Media center money on hold

Governor's office not releasing money for design study of AHS library

> By Gabriella Cruz gcruz@andovertownsman.com

Funding for a design study of the controversial new media center at the high school has been held up by Gov. Charlie Baker, who is waiting to see if mid-year, statewide budget cuts are necessary.

The $200,000 was inserted into the state budget at the last minute earlier this year by Sen. Barbara L'Italien, D-Andover, after Town Meeting voters rejected the $2 million media center project.

Baker then vetoed the $200,000 study, and dozens of other so-called "earmarks' from around the state, noting that if state revenues continued to fall, those projects would become unaffordable.

The state Legislature, however, voted to override dozens of those vetoes, expecting the money to be sent some time over the summer. But the money never came.

Town and school officials have emailed, called and sent letters to state officials seeking the $200,000, which they say is needed to fund a design study.

The new media center would replace the high school's existing library and create an environment that the school committee believes will be better suited for digital learning, collaborative studying and providing better access to technology.

Book shelving would be significantly reduced, the high school's learning center and open computer lab would be relocated, and mezzanine offices would be re-purposed for media center expansion.

"Right now, the space is built and designed as a library from when I went to

Andover parish offers addiction workshop

Staff report

ANDOVER — Every community across the state has been affected by the opioid addiction crisis.

How can pastors and other church leaders address the crisis in their own communities? Join a day-long seminar presented by West Parish Church and South Church of Andover in partnership with the Massachusetts Council of Churches on Saturday, Oct. 24, at West Parish Church, 129 Reservation Road, Andover, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Seminar highlights include presentations by experts in the field of addiction and recovery; a discussion of how we can more effectively minister to addicts and their family; information from professionals working in the field of addiction who can provide participants with much needed resources for their parishioners; and a question-and-answer session with a panel of individuals in recovery.

Cost is $8, including lunch. For more information, contact: Rev. Meagan Manas, 617 523-2771 or Meagan@ masscouncilofchurches.org.

Redeemable Bottle and Can Drive

The Andover High School Golden Warrior Marching Band will hold its Redeemable Bottle and Can Drive for the fall on Saturday, Nov. 7, from 9 a.m. to noon at West Middle School, 70 Shawsheen Road, Andover.

Only redeemable bottles and cans can be accepted. All proceeds will support the AHS Marching Band. The event will take place rain or shine.

This year's musical theme is very unique. Joe Wright, the former marching band director and current band director for Andover's middle and elementary schools, composed the marching band's entire score. Titled "Slip the Surly Bonds of Earth," the theme is space exploration and coincides with the upcoming 30th anniversary of the Challenger space shuttle launch from January 1986.

Teen center, Andover Cares — two events, one goal

Two significant events took place in Andover over the last week or so.

One was the Andover Cares Festival, which featured a concert and testimonials from people affected by opioid

The other was the final fund-raising push by supporters of the Cormier Youth Center, which should lead to the building's completion.

The first event, which drew hundreds of people, was significant because it was such a public acknowledgement of a problem that has festered just beneath the surface for so many years. Addiction to painkillers and, ultimately, heroin, has ruined many lives in Andover. One reason it has remained such a big problem is that nobody seems willing to talk about it.

The Andover Cares Festival, while billed as a fund-raiser, was really much more than that. It was an awareness-raiser about the problem, with people like Dena Dargoonian speaking from the heart about the loss of her 27-year-old daughter to heroin. It was about people coming together in a supportive and meaningful way to learn and talk about drugs and substance abuse here and across the Merrimack

The festival was also significant because it is part of a larger commitment in the community to address the problem. Police and firefighters have been carrying Narcan for more than a year. It is a drug that revives overdose victims by restoring their breathing. Andover was one of the first communities in the region to start carrying the drug as a nasal spray. It has been handed out to more and more residents of town who have gotten trained in how to administer it in case a friend or relative falls victim to an overdose.

The festival coincided with a daylong wellness fair at Andover High School, where students learned about the hazards of opiate overdoses from real-life victims, including one young man destined for greatness on the baseball field, but now permanently disabled as a result of a lifethreatening overdose.

