Temporary sandbags shore up broken Ballardvale dam

A stone dam on the Shawsheen River that has withstood the test of time could not withstand the power of Mother Nature when part of the retaining wall holding it together gave way, releasing torrents of water and undermining an adjacent building. The Shawsheen Rubber company has reviewed damage to the Ballardvale dam and will present a repair plan to the Andover Conservation Commission soon. The damage took place over the weekend of Sept. 12-13, due to heavy rain. Last Wednesday, Sept. 16, the company had a temporary sandbag wall constructed on the right side of the dam — where a sluiceway retaining wall gave way — to stem the flow of river water.

The dam regulates the flow of the Shawsheen River, and water collects in a mill pond at the dam. "The pond was filled by approximately 12 p.m. (Thursday, Sept. 17) and water started to slowly fall over the dam," said John Filer, general manager of Shawsheen Rubber company. "Today (Friday, Sept. 18) we have full flow over the dam and we had workers return and reduce the side flow through the sluiceway to eliminate any possibility of continuing damage to the sluiceway." The town permit and other approvals for the dam repairs are expected to take anywhere from 30 to 90 days, estimated Bob Douglas, director of the town of Andover Conservation Division. Repairs will be made to

Andover English teacher wins civil suit against school department

By GABRIELLA CRUZ

A civil complaint filed against Andover Public Schools by English teacher Jennifer Meagher has been resolved, with the presiding judge ruling in Meagher's favor.

The Andover School Committee recently voted to authorize a negotiated $100,000 settlement.

Meagher was terminated by the Andover School Department in late June 2012 for "conduct unbecoming a teacher" after she urged colleagues not to cooperate with Andover High School's re-accreditation process through emails sent from a personal computer at home.

Jen Meagher

The Massachusetts Department of Labor Relations determined that Meagher was unjustly terminated and that her First Amendment right to free speech had been violated. The town of Andover, as ordered by the hearing officer, reinstated Meagher's employment and compensated her for lost wages.

Meagher then filed a federal civil suit seeking additional damages from the Andover Public Schools for abridging her right to free speech. In a press release from School Committee Chairwoman Annie Gilbert, the additional damages are described as "above and beyond the back pay and interest (Meagher)

Bungalow on Porter Road gets 12-month reprieve

The Preservation Commission has placed a 12-month delay to demolition of a circa 1915 bungalow at 33 Porter Road.

Barring someone moving the craftsman-style home or another preservation effort it will be razed after the year is up and replaced with a newly built single-family house.

Commission members voted unanimously, 5-0, for the demolition delay at their Sept. 8, public hearing.

Commission Chairman Karen Herman said the house is in good condition.

"It is a nice little craftsman-style house," she said in an interview. It's of a size

Senior housing eyed for downtown district

When Joe Ponti retired, he looked around his 2,900-square-foot house on Allen Road and realized it was time to move on.

Or, more precisely, move down - to a smaller-sized house with less maintenance, lower energy costs and a more affordable property tax bill.

"The kids were grown up and we didn't need the space," said Ponti, 68. "We wound up in a ranch near downtown with half the square footage, half the taxes and a third-less energy bill. Now I'm debt-free."

Selectman cleared of any ethics issues

Teachers' union had raised questions over Landry's role in health negotiations

By BILL KIRK
bkirk@eagletribune.com

Selectman Bob Landry said he has become the victim of a "political attack" by the teacher's union for his role in trying to save taxpayers nearly $1 million by switching health insurance plans.

Since he was elected nearly six months ago, he has withstood at least two state ethics challenges from the Andover Education Association, the union representing the town's 825 teachers and school workers.

Shortly after Landry was elected to the Board of Selectmen in March, Kerry Costello, president of the AEA, went before the Board of Selectmen and asked that the state Ethics Commission issue a ruling on whether Landry, a health insurance broker, should be allowed to negotiate health insurance contracts. The state Ethics Commission said he could. Last month, in a more formal request, Costello penned a lengthy letter asking the Ethics Commission to conduct an "investigation and issue a formal opinion" into whether Landry should be allowed to negotiate health insurance contracts for the town because he is a health insurance broker by profession.

Landry said that even though the state Ethics Commission has ruled twice that he has no conflict of interest, and even though he voluntarily sought a ruling from the Ethics Commission which cleared him of any conflict of interest, the AEA continues going after him.

"In my view, the AEA's complaint to the Ethics Commission was nothing more than a political attack," he said. "I think they are going after me for two reasons: First, I believe this is retaliation for my very public criticism of the AEA at the 2014 Town Meeting when, as a resident, I publicly criticized the AEA for blocking changes to Andover's health insurance plans that would have saved Andover taxpayers and employees almost $1 million annually.

"Second, the Teachers Union leadership are trying to keep me out of health insurance negotiations. I was elected on a promise to reform the health insurance plans we offer to town and school employees and retirees. It is a massive financial problem for the town and the retaining wall and any damage to the foundation of the Shawsheen Rubber building at 220 Andover St.

Heavy rain over the weekend of Sept. 12-13 caused a surge in Shawsheen River flow from upriver. The flow undercut stone foundation blocks and boulders in the sluiceway retaining wall.

Eroded blocks and boulders rolled into the river and one of the two-ton blocks tumbled down the sluiceway and blasted open the stack of stop logs used to restrict the flow of water at the side of the dam.

On Wednesday, Sept. 16, residents, among them former town manager Reginald "Buzz" Stapczynski, stopped to see the temporary sandbag wall constructed at the side of the dam.

The rubber company's contractor, T Ford, was on site with an excavator and lowered enormous plastic sandbags with handles — they looked like giant reusable grocery bags — into the water forming the wall.

Scoping out the wall for damage was GZA GeoEnvironmental's principal engineer, Anders Bjarngard, joined by Ed Hughes, a dam safety engineer with the state Office of Dam Safety.

"I came out for a look," Hughes said. Shawsheen Rubber hired GZA GeoEnvironmental, Inc., as its consultant on the repair project.

On Tuesday, Sept. 15, the mill pond, just upstream of the dam, was at its lowest level in 100 years, due to the breach and the lower than normal rainfall during the past summer, Douglas said.

Later, after the sandbag wall was first installed, it staunched the water flow so well that it had to be adjusted and allow some water to flow downriver, Douglas said.

"To preserve the health of the river," Douglas said. The river's plants, fish, crayfish and larvae need the fresh water flow, he said.

On Sunday morning,

Sept. 13, residents who live along the river, upstream of the dam, first noticed the extremely low water levels in the Shawsheen River.

Douglas said earlier that the breach, if left unrepaired and exposed to continuous water flow, would pose danger to the public and the adjoining mill building.

"It was unsettling to see so much of the bankway eroded by the force of the water, and it is just a matter of feet away from the critical corner foundation of the mill building," Douglas said.

Shawsheen Rubber, at 220 Andover St, owns half the circa-1838 dam.

Shawsheen Rubber hired GZA GeoEnvironmental, Inc., of Newburyport as its consultant.

The Ballardvale Dam is one of three dams in Andover, originally used to harness water power for mill production.

They are the only dams, with the exception of the remnants of an old rock dam, also in Andover, that stand between the Shawsheen and the mighty Merrimack River and, ultimately, the Atlantic Ocean.

The two other dams, plus the remnant rock dam, are scheduled to be removed in 2016, Douglas said.

that people are moving out of town because affordable, smaller homes like the one he found are in short supply.

