a great honor."

The players who face off match=up of the two teams they will still play each other every year in the regular season and potentially in the playoffs — were decades from being born when the Warriors and Raiders began playing on the holiday.

The rivalry began in 1972 with a 21-0 Andover victory. The Warriors and Raiders have met on Thanksgiving each year since, other than in 1985 when the game was cancelled due to snow. In a fascinating turn of events, the heated rivalry sits at 20-20-1. So whichever team takes the 2014 contest will make his school forever the victors.

"This is probably the biggest game of our careers," star linebacker Brian Duffy. "It is the last Turkey Bowl between the two schools. So if we could take the win in the last football game many of us will ever play would be very emotional."

The holiday clash has seen plenty of classic meetings, including in 2010 and 2012 when the teams met with the winner earning the Merrimack Valley Conference title and a trip to the playoffs. Both of those games were won by Andover in dra- more year, but ever since it matic fashion.

Nearly half of the matchups between the two schools on Thanksgiving — 20 – have been decided by a touchdown or less. Possibly most famous of those was Central's 16-14 win in 1989 when the Raiders booted a game-winning field goal that many around Andover still vehemently insist was no good and the referees blew the call.

None of the 2014 Warriors or Raiders were alive to see that, but the same passion is still poured into the rivalry.

"We definitely want to go down as the team that took the last victory in the entire rivalry," two-way starting lineman Chris Tully said. 'We are so ready to take the field."

As if the Warriors needed any more motivation, Andover has lost four straight games to the Raiders, losing in the regular season and on Thanksgiving last year and again in the regular season and playoffs this season.

"We got the win sophohas been rough," said Duffy, one of the few Warriors that was a starter in 2012. "We cut the deficit from two touchdowns to one in our last game against them, so hopefully we can swing it by at least eight points and take the win this time." Tully is one of the Warriors who has not played in a win over the Raiders, and he wants one before his career comes to a close.

"A lot of us haven't beaten them since we became starters," he said. "And we definitely have to get one against Central."

So quite a bit of pride is on the line as the two teams say farewell to the rivalry that lasted nearly half a century. 'We know it won't quite feel the same," Tully said. "It is going to be really weird coming back from college and seeing North Andover on the other sideline. It is probably best for the league, but we will miss

it. So we want this win."

It took more than a year to secure Cardinal Sean Patrick O'Malley's first visit to St. Augustine School and those involved say it was well worth the wait.

Two garage fires under investigation

By Tim Lima tlima@andovertownsman.com

Officials are investigating two fires within one hour of each other Monday night — one in an outbuilding on South Main Street and another in a garage less than a mile

The first fire at 238 South Main St. was reported just before 6 p.m. and quickly engulfed a large back structure similar to a garage or storage building.

A bumpy final leg to Feaster Five

Sonya Vartabedian

It was all going so well. Perhaps too well.

And then I fell. I thought about keeping it to myself. Or at least to my inner circle who saw me go down on our training run last Thursday. Just five minutes before, our trainer, Melissa Pennington, had asked us to think about our worst fears surrounding running the Feaster Five. And then she told us to leave those fears behind as we continued on our training run.

Apparently, my fears did not hear her. A moment later, I failed to maneuver a tiny speed bump and lost my footing, my outstretched hands unable to stop my right knee from pounding the pavement. Hard.

It was as if my running buddies felt my pain, too. They knew how hard we had all worked to get to the point where our first 5K was in reach. They knew so badly to stride across the finish line at Brickstone Square on Thanksgiving morning.

So seeing my leg swell up from the impact was almost like they had hit the pavement with me. I tried to remain positive, but the pain radiating down to my ankle made that almost impossible.

What struck me the most was how upset I was to watch seven weeks of training implode in a nanosecond. It was at that point that I realized that I had fully embraced the goal I had set for myself just a couple months before.

So while I could have very easily glossed over my misstep, I had to share it. And not just for sympathy's sake. and each other. In falling, just as in running, I knew I was not alone.

From the start, this has always been about providing a window into a real experience with anyone interested enough to read along. I could have painted

Truth be told, for the next day or so, I allowed myself to wallow in my very own pity party. But by Saturday, I T-minus-24-hours and decided to test out the knee. And while it was still sore and swollen, it carried me for 3-plus miles. And with Don't get overly excited and go out too strong. Remember to breathe.

