Teacher placed on leave after testing 'irregularity'

By JESSICA VALERIANI
jvaleriani@andovertownsman.com

ANDOVER — A teacher at West Elementary School has been placed on administrative leave following allegations of testing irregularities during administration of the MCAS tests, according to Nicole Kieser, a spokesperson for the Andover School District.

Kieser said the irregularities occurred on April 25 to 26, and May 13.

The school would not identify the teacher.

A letter sent to West Elementary School parents Wednesday from Principal Liz Roos reads:

"Last week we received reports that there may have been testing irregularities during administration of the MCAS tests on April 25-26 and May 13, 2019. By law, we must investigate this report and must also report it to the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, the state education agency for investigation. As a result and as is customary in this type of circumstance, pending the outcome of these investigations and any findings, the teacher who proctored these tests has been placed on administrative leave.

"We want to assure parents that all West Elementary students continue to follow lesson plans and continue their coursework. As we continue to work with DESE on this issue, we will communicate with the West El community."

Jacqueline Reis, media relations coordinator for the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, said the department has been in contact with Andover.

"At this point we are aware of an allegation of an irregularity in Andover," Reis said Wednesday afternoon. She did not define what was meant by "irregularity" due to fear of mischaracterizing it. She said DESE is still learning about the details of the allegation, and did not provide anything further.

Kerry Costello, president of the teachers' union, said the union has not been very involved in the situation.

"Anytime there is an investigation at some time we are not directly involved," she said.

Andover held Memorial Day ceremonies at the West Parish, Saint Augustine's and Spring Grove cemeteries. The parade, hosted by the town and Veterans Services office, began at 10 a.m. at the intersection of Elm and Florence Streets and traveled to The Park.

Veterans Services officer Mark Comeiro said the parade included a dozen groups, including the Middlesex County Volunteers, local veterans, members of American Legion Post 8, 4H Fife and Drum, and the Civil Air Patrol. Comeiro served as keynote speaker during a ceremony at The Park.

"About 400 people showed up, not including the more than 500 parade participants," Comeiro said.

Across the Merrimack Valley, cities and towns held parades and services on Monday to honor and remember the sacrifices of those who perished defending our nation and preserving the freedoms we enjoy today.

Memorial Day is also the traditional kick-off for the summer, although summer doesn't officially begin until June 21.

The piercing sound of a Civil War era canon fired by members of the 6th Maine Battery marked the start of Lawrence's Memorial Day ceremony, which began at 9 a.m. at Bellevue Cemetery.

Andover school Superintendent Sheldon Berman speaks during a recent School Committee meeting.

School Supt. Berman's public review June 26

By JESSICA VALERIANI
jvaleriani@andovertownsman.com

The School Committee will conduct its evaluation of Superintendent Sheldon Berman at a public meeting on Wednesday, June 26 at 7 p.m.

At their meeting Thursday, Chairman Joel Blumstein said the review process will remain similar to the past several years. Berman is expected to submit his end of the year goals and standards to the committee by June 10.

Each committee member has also been asked to prepare an individual evaluation and report by June 18, and a composite evaluation based on the individual reports will be completed by Blumstein by June 24.

All of the documents will become public record.

"The school committee is required to do an evaluation of the superintendent in an open session, and that's what we'll do," Blumstein said at the meeting. "As always we invite feedback. We have gotten lots of feedback on all types of topics, including on Dr. Berman, and so I would continue to encourage people to submit input."

Berman's contract was recently discussed behind closed doors in an executive session.

"There is not much I can say about Dr. Berman's contract at this point," said Blumstein, adding that the committee welcomes and will consider any public input offered.

Berman's current contract is set to go through June 30, 2020.

West Middle School gets a new principal

By JESSICA VALERIANI
jvaleriani@andovertownsman.com

Timothy Corkery has been appointed to the position of principal of West Middle School, following the retirement of Principal Becky Franks.

Corkery is currently the principal of the Nettle Middle School in Haverhill, where he has worked since 2014. When he started his role at the Nettle School, it was a Level 3 school under the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, or DESE. Under Corkery's leadership, the school attained a Level 1 rating.

Corkery was selected Teacher of the Year in 2012 by the Veterans of Foreign Affairs in his Tucson, Arizona district. He held the role of a department head and social studies teacher at a school there from 2011 to 2013.

Before his career in education, Corkery was a Naval Officer and spent almost 25 years as a Navy pilot. He served as the executive officer of the naval ROTC program and an associate professor at the University of Arizona.

Corkery received a bachelor's degree in political science from the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis. He also has two master's degrees. One is from the U.S. Naval War College in national security and strategic studies, and the other is from the University of Arizona in educational leadership.

He will assume his role at West Middle School this summer.

Andover's Mike Yastrzemski finally makes the big leagues

By BILL BURT
Staff writer

Some dreams apparently don't happen overnight. And nobody personifies that better than Andover native Michael Yastrzemski.

The 28-year-old, who has spent parts of seven seasons in the minor leagues, including thousands of miles on buses, 703 games and 2,600 at bats, got the call from his manager with the Sacramento River Cats, Dave Brundage.

He was lying in his bed, trying to sleep before heading to the airport in five hours.

"What was it like?" said Yastrzemski, responding to a reporter's question. "It was relieving. I hoped it was going to happen, but when I got the call, I just felt totally relieved."

Yastrzemski had two phone calls to make; his wife, Paige, whom he met and dated at Vanderbilt University before getting married last November; and his mom, Anne Marie Yastrzemski, an Andover native, who has been there every step of the way.

One problem, both were in asleep in two different time zones, Paige in Nashville (2 a.m.) and Anne Marie in Andover (3 a.m.).

His wife cried intermittently. His mom cried non-stop, in between "Oh my God! Oh my God! Oh my God!"

Both had to eventually compose themselves because they would need to fly out to San Francisco for Yastrzemski's first-ever major league game.

"At one point he said, 'Are you OK mom?' I was OK, but the fact that this finally happened was, well, incredible," said Anne Marie.

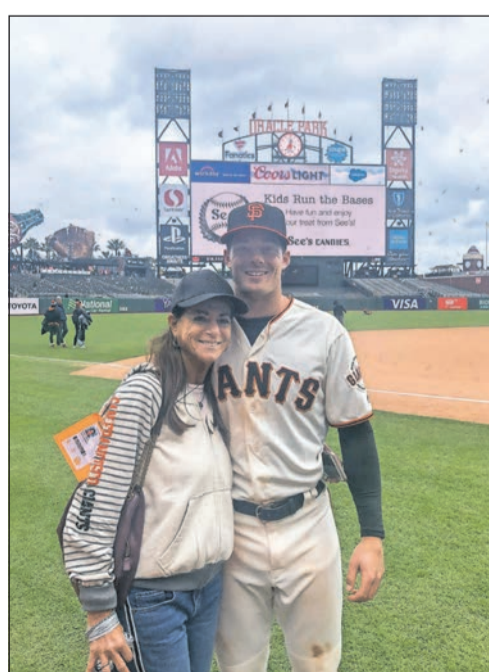

This was no gift from the Giants organization. Yastrzemski earned it.

At one point his batting average was .342. At the time of his call he was hitting .316 with 12 home runs, which was only three short of his best mark over an entire season.

Yastrzemski, a former 14th round pick, credited the trade from the Orioles to the Giants on March 23 as a spark he needed. He was immediately assigned to their Triple A team, Sacramento.

"It was a new beginning," said Yastrzemski. "It was a ceremony and recalled enlisting in 1942, shortly after graduating from Lawrence High School, Class of 1941.

"A lot of us joined at the time," said Pauta, past commander of the now-defunct, Cardillo-Campagnone Brothers Post No. 1.

During his invocation, Brother Rene Roy, campus minister for Central Catholic High School, said Memorial Day is a time to honor those men and women who "gave up their future so that we may have ours today."