"When I downsized, I learned a lot," he said. What he learned was that there is great demand for

A survey funded by Town Meeting and sent out to thousands of baby-boomers last year revealed what

Ponti thought all along - people want to live independently near services provided by the downtown area.

Town Meeting

For the past few months, he and a handful of other members of the Council on Aging have been meeting and brainstorming ideas to make Ponti's vision a reality.

They have met with town officials, including Senior Planner Lisa Schwarz, to come up with an idea that is still in its planning stages: an "In-Town Independent Living Overlay District," which would make it easier for developers or homeowners to build single-family homes or small condo complexes on undersized lots to cater to a whole demographic of people currently moving out of town - senior citizens.

On Oct. 6 at 6 p.m. on the third floor of the Memorial Hall Library, Ponti, along with subcommittee members Margaret O'Connor, Ann Grecoe, Joan Duff, Peter Morris and Schwarz, will host a 90-minute panel discussion on senior housing options. According to a draft of a flyer on the event, the Council on Aging members and town staff will be looking for testimony about the kinds of housing that seniors and baby-boomers want to see Andover.

Some of the questions to be discussed include: "What senior housing options would you like to see? Where should it be located? Why Now? What do you think?"

Once the group reaches agreement on the wording of the overlay district, they would propose it as a warrant article for next May's Town Meeting.

Members of the subcommittee said they don't have pre-conceived ideas about what the overlay district should include, but want to hear from members of the public.

"We want to make it easier to downsize, which was reinforced by the survey," Ponti said.

Small-scale housing

There are some basic tenets that the proposed overlay district would be built on, however.

For example, Ponti said, "concessions would be granted to allow seniors (or builders) to buy a lot on which a small house could be built." Currently, such a lot couldn't be developed within existing zoning codes.

Once a property is developed as a senior single-family home, it would be deed-restricted so that only another senior could live there, Ponti said.

"It would be senior housing in perpetuity," he said.

Another idea would be to make it easier for someone who owns a large home to convert it into multiple condos, such as the four-unit complex built from two homes at the corner of Summer and Whittier streets.

O'Connor, a local realtor, noted: "We are not talking about rentals. We are talking about ownership."

She said that as a realtor, she frequently is asked about downtown housing options but has to tell people there are limited housing opportunities.

The group also stresses that it is not talking about large-scale developments such as those currently proposed for Elm Street and the Strawberry Hill Farm on Lowell Street.

The district may even restrict the size of developments to just four units.

"Keeping seniors in town is good business," Ponti said. "They will continue to pay taxes and there will be a demand for services in town, which is good for local businesses."

The district would incorporate land about a mile or so from the center of downtown.

that the commission likes to save, she said.

Andover Building Inspector Chris Clemente said smaller existing homes typically cost much less than the homes they are replaced with, making them more affordable.

"For a young couple, a young family," he said.

The tear-down trend started in town about 10 years ago, he said. If someone buys a smaller 2,000-square-foot home for $300,000 and spends $100,000 improving it, the person still can't sell it for the $800,000 that a newly built 5,000- to 6,000-square-foot "McMansion" would command, he said.

"It's economy of scale," Clemente said.

Andover still has a good number of bungalows left in the downtown area, around Chestnut and Summer streets, and some interspersed with other style homes in areas such as Porter Road, he said.

On Sept. 8, 2015, the Preservation Commission imposed a 12-month delay to demolition of this bungalow at 33 Porter Road in Andover.

The applicant for the 33 Porter demolition is builder Gerard Welch. He said in an interview that he plans to build a single-family home on the 3/4-acre lot and would be interested if someone wants to move the existing house.

"We are putting out feelers," he said.

Herman and other commission members are hopeful that someone will save the house and move it to a new location, preferably in Andover, before it is demolished.

The home is listed on Andover's survey of historic homes.

The commission chairman said the addition on the back of the house was featured in Better Homes and Gardens magazine in the 1970s or 1980s.

The bungalow served as a summer camp for the owners for many years.

The property, at the corner of Porter and Manning Way, was once part of the Manning farm, according to the Andover Historic Preservation Web site.

The current owner is listed on the demolition application as Michelle Randazza P.R., Estate of Margaret J. Randazza.

Welch made application for the demolition on July 17.

No one spoke for or against the demolition at the Sept. 8 hearing, Herman said.

If the applicant finds someone willing to move the house, the commission will reopen the demolition delay hearing.

The commission's decision also includes a provision that large copper beech and oak trees at the Porter Road side of the property be retained.

The judge in the civil case agreed with the Massachusetts Department of Labor Relations and ordered the Andover Public Schools to further compensate Meagher.

According to the press release, after consultation with the Town of Andover's insurance carrier, the School Committee voted to authorize a negotiated settlement of $100,000. The settlement will be paid by the insurance carrier and will not affect town or school operating budgets.

"In voting to accept this settlement," Gilbert said in the press release, "the School Committee felt it was inadvisable to devote any further resources to this matter."

When asked if the committee felt the settlement was fair, Gilbert declined to comment.

Neither Meagher nor her attorney could be reached for comment.

What is that? Take a peek down the entrance to Andover Village Square at 89-93 Main St., and you'll see a set of stone columns.

It's fan shaped, a seven-fingered hand, a statue of sorts that will sport a fountain on one side and fire pit on the other in the coming weeks.

It's a pair of opposites, a Yin and Yang sort of thing at Andover Village Square, says John Fenton, managing partner of the 60,000-square-foot development.

Once it is up and running, you'll see a fountain with cascading water reflecting off the stone from the Main Street side, to the east.

From the opposite side, the west, the back of the square, you'll see a fire pit -- a metal sculpture of burning wood fired by a real gas flame. Or something like that. It's kind of hard to picture at this point.

Chris Huntress designed the courtyard and did the fire pit design and Fenton added the fountain, he said.

This is a weekly feature about the odd and curious.

Man indicted following heroin arrest in Andover

WIRE REPORT

A man arrested in Andover in June on charges of heroin trafficking was indicted by an Essex County grand jury this week.

Jose Casellas, 37, of Lawrence, was indicted on Monday on charges of trafficking heroin over 200 grams, possession with intent to distribute fentanyl, unlawful possession of a firearm, and possession of a firearm with an obliterated serial number. He will be arraigned in Essex Superior Court at a later date.

"We allege that this defendant was a major player in an extensive heroin and fentanyl distribution operation," said state Attorney General Maura Healey. "We will continue to work with our law enforcement partners to tackle the heroin and prescription drug epidemic from all angles, including getting these lethal drugs off of our streets and out of the hands of those struggling with addiction."

Casellas was arrested in June in a joint operation involving Massachusetts State Police assigned to the Attorney General's office, the Massachusetts State Police Transportation Drug Unit (TDU), the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), and the Lawrence, Andover, and Methuen Police Departments.

"This investigation was a prime example of how state, local and federal law enforcement agencies can work together to make a city and a geographic area a safer place for people to live, work and raise their families," said Colonel Richard D. McKeon, Superintendent of the Massachusetts State Police. "This showed how, working together, we are able to dismantle high-volume drug organizations around the state."

In June, authorities from the State Police TDU began an investigation into an alleged drug trafficking operation in the Lawrence area that they believed was responsible for distributing heroin to Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Authorities arrested Casellas in Andover and a search warrant was executed at a Lawrence residence out of which authorities allege he ran his operation.