Enjoying a slice of Thanksgiving's past in Andover

Andover Stories

Gail Ralston

Andover Historical Society

Editor's Note: $This\ column\ was$ last printed the day before Thanksgiving in 2010. But it's such a wonderful look back at the holiday here in Andover that we decided to dust it off and share it again with our readers. We hope you find it as enjoyable as we have. Happy Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving, New England's most important holiday, was not a national holiday until 1863. Before that time, the day was officially proclaimed for late November or early December by the governor of each state. Having a long history in the region, it combined the Puritan tradition of a holy day of thanks, an agricultural society's yearly celebration of the harvest, and a time for bringing family members together.

On the appointed day, New Englanders characteristically attended a service at the meetinghouse in the morning and feasted in the afternoon. Thanksgiving was citizen," wrote a piece also a time for dances, courting and weddings; more New England weddings took place Thanksgiving week than any other time of the year. And then, as now, Thanksgiving was a busy time for traveling, as grown-up children and their children headed "home for the holiday."

Thanksgiving in Andover followed the New England tradition. On Nov. 18, 1887, the Andover Townsman editorial announced:

"Thanksgiving is coming! In the midst of other holidays, national and ecclesiastical, this grand old historic festival ought not to be forgotten but to be heartily kept after the manner of our fathers, and grandfathers. ... Let us on that day suspend "all secular work and employment," accept the president's and governor's invitation to go to church, eat our Squash Pie and Thanksgiving cake in peace – besides giving a piece of each to any who lack and enjoy that merry heart which is a continual feast.'

Much of the newspaper's space on that date was devoted to the celebration. President Grover Cleveland's proclamation was printed in full, as was that of Oliver Ames, then governor of Massachusetts. The Rev. Joseph H. Towne, "the venerable Andover on Thanksgiving's early observance. Appropriate poetry was also printed. Harriet Beecher Stowe, although no longer living in Andover, published a piece "on the old-time way of keeping the festival."

Andover celebrated much the same way for the next 100 years when, in 1988, a new Thanksgiving tradition was born – The Feaster Five. While the family meal is still celebrated, the day in church has now been replaced by the Macy's Day Parade, high school football, apple pies and the RACE. Co-founded by Bill Pennington, the first Feaster Five was held in downtown Andover on Thanksgiving morning 1988, with approximately 400 runners participating. Now more than two decades in the making, the race draws more than 10,000 people annually, no matter what the weather.

As we go into tomorrow's holiday, no matter how we celebrate, let us all give thanks for our many blessings, whether it be for family, friends, for our town, or even for that last piece of "Mother's Thanksgiving Cake," brought back from Betty Bartlet in 1888.

Miss Bartlet wrote, "I hope some of the townswomen will try this, and that it will give their children as much satisfaction as it gave to me in my childhood, and as it annually gives to my own children now. "

Mother's Thanksgiving Cake

11/2 quarts flour 1 pint stoned raisins 3 cups sugar

11/2 cups butter 1/2 pint yeast

3 eggs

Mix with milk as you would in making bread, and let it rise a little over 24 hours; add nutmeg and cinnamon for spice.

That same year, the Townsman reported, "Dining not long ago in an Andover home, the dessert consisted of squash pie so particularly palatable that we were allowed not only the privilege of a second piece, but of taking the receipt for making it. As Thanksgiving is coming, the proper observance of which would be defective without squash and pumpkin pie (and our hostess informed us that this receipt would answer as well for the latter), we venture to give the benefit of it to our fellow townsmen. It increased our interest in it to learn that the original recipe was that of Mrs. Cornelius, whose home was so long in Andover, and who is known for her publication, 'Young Housekeeper's Friend."

Squash Pie

To a quart of boiled milk, put a large pint of strained squash, two cups of sugar, three eggs, two crackers pounded and sifted (or four eggs without crackers), a teaspoonful of salt, a few drops of lemon, half a teaspoonful of ginger or powdered cinnamon, and a dessert-spoonful of butter, melted in the hot milk.

Bake with a crust, in rather deep plates, or in dishes made for such pies.