"They suffered separation from family and friends, they more incredible hardships from heat and cold, dust and mud and saw their comrades drop in their tracks from enemy fire and ultimately lost their own lives," Roy said. "Their courage and bravery provide an example of valor, self-sacrifice and generosity for each of us here."

Methuen's parade kicked off at 10 a.m. in front of the American Legion Post 122, 200 Broadway, then traveled north to the war monuments on Charles Street for a brief ceremony.

Legion Commander, John Dowd, urged a crowd of people not to forget those who died in battle and to remain loyal to our country.

"Let us renew our pledge of loyalty to our country and its flag," he said. "Let us resolve by word and deed to emphasize the privilege and duty of patriotism."

The parade reformed and marched through Methuen Square to the American Legion lot in the Walnut Grove Cemetery for a brief ceremony.

Many people lined the parade route, including Rich and Alison Levesque, who brought their son Jaxon, 9.

"Before the parade passed by we were talking about the sacrifices that were made to keep our country safe," Alison Levesque said.

Marchers included students from the Tenney Grammar School, Boy Scout Troops 51 and 53, Cub Scout Packs 55 and 61, police and fire, Methuen High School's Jr. Army ROTC battalion and Lancers Marching Band - which performed military songs, including the 1907

Cassion Song, the Marine Hymn and the Air Force Song.

Haverhill's parade formed in Monument Square then traveled to the Linwood Cemetery for a service.

Mayor James Fiorentini told a crowd that Memorial Day is often a happy family day, but it is also a solemn day.

He asked the crowd to remember those from Haverhill who died in World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War and the Gulf Wars.

"We also today pause to recall what our veterans are fighting for," Fiorentini said. "They fought for the freedoms that have made America unique and a beacon of hope throughout the world."

Mass. School of Law graduation features ex-Celtic Chris Herren

STAFF REPORT

The Massachusetts School of Law in Andover has announced that former Boston Celtic player, author, inspirational speaker and wellness advocate, Chris Herren, will address the graduating class of 2019 on Friday, June 7.

The graduation is at 5 p.m. in The Collins Center, located at 100 Shawsheen Road in Andover.

Herren, a standout from Durfee High School in Fall River, played for Boston College and Fresno State before missing part of Fresno's 97-98 season to seek treatment for an ongoing struggle with substance use disorder. He was drafted by the Denver Nuggets in 1999, and traded to his hometown team, the Boston Celtics, in 2000. After suffering a season-ending injury, he went on to play internationally until retiring from the game in 2006.

Sober since 2008, his recovery journey has been documented in the bestselling memoir, Basketball Junkie, and the Emmy nominated ESPN Films documentary, Unguarded.

"Chris Herren's story is one of extraordinary highs and lows," MSLAW Dean Michael Coyne says in a press release. "His perseverance and subsequent transformation are inspiring. We're honored to have him address our graduating class."

Since 2009 Herren has spoken to millions of students and community members about substance use disorder and wellness through his organization "Herren Talks." In 2011, Chris grew his vision of support for others when he founded the nonprofit "Herren Project". Through the organization, Chris and his team empower schools and communities to make healthy choices, while also guiding families through recovery. In 2018, Chris also founded Herren Wellness, a residential health and wellness program that helps guests lead healthy, substance-free lives.

"Substance use disorder impacts many families and individuals in our communities, and I am honored to share my experience, strength and hope with the graduating class of 2019," Herren said.

Dean Coyne will present

MSLAW's highest honor, the degree of Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa, to Mr. Herren as part of the ceremony. The Massachusetts School of Law is located at 500 Federal St., Andover.

Senior Safari on for June 3

By JESSICA VALERIANI
jvaleriani@andovertownsmen.com

The all-night, substance-free celebration has been hosted annually since 1992 in the Andover High School field house for graduating seniors. It was created by parents who wanted to ensure children were safe while celebrating the night of their high school graduation.

About 90 percent of seniors participate each year. At the event, they will have the opportunity to hang out with their classmates one final time before parting ways for the summer and college.

The event will take place from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m.

Registration is now available for members of the senior class only. The cost to attend - which includes all activities and food - is $57. You can pay via pay pal or credit card.

Seniors can register at <http://www.sanbornpt.org/safari.htm>

Organizers are seeking volunteers to help make the night a success. Help is needed with set-up, chaperones, smoothie hut servers, refreshment donations and cleanup.

You do not need to have a high school student to volunteer at the event. Volunteers will begin setting up for the event over the weekend from May 31 to June 2 in three-hour shifts.

Those interested in volunteering can sign up at <https://www.signupgenius.com/go/10c0445a4a82aa7fc1-senior2>

Phillips Academy students Max Gundlach and Jack Palfrey are the co-founders of Andover Debt Initiative.

The duo is striving to relieve $1.5 million of medical debt for people in the Greater Lawrence area by taking in donations. Their goal is to raise $15,000 and they recently surpassed over 50 percent of that goal.

You can donate at <https://secure.qgiv.com/event/andover>

Two Andover High School juniors participated in MIT's Leadership Training Institute, a 10-week program in the winter.

Zoah Silva-Landry and Amina Cathey applied to the program and were selected in Nov. 2018.

They were tasked with creating a project to address a social problem they feel passionate about. Silva-Landry chose school safety, and Cathey chose mental health needs for diverse students.

fresh start ... Playing before new sets of eyes ... I just felt comfortable playing. It definitely rejuvenated me."

His grandfather, Carl Yastrzemski, played 23 seasons for the Red Sox and won the Triple Crown in 1967. An 18-time All-Star, with 452 career home runs, 1,854 RBIs and a career .285 batting average, the original "Yaz" was inducted to the baseball Hall of Fame in 1989.

He chatted with his famous grandfather about a half-hour before he got to the field for his first game.

"It was pretty simple advice," recalled Yastrzemski.

"He just said to be yourself. Don't try to do more. Honestly, he's probably said that to me hundreds of times. But he was right."

Yastrzemski struck out in his first at bat, hitting in the No. 2 hole.

"But honestly, I was really comfortable," he said. "It was the first time that day that I was totally calm, when I was in the batter's box."

It was in Game 2, the next day, that Yastrzemski strutted the same stuff he showed in Sacramento the last seven weeks. He had three of the Giants' 10 hits and scored a run in the 6-2 loss to the Diamondbacks.

"It's been a while, probably since my Vandy days, when the focus is solely on winning," said Yastrzemski. "I really liked that. You play to win, which isn't always the case in the minors."

Yastrzemski hopped on a plane with his new teammates after the Sunday game and headed to Miami, where the Giants play the Marlins.

Then it's three games in Baltimore against the Orioles, the team that originally drafted him, and then three games in Queens, N.Y. against the Mets.

"There will probably be some more family in Baltimore and New York," said Yastrzemski. "For me, though, it's all baseball. It's been a dream of mine my entire life. I'm going to enjoy this."

ABC Andover holds annual scholars dinner

STAFF REPORT

A Better Chance Andover, a local educational group, held its annual scholar awards dinner last week at the Log Cabin off Highland Road.

The event — this year it was casual barbecue — is held every year to congratulate graduating seniors, current scholars, staff and volunteers of ABC Andover, which brings girls from various inner-city school districts to Andover to be educated at Andover High School.

According to the group's website, "A Better Chance, Inc. is a national non-profit whose mission is to increase substantially the number of well-educated young people of color who are capable of assuming positions of responsibility and leadership in American society."

A Better Chance identifies, recruits, and refers qualified highly-motivated students to outstanding secondary schools, both public and private, which provide scholarships to these students so that they may excel in college and eventually go on to assume positions of leadership and responsibility.

"A Better Chance of Andover (ABC) is one of 21 community school programs (CSP) of A Better Chance Inc. and seeks to carry out these goals through the facilities of its public high school and the extensive support of the Andover community. A Better Chance of Andover admits students who it believes are most likely to benefit from the educational, cultural and social opportunities offered by its unique program.

"Scholarships usually start in 9th grade and continue for four years. The students live in ABC's dormitory on Main Street while school is in session where they are supervised by live-in Resident Directors and Resident Assistants."