A panel discussion at Memorial Hall Library brought out a North Andover recovering addict who told his story about how casual drug and alcohol use led to addiction to heroin and ultimately bank robbery. After two years in jail and a full year in rehab, he has emerged as a family man who takes his past seriously. He now travels around the state speaking with anyone who will listen about the dangerous consequences of opiate addiction.

The other big event was the announcement by Yvon Cormier and Charlie Daher of joint, $100,000 contributions to the Andover Youth Foundation to help finish off the Cormier Youth Center. After receiving $500,000 from Phillips Academy late last year, it has been a good six months or so for backers of the beleaguered building. Finally, it seems, the building is actually going to get finished. After decades of turmoil interrupted by the Great Recession, among other hurdles and roadblocks along the way, the youth center is ready for occupation.

The director of Andover Youth Services, Bill Fahey, has a tireless advocate for the building. He often tells the story about how, when he first started in town, the AYS office was not much more than a closet on the third floor of town hall. Eventually, the organization moved to an old house on Pearson Street. And now, they can move into a finished teen center.

Perhaps it is coincidental that these two events happened in the same week. But the completion of the teen center - which should give kids a place to go when they need help of any kind - and the general awareness raised by Andover Cares Festival - which should help more people identify and focus on the problem of opiate abuse - don't seem like separate events. It seems like they are two sides of the same coin.

We hope the energy to solve the opiate crisis continues, and that Andover Youth Services continues to play a critical role in that battle.

In battle against addiction, words can make matters worse

Taylor Seidel

Andover Health Division

We often hear people spout words like "addict," "junkie,' or "alcoholic," when talking about substance use disorders. Unfortunately, when people use words like this, we likely feed into the stigma of addiction which can contribute to a downward spiral of a person with a substance use disorder.

This type of stigma relates to addiction and involves attitudes or beliefs that cause a person to feel negatively toward people with substance use disorders. Stigma may include discrimination, stereotyping, or distrust, and can stem from society, the cause him or her to shy away feel powerless or hopeless. words are labels that can make them who they are. QUICK TIPS FOR STOPPING STIGMA

- Be mindful and don't use the words like addict, junkie, or alcoholic.
- Try using phrases like "he/she has a substance use disorder," or "people with alcoholism/addiction.
- Educate yourself by visiting credible websites (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, World Health Organization, Massachusetts Department of Public Health).
- Create and sustain an environment in which people can talk about addiction.

Thank you for support of Andover Cares day

Editor, Townsman:

I wanted to personally thank The Eagle-Tribune for their support for the "Andover Cares" Festival in the park. Your sponsorship and press coverage clearly demonstrated your commitment to the fight against opioid addiction. Awareness, education and prevention is the way out of this crisis while we compassionately get help to affected addicts. The Eagle-Tribune and Andover Townsman have clearly created a culture in which its readers, employees and management can all unify around this community crisis.

Over 1,000 people attended the event with several "no questions asked" resources for parents, families and friends seeking information on addiction. The addiction resource tents were busy all day long and much needed information was given to all who asked. It took the efforts of dozens

Former school union head showed 'poor judgment'

Editor, Townsman:

Just because Jennifer Meagher could legally send an email urging her colleagues to delay the high school's reaccreditation, doesn't mean she should have.

Recall the context in which Ms. Meagher sent the June 2012 email: The town and teachers' union had been unable to reach a contract after years of contentious bargaining. The remaining issue was the high school schedule, and the union refused to agree to a contract requiring high school teachers to teach one more class each year. Shortly before teachers were to vote on whether to approve reports needed to secure the high school's re-accreditation, Ms. Meagher emailed 60 of her colleagues and encouraged them to abstain from voting. She wanted to "[g]et parents worried" and make the school committee "uncomfortable" with re-accreditation "on the

Overdose survivor shares story

An opiate overdose left debilitating effects on former athlete

By Gabriella Cruz gcruz@andovertownsman.com

Relying on a walking cane and receiving a roar of applause, an overdose survivor made his way onto the stage in Andover High School's Collins Center one day last week the same way he's been living his life for the last two years: just putting one foot in front of the other.