All Those Years Ago

Compiled by Susan McKelliget

Here's a look back at what was happening in town this same week at key points over Blood's Beehive Bakery the last 100 years, exactly as reported in the pages of the Andover Townsman:

100 Years Ago

Nov. 27, 1914

The case of Garabad Margosian vs. Peter Hargodian was brought before Judge Stone on Monday evening. It was an assault case, the dispute being over some land in West Andover. After hearing the evidence, the court placed the case on file.

A very successful food sale was held at the Grange Hall on Tuesday evening after the regular session of the order. All articles left were auctioned off by E.W. Burtt, and much merriment was caused by the bidding. Cabbages seemed to be the rage among the young ladies who vied with each other to purchase these succulent vegetables. One young man laid in a winter's supply of carrots at a ridiculously low figures and it is expected his complexion will be much improved by spring.

red blacksmith shop a few weeks ago and the recent razing of the old square block that stood on the other side of the bridge, Abbott Village Centre is rapidly losing its old familiar appearance. The absence of these buildings will scarcely be regretted, while the improvement, by way of a wider bridge, will be a welcome one to villagers

75 Years Ago Nov. 23, 1939

With a thud, which, in the words of one tenant, sounded as if the Andover Savings Bank had collapsed, a boiler in the block at the corner of Main and Chestnut streets blew out Tuesday evening about eight. The boiler was in the southeast corner of the building and no one was injured, although tenants reported that the building vibrated when the blast occurred.

An advertisement for on Barnard Street posted these Thanksgiving Bakery Specials: Plum Puddings, 25 cents/45 cents; Special Saturday, 1 pound Baked Beans and 1 loaf of Brown Bread, both for 19 cents.

Everything is now in readiness for the Chandler Street water main project, sufficient transfer slips having come through to start a W.P.A. crew on the special project.

Maybe it's time we did think twice about all the things we have to feel thankful for ... when we hear an explosion, we can be thankful it's only birdshot ... and we can still be thankful that our government is successfully side-stepping goose-steppers.

50 Years Ago

Nov. 25, 1964

Dr. Richard D. Lindsay will enlarge his animal hospital on Lowell Street, expanding the reception room, but not hospital facilities. The Board of Appeals has granted the special permit necessary.

The Andover Recreation With the removal of the old Center has come a long way from the days when it was founded. Originally on Essex Street, it had only four lanes. But that was way back in 1916. When it moved to its 34 Park St. address, there were eight lanes, billiards and ping pong. In the 1963 renovation of the building, the total number of lanes went to 15. In addition to league bowling, there is a Pony League for the youngsters on Saturday mornings, at greatly reduced rates of

AG's medical marijuana ruling could have future bearing on town

It's been 20 months since state Attorney General Martha Coakley first ruled that Massachusetts cities and towns could not pass bylaws aimed at banning the placement of any medicinal marijuana dispensary or cultivation facility within its boundaries.

That finding turned the tables on a ban that had already been adapted at that point in Wakefield, it shot down a bid to ban any such facilities in Peabody, and it sent local zoning officials and others around the state scrambling to come up with bylaws that might limit any such facilities, while holding up to the attorney general's scrutiny.

Now, however, the AG's office has backed a bylaw passed in the town of Essex that doesn't quite ban any medical marijuana facilities from that community, but comes very close to it. And in granting its approval to the controversial Essex bylaw, the AG's office may well have set a precedent encouraging other communities to perhaps go back to their own drawing boards and throw up new hurdles to an effort that, despite the concerns of law enforcement and other officials, indeed won the clear support of voters two years ago.

The Essex bylaw grew out of local opposition to a proposal by a company named Garden Remedies Inc. to place a cultivation facility within the town — a proposal the company withdrew in the face of a local citizens' group that crafted zoning regulations to block it from the targeted site.

That withdrawal, however, didn't stop voters at a June Town Meeting from emphatically approving the guidelines, which require that any medical pot growing facility or dispensary can't be any closer than 2,500 feet — or nearly a half mile — to any school, day care facility, preschool, athletic field or playground, or within 1,500 feet, more than a quarter-mile, of any a residence.

Anyone checking a map can figure out that covers just about all of Essex, leaving only land on the fringes of various wetlands as being eligible for any medical marijuana facility placement. And, recognizing the fact the town's bylaw seemed to fly in the face of the AG's previous finding, some residents asked the attorney general's office to review it with many assuming it would flunk the AG's smell test.