The program first opened its doors in Andover in 1967.

Questions on Trahan linger

By CHRISTIAN M. WADE
Statehouse Reporter

BOSTON — A newly filed personal financial disclosure by U.S. Rep. Lori Trahan suggests she had more than enough revenue and assets to secure sizable loans to her campaign last year, but watchdog groups that filed complaints against the congresswoman say her story still doesn’t add up.

Trahan, a Westford Democrat, has been accused by two groups of violating campaign finance laws by loaning her campaign $371,000 in the months ahead of a contentious primary election. The complaints question the source the loans, alleging that Trahan’s revenue and assets in 2018 weren’t enough to secure them.

In her most recent disclosure to clerk of the House of Representatives, the freshman congresswoman lists $274,535 in revenue from her consulting firm Concire LLC in 2018, as well as assets that include a Bank of America checking account associated with the business, the value of which fluctuated between $250,001 and $500,000 in 2018.

The disclosure also listed the range of gross revenue for her affiliated consulting firm Concire Leadership Institute last year at between $1 million and $5 million.

Trahan loaned herself a total of $371,000 last year as part of her bid to win the 3rd Congressional District seat previously held by Rep. Niki Tsongas.

The campaign loans were made in several installments over a period of several months, according to disclosures filed with the Federal Election Commission.

The money funded a last-minute advertising blitz that helped the political neophyte cinch a 10-way Democratic primary last September, which she won by 145 votes following a recount between her and Dan Koh. She went on to defeat Republican Rick Green and Independent Mike Mullen in the Nov. 6 election.

A complaint with the Federal Election Commission filed in March by the Campaign Legal Center, a Washington D.C.-based watchdog, argues that Trahan didn’t have enough revenue and assets to cover those loans, based on her personal financial disclosures filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives.

Corey Goldstone, a spokesman for the group, said Trahan’s latest financial disclosure doesn’t clear up the discrepancies raised in their complaint.

“This most recent filing doesn’t justify her original story,” Goldstone said in a statement. “We still feel that the Trahan campaign has violated federal law for failing to fully report loans, depriving voters of important information about the sources and amounts of money used to influence an election.”

Another complaint, filed April 24 by the Washington D.C.-based Foundation for Accountability and Civic Trust, a conservative watchdog group, makes similar allegations about Trahan’s filings and asks the Office of Congressional Ethics to investigate the source of the loans.

Kendra Arnold, the group’s executive director, said Trahan was “required to file a full and accurate financial disclosure ahead of the election, so that voters could assess any potential conflicts of interest” but didn’t do that. She said Trahan’s most recent financial disclosure doesn’t wipe away the violation of federal law.

“It wasn’t until after the election that she filed a complete disclosure,” Arnold said. “We believe that is a violation in itself, and there’s no way to remedy it.”

In a statement, Trahan said her revenue and assets were more than enough to secure the loans to her congressional campaign.

“This latest filing proves what I’ve said all along -- I had ample resources to make a loan to my campaign,” she said. “While it was not ultimately necessary, the disclosure also clearly demonstrates I could have invested much more in my campaign if I had wanted to.”

Trahan’s most recent filing also lists jointly mortgages held jointly with her husband and lines of credit on her homes in Massachusetts and Maine.

A Boston Globe report, which first raised the allegations, suggested the campaign loans were backed by Trahan’s husband, David, a real estate developer.

While candidates can loan themselves unlimited funds, family members are limited to contributions of $2,700 per election cycle, according to federal rules.

Trahan has amended her personal financial disclosures filed with the House clerk multiple times over the past year, as questions about the source of the campaign loans were raised, adding a joint banking account and a $71,000 home equity loan. Her campaign has pointed out that such amendments are common, especially among first-time candidates.

Last year’s race for the 3rd District was the state’s marquee congressional election and awash with campaign money.

All told, candidates spent nearly $12 million, according to campaign disclosures, making it one of the state’s most expensive congressional races last year.

The Andover High School Underwater Robotics Team will compete in a national competition at the University of Maryland on Saturday, June 1 and Sunday, June 2.

The 2019 SeaPerch Challenge competition tasks students with building and navigating underwater robots through a series of obstacles.

Two AHS teams - the Orcas and the Sharks - qualified for the national competition and will face off against student teams from across the globe.

The theme of this year’s competition course is “Rescue and Recovery.” It is inspired by the real-life rescue event of the Thai soccer team in 2018. The competition is sponsored by Raytheon.

Memorial Day weekend brings out the best

By JESSICA VALERIANI
jvaleriani@andovertownsmen.com

As temperatures reached the highest point of the year Sunday, families in the Merrimack Valley took full advantage of the sunshine and clear, blue skies that accompanied Memorial Day weekend.

People rushed to Mad Maggie’s Ice Cream in North Andover to enjoy a cool ice cream treat. For some, it even substituted as their dinner.

From ice cream in waffle cones to soft serve in cups with sprinkles, it was the tastiest way for people to bear Sunday’s unseasonable heat as temperatures in the region hit the 80s.

Nancy and John Martin of Andover were among those treating themselves to ice cream, which they said has become their dinner tradition every weekend in the warmer months. Their 4-year-old dog Mika also got to have a soft serve doggy ice cream.

But despite having her own, it didn’t stop Mika from jumping up to try and get a taste of her owners’, too.

The two said the weather was “awesome” and noted they took full advantage of it by taking a drive on their motorcycle — enjoying a cool breeze in the hot sun.

The rest of their long weekend would include enjoying the weather, relaxing and doing yard work.

The Abdella family — Alicia, Paul and their 3-year-old daughter, Penelope, spent the day at the Andover Center Playground. Dressed in a patriotic stars and stripes outfit, Penelope glided down the tall slide as her mom greeted her at the bottom with open arms.

Penelope said the slide was her favorite thing at the park. The weather brought several people out to the parks and fields in Andover to enjoy the day before taking the time Monday to observe Memorial Day.

Monday, with clear blue skies, was a little cooler but overall, it was a stellar long weekend.

Facebook's weak stance on fake news

Anyone laboring under impression that Facebook actually plans to do something about the waves of "fake news" flooding the social media platform got a wakeup call last week. Or at least it should be a wakeup call.

A doctored video of Nancy Pelosi went viral in the days after the House speaker's tense White House confrontation with President Donald Trump.

The video, taken from the first moments of a Pelosi press conference, was slowed just enough to make it appear the House speaker was slurring her words and thus, intoxicated. Posted on YouTube, Facebook and Twitter, it garnered millions of views and shares before the truth, in the form of fact-checkers, was able to catch up. Rudy Giuliani, Trump's personal lawyer and the former mayor of New York, shared it with his 318,000 Twitter followers.

YouTube eventually took the video down. Twitter, as is its habit, ignored the controversy and did nothing. Facebook, still the dominant player in the online landscape, tried to find a way to have the best of both worlds, essentially decrying the video while leaving it up for the precious clicks that make the company money.

In a release, Facebook acknowledged the video was a fake, eventually tagging it as such, and said it would make sure it appeared less frequently in news feeds.

"We work hard to find the right balance between encouraging free expression and promoting a safe and authentic community," a company spokesperson told the Los Angeles Times. "We believe that reducing the distribution of inauthentic content strikes that balance. But just because something is allowed to be on Facebook doesn't mean it should get distribution. In other words, we allow people to post it as a form of expression, but we're not going to show it at the top of News Feed."

It's a typically mealy-mouthed response from a company that has long been accused of -- and has actually acknowledged -- having a role in the spread of misinformation and outright lies since the days before the 2016 elections. When pressured, Facebook and its president, Mark Zuckerberg, make doe-eyed promises to change, to do better. Then, once the heat is off, the hands-off attitude returns, and we are left with halfhearted "solutions."

Kat Lo, a UC Irvine researcher, told the Times Facebook has "made progress" but hasn't addressed the root of the problem.