At the time of arrest, authorities seized approximately one kilogram each of heroin and fentanyl, more than 11 kilograms in cutting agent, three guns, kilo presses, digital scales, and other packaging and distribution materials at the residence.

Residents invited to Zero Waste Day

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
gcruz@andovertownsmam.com

Organizers of the 7th annual Tewksbury Zero Waste Day are welcoming Andover residents to bring unwanted, gently used items to the Wynn Middle School parking lot on Saturday, Sept. 26, rain or shine. The event begins at 9 a.m., and more than 75 volunteers will be on hand to receive items until 1 p.m.

The Tewksbury Zero Waste Day partners with the Andover Zero Waste Day, which takes place in May, to collect usable items from Tewksbury and Andover residents. Donation categories include clothing, furniture, household goods, baby gear, building supplies, pet supplies, books and media and bikes.

Items collected from the event are distributed to 14 local non-profit organizations. Volunteers will also be accepting recyclable items including off-rim tires, inkjet cartridges and batteries at no cost. Electronics will also be accepted for recycling at a small fee based on size.

The event is sponsored by the Tewksbury Recycling Committee and Tewksbury

Congregational Church, and sponsors urge people donating items to follow a simple guideline, "If you would not share it with a friend, please don't bring it to Zero Waste Day."

Wynn Middle School is located at 1 Griffin Way in Tewksbury. For more information about the event and acceptable donation and recycling items, visit www.zwdtewksbury.org.

The Andover Police Department, in conjunction with the Drug Enforcement Administration, will host a local event to participate in National Drug Take Back Day on Saturday, Sept. 26 at West Elementary School. The event will begin at 10 a.m., and medications will be accepted until 2 p.m.

National Drug Take Back Day provides residents with an opportunity to dispose of expired, unused or unwanted prescription drugs through a free and anonymous event that aims to prevent substance abuse.

"The Andover Police Department is proud to support National Drug Take Back Day every year," Chief Patrick Keefe said in a press release. "I encourage all residents to stop by the West Elementary School on the 26th to ensure that their unwanted and unused medications never end up in the wrong hands."

Youth Center construction enters homestretch

By TERRY DATE
tdate@eagletribune.com

After meeting at the Town Offices each month for 3-1/2 years, members of the Youth Center Building Committee met for the first time in the place they are overseeing the construction of — the $6.4 million Cormier Youth Center. Chairman Chris Huntress and fellow members gathered at tables in the lobby of 40 Whittier Court on Thursday, Sept. 17, and learned the end of most of the construction is clearly in sight. Ihor Raniuk, town construction project manager, said the project is expected to be complete and a full occupancy permit issued by the end of this month.

The town has already issued a partial occupancy permit, for everything but the multi-purpose room where the floor is being installed and curtains for the stage and windows need to be hung. Some unused space at the back of the building, as well as the kitchen, will remain sealed off until funding can be procured to finish those parts of the building.

Youth Services Director Bill Fahey announced no grand opening date but said later that the opening is expected to be some time in October.

Before Thursday's meeting a dozen people who have helped make the center a reality stood in its gym, a faint smell of paint and polyurethane in the air.

Among them was Diane Costagliola, chairwoman of the Andover Youth Foundation, a private group formed 20 years ago to build the youth center.

"It's been a long haul," she said. The Foundation's public/private venture on the project has been a good one, the Foundation raising $3.7 million, the town contributing $2 million and the Wood Foundation $700,000.

Along the way the Youth Foundation expanded its mission to include supporting Andover Youth Services, which has provided programs for thousands of young people, most recently out of a house on Pearson Street, she said.

"It takes my breath away, for the community and for the youth," Costagliola said of the new center.

Center programs will include drama, sports, education and presentations on healthy living. The center will also support programs for elderly residents.

'Punch list'

At Thursday's 7 a.m. meeting, Mike Cronin, project manager for project contractor Dagle Electric, said the gym needs only a final urethane coat on the floor and wall panels over the wallboard. The wood floor gleamed. Its lines and center court logo were finished a week ago.

The major work left to be done at the Center is the floor in the multi-purpose room, the testing of its lights and sound system, and hanging of stage and window curtains.

Otherwise what remains are punch list items include caulking, painting and final inspections for any items that need attention.

"We are marching through the punch list," he said. The project was 97 percent done as of last month.

The multi-purpose room, a setting for arts and education activities, was added to the project after Phillips Academy donated $500,000 toward its completion.

The building's exterior is complete. A flag pole from the Old Town Hall is to be installed in a grassy area across from the center's entrance, at Doherty Middle School.

Inside the Center's lobby a commemorative plaque will hang. Building Committee members will review the plaque's design.

Unfinished space 'sealed off'

Looking ahead, Huntress said the Center may eventually, if funds are raised, use an unfinished space at the far end of the building for an audio-visual room, conference room and workshop.

That area was not part of the Center's original intended use and will be sealed off, said Ed Ataide, Andover deputy director of plant and facilities.

Another area that was not part of the Center's original intended use, and will also be sealed off, is the kitchen, Ataide said.

The Building Committee will meet for what is expected to be their final time on Oct. 15. The location has yet to be determined.

Costagliola looks ahead to the center serving Andover youth.

"A place by the kids, for the kids, where the kids can belong," she said.

they know I plan to continue to push hard for significant reform."

Costello said that even though the Ethics Commission has cleared Landry, the issue is still very much alive.

"That's where it stands," she said. "It doesn't mean it will automatically close the gate on a topic. It's an additional component or variable by an objective third party. It think it's a reasonable public perception that should be vetted. On the other hand, how would any of us know if he did get any kind of bonus from them? I'll take a person at their word until there's concrete data otherwise."

Landry retorted, "she's trying to create the appearance of impropriety when there is none."

Voluntary ruling

According to a timeline of events compiled by Landry, he met with Town Counsel Tom Urbelis just a couple of days after he was elected to find out what kind of disclosures he needed to make regarding his business.

Urbelis suggested he contact the Ethics Commission. On March 27, he called and left a message with an attorney at the Commission.

On March 30, Costello went before the Board of Selectmen and publicly stated that Landry, an insurance broker, "could be considered as having a conflict of interest," according to minutes of the meeting. "In the interest of transparency she is asking for a decision from the State Ethics Committee."

At the meeting, Landry said he is an employee benefits broker and has met with Town Counsel who suggested he check with the State Ethics Commission. Landry said he is paid commissions from various health insurance companies. "In his view, there is no conflict and no opportunity for financial gains and he is waiting to hear back from the State Ethics Committee," according to the minutes.

On March 31, Landry sent a letter to the Ethics Commission explaining what he does professionally and what his role would be as a selectman. He argued he has no potential for financial gain by working as a health insurance broker while also negotiating health insurance contracts on behalf of the town because he works on commission.

"The commission compensation I receive from each insurer is based solely on the clients I have placed with them," he wrote. "I receive only standard commissions from all insurers. ... Also, if one argued I may garner favor from the selected insurer, that would also mean I would lose favor with the other insurers where I also have business."

He then worked with a state Ethics Commission attorney on how to fill out the "Disclosure of Appearance of Conflict of Interest" form, as required by state law. The form was filed with the Town Clerk's office in early April.