Yet, when the AG's ruling came back to Essex this month, the state office let the town's bylaw remain in place — albeit

'This is a fact-dependent matter beyond the scope of the attorney general's bylaw review function," according to the ruling. The bylaw could be challenged if a new potential developer filed a suit claiming that the bylaw is exclusionary, but otherwise, it stands. And, in that vein, it certainly stands as a deterrent to any company looking to site a facility within the

The net effect, then, is that Essex may not have totally banned marijuana facilities from town, but it has made any such placement impractical and costly for any developer to apply — and it has now done so with the attorney general's blessing.

That sends a powerful message to other communities looking to do the same: It tells them that, with the right type of bylaw, a wink and a nod, they can all but ban pot facility development within their city or town.

We're not sure that's quite what the state's 2012 voters had in mind.

Meanwhile, the founder of an Andover-based nonprofit passed over for a medical marijuana dispensary has filed suit against the state Department of Health over the awarding of a provisional certificate to a company seeking to open a facility in Lowell.

The Cardiac Arrhythmia Syndrome Foundation of Andover has accused Patriot Care Corp., a fellow nonprofit, of lying on its application when it stated that one of its executives had no legal or administrative actions against him, which was a condition of the license award. CAS' lawsuit, filed in March, claims that Patriot Care omitted several past legal actions against one of its executives.

CAS' actions show that it is still very interested in winning a license for medical marijuana facility. And if it succeeds, the AG's ruling on Essex's bylaws may prove interesting for those in town who might seek to thwart the voters' will and prevent such a dispensary in Andover.

WEB QUESTION

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski is proposing to raise taxes $5.5 million to pay for the budget next fiscal year. The hike would fund a variety of items, including obligations like retirement, health insurance and salaries, but would also cover new equipment, building improvements and sidewalk repairs, among other expenses. Where would you favor cuts

- be made to keep taxes in check? ■ Union wages and benefits
 - Town projects
 - Employee layoffs ■ No cuts needed

LAST WEEK'S QUESTION

Two senior housing communities proposed in town are encountering opposition from neighbors for their location and scale. Do you think the town should be actively encouraging residential developments for older residents? With 112 votes, the answers were:

NO. There are enough residential options for seniors in Andover and the town should support the success of the facilities that already exist in the area. 94 votes, 84 percent.

YES. Helping seniors stay in the community that they enjoy with the creation of supportive environments should be a priority in town. 18 votes, 16 percent.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town planners must better represent residents

Editor, Townsman:

As Andover homeowners and taxpayers who will be impacted by the proposed Elm Street assisted-living facility, we continue to be deeply disturbed by what appears to be the favoritism of the Andover Planning Board — and particularly Director of Planning Paul Materazzo — toward the project developers, even if that may be contrary to the best interests of the people and the town of Andover.

Every development project has costs and benefits, and we understand that those costs and benefits are often unevenly distributed. A final decision on a development project, however, should generally be based on whether, over a reasonable time period, the benefits to the community overall will likely outweigh the costs.

In the course of weighing the benefits and costs of a proposed development project, the Planning Board has these responsibilities to the people it represents (i.e., the residents of Andover): One. to begin the process with open minds; two, to afford residents every reasonable opportunity to submit data and express relevant personal opinions; three, to provide the town with complete, truthful and undistorted factual information about the need for the proposed development and its likely impact; and four, to insist, when appropriate, on development project modifications (such as a reduction in scale) that would shift the balance of benefits and costs to better serve the people of Andover, even if that comes at a cost to the developer.

We have reasons to be suspicious about whether the Planning Board has proceeded in this matter according to the abovestated principles. The initial Planning Board meeting on the Elm Street aren't many. assisted-living facility was scheduled on a date and location that would have severely limited public participation. What appears to be distorted and/or misleading information about the need for additional senior assisted-living facilities in Andover and the size of the proposed facility has been disseminated by Lisa Schwarz, assistant to Planning Director Paul Materazzo. Traffic and safety issues along the alreadyheavily travelled — and often congested — Elm Street corridor between the center of town and Merrimack College, which is preparing to build new dormitories along Elm Street, have not been satisfactorily addressed. The proposed height of the facility, which is planned to be built at the top of a hill, will be unsightly and totally out of character with the neighborhood. These traffic issues and the general aesthetic of such a large development in a completely residential area will impact not just Elm Street neighborhood residents, but anyone who travels that 1 1/2-mile Elm Street corridor.