"The changes are incremental," Lo said. "It's not like they've solved anything."

"The best way to counter disinformation is to deplatform it," Lo said. "To make it not visible and not shareable."

Facebook, of course, wants everything to be shareable. It wants traffic -- the company made $16.6 billion in advertising revenue last quarter. A viral video -- even a fake like the one featuring the House speaker -- helps drive profits, something the company slyly acknowledged in its statement to the Times.

"We don't have a policy that stipulates that the information you post on Facebook must be true," the company said.

Company spokeswoman Monika Bickert went one step further, saying on CNN, "We think it's important for people to make their own informed choice for what to believe. Our job is to make sure we are getting them accurate information."

The company is essentially saying, "Sure, we know plenty of people are posting lies. We even know what the lies are. But if you get fooled, it's your own fault."

Well, OK.

That certainly seems fair when one takes into consideration the vast amount of what most of us post on Facebook. Our grandchildren can't all be that cute, our cats and dogs that smart, our hair perfectly coiffed and our meals so photogenic.

But there's a difference between kidding ourselves and crafting and sharing the lies that have contributed so greatly to the coarsening of our political discourse. It's long past time that Zuckerberg and his company recognized that fact.

WEB QUESTION

This week's question:

Last week, a video was posted on Facebook, and eventually other social media platforms, purporting to show House Speaker Nancy Pelosi slurring her words during a speech denouncing Pres. Trump. The video, clearly edited and slowed down to make her look bad, received millions of views. Many people thought it was real. But it wasn't. Facebook has admitted no wrongdoing. But somehow, fake news keeps getting posted on the popular internet network. Do you think the company is doing enough to stop this kind of thing from happening?

Yes. They do the best they can. They have millions of users. People need to decide for themselves what's true and what's not.

No. The company, with all its billions, should be able to instantaneously tell if something is fake or real. It should never have been posted.

Not sure. Seems like whomever was responsible for posting the fake video should be held accountable.

Last week's question:

It's almost June and the Boston Bruins are still playing hockey. They are on to the Stanley Cup. Are you excited?

Yes. I've been following them all year. They are fun to watch and they will sweep! 27 votes.

No. They are overrated. They would have lost to the Caps or the Lightning. Now they'll lose in the finals. 3 votes.

Not sure. It's too warm to watch ice hockey. I'm on to baseball. Go Sox! 7 votes.

Bartlett H. Hayes, Jr.: Putting the Addison Gallery on the map

Gail Ralston

Andover Center for History & Culture

One of the many gems on the Phillips Academy campus is the Addison Gallery of American Art, created and funded by alumnus Thomas Cochran, class of 1890.

Cochran's vision of the 1920s was to develop a space of well-rounded students which included an art center "to enrich permanently the lives of the students." Cochran donated the first 50 American paintings to the gallery, which was named for his friend, Keturah Addison Cobb.

From its opening in 1931, "the Addison programs demonstrate a central concern for education." This focus has never been kept behind Academy walls, rather shared with the town and beyond.

And no one person has fostered -- and expanded -- Cochran's goals better than Bartlett Hayes, Jr.

Hayes grew up in Andover and graduated from Phillips in 1922, later receiving a chemistry degree from Harvard. From 1927 to 1929, he studied art with Philip Hale, a Boston painter.

Following four years of independent study in Europe, Hayes came back to campus as its second art teacher. School records show that, at the time, 200 students were enrolled in art classes, which were held in the Addison's basement. Hayes' found his passion for teaching these young people, and from that point, he is credited with the strong role that Visual Arts holds in the P.A. curriculum.

Student interest in art grew, and so the program outgrew the basement. Hayes raised money to build the Art Center in 1963, which included studios, classrooms and an auditorium. With the Art Center's opening, Hayes was able to broaden the arts curriculum by hiring experienced instructors in photography, sculpture, architecture and painting.

And no one person has fostered -- and expanded -- Cochran's goals better than Bartlett Hayes, Jr.

Along with his teaching duties, Hayes served as the Addison's assistant curator from 1933 to 1940. In 1940, he succeeded Curator Charles Sawyer as director.

Bartlett Hayes' devotion to the gallery began to blossom in the 1930s when he mounted at the Addison one of the first exhibitions in this country highlighting the work of Alexander Calder.

And before lending out any of the Addison's works of art, Hayes made a point to visit the museums requesting the loan. This gave him both the knowledge of the other directors and the opportunity to study the works of art at other museums.

Hayes' recognized belief that "art should be made accessible to the larger public," inspired him to publish many pamphlets and books. His chosen subjects dealt with, as he put it, "the ways of thinking by which painters and sculptures are guided."

Hayes' true gift seems to be how he combined art classes with the gallery's collections. Colleagues noted how "he made the superb collection a classroom tool for courses in art appreciation that went on to become a graduation requirement."

Never one to turn down an opportunity, Hayes retired from the Addison in 1969 when he was named Director of the American Academy in Rome. When announcing the appointment, the Academy pointed to Hayes' "association with arts and education" in America and Europe, and his serving as trustee in several cultural institutions. Even Time magazine recognized how Hayes "set nationwide trends in education."

On campus, an anonymous gift was presented by a former student in his honor to build a courtyard surrounded by his beloved Addison and Arts Center.

Bartlett Hayes, Jr. died in 1988. Colleagues Diz Bensen, Art Department chair, and Chris Cook, Addison Gallery director, remembered how Hayes "put the Addison on the map," how he made art available to a wider audience, at a time when modern art was a mystery to most Americans." And how, as a teacher, Hayes "was a true artist, teaching always by example."

His legacy to education and the arts is surely being felt even today.

Townsman went too far

Editor, Townsman:

As a member of the Electronic Voting Study committee, I take exception to the Townsman editorial of May 16, 2019. The editorial states that no presentations about electronic voting were given before Town Meeting.

This is untrue as there were several public forums. The Townsman should not project inaccurate information in its editorials.

Secondly, the Townsman derides Sheila Doherty's leadership. Sheila has done an outstanding job as moderator for thirteen years. She is unbiased, professional, and provides leadership every step of the way. Sheila is continuously re-elected as the townspeople show enormous confidence in her.

To criticize her so harshly, the Townsman stepped over the line. Finally, electronic voting was rejected by Town Meeting after a healthy and lengthy discussion. The Townsman oversimplifies this discussion and calls e-voting a no-brainer. The subject is much more complex than the Townsman states and I respect the vote of Town Meeting. Sadly, our town newspaper has crossed the line and attacked the moderator, the e-voting committee, and Town Meeting itself. These combined actions lead the Townsman into decidedly negative territory.

Opening of I-93 carpool lane a plus for commuters

Editor, Townsman:

Let me start by saying I have been a Boston commuter from the Merrimack Valley for over 20 years now. Due to the infrequent and unreliable public transportation system, I have always reverted back to driving. It gets me home to my family earlier than any other method, which is my priority.

The recent opening of the carpool lane has had a positive effect on morning traffic for all commuters. There are no longer single passenger vehicles speeding down the left lane until the very end only to cut into the third lane where the HOV lane begins. There is also no slow down in traffic due to people being curious about who got pulled over in the HOV lane by the cop sitting at the end of it. And now the highway only drops one lane from four to three for all commuters.

There has also never been a great benefit to carpooling north of Boston since there is no HOV lane outbound leaving the city. Sure we can get into work a little earlier but every other major city benefits carpoolers on the way home as well which is the main focus of most family members. For that reason I don't feel the current HOV lane is being utilized by many anyway. That being said, I have never known why the state has not widened 93 South where the HOV lane starts. Its obvious that most of the traffic is due to the highway abruptly going from four lanes to two. There is plenty of space in the road to at least add one additional lane while keeping the HOV open to carpoolers.

I feel the state needs to add the HOV lane outbound using temporary movable barriers like New York has to benefit commuters getting home, and they need to utilize the space inbound and permanently expand the highway so it doesn't drop two lanes at the busiest point entering a major city. I hope people will find that this temporary expansion of lanes is the long term solution to Boston traffic, not an underutilized HOV lane.