In it, he goes over much of the same ground as in his letter, stating that he has "never had and will never have any financial interest, whatsoever, in any of the town of Andover's insurance plans, including health insurance."

Landry said he thought that would be the end of it.

"A few days after the election, I learned that there may be a potential perception of a conflict of interest," he said. "I addressed this issue immediately and with full transparency. I worked with the Ethics Commission for almost a week to make sure that the proper procedure was followed and that my disclosure was as comprehensive as possible."

"I also believe I responded respectfully to Kerry Costello, president of the AEA, at the March 30 Board of Selectmen meeting when she raised this issue. I had thought this would put the issue to rest once and for all."

AEA letter

But that was not to be. In early August, Costello issued a more formal request for an "investigation" in whether Landry's business and public dealings may represent a conflict of interest.

In an Aug. 6 letter to the Ethics Commission, Costello wrote: "We believe Mr. Landry has either a real or a very strong potential for conflict of interest violation because of his past attempts to influence the Town of Andover's decision to move from Blue Cross Blue Shield to Tufts Health Plan for the provision of employee and retiree health insurance benefits. Mr. Landry receives brokerage commissions from various insurance providers, including Tufts Health Plan."

She went on to write that in 2014, Landry advocated for the town to switch from Blue Cross to Tufts "under the guise of savings to the taxpayers. We believe he may have been in contact with one or more of the Tufts sales representatives who were in active negotiations with town officials at the time."

She went on to write that Landry "then tried to influence the voters at the May 2014 Town Meeting to underfund the health insurance budget appropriation, apparently as a way to force the town to move to Tufts, even after it had already made the decision to stay with Blue Cross/Blue Shield."

She said she believed that if Landry had been successful, he may have received "some sort of direct or indirect benefit" from getting the town to move to Tufts.

"The town would have represented a very lucrative $20 million per year contract for Tufts," she wrote. "We believe Landry would have received some sort of preferential or special treatment by Tufts in future dealings..."

She said that now that Landry is an elected official, having been voted into office in March 2015, he has sought clearance from the Ethics Commission, and has "summarily declared that he had no conflict of interest as a private insurance broker."

However, she states, Landry has taken an "active role" in health insurance negotiations and has "participated in closed-door Board of Selectmen executive sessions on collective bargaining and health insurance strategy."

She went on to say that "Although Mr. Landry may not currently have a direct conflict of interest, we believe there is the potential for one to occur; and surely, he has a strong appearance of a conflict of interest when he seeks to participate in ... developing the town's health insurance strategies."

She stated that the public would never know if "he were to derive some kind of personal benefit from something he had a hand in" regarding the town's insurance matters. "Is there any way of knowing for sure?" she asked.

No further action

In an Aug. 19 letter from the Ethics Commission to Landry, the deputy chief of investigations with the department wrote that his case had been reviewed and discussed and terminated.

"Relying on information you provided, including the disclosure you filed with the office of the Town Clerk, and on any other necessary follow-up investigation, we are satisfied that this matter does not require any further action on our part."

Destination Imagination gears up for new season

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
gcruz@andovertownsm.com

The organizers of Destination Imagination will hold a town-wide informational meeting Wednesday, Sept. 30, at Doherty Middle School.

The meeting, scheduled for 7 p.m., will acquaint prospective parents and students with the non-profit, creative problem-solving program. Through Destination Imagination, Andover students are challenged to create original, imaginative solutions to open-ended problems with an emphasis on teamwork and creativity.

Stephanie Maze-Hsu, the Andover Coordinator of the program, not only volunteers, but has also seen its lasting impact firsthand.

"My own children participated from early elementary school through their college years," Maze-Hsu said. "Their ability to be thoughtful, responsive leaders is a

DI, as it's called, allows students to choose challenges from six areas, including technical, scientific, performance, improv, structure and community. They then work in groups to develop solutions and compete in both competitive and non-competitive events. A display of diversity

'Of Many Colors' exhibit speaks to changing face of Andover

By CAITLIN WALSH
cwalsh@eagletribune.com

When the Andover Coalition for Education was approached last June with a proposal for funding "Of Many Colors: Portraits of Multiracial Families" in the elementary schools, the group was immediately intrigued by the project.

ACE members agreed that the photo exhibit would be a great way to kick off the school year.

"The beginning of the school year is a lot about family, community," Jennifer Srivastava, the director of ACE, said. "We thought it coincided nicely."

"Of Many Colors" was pioneered by the Family Diversity Project, a nonprofit organization in Amherst devoted to educating people about racial identity and racism.

The collection, which has been touring the country since 1993, includes photographs and interviews with 20 families who "have bridged the racial divide through interracial relationships and/or adoption," according to the project's website. It has been used in schools, colleges and communities to help create safe environments by developing empathy and caring in students, teachers and staff members.

"We have a growing population in Andover whose first language at home is not English, and we're really wanting to celebrate that diversity," said Lisa Glickstein, grants coordinator for the Andover Public Schools.

Glickstein spearheaded the fundraising to bring the collection to Andover, acquiring the financial support of ACE as well as contributions from the parent teacher organizations at all the local elementary schools.

She viewed the project as having multiple layers. For students, she saw the learning potential, tying into their social studies and math classes, for example. Educators brainstormed ways to incorporate it into the curriculum, with students perhaps sharing artifacts indicative of their culture, pinpointing their place of origin for their heritage on a map, and gathering statistics on the changing demographics in Andover.

For teachers, Glickstein envisioned it helping them to identify and discourage threats or behavior based on stereotypes or individuals' identities. An optional class on the topic is being offered to elementary school teachers this fall. The class was previously presented to high school teachers.

The general community, she said, stands to benefit through the exhibit itself, which is on display through September in the elementary schools as well as the circulation area at Memorial Hall Library on North Main Street.

"On the community side, it is to elevate awareness of our changing community in a celebratory way," Glickstein said of the project's reach.

Stefani Traina, the community services librarian at Memorial Hall Library, said that while no specific events have been planned for the exhibit, information about it is included in the library's weekly electronic newsletter as well as on its website.

"We always like to collaborate with the community because we serve all ages and are in a unique position to reach a broad audience," Traina said.

Local psychologist pens second book

Dr. Michael Levy, a psychologist with a private practice in Andover, and the director of Substance Use Services at North Shore Medical Center in Salem, Mass., has published his second book.

"Celebrity and Entertainment Obsession: Understanding Our Addiction" explores why society is obsessed with celebrities, including people who are simply famous for being famous, as well as the preoccupation with being entertained.

Dr. Levy will discuss and sign copies of his latest book on Thursday, Oct. 1, at 6 p.m. at the Andover Bookstore, 89 Main St. His discussion will examine how society's obsession with beauty, vulnerability to addiction, the need for idols, and voyeuristic predispositions all contribute to an obsession with celebrities.

Hike for Hope returns to The Park
Benefit for Lazarus House Ministries will be held Sunday, Oct. 4

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
gcruz@andovertownsmen.com

Nothing like talking a walk through downtown Andover with your closest friends in the fall. All 1,000 of them.

Next weekend, area residents will have a chance to do just that when the Hike for Hope steps off from The Park at the corner of Bartlet and Chestnut streets at about 11:30 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 4.

The hike benefits Lazarus House Ministries, 412 Hampshire St., Lawrence, which offers scores of services to less fortunate residents of the Merrimack Valley.