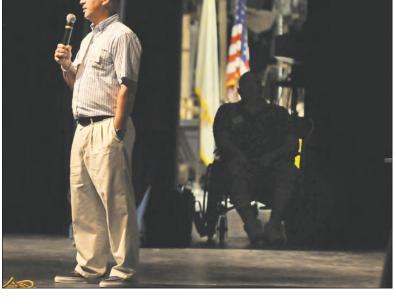

Cory Palazzi, a Taunton resident, overdosed on heroin in the summer of 2013 and has been living with the consequences ever since.

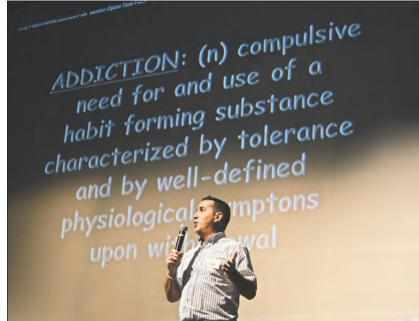

Slowly, carefully and sincerely, Palazzi, 27, asked the roughly 1,000 spellbound students: "How many of you are looking forward to going to college? And how many of you are looking forward to getting your license?" In response, hundreds of hands shot up in Andover High School's Wellness Day.

Townspeople A ceremony to remember

Town welcomes new town manager with song, dance and well wishes

By Terry Date tdate@andovertownsman.com

A grand ceremony with song, dance and the spoken word was held Thursday evening to welcome new Town Manager Andrew Flanagan to Andover, the event attracting his former co-workers, family and local residents.

"Exciting, a very uplifting, exciting, gathering," Andover Selectmen Chairman Mary O'Donoghue said, describing the mood.

O'Donoghue emceed the event from a podium on the stage in the James D. Doherty Hall at the historic Town House.

About a dozen of Flanagan's family members attended as did scores of former co-workers from municipalities where Flanagan had previously worked, Arlington and Newburyport, and from his hometown, Winthrop.

"I was amazed, the police chief, the fire chief, the town manager from Arlington (were there), people from Winthrop and Newburyport," O'Donoghue

Flanagan introduced members of his family including his mother and father and siblings, and gave a special introduction for his grandmother.

Flanagan walked around the room and met with residents, who were eager to wish him

He was officially sworn in Oct. 13, his first day on the job, but took a ceremonial oath at Thursday's gathering. The swearingin was conducted by Town Clerk Larry Murphy.

In his address to the wellwishers on Thursday, Flanagan said he was honored and excited to be the new town manager and is looking forward to the task.

The event included refreshments and entertainment – local entertainment

Among the entertainers were the Andover High School A Cappella group, which sang the national anthem, the Rhythm-Aires and Sunset Tappers from The Center at Punchard, an original poem, "Finally Home," by Kate Zdunczynk of West Middle School, and the Drifters — High Plain Elementary School Chorus — who sang 'America."

The state's congressional delegation was on hand and presented Flanagan citations from the Senate and the House congratulating him on his new

The event went extremely well, O'Donoghue said, extending thanks to the town manager's Executive Assistant Wendy Adams for her careful and complete planning of the event.

"We had our youth, we had our seniors, we had our state delegation, we had a presentation from the school superintendent and the School Board chairman," O'Donoghue said.

It was a memorable event marking an important occasion.

Aug. 12, selectmen made Flanagan a unanimous choice to succeed longtime Town Manager Reginald "Buzz" Stapczynski, who retired in June.

Seventeen chess boards were set up for the 34 young players and it was checkmate for the Andover Chess Club as the group edged out Winchester by a score of 9 to 8 earlier this month.

The chess match was held Oct. 10 at the local club's new location at St. Augustine Church's Center for Education and Ministry on Essex Street. The Andover Chess Peter McLaughlin of Andover shakes hands with his opponent Club meets every Friday night and its membership just keeps growing.

Advisor Mike Henroid said the club, founded just a year ago, is growing because chess is just plain fun for kids. About 40 local families have paid the annual $25 membership fee and Henroid said he continues to answer daily inquiries as more families want to join. The club's Friday night meetings typically draw about 50 people, he said.

"It's fun, acceptable and it's an easy mental challenge ... you can play at home, take a break and go back ... our kids do that and are showing rapid improvement," Henroid said. "And, it's the most affordable year-round club in town."