Preparing for a longer life in retirement

Financially Speaking

John Spoto
Having a long, healthy life is a wonderful thing. Americans are living longer than ever before. Life expectancy has increased dramatically in the last few decades as a result of major advances in science, technology, and medicine. An individual's life expectancy is his or her median lifespan. In the United States, the life expectancy of a 65-year-old male non-smoker is 20 years. This means that 50% of men are expected to live beyond age 85, and 50% are expected to die before 85. A 65-year-old non-smoking woman on average is expected to live until age 88. When combined with the life expectancy of a spouse, the odds are 50% that at least one spouse will live to age 92 and 20% of living to 98. Additionally, life expectancy statistics reflects averages for the entire U.S. population including those with serious medical conditions, poor lifestyle habits and limited access to quality medical care. I suspect that few readers of this article would be representative of the overall population. In other words, most of us can expect to enjoy a lifespan somewhat greater than the statistics indicate. Because a particular individual's lifespan is unknown, smart retirement and investment decisions require each of us to make reasonable assumptions about our own life expectancy. Economists use the term "longevity risk" to refer to the possibility that a person will live a longer or shorter life than expected. Because there are lifestyle costs associated with either overestimating or underestimating a person's lifespan, it's important to consider the implications of being wrong.

In this case, planning overly-conservatively (that is, for a longer life) can result in an unnecessarily frugal lifestyle and squandering an opportunity to enjoy the money while your health is good. On the other hand, planning for a lifetime that is too short can mean overspending and depleting your savings prematurely, resulting in a reduced standard of living or dependence on family or friends. The latter error would strike most families as carrying greater risk. In light of that, while it can make sense to use a shorter life expectancy in certain situations where an individual's health is clearly failing, in most cases the more prudent approach is to assume a planning horizon through age 95 or 100. However, this longer life requires us to prepare physically, intellectually and financially in order to avoid living a decade or more impaired and impoverished. More money is needed to sustain a longer lifespan, and this changes the calculus of Americans' retirement decisions. Unfortunately, there is little evidence that this is happening. According to a survey conducted by the Society of Actuaries (SOA), pre-retirees and retirees underestimate the probability that they or their spouse will live into their 80s, 90s or longer. There are obvious risks for those who fail to appreciate and adapt to this new reality. Next week, we'll talk about those risks. *This article is for general information purposes only and is not intended to provide specific advice on individual financial, tax, or legal matters. Students show work at 3rd annual showcase

More than 150 students displayed projects related to health, global issues, the environment, science and technology and more at the third annual showcase sponsored by the Andover Coalition for Education, or ACE.

The event, held at the Cormier Youth Center, showed off the high-level work done by students from all levels of the Andover school district that exceeds traditional classroom expectations.

Andover High School classes and programs such as robotics, engineering, the senior exhibition program, environmental science internship class, senior capstone class, and global pathways program were represented. Portfolio-level work from senior fine arts students were on display in the lobby. Fifth-grade students from High Plain and West Elementary Schools, as well as eighth grade students from Doherty, West, and Wood Hill Middle Schools showed off their capstone projects as well.

The event last Monday was the third year it has been held, and ACE President Lenore Price said it keeps growing.

"This started out as a showcase for high school seniors," she said.

Now, the event showcases work done by a range of students on topics chosen by the students. Their projects filled the Youth Center, amazing parents and others in attendance by the depth of research and knowledge that backed each one.

"The students selected their own topics and are doing something they really care about," said Price. "And that really shows."

One of the first projects viewers could see upon entering the Youth Center was Andover High School senior Julia Sergeant's work, called: Our Plastic Footprint.

A 3-foot-tall wave made of all recycled material including plastic bags, egg cartons, plastic water bottles, bubble wrap and chicken wire represented the significant amount of plastic that enters the ocean each year.

Sergeant, who plans to study environmental engineering at the University of Vermont this fall, said she wanted to base her project on the environment, so she dove into why plastic was a problem and what can be done to fix it.

"It's a huge problem," she said, adding that she wanted to emphasize how much plastic was entering the ocean and put it in a literal sense. She called her project "surfing the plastic barrel of a wave."

To help her collect the items that made up her wave, Sergeant said a homework assignment in her advanced placement environmental studies class was for her peers to bring in materials she could use. Paige Welsh, a fifth-grade student at West Elementary, did her project on endangered animals and what can be done to help them.

"Ever since I was little and heard about animals being endangered I wanted to take the opportunity to show people," she said, adding that her favorite animal is the elephant.

Milena Tiernan and Cindy Yang, also fifth-graders at West Elementary, collaborated on a project they called "Space Beyond the Solar System." The pair said they wanted people to know things about the solar system besides the basic facts.

Tiernan said the most interesting thing they learned while doing their research was about wormholes, which they said can connect long distances such as a billion light years or even different universes.

West Elementary student Tess Moglia, 11, developed the idea for her project from her volunteer work at Lazarus House.

After volunteering one day and serving burritos in the kitchen, she noticed the ingredients were not very healthy. Moglia came up with a healthy chicken soup recipe as an alternative, and said they even served it at Lazarus House one day.

Andover High School seniors Katie Nam and Sophia Couto collaborated on a project called "Andover Smart Growth."

Their project delved into ways to live more sustainably in Andover, such as by walking around town instead of driving, or getting the community involved in farmers markets. The pair timed how long it took them to walk from one end of downtown to the other, noting it was only a 10-minute jaunt.

"It's just about fostering sustainability and making a community more tight-knit," they said. "Using sustainability as a pillar of growth so you're prioritizing sustainability as you grow bigger as a town."

Shelagh St. Laurent, a high school teacher and program coordinator for global pathways, said the event felt like a celebration. The global pathways program allows students to see the world through a global lens by fulfilling requirements to become global scholars.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for seniors to showcase their work and celebrate the awesome things happening throughout the district," she said.

Andover High School Senior Audrey Gallacher displays her portfolio of surrealism art at the ACE Showcase. She will attend the School of the Art Institute of Chicago next year.

May Wallace, an eighth-grader at the Doherty Middle School, explains her project, Music in the Classroom, to Lou Poulo of Andover at the Andover Coalition for Education Showcase. Wallace researched and conducted an experiment on how music has been associated with enhancing memory.

Spring Opening Reception, 7 to 9 p.m., Addison Gallery of American Art, Phillips Academy, 180 Main St., Andover; free and open to the public. Exhibitions include: Harlem: In Situ, examines nearly 100 years of art created in Harlem, exploring the neighborhood's enduring influence on American culture from the Great Migration and Harlem Renaissance to the present day. Also, Goodman: not recent color, made up of large-scale color photographs, the majority of which have never before been exhibited, this show will examine changes to the American cultural landscape through the coming of age of a young artist from the 1970s through the late 1980s. John Goodman, a Boston native and noted photographer of urban American life, recently rediscovered a series of Kodachrome and Ektachrome color slides from this period depicting Boston and beyond. Rescued from deep storage, the slides have been scanned and printed by the photographer, and the resulting series will make its museum debut at the Addison. Remaining on view this spring are two exhibitions of works from the Addison's collection: 4 x 4, in which four curators in four first-floor galleries have explored a theme, style, or artistic idiom represented in depth across many media; and In and Out of Place, a presentation that investigates the nuanced and varied physical and human characteristics that set place apart from mere location. Both exhibitions will be open through July 31.

Downtown walking tour is May 31

Staff report

Andover's history buffs are sponsoring a fun walking tour of downtown on Friday, May 31 and organizers say walkers just might learn something about the old days of Andover.

The walking tour steps off at 5:45 p.m. from the Andover Center for History & Culture at 97 Main St.

The tour will highlight architecture, history, and fun facts about neighborhoods in Andover in a fast-paced, and highly participatory way. Interactive games are planned and humorous challenges will be played as walkers explore Andover's neighborhoods.