"Hike for Hope brings the community together," said Maureen Burns-Murtha, events manager at Lazarus House Ministries. "Churches come, schools come, families come. Because it's been 15 years, we're starting to see different generations coming back. We're very grateful to live in such a generous community."

The ministry, though well-known in the Merrimack Valley, is commonly mistaken as a one-or-two service provider, Burns-Murtha explained.

"A lot of people think we're just a thrift store and soup kitchen, or just a homeless shelter," she said. "But with nine buildings and all of the programs we offer, we're doing everything we can to break the cycle of poverty."

The 2014 Hike for Hope fundraising event drew crowds of more than 1,000 people, and event staff hope to top last year's record turnout.

The 16th annual Hike includes the traditional, three-mile walk through Andover, but also boasts food and entertainment. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. and the walk starts at 1 p.m.

Hike for Hope is one of the largest local fundraising walks in the Merrimack Valley and is responsible for funding many of the free services that Lazarus House Ministries provides to impoverished individuals and families each year.

During the 2015 fiscal year, the ministry gave out more than 86,000 bags of groceries to families through its food pantry, and at its emergency shelter and transitional housing facilities, provided nearly 32,000 bed nights -- 59 percent of which were occupied by children. Along with its three thrift stores, soup kitchen and food pantry, Lazarus House opened Ishah House this year, a transitional housing facility for homeless or at-risk single women.

Of the programs offered by Lazarus House, all are aimed not only at helping people get out of poverty, but more importantly, how to stay out of poverty and build careers, relationships and self-confidence. The ministry provides English language instruction through Rosetta Stone and classroom-based learning. Those who are successful with learning English can then participate in culinary training programs, housekeeping work studies and other career training services.

Last year, being the event's first year in downtown Andover, Hike for Hope raised $183,000 for Lazarus House Ministries. Burns-Murtha is confident that, because of the community's continued generosity, this year's event will continue the growth trend. For those are interested in donating to the ministry but who cannot attend the Hike for Hope event, Lazarus House is always accepting food, clothing and furniture donations. Visit their website for drop-off locations and hours of operation.

Health insurance, pensions weigh heavily on town budget

Is the town really facing financial ruin, as stated by former Finance Committee member Max Arai in his resignation letter, as reported in last week's Townsman?

We're not so sure but it's a point clearly worth discussing. Arai was appointed to the Finance Committee last year. From the start, he challenged conventional wisdom on a number of topics, including whether the town was doing enough about its long-term liabilities, such as pensions and retiree health care.

He and many others in town, such as Selectman Bob Landry and Retirement Board member Thomas Hartwell, believe the problem is much larger than town officials have made it out to be. They say that the town is facing a burden of $250 million - a quarter-billion dollars - in long-term liabilities.

They say that unless the town gets a grip on personnel spending, the problem will only continue to grow. The only way to get a grip on spending, they and others argue, is to fundamentally change municipal union contracts. The only way to do that, however, is to negotiate with the unions. And even then, it may not be possible because state law dictates how employees must be compensated. The only way to change state law is to have the state Legislature pass new laws that give cities and towns the flexibility they need to negotiate contracts that will reduce the long-term liabilities.

But that ain't going to happen.

At least as long as the Legislature is run by elected officials who care more about getting re-elected than doing the right thing for taxpayers. So it's not really the Finance Committee's fault that the town is in such dire straits.

Finance Director Donna Walsh said the town is doing what it can to deal with the problem - putting money aside every year to help fund the liabilities. A committee has been formed that is working on a strategy to deal with it.

She agrees with Arai that things are about to change. New rules starting in FY 2018 will require every community in the state to list the pension and health care liabilities. In the interests of transparency, that's a good thing. Now, taxpayers will be able to see how big the problem really is. But it won't change much.

"It's always been in there," she said. "Now it will be recorded on the balance sheet. It doesn't change our actual liability. It only makes it more visible."

And it won't just be in Andover. "Every community will be in the same boat," she said, adding that bond-rating companies, which in effect set a community's borrowing rates, are more interested in whether or not a municipality has a strategy.

"They are looking for a solid plan," she said. She believes Andover's plan is solid and that the town will retain its stellar bond rating.

There are other elements of the problem, however, that are out of local control.

In 2011, she noted, a bill was never acted on by the Legislature which would have changed the number of years an employee had to work before getting lifetime health insurance. Now, someone who works for 10 years can get lifetime health insurance once they reach the age of 55. Someone who works for the town for 20 years gets that lifetime coverage no matter how old they are. This has created a huge burden. The town's health care budget has gone up millions of dollars a year, and now sits at about 10 percent of the annual spending plan.

Walsh said the town and unions are working together to bring down health insurance costs in other ways. For 2016, she said, the town and unions changed the plan and increased the deductible to employees. The result was that overall, the cost of health insurance only increased 6 or 7 percent, rather than the forecasted 10 percent increase.

While taxpayers are still on the hook for half the deductibles, it was progress.

"The town and unions are working together to help solve this problem," she said.

SPEAKING ON SMALL BUSINESS

Inspiring Andover Woman: Atty. Anna M. Greeley, First Woman Town Treasurer

Andover Stories

Gail Ralston

Andover Historical Society

Let me introduce you to Atty. Anna M. Greeley. Anna grew up in town where her father, James E. Greeley, was the popular owner of downtown's Greeley's Market. Mr. Greeley was also a visible and active member of a number of town organizations. Anna clearly followed in her father's footsteps.

Born in Boston in 1905, Anna first attended the Reading schools but graduated from Punchard High. She received her undergraduate degree from Boston University and her LLB from Portia Law School in Boston, now the New England School of Law. Atty. Greeley was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in November 1938, and the Federal Bar in June 1941.

Public life for Atty. Greeley began in 1950 when she was elected to the School Committee, later becoming its chair. Finding herself in this position in 1956 during the divisive move to Andover's Town Manager form of government, she spoke of the committee's concerns stating, "the repair and maintenance of school buildings and purchasing of supplies are more properly the responsibility of the School Committee. The committee can see no educational advantage of material savings."

Anna Greeley's photograph appeared in the Andover Townsman in 1955 when she announced she would run for town treasurer.

Fortunately, taking this stand did not hurt her politically, as it had other town officials, when she ran for Treasurer that same year. When announcing her candidacy, she pointed to her experience in financial matters during her then 16 years as a practicing attorney where she specialized in related work, including investment management. She also held the position as Assistant Treasurer of her father's business and maintained law offices in both Andover and Boston.

Her bid for Town office was successful and she continued as Treasurer by appointment - following the change to the Town Manager system - until her retirement in 1970.

An Andover town philosophy seems to be "when you want something done, ask a busy person." And this was certainly true of Atty. Greeley. Not only did she have her public appointments and her private practice, but she also found time to add her membership to many local organizations. Active in St. Augustine's Church and on the Parish Council, she also served as Regent of the Catholic Daughters of America. She was the corresponding secretary of the Andover Chapter of the American Red Cross, a trustee of the Margaret G. Towle Fund of Andover, the Lawrence Garden Club and the Andover Historical Society. Atty. Greeley was also a former secretary-treasurer of the Board of Trade.