It's time for the Planning Board to meets its responsibilities to the people of Andover. DAVID AND LESLIE SILVERSTEIN

Pipeline would offer "There are no living vetcheaper, safer natural gas

Editor, Townsman:

I support the Kinder Morgan pipeline proposal. This region needs the pipeline to bring in cheaper, fracked natural gas from nearby fields in Pennsylvania and Ohio. This gas will be going to many communities that are not as wealthy as Andover. Middle- and low-income people will benefit the most from lower-priced gas.

The fact is that once the pipeline is built, it will have minimal impact on the plants and animals that live near it. It is far safer than moving gas or oil by truck and train. Since it is underground, it is much less ugly than the solar panel farm recently built next to Interstate 93, which requires extensive use of herbicides to prevent vegetation from blocking the solar panels. The right of way for a gas pipeline can be used as a walking trail and provides habitat for many small animals.

It seems rather self-centered for wealthy environmentalists from Andover to block the delivery of cheap gas to many surrounding communities because 3 miles of it would run through the town.

I recently converted my home from oil to gas and have significantly reduced my heating bill. If you're concerned about global warming, you should support the pipeline because burning natural gas emits far less greenhouse gas and other pollutants than burning oil. I'd be interested to learn how many of the people trying to block the pipeline would be willing to stop using natural gas in their homes Founding Fathers would and grills. I suspect there

Duty to commemorate veterans is important message

Editor, Townsman:

I am a Boy Scout from Troop 75 at the Andover Sportsmen's Club and I would like to share with you some of my opinions on the editorial, "A duty to honor veterans" (Townsman, Nov. 13). I think that this is one of the most important things to talk about. This editorial shows us that we do not just need to honor the veterans on one day, but every day. The fact that they deserve our thanks is very important to the individuals who have fought in previous wars. I think this editorial clearly shows that we need to focus on not just recent veterans, but veterans who fought many years ago.

The importance of commemorating, more than just celebrating, is also another important aspect of remembering veterans. I think what that age to buy cigarettes to message is conveying is that we need to look back and realize what those people did for us and how far we have come, rather than just celebrating and saying thanks. I also like the fact that you write, erans of World War I, the conflict that gave rise to Veterans Day. Now, the veterans of World War II are fading fast." I think this is the most important quote in the whole editorial because it is not just one battle with a few peobut every single person in are today. Barriers to every single battle make a difference.

This editorial has a way of really putting the message out that we need to look back, realize where we are today and recognize those people and the sacrifices they have made to keep our freedom.

Precedent exists for were vulnerable. higher tobacco age

Editor, Townsman:

I disagree with Sally Sarni's arguments ("Raising tobacco age won't curtail smoking," Nov. 20) in support of allowing 18-year-olds to continue to buy cigarettes in Andover. Buying cigarettes is not like buying a loaf of bread or a gallon of milk. Cigarettes contain nicotine, which scientists tell us is more addictive than the opiates found in drugs such as heroin and morphine. The Centers for Disease Control tells us that there are 480,000 premature deaths in the U.S. each year that can be attributed to smoking. Clearly, the sale of cigarettes deserves some special consideration and regulation. Ms. Sarni argues that since 18-year-olds can vote and can serve in the military, they should have all the privileges of every other adult. Even our not agree with her on this point. The Constitu-SAM WASHBURN tion explicitly prevents 39 Oriole Drive 18-year-olds from holding certain offices. You must ber of Congress and even older to be a senator or president. It is generally acknowledged that with age comes more maturity. Federally licensed firearm dealers cannot sell handguns to 18-year-olds. Our newly licensed casinos, like casinos in most states, cannot allow 18-year-olds to gamble. Even our businesses recognize that young adults often do not have the judgement of older adults. For example, most rental car companies will not rent a car to an 18-year-old (or to anyone under 25).