This might not be your grandma's type of walking tour as it is fast-paced.

Participants are encouraged to take photos, bring a sense of humor, and share their experiences via social media.

Off-Beat Andover Tours are a fun way of bringing people together to learn about the sometimes quirky and unexpected history of Andover, get outside and explore, and have a good laugh.

"This isn't your typical walking tour," said Lauren Kosky-Stamm, Director of Programs and Social Media. "Andover Center for History & Culture's mission is to share the stories of Andover and its residents and we think it's important to do that in unexpected and entertaining ways. Simply put, the goal of this tour is to explore our community and its history in an informal way and have a ton of fun doing it."

After a successful debut of the Off-Beat Historical Mill District tour during the popular Essex County Trails & Sails event, the ACHC will be offering tours down Main Street and parts of the Historic Mill District this summer and fall. A future Off-Beat tour of Shawshen Village is in the development stages and plans are to debut the tour during the Shawshen 100 celebrations in 2020.

Inaugural Kentucky Derby gala races for hospice

Staff report

The Lanam Club in Andover was appropriately adorned with over 3,000 roses as Merrimack Valley Hospice held their gala there on Kentucky Derby Day.

Women in couture millinery galore and dapper gentlemen gathered among the roses on Saturday, May 4, for the group's inaugural Kentucky Derby Gala. Nearly 100 guests gathered around the Club's wide screen televisions on the outdoor pavilion, reminiscent of Churchill Down's "Big Board," to witness a historic running of the 145th Kentucky Derby. Following the Derby, guests were invited indoors to a post-race gala including dinner and dancing.

"This is the first-ever Kentucky Derby fundraiser to benefit Merrimack Valley Hospice," said Steve Janavicus, owner of Flowers by Steve. "A one-of-a-kind celebration in support of hospice care and to bring awareness to the specialized services provided by High Pointe House."

"Proceeds from the fundraiser will be used to offer comfort and compassion to patients of High Pointe House, the hospice and palliative care residence of Merrimack Valley Hospice," said Donna Deveau, Vice President of Corporate Communications and Community Engagement for Merrimack Valley Hospice. "We are honored by the generosity of co-sponsors the Clive B. and Suzanne I. Fazioli Charitable Foundation and Flowers by Steve, as well as the many guests in attendance."

The event raised $40,000 to support the compassionate care provided by Merrimack Valley Hospice.

Andover Community Trust dinner is June 13

By JUDY WAKEFIELD
jwakefield@andovertownsmen.com

The members of Andover Community Trust will hold their annual "Build the Dream" dinner on Thursday, June 13 from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Andover Town House, 20 Main St., Andover.

The Build the Dream Dinner is a major fundraiser supporting the non-profit work dedicated to the development and advocacy of affordable homes for families. Currently ACT is actively engaged in the construction of six homes (3 duplexes) on Lupine Road in Andover. This is a collaborative project of Andover Community Trust and the Merrimack Valley Habitat for Humanity.

COURTESY IMAGE

An artist's rendering of the Lupine Road duplex being built by ACT and Habitat for Humanity.

Lupine Road is the result of several years of efforts by ACT, MVHH and South Church in Andover. The first two building foundations have been poured and volunteers have been working on the first MVHH duplex. The students of Greater Lawrence Technical School are on site to begin framing the ACT duplex and will continue their work throughout the 2019-20 school year. This will be the 5th and 6th ACT homes built by GLTS students and their instructors. The project seeks financial support and the Build the Dream dinner is critical as ACT plans for the next phase of construction.

Rep. Tram Nguyen is the keynote speaker. She is the State Representative for the 18th Essex District, which includes parts of Andover, Boxford, North Andover, and Tewksbury. She is a first generation Vietnamese-American immigrant actively engaged in legislative advocacy working with statewide coalitions, lawmakers, and lawmaking bodies to push for laws that address issues of racial and economic justice, protecting the rights of the most vulnerable populations. Nguyen was elected in November 2018 and is the first Vietnamese American woman to serve in the Massachusetts Legislature. She has received the Lawrence Bar Association Merit Award, the Vietnamese American Bar Association Public Service Award, the Reginald Heber Smith Award for innovation and excellence in legal advocacy, and the UAW Social Justice Award.

The evening will also showcase the presentation of the "Fred Stott Advocacy Award" to George Koehler, and the "Opening Doors to Affordable Housing Award" to the Merrimack Valley Habitat Build Volunteers.

Tickets can be purchased online at www.AndoverCLT.org. For more information contact Denise Johnson at info@AndoverCLT.org or 978.276.9228.

Gifts of the Crow with Professor John Murzluff

Crows are mischievous, playful, social, and passionate. On Monday, June 3 at 1 p.m., scientist and researcher Professor John Murzluff will share amazing stories about these brilliant birds with huge brains for their body size. Crows mate for life and associate with relatives and neighbors for years. And because they often live near people — in our gardens, parks, and cities — they are also keenly aware of our peculiarities, staying away from and even scolding anyone who threatens or harms them and quickly learning to recognize and approach those who care for and feed them, even giving them numerous, oddly touching gifts in return. The ongoing connection between humans and crows — a cultural co-evolution — has shaped both species for millions of years. Sign up at <https://mhl.org/calendar>. John Murzluff is

James W. Ridgeway Professor of Wildlife Science at the University of Washington.

Owls of New England

On Monday, June 3 at 7 p.m., Martin Culpepper, a 16-year-old aspiring wildlife photographer, will give a talk about the owls of New England. Martin has always enjoyed nature, and began photographing outdoors at age 12. He spends 50 to 60 hours each month looking for wildlife to photograph. He's traveled to Alaska, Wyoming, and most recently to northern Minnesota, to capture photographs of wildlife there. He was a finalist in the National Geographic Student Expeditions 2019 photo contest. When he's not out with his camera, he enjoys being a Boy Scout, and camping, hiking, and fishing. His photographs will be on display at the library during the month of June.

An Evening with Author Doug 'V.B.' Goudie

On Wednesday, June 5 at 7 p.m., Boston talk radio host and former Howie Carr sidekick, Doug 'V.B.' Goudie, will share his new book, "A Frost in Hell: The True Story of the Peter-sham Butcher of 1875." What Samuel J. Frost did on July 4, 1875, led to the "trial of the year" in Massachusetts, with a first-of-its-kind appeal, and a last-of-its-kind punishment. The story of a nondescript farmer from a "never-heard-of-it" town captivated Massachusetts for all of the wrong reasons, and is as juicy today as it was in 1875. Goudie grew up in Petersham and now resides in Boxford with his wife and four children. Copies of the book will be available for purchase. Sign up at <https://mhl.org/calendar>.

Go Wild & Plant Native Wild Edibles in Your Yard

On Thursday, June 13 at 7 p.m., expert forager and author of "Wild Plants I Have Known...and Eaten," Russ Cohen will discuss a variety of suitable native edible wild plants to add to your own landscape or nibble on when you encounter them elsewhere. There's an increasing interest among homeowners and others to include more native species in their landscape, thanks to books like Bringing Nature Home, by Doug Tallamy, which extol the virtues of native plants over exotic ornamentals for attracting and sustaining beneficial insects. Detailed handouts will be provided, along with guidelines for safe and environmentally responsible foraging. Russ will also include a few details regarding native edible plants he has grown successfully from seed, and the partnerships he has made with conservation groups and others to add edible native plants to their landscapes. Sign up at <https://mhl.org/calendar>. Russ will lead wild edible walk on an AVIS reservation on Wednesday, June 19 from 6-8 p.m.

Walking The Way Today: A Pilgrimage along El Camino de Santiago

On Monday, June 10 at 7 p.m., Kristine Malpica and Meg Rayne will lead a visual and musical odyssey along El Camino de Santiago, a 500-mile pilgrimage across France and Spain known as The Way, that attracts thousands of international travelers each year. They will explore the historical legacy and contemporary cultural heritage of one of Europe's oldest and most significant pilgrimages, designated as a UNESCO World Heritage Route and the First European Cultural Itinerary. Sign up at <https://mhl.org/calendar>. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Andover Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Merrimack hockey player Michael Babcock, middle, is flanked by his dad, Toronto Maple Leafs coach Mike Babcock, and his mom, Maureen, after the Merrimack College graduation on May 19.