A glimpse at Atty. Greeley's funeral mass at St. Augustine's in 1975 showed the respect she had in town. Mass readers included School Superintendent Dr. Richard F. McGrail and long-time Moderator James D. Doherty. Bearers included Attys. Andrew Shea and Phillip Sullivan, who were associated with Atty. Greeley in her law practice, and Town Collector-Treasurer Myron H. Muise. Included in the delegations of attendees were members of The Lawrence Bar Association, Bon Secours Guild, the Court St. Monica, and many other town officials and town hall employees.

Offering the eulogy was 39-year School Committee member William A. Doherty. Mr. Doherty, a classmate of Anna's at Punchard, pointed to her devotion to the Town and to the Schools. He praised her strength of conviction, making decisions according to her own conscience, even when those went against majority opinion and public pressures. He honored her relationship with her father, even stronger after her mother died. Mr. Doherty felt "she took on (her father's) ways, the abilities and the thinking of a good man."

Today, women in town positions is, of course, not unusual. In fact, we now are fortunate to have Donna Walsh, Finance & Budget Director, overseeing Accounting, Treasury, Assessing and Central Purchasing. But there had to be a first, and Atty. Anna M. Greeley proved an inspiration and role model for all those who followed - women and men.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Training needed to fight opiates

Editor, Townsman:

The two letters to the editor by Howard J. Shaffer and Bob Pokress of Sept. 3, 2015, pointed out not needing to hire social workers to the Andover Police Department. In school departments, staffing exists as a first line of defense to combat pupil concerns. One question to answer: is staffing adequate to handle opiate addiction?

I was employed by New York City during the heroin epidemic in the 1960s and 1970s and saw many approaches to combat huge problems, ranging from incarceration to honest attempts to help "kick the habit." My agency, Human Resources Administration, created special units to help addicts move into viable treatment, and shortly after, did the same during the AIDS epidemic. Because a few of HRA's commissioners were social workers, the agency mandated staff to professionalize their training at various universities and were paid to do so. I doubt that can be done for Andover's health professionals.

'Refreshing' take on national politics

Editor, Townsman:

Your recent letter to the editor from W. Edwards Deming and Ross B. Elkin was the best and most refreshingly honest I have read in your newspaper in the last 31 years I have lived in town.

How wonderful to be spoken to like a grownup. How nice to have someone confirm what we all know is commonsense but have been led to believe from the political class that the things taught us by our parents, what we have learned in our own life experiences and we know in our gut to be true is in fact wrong.

We cannot have it all. Nothing is free. Accumulated debt does matter and inattention to it will ultimately end badly. Like our own household budgets, we must pay for what we buy, we must prioritize our purchases to fit the income we have and there is never a free lunch regardless of the number of politicians whom tell us otherwise. Numbers don't lie, but they can be an inconvenient truth and the more we ask and demand sensible discussion of the numbers related to spending and ideas in politicians' minds for more spending (and votes), the less we will be swayed by the emotions for free healthcare, free cell phones, free college education, free daycare, bigger social security checks, free solar installations and electric cars whose price is heavily paid by the taxpayer.

We don't have a revenue problem, we have a spending problem and an inability to prioritize our wants. Let us all grow up and demand politicians that treat us like the adults we are.

Kudos to Deming and Elkin.

WEB QUESTION

The Preservation Commission, a town board that doesn't usually make headlines, has been in the news a lot in recent months. They have been busy reviewing developers' plans for demolishing different buildings around town - from historic barns to relatively new homes and even the colossal Franciscan Center on River Road.

Do you think the town should try to save old buildings?

Yes. They give the town character.

No. In America, there is a concept called private property. If you own it, you should be able to do whatever you want with it.

Yes. Older buildings are like living links to our past and we must preserve history whenever we can.

No. Old buildings, if not maintained properly, are an eyesore and a danger to the surrounding neighborhood.

Trails and Sails tour highlights West Parish Garden Cemetery

The West Parish Historic Cemetery Tour takes visitors back in time

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
gcruz@andovertownsmen.com

It was a beautiful day to look at a cemetery.

Close to 30 people embarked on a tour of West Parish Garden Cemetery Saturday afternoon, under blue skies and comfortable temperatures. The tour highlighted the cemetery's history, stopped by notable grave sites and took visitors through The Chapel at West Parish, built in 1909.

"I think people liked the chapel most," said Superintendent Mark Atwood. "People enjoy hearing stories of days gone by and learning about local history."

Atwood also said tour participants really enjoyed hearing the history of textile mill owner William Wood and the details of his life and death.

"We've been doing this for at least 10 years now," Atwood said. "It's absolutely something we will continue to do."

The Trails and Sails tour featured two other stops in Andover this weekend, including the Shawsheen River Greenway Walk and the Opening Reception for the Fall Exhibitions, both on Sunday.

The Shawsheen River Greenway Walk highlighted old mill buildings, a stone railroad bridge and took participants through downtown greenway pieces, all of which have not been visible to the public for many years. Walk participants also toured the Purden Reservation in the middle of town.

A new season of exhibitions was on display at the Addison Gallery of American Art, and guests were invited to take in exhibits

Andover Cultural Council seeks grant applicants

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
gcruz@andovertownsmen.com

To improve the culture and quality of life in Andover, the Andover Cultural Council is welcoming organizations, schools, artists and residents to apply for grants to help fund locally based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities. Applications will be accepted through Oct. 15.

The Andover Cultural Council received $5,800 in available funding this year, which is nearly an $800 increase over last year's budget. Last year, the council awarded 18 grants supporting projects including concerts, classes, museum exhibits, lectures and workshops. With its budget increase, the council is excited to have the opportunity to offer more money to more applicants.

"This is great news for Andover," said Leslie Seaton Malis, Cultural Council chairwoman, in a press release. "It means we'll be able to support a greater range of events and activities."

The council accepts applications for a wide variety of projects, but places special emphasis on those that aim to foster diversity in the community, encourage community involvement and promote collaboration between community groups. Typically, the council receives more applications than it is able to fund, which makes the process more competitive than applicants may expect.

"It's always competitive," Malis explained, "so we really encourage all prospective applicants to contact us prior to submitting an application. We want to do all we can to make the process as un-daunting and straightforward as possible."

Each year, the Massachusetts Cultural Council distributes more than $2 million to 329 local cultural councils across the state with a goal of promoting the availability of cultural experiences to every Massachusetts citizen. Supporting thousands of community-based projects in each of the state's 351 cities and towns, the Massachusetts Cultural Council is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation.

For more information, email the council at acc01810@gmail.com or visit www.andoverculturalcouncil.com. Complete guidelines and applications forms can be found online at www.mass-culture.org.

Andover man follows his dream to Napa Valley

A college phenom learns chemistry, bottles Desire

By JUDY WAKEFIELD
jwakefield@andovertownsm.com

It's a long way from Andover, Mass., to Napa Valley, Calif.

Just ask 2008 Andover High School graduate David James, who did the grueling, 57-hour drive in a moving truck six years ago.

It was a journey driven by the young man's desire to become a winemaker. And to date, he can proudly say, he has succeeded.

After working as a "cellar-rat" cleaning fermentation tanks for a couple of years, he worked his way up the ladder, learned the tricks of the trade, and even navigated the legal maze of a distribution deal.

Now, his wine, a rosé he calls "Define," is for sale on the East Coast. Local residents will even get a chance to taste it at a special sipping-event tomorrow night, Sept. 25, from 5 to 7 p.m. at Andover Classic Wines in Shawsheen Village.