Ms. Sarni also argues that raising the minimum

21 will not discourage anyone from smoking. I disagree. Research has shown that 95 percent of adult smokers began smoking before the age of 21 and that delaying the age when young people first begin experimenting with tobacco significantly reduces the chances that adults will become regular smokers. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, 29 percent of high school seniors were regular smokers in ple that made a difference, 1977, while only 9 percent smoking, such as raising the price of cigarettes through raising tobacco taxes, have already proven to be effective in cutting smoking rates among young people. Raising the age to buy cigarettes to 21 in Andover will be another such barrier. I believe JOHN DONOVAN that someday many of our 236 Andover St. young people will thank us for making it harder for them to become addicted to smoking when they

What happened to 'love thy neighbor'?

Editor, Townsman:

An open letter to Mr. Christopher Hopey, president of Merrimack College:

Quoting a statement from your assistant in last week's Andover Townsman ("Contentious dorm project moves forward," Nov. 20), "(Jeffrey) Doggett said Austin Field has been a 'potential housing site for 50-plus years." If Austin Field has been a potential housing site for more than 50 years, but has never been built upon, there must have been a good reason, don't you

"Love Thy Neighbor" comes to mind, in fact. To reiterate, the college until this year — did not build on Austin Field, also known fondly as Austin Green, for more than 50 years. Why? Because what was believed to be a solid agreement of respect between the neighborhood and the college was firmly be at least 25 to be a mem- in place. For the historical record, Merrimack College has chosen to adversely and forever impact the livelihoods of the following community members: teachers, firefighters, veterans, retirees, young families and many other community service people.

To the town of Andover: With the continued building of commercial buildings in our residential spaces, Andover will change from a residential community to a commercial town off of Interstates 93 and 495.

Shawsheen School students as young as preschoolers have worked to collect food — more than 700 pounds worth — so those less fortunate don't go hungry on Thanksgiving.

The collection for the Lawrence-based Neighbors in Need kicked off Nov. 14 during a free Family Dance attended by more than 400 people.

The event doubled as a vehicle for the school's annual community service effort for November. Families came dressed to dance the night away with friends, while they also contributed nonperishable food items to support Neighbors in Need.

The collection continued through last week, with 731 the Shawsheen PTO.

Their contributions are a key reason why the Golden Warriors have averaged a stellar 35.7 points per game, opening holes for Kevin Chen (1,061 rushing yards, 13 touchdowns) and protecting QB E.J. Perry IV (1,807 passing yards, 26 TDs).

"We have a connection," Vano said. "We are next to each other ever day at practice, we work with each other all the time. We are close friends and I think it shows on the field."

Optima Synchro set to dive into new season

The Optima Synchro synchronized swim team has begun its 2014-15 season out of the water.

The squad held a team-building event earlier this month at Fuddruckers Restaurant in North Andover. The team came together to celebrate its many successes of the past while focusing on heading into its new season strong.

Under the direction of head coach Svetlana Malinovskaya, team leaders say the girls exceeded expectations last year, ending its first year together as the top-ranked team in New England.

The new synchronized swim season begins at the end of the month and continues until the end of June

When he arrived at Andover High, Tully first played line for two years on the JV team before receiving the promotion to varsity starter last year.

"Last year was a huge learning experience," he said. "But it helped us grow for this year. We formed a great connection. I think the performance of Chen and E.J. shows what we have been able to do.

"Sure, me and Vano bicker back and fourth, but we know that we can always rely on each other."

Big hitter

Left guard Vano agreed that he and Tully often have disagreements on the field.

"Yeah, Tully and I bicker all the time," said the 6-foot, 220-pounder with a chuckle. "Sometimes I will ask questions to restate that I am right. But we really do have a great connection."

Vano actually began his football life as a fullback in the AJFL, before growing too big and needing to move to the line. And he was OK with that.

"I love the physical aspect of football," he said. "I love hitting people. I was definitely nervous when I first started playing varsity football last year. My first game was against North Andover and it was scary because I didn't know the level of competition I would be facing.

"But it turned out fine because I was working with these guys. We work so well together."

Man in the middle

Marotta began playing center for one simple reason when he joined the AJFL in the fourth grade.

"I was the only one that could snap the ball," he said. "I had a few good snaps, they put me at center and I have been there ever since."

The 6-foot-2, 226-pound Marotta admits that center is often a thankless job.

"You have to make a good snap every time," he said. "Because if you have one bad snap, that is all that you will hear about. You never hear anything about the good ones. But I love center."