Merrimack's Michael Babcock snags the puck on his stick. The son of NHL coach Mike Babcock was a captain this past winter and graduated on May 19. He will be playing professionally in France this fall.

Toronto Maple Leafs head coach Mike Babcock, center, stayed in Andover earlier this month to see his son Michael graduate from Merrimack College.

Mike Babcock, Maple Leafs coach, big Merrimack College fan

By BILL BURT
Staff writer

Toronto Maple Leafs head coach Mike Babcock recalled getting a phone call from his son, Michael Jr., who was on a recruiting visit at Merrimack College.

"He said, 'Dad, I love it here. I'm going to Merrimack,'" recalled Mike Sr., of his son on a visit to the school.

"I said, 'No you're not! Get home! I had never heard of Merrimack,'" recalled Coach Babcock. "There were so many other schools that he was looking at that I had heard of."

Six years later, Coach Babcock not only knows about Merrimack, he might be considered an unpaid recruiter.

"What a place it was for Michael," said Coach Babcock, who was at the school May 18-19 for graduation events. "Coach (Curtis) Carr was great to deal with in the recruiting process. He had two (head) coaches who really cared about him. He ended up being the captain this past season, which was special. And academically, he really pushed himself."

Coach Babcock was seen at Merrimack games the last four year years, usually quietly taking up space in one of the suites. His son was noted for his grit, his ability to play offense and defense and the fact he could play all three forward positions.

"I went to about seven games a year. Most were at Merrimack, some on the road when my schedule allowed," said Coach Babcock. "It was really great to see him play."

One thing Coach Babcock didn't do much of, because of commitments to the Maple Leafs the last four years, was take in the Merrimack campus and surrounding area.

He stayed at the Andover Inn, a quaint hotel adjacent to Phillips Academy, with his wife and they were in awe of the area.

"I can see why Mike loved it here," said Coach Babcock. "Downtown Andover is beautiful. (Phillips Academy) was an amazing place. It was nice to relax and see the area."

Coach Babcock has been a busy guy since his team lost to the Bruins in seven games a month ago. In early May, the family saw Mike's sister, Taylor, graduate from the University of Michigan.

Eldest daughter, Allie, is a Dietetic Intern at Brigham and Women's Hospital, which is through Harvard Medical School.

"It seems like we have this strong connection to Boston," joked Coach Babcock.

As far as the Merrimack College hockey experience, including the "Hockey East" experience, Coach Babcock said his initial thoughts were all wrong.

"Mike had a great four years and now is going to get a chance to play professionally in France," said Coach Babcock. "It goes to show you that if you work hard, continue to improve and be a role model for others, you can succeed."

The Babcocks, who are Catholic, were also moved by the baccalaureate Mass the night before graduation.

"That's what this is all about, not the hockey," said Coach Babcock. "You get life experiences and you learn from them. At Merrimack, Mike learned a lot. Trust me, I know where Merrimack is and what it is about. Great place."

Andover Center for History & Culture

100 Years Ago—May 30, 1919

Andover, as usual, did her bit in the Salvation Army Fund drive which closed yesterday noon. The chairman, Samuel P. Hulme, has worked hard, however, to put our quota over the top and it seemed as if the money came in very slowly. The final figures are not yet known but it is certain that over $3,000 will be turned in to this helpful organization.

Every year for many years, we have watched the gray-haired kindly old men in their blue uniforms, pay honor to their dead comrades who fought in the Civil War. And now, this year, they will be joined by the khaki-clad younger heroes of this latest and most terrible war.

H. Krinsky has moved from his home on 69 Park St. His family have gone to the beach for the summer, but he is still in town to continue his business and look for another house.

The Andover Guild is an institution that the majority of people in town have got in the habit of taking as a matter of course. They know it is there, they are glad it is there, but they do not give it much thought, save on state occasions.

75 Years Ago—June 8, 1944

Life went on in Andover Tuesday, and it looks as if, on the surface, nothing was happening in the world any more than was happening every other day. The general atmosphere seemed to be: "Well, let's keep on working." Some Andover residents heard the 12:30 German announcements that the Invasion was on, but not until about 5:15, when the fire alarm rang a series of blows, did most of the populace realize that D-Day had arrived. The various mills' air-raid alarms came shortly after.

A tax rate of $29, or $1 higher than last years', was announced yesterday by the Board of Assessors. It allows for $75,000 which has been used to purchase war bonds for a postwar rehabilitation fund.

Editorial: Sometime you Andover boys who went ashore on the beaches of Normandy on Tuesday morning are going to come back here and you're going to try to recapture in words the pent-up feelings that you had as you crossed the Channel to make years of dark history turn bright again.

A 13-year old boy accidentally drowned Monday afternoon at Pomp's Pond.

Andover Sidewalk Bazaar Chairman John M. O'Boyle reports that all indications are that the Sidewalk Bazaar, scheduled for Friday and Saturday, June 20 and 21, will be the biggest and best effort in the history of the event.

Advertisement: Valle's Steak House at River Road Exit, Interstate 93, Andover; boiled whole lobster or sirloin steak — $3.95; steak & eggs luncheon special — $2.35.

Troops cower in a landing craft as it makes its way to the beaches of Normandy. The invasion took place almost exactly 75 years ago, on June 6, 1944.

25 Years Ago—June 1, 1994

When his landing craft reached the beach the front dropped down for the men to disembark. Ken Bach of 8 Summer St. laughs now but he remembers thinking "Oh God. They really mean this. They were really shooting. That was 50 years ago this Monday, June 6, 1944."

The following new business or businesses with new owners in Andover were honored last week by the Andover Chamber of Commerce at its Toast to Andover. A partial list includes ADS, 800 Brickstone Square; Backstreet...Again 13-19 Essex St.; Bob's Pizza and Subs, 195 Andover St.; Catch the Wave, 10 Post Office Ave.; The Coffee Connection, 13

Main St.; Dr. Golf, 199 Main St.; and Emerald Cottage, 20 Post Office Ave.

Mr. Fred Stott is the Andover Chamber of Commerce Service Award recipient for this year. "Fred's career reflects a genuine love and concern for his fellow man," said Mike Morris, chamber president, in announcing the selection last week.

Andover's Makiej emerges as high jump star in debut season

Andover's Michael Makiej, here clearing the bar on the way to victory in the high jump at the MVC Meet, has emerged as a star for the Golden Warriors.

DAVID WILLIS
dwillis@eagletribune.com

MICHAEL MAKIEJ

Andover junior track star Michael Makiej had never played a high school sport before going out for cross country in the fall. But he is not the first with his name to be a Golden Warrior. His cousin, also named Michael Makiej, was a varsity basketball player for Andover as a sophomore during the 2016-17 season. He then moved on to play prep basketball.

Contact David Willis at @DWillisET or DWillis@eagletribune.com.