How it began

This 2008 Andover High School graduate was just like so many of his classmates. After matriculating, he went off to college - in this case to the University of Colorado at Boulder in September 2008. His major was undeclared and he had no idea what he wanted to do with his life. It was a family vacation to Italy that changed everything for him.

The son of wine enthusiasts, he reluctantly went on a wine tasting tour with them - and that's when his "aha" moment happened.

"We went to a vineyard in the mountains and learned all about the soil and weather," he said. "Then, the vineyard owner showed up on a motorcycle and invited us to see his state-of-the-art laboratory where he made his wine. Then, he dressed in a jacket and tie, put down a white linen tablecloth and we tasted his wine. He was a storyteller and had great stories that he shared. I enjoyed the dynamic of what was going on and realized that's what I want to do."

He was 19-years-old and started making plans as soon as he got back to Andover. He transferred his college credits to Napa Valley College and drove West with a buddy. Talking about his winemaker dream to anyone who would listen eventually led to a wine apprenticeship and an inexpensive room to rent. James was on his way.

"I was so focused," he said. "I really wanted this."

Finding a niche

Poised, polite and a perfect representation of his "seek happiness in every moment" message imprinted on the Define wine bottle, he said he simply had a passion for wine-making. He spent years learning about the chemistry of the business and worked as a cellar-rat to learn even more.

David James, 28, formerly of Andover, moved out to Napa Valley, Calif., to learn about the wine industry and eventually make his own brand of wine.

A cellar-rat is a wine worker at the bottom of the wine-making totem pole as the "rats" clean tanks and handle menial work. He got very familiar with the pink run-off juice that drips from the grapes during processing. Cellar-rats are the ones who get rid of the juice. But James saved the juice and studied it.

"I just kept learning, just learned as much as I could," said James, now 28, and getting married next month, as he reflected on the past 10 years. He doesn't have a single complaint about how tough it is to be from the East Coast with a West Coast winemaker's dream.

He experimented with the pink juice that was a byproduct of the wine-making process and started to focus on making a rose' wine with it.

Chardonnay and Pinot Noir seemed to dominate the Napa wine scene but James said research showed there was room for a new rosé. Typically, rosé wine is made from a red wine byproduct produced by the Saignee method. He skips that method and focuses on growing the perfect grapes for his rose.

"Our process of producing the rosé doesn't include the red wine run off juice (called saignée; "San-Yay" meaning bleed in French). We say 'no way Saignée and grow the premier Napa and Sonoma grapes with the intention of premium rosé," James said. "We then use what is called a Bladder Press to press the whole clusters of grapes to then collect and pump the pink juice into a stainless steel tank for fermentation."

A small angel investor got the business going and the investment money paid for grapes and the oak barrels used for fermenting. Define was introduced last May. "The original small angel investor was a family member, but now is a combination of a few other partners from the East Coast," he said.

Today, he leases space on a vineyard in Napa that grows his grapes.

Price-point

Define sells for $22.99 a bottle and sells well at the liquor store, said Shawsheen wine and store manager Andrea DiFiore.

"I love it. It's a great wine and I'm so glad to finally have it," DiFiore said. "The distributing process took such a long time."

James said a long legal process is involved with distribution rights and it took almost three years to get Define on wine store shelves in Massachusetts. He'll be at the local wine tasting event to answer questions and to listen to sipping reactions.

After his hometown tasting, he's off to a wine festival in Newport, R.I., where Define will be served on tap. A wine keg holds about five gallons of wine or 120 full-sized wine glasses and he's hoping for good sales.

West Coast wine publications call James "the intern from Boston" who makes "... good stuff. It's not your typically sweet, innocuous rose' ... this is a serious rose' that makes you stop what you're doing and take notice," reported the Napa Valley Life Magazine.

"It's very exciting for me ... people in Andover have been so supportive ... that means a lot," he said.

Greek Festival draws thousands for food, fun

By GABRIELLA CRUZ
Townsmen staff

Thousands of people filled their stomachs, their ears and their eyes with all things Greek recently, courtesy of Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church's annual Andover Greek Festival.

Festival-goers were treated to live entertainment all weekend, including two live bands, traditional Greek dance performances and even baklava cooking demonstrations. The festival, held Sept. 12-13, also offered Greek wine tasting, a silent auction, face painting and vendors selling Greek goods from jewelry to olive oil bottled in Greece.

Traditional Greek food was in abundance, ranging from more common options like gyros and Greek salad, to lesser known delicacies like spanakopica, or spinach pie, and loukanico, or Greek sausage.

"Then we had the desserts," said former Town Manager Reginald 'Buzz' Stapczynski, Parish Council president. "I can't even begin to name them all! But the loukoumades, the Greek fried dough, I remember that one."

Jim Patsios heats up some pita bread for gyros at the annual Greek Festival at the Saints Constantine & Helen Greek Orthodox Church on Sunday, Sept. 13.

Hungry attendees wait in the buffet line at the Greek Festival last Sunday, Sept. 13.

Andover man takes on Jeopardy

By JUDY WAKEFIELD
jwakefield@andovertownsmen.com

A self-described geek who loves trivia is how this “Jeopardy” contestant with Andover ties talked about himself after his appearance on the popular television quiz show last week.

Bobby O’Neill, 29, grew up in Andover and graduated from Andover High School in 2004. Now living in Brookline, he is clearly a very patient geek as he tried to get on the show for 10 years.

“It was a bucket list sort of thing for me,” he said. “I took the online test for 10 years. I really wanted to get on the show.”

O’Neill said the online “Jeopardy” test for potential contestants is available once every six to nine months online. He has been taking it faithfully for the past 10 years. He finally got that long-awaited call to be a contestant and he flew out to California in late August for the taping. The show aired last Thursday, Sept. 17. He placed second and won $2,000.

Bobby O’Neill, a senior fraud investigator from Andover competed on Jeopardy last Thursday night.

comments are legitimate, O’Neill also hosts a weekly “Geeks Who Drink” trivia event at a Cambridge bar. About 40 to 50 friends and family members gathered at the bar last Thursday night to watch the show with him.

“For some reason, I remember trivia. I’m not sure why my brain works like this, but it does,” he said. “My Andover High teachers probably would say they wished I remembered more academic stuff.”

O’Neill said there is more to a “Jeopardy” appearance than answering difficult questions correctly. Maneuvering the buzzer button correctly is just as tough. In fact, contestants have to practice hitting the buzzer a few times before a show is taped.

“It’s all about that buzzer. You have to hit it just right. When Alex (host Alex Trebek) finishes a question, you hit the buzzer. If you hit it sooner, you are locked out for like a quarter of a second. That’s a lot of time on Jeopardy,” O’Neill said.

It was a long-awaited goal to finally get selected to be on “Jeopardy” but well worth the 10-year wait, he said.

“It was a chance of a lifetime. I’m geeky and so happy now. I did it,” he said.

TOWN BRIEFS

Andover Choral Society is looking for singers

The Andover Choral Society, directed by Michael Driscoll, invites those who enjoy singing fine choral music, to attend an open rehearsal from 7:20 to 9:30 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 28, at Christ Church, 25 Central St., Andover. The non-audition chorus is open to the entire community.

The chorus will perform Bach’s Magnificat in D, Vivaldi’s Magnificat and Zelenka’s Dixit Dominus on Sunday, Jan. 31, 2016, at 3 p.m. in the North Andover High School auditorium; and Mozart’s “Coronation” Mass and Schubert’s “Mass No. 3 in B-Flat Major” on Saturday, May 14, 2016, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Augustine’s Church in Andover. Both concerts will feature a professional orchestra and soloists.