From his spot in the middle team win." of the line, Marotta is often charged with being the judge On the right between his teammates. "The left side is more of the bickering side," Duffy joked. "Terence and I have more philosophical debates. Marotta becomes the mediator. And he is good."

Back turned lineman

Duffy entered the 2014 season wearing the decidedly un-lineman No. 18, as he planed to remain a fullback where he had played much of his career. But plans soon changed.

"Our line coach (Bryan) Ibbidsen called me over before a scrimmage," Duffy said. "He said to me, 'I think majority of the time," he you will be trading this in for No. 50."

Soon, the 6-foot-2, 226himself learning offensive guard on the fly, with the help of his linemates.

"Playing lineman is a different mind-set," he said. "The guys were huge in teaching me the position. I think Norton probably got tired of me asking him questions. But I am happy to Reach him on Twitter at @ do anything that helps the Despite a pleasant demeanor, right tackle Norton stressed one fact. "I am angry," he laughed.

"I have always been a physical kid. So I started playing football to get some anger out. When I am on the field, I flip a switch and smash some people." Norton, who at 6-foot-3 and 234 pounds rivals Tully for the biggest member of the line, said the joking relationship the five men have helps them when it is time to get tough on game

"We like each other the joked, then added, "Nah, I love these guys.

"It has been so much fun pound star linebacker found working these guys on and off the field. They are the best. No matter what is happening, I always know they will have my back and that is what matters."

Pentucket Players relish the tragic beauty of 'Les Miserables'

By Terry Date Staff Writer

Eponine's solo on unrequited love fills the mill rehearsal loft.

Ensemble members slip noiselessly to barricades. Action soon stirs at the ramshackle geometry of piled chairs, casks and pickets.

Students in rebellion raise fists and bottles, rifles and voices. Couples wipe tears and cover mouths as Act 2 drama unfolds in "Les Miserables." The epic musical has the cast in its grasp.

That was a couple weeks ago. The musical and cast under the direction of retired Lawrence middle school English teacher John Buzzell are now capturing audiences on the stage of the Rogers Center for the Arts at Merrimack College, where it is being performed through Saturday.

Buzzell said "Les Miserables" is the largest production in the Pentucket Players' 21-year history, and most costly — about $70,000.

By day, the members of Pentucket Players work Merrimack Valley, southern New Hampshire and North Shore jobs in pharmacies, schools and banks. But by night this fall, the 73 cast members and dozens of crew converged on the fifth floor of a Lawrence mill to rehearse.

The set transformed the high-ceiling factory space to 18th century Paris, the story and song transporting players to lives wracked by betrayal and loss, to lives blazing with sacrifice and compassion.

Will Rousmaniere, who works in finance and plays the character Grantaire, traveled an hour from Gloucester to perform with his three children, ages 10, 7 and 5, all of whom are in the show.

He said the production's cast is deep, fortified by a spirited ensemble — members of which have played leads in other productions.

Kevin Mahaney of Billerica, a special-needs teacher who plays the character Enjolras, said the grand story's spirit enlivened the entire cast, which, as a whole, inspired individual performances.

"The energy of the ensemble is so strong, and that gets everyone going," he said.

Olivia Feole, of Haverhill, a pharmacy store employee who plays the character Eponine, first sang songs from "Les Miserables" in her room, as a 6-year-old, with her brother. She now sings some of the same songs, including "Little Fall of Rain."

Pentucket Players rehearse a scene from "Les Miserables" earlier this month at the old Washington mill in Lawrence. The musical is being performed through Saturday at the Rogers Center for the Arts at Merrimack College in North Andover.

John Middleton-Cox of North Andover plays the lead role of Jean Valjean. The performing arts director for Burlington public schools became enamored of "Les Miserables" as a teenager in Chazy, N.Y.

"Les Mis," as it has come to be known, was an obsession. He read the Victor Hugo novel upon which the musical is based. He transcribed a cassette of the show, every word from 18 songs, on his father's dictaphone.

When licenses became available about two years ago for community theater groups to perform "Les Miserables," Buzzell got a call from an agent asking if he wanted his group to be the first to perform it.

The story has universal appeal, Buzzell said. It's about change and spirit, about people reaching and wanting more. About love, compassion, hope and redemption.

"It's a huge story with so much heart," he said. For more information, visit http://www.pentucketplayers.