Andover Choral Society is a community chorus now in its 86th season. Its members are dedicated to bringing high-quality choral music to the Merrimack Valley community. The chorus performs two concerts per year, with a repertoire that focuses on choral works from the Baroque era to the 21st century. Visit www.andover-choralsociety.org for more information.

Coalition for Literacy to hold kick-off event for volunteers

The Merrimack Valley Jewish Coalition for Literacy (MVJCL) annual Kick-off Meeting will be held on Thursday, Sept. 24, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall Library’s Activity Room, 2 North Main St., Andover.

The MVJCL is a non-sectarian group consisting of volunteers who work with preschool through middle school students for one hour each week throughout the school year. The literacy volunteer teams are engaged in public, private and after-school programs in Andover, Lawrence, and Haverhill.

Sherry Comerchero, coalition coordinator, hopes to recruit new volunteers to the program. She emphasizes that experience is not necessary, only the desire to help a child become a better reader.

Attendees will learn about the organization, hear other volunteers relate their experiences and joy in giving the gift of literacy to a child, and be able to enroll in literacy volunteer workshops.

If planning to attend the kick-off meeting, email sherrycomerchero@yahoo.com or call 617-510-5139.

Three-sport captain Roche a goal-scoring machine

BY DAVID WILLIS
dwillis@eagletribune.com

Andover High field hockey coach Marueen Noone raves about her captain's dedication.

Girls basketball coach E.J. Perry cheered his captain-elect's leadership.

Golden Warriors softball coach Steve Tisbert gushes about his captain's sharp skills and tremendous passion for the game.

When Tori Roche's name is mentioned, it isn't difficult to find someone in the Andover athletic community — or around the Merrimack Valley Conference — thrilled to applaud the three-sport Golden Warrior captain.

"She may not be the most talented player on the field," said Noone. "But no one works harder than Tori. She has put up big numbers, and her leadership is excellent."

Coming off a breakout junior field hockey season that saw her score 23 goals and lead Andover to the Division 1 North final, Roche is off to a red-hot start already this fall. She scored four goals in Andover's first three games heading into the week, including the game-winner against arch-rival North Andover.

That following a spring that saw Roche hit .413 as Tori Roche celebrates after a goal last season. She netted 23 scores last fall and already has four in three games this season. She is also a star catcher in softball and captain-elect in basketball.

starting catcher for the softball team and a winter where she was a key reserve for the Golden Warrior basketball team that advanced to the Division 1 state semifinals at the TD Garden. "I love sports and I love competition," said Roche. "I always say I love every sport I play. I love being a three-sport athlete. I try to take very season as something new. I want to compete and do everything I can to help my team succeed."

A passion for sports is in Roche's blood. Tori's father Dan Roche played baseball at North Andover High and is one of New England's top media presences as an anchor/reporter for WBZ-TV, Channel 4 sports.

Her mother Pam (Moran) Roche is a member of the Methuen High Hall of Fame, also a captain in field hockey, basketball — winning the 1986 state title — and softball and Tori's brother Harry was a star catcher at Phillips Academy (class of 2013).

"Sports has always been a huge topic around our house and I think that's great," said Tori. "It used to be weird seeing my dad on TV, but now I don't even notice it. I don't see him as 'Well-known.' He's just my dad. He has so many great stories about the leadership he has seen in professional locker rooms and has shared them with Harry and I, which has been invaluable."

It was mother Pam that introduced Tori to field hockey as a fifth grader, coaching her youth teams.

After playing freshman in her first season, Roche made the Andover varsity field hockey team as a sophomore.

"I was mostly a backup that season, but I saw some time and learned so much from being a member of that team. I learned the ways of the team."

Even Roche was surprised by her performance last fall. The junior was an MVC All-Star after scoring her team-high 23 goals.

"The sound of the ball when he hits the board at the back of the goal is so loud and so exciting," she said. "I definitely wasn't expecting to put up the stats I did. It was awesome the way the team worked. We did so well and had so much chemistry."

Roche also dazzled in the sport that was her first love, softball. A varsity player since her freshman season, Roche was a utility player for two seasons before becoming the Golden Warriors' full-time catcher last spring. She hit a team-best .431, also led the team with 20 runs and 31 hits and impressed with her stellar defense behind the plate.

"She's just been incredible back there," said Tisbert. "She's great at blocking pitches, she's good at framing and she has a good arm. And she's such a leader for us."

Roche was also a member of the Golden Warrior basketball team that won the 2014 Division 1 North title. She saw time at guard and was an invaluable scout player.

"That basketball season was one of the most memorable experiences of my life," she said. "To witness that leadership and camaraderie. From Rachael Cormier to Colleen Caveney and Talia Dellatto I learned so much from some amazing leaders."

Roche, who is looking into playing field hockey and softball in college, now hopes to use those experiences to deliver a special senior season in all three sports.

"In field hockey our coaches are the greatest and they have very high expectations for us," she said. "All of my coaches are terrific and we will work to get better in every sport, focus on every game and hope for the best."

Andover football rolls over Methuen

BY DAVID WILLIS
dwillis@eagletribune.com

METHUEN — Andover offensive lineman Arman Koul left no doubt about where he feels the quarterback he protects stands.

"E.J. (Perry IV) is the best quarterback in the state," said Koul. "We have nothing but the most confidence in him."

Perry IV made it hard to argue Koul's point on Friday.

The junior QB threw for a whopping five touchdowns on Andover's first five possessions of the night, finishing with 242 yards as the Golden Warriors downed Methuen 33-15, ruining the first game at the Rangers' renovated Nicholson Stadium.

"What more could you

Perry IV throws five touchdowns

possibly ask for from that guy?" said Warriors receiver Andrew Soucy. "E.J. and I have an awesome connection, like he does with all of our guys. He always puts the ball in a perfect spot, and all you have to worry about is catching it and getting up field. He was just awesome."

Perry IV spread the ball out on Friday, throwing scores to four different receivers on the first four drives. Dan Gemmell was the only repeat receiver, catching the fourth and fifth. He also connected with Soucy, Brandon Marti and Cedric Gillette for touchdowns.

"We saw that Methuen was playing a soft zone in their secondary and we worked all week to attack that," said Perry IV. "The guys were breaking tackles. (Brandon) Marti was flying, Soucy and Gemmell and (Cedric) Gillette were making plays. We definitely feel like we found our groove."

Perry has now thrown for seven touchdowns in two games.

"Coming out of our last game, we knew we had to clean up the passing game," said Soucy, who caught seven passes for a game-high 97 yards. "We watched a lot of film, worked hard and E.J. was just phenomenal."

BC HIGH UP NEXT

Andover faces a very tough task on Friday, when it hosts

Boston College High School at 7 p.m.

The Eagles are 2-0 following a 61-6 blowout of Barnstable last weekend. They beat Reading in their opener 21-13. Steve Timmins led the way on Friday, rushing for three touchdowns in one half before the starters came out of the game.

BC High ranks No. 5 in Eastern Mass. and in the ESPNBoston state-wide top 10. Andover is ranked 12 in the ESPNBoston poll.

"We live for games like these," said Koul. "We know they are good and we know we have to be physical."