ANDOVER — Just days into his track career, Andover junior Michael Makiej had an idea. “Michael had been running long distance in winter track,” remembered Golden Warriors coach Peter Comeau. “He came up to me one day and said, ‘Coach, I’m a junior and I think I can be a pretty good high jumper.’ I told him that, if he thought he could do it, he could give it a try.” Neither could have guessed, at the time, that Makiej would soon emerge as one of the premier high jumpers in Massachusetts. On May 11 — just months after his first-ever track practice — Makiej won the elite Andover Boosters Meet high jump title with a leap of 6-foot-2. Two weeks ago, Makiej set a new personal best with a jump of 6-4 on the way to winning the Merrimack Valley Conference crown. And on Saturday, Makiej continued his breakout spring by taking sixth at the EMass. Division 1 championship with a jump of 6-0. “It’s been absolutely fantastic!” said Makiej. “This is my first year of track, so this is really all that I know in the sport. I’m not sure I can even comprehend how amazing this is. But I know it’s amazing.” For his first two years at Andover High, Makiej didn’t play any high school sports. Instead, he was focused on his work with the philosophy club and TV club. “In philosophy club, each week, we would start with a broad topic like love or justice,” he said. “And we would talk about our thoughts and try to define the topic.” “In TV club, we would use the school’s equipment to compete in different film contests around America. Both clubs let me be creative and express myself in unique ways.” Makiej also discovered an interest for recreational running and, last summer, decided to try running 5Ks. “I decided to run a few for charity,” he said. “Then one of my friends encouraged me to try cross country. I went out of the team and liked it. At the end of the season, all the runners went on to indoor track, so I just naturally followed them and went along with it.” Makiej began his first winter track season as a distance runner. But he soon caught the jumping bug. “I played basketball growing up and I always loved jumping high and trying to dunk,” he said. “I heard there were tryouts for the high jump, and I wanted to give it a try. Right away I was jumping over 5-feet, and all the coaches were impressed. And it got better and better from there.” Makiej scored his first big jump at the indoor Division 1 Meet, jumping 6-0 on the way to eighth place. But that was just the start. He opened his stellar spring with a 6-0 for fifth at the Weston Twilight Invitational. He followed that by setting a new PR to take the Andover Boosters crown. Then, just hours before heading to the prom on May 18, he won the title at his first MVC Meet. “I really felt like I could make 6-4 that day because I was so close at Andover Boosters,” Makiej remembered. “I was going against the same kid (now-EMass. Division 2 champ Dom Britto). “The tension was high. The bar was set to 6-4 and that caught everyone’s attention. I knew I had to make it over, I focused, and it was awesome. I wore my medal to the prom.” While he has received most of his attention for the high jump, Makiej has also been the team’s top long jumper. He jumped 19-10.75 at a dual meet. Having now discovered his new passion, Makiej hopes to keep raising the bar. And his coach believes the sky is the limit. “It’s amazing,” said Comeau. “He just comes out to be with his friends, and he takes off. He’s taken it to another level. We’ve had some good high jumpers, but he’s different. I don’t think he ever really realized what a great athlete he is. But if you can clear 6-4, you are a great athlete. He has had a terrific spring.” Contact David Willis at @DWillisET or DWillis@eagletribune.com.

GILLETTE DELIVERS A WALKOFF WIN

SOFTBALL

Andover senior Scarlett Gillette had conflicting emotions as she stepped to the plate in the bottom of the seventh in the Methuen Invitational opener on Friday against defending champion Whittier Tech. “I was pretty nervous but I was also confident,” said Gillette. “It was a tough spot but I was thinking I had to get a hit. I was anxious.” Gillette smashed a double to left-center to score pinch-runner Maggie Graw with the winning run, as the Warriors took a huge 3-2 walk-off victory. Ashley Cocchiaro scored one run and drove in another and Sara Folen chipped in with an RBI.

Andover fell to Methuen 7-1 in the championship game of the Methuen Invitational on Saturday. Julianna Barbaro drove in Scarlett Gillette for the Warriors’ run.

Ashley Cocchiaro allowed three hits and one run over seven innings of work to lead Andover to a pivotal 5-1 win over North Andover last Monday. Paige Gillette led the Warrior offense with two RBIs and sister Scarlett Gillette added two hits of her own.

Julianna Barbaro had two hits and scored a run, but Andover lost to Central Catholic 8-5 last Wednesday. Scarlett Gillette and Anna Zdunczyk also had two hits and scored for the Warriors.

Freshmen lead the way at Division 1s

After struggles in the jumps, Andover freshman Jodi Parrott recovered to take second in the 110 hurdles in 14.80 at the EMass. Division 1 Meet on Saturday. “She killed it in the hurdles,” said Comeau. “She struggled in the jumps, but the way she was able to come back from that and almost win the hurdles is amazing. I’m so proud of her. There aren’t many girls in the country that can run a sub-15 second 100 hurdles.” Fellow Golden Warrior freshman Olivia Foster added a runner-up finish in the pole vault (9-6). “She had never pole vaulted until two months ago,” said Comeau. “And now she’s almost at 10 feet. To get 16 points from two freshmen is great.” Lauren Olson chipped in with a third in the javelin (117-7), Delia Barbanti took third in the 200 (25.31) and Julia Kennedy was sixth in the 400 (1:00.01). On the boys side, Matt Campbell was second in the pole vault (12-0) and Jake Dalton was sixth in the discus (125-7).

BASEBALL

Slugging away Shane Lachance, Alex Piscicreta and Patrick McConnell all delivered two-run singles as Andover rolled over Wakefield 12-2 in the Genoulis Tournament. Josh Gruenberg continued to dazzle, allowing no earned runs in a complete-get effort. Patrick McConnell’s two-run single sparked a 7-run fifth inning that lifted Andover to a 9-3 win over Billerica last Tuesday. Josh Gruenberg continued his dominance on the mound, tossing a complete game with seven strikeouts. Anthony Teberio added two hits and scored two runs and Alex Weinreb drove in two runs.

Matt Potts was 3 for 4 with two RBIs and a run, but Andover lost to Lincoln-Sudbury 12-4 last Monday. Jason Denoncourt added an RBI and a run scored for the Golden Warriors.

BOYS TENNIS

MVC Champion again Perennial MVC Division 1 champion Andover blanked North Andover, 5-0 on Friday, to finish the regular season at 14-1 and 12-0 in the MVC. Reilly O’Brien and Avi Jonarhanan won at first and second singles, respectively.

Sam Feng and Bryan Hun Htun rallied for a 1-6, 6-3, 6-1 victory at top doubles to lead Andover past Wellesley 4-1 last Tuesday. Justin Gu and Joe Colecchi teamed to win No. 2 doubles.

GIRLS TENNIS

Andover second baseman Paige Gillette tags out Whittier's Kyleigh Jo Campbell after fielding a ground ball in the second inning.

Dominating again

Anna Higgins, Sona Chaudhary and Aishwarya Sood all scored singles sweeps as Andover downed Lawrence 5-0 on Friday. Sidney Conway held strong for a 7-5 (7-3), 6-3 win at No. 3 singles and Andover bested Newton South 4-1 last Tuesday. Annette Kim and Corline Yang took No. 1 doubles 2-6, 6-0, 6-2.

GIRLS LACROSSE

Isabel Zhou, Corina Muntean and Sidney Conway won Nos. 1-3 singles as Andover swept Chelmsford 5-0 last Wednesday.

NH foe too much

Despite three goals each for Carissa Agostino and Shea Krekorian, Andover lost to New Hampshire power Pinkerton 18-8 last Monday.

BOYS LACROSSE

Falls to champs

Despite four goals by Shamus Florio, Andover lost to defending New Hampshire Division 1 state champion Pinkerton 10-7 on Friday. Matt Schuhwerk scored two goals and Alex Trottier scored once for the Warriors.

Andover beat Methuen 10-6 last Tuesday.

Kennedy's efforts for naught

Despite 25 kills for Troy Kennedy and 14 kills and 12 service points for Alex Durham, Andover lost to Haverhill 3-1 last Wednesday. George Truong chipped in with eight digs.

Bryant Kroger notched a team-high nine service points, but Andover lost to Lowell 3-0 on Friday. Troy Kennedy added 18 assists and Matt Sacco and Edward Lai each had six digs.

All in the family

Central Catholic sends 275 seniors into the future

By PAUL TENNANT
ptennant@eagletribune.com

LAWRENCE — Faith and family have always played large roles at Central Catholic High School since it was founded in 1935.

Speakers at Thursday evening's commencement exercises, in which 275 members of the Class of 2019 received their diplomas, frequently stressed those values.

Valedictorian Natalia Clark, who is headed for Boston University with a "full boat" Cardinal Medeiros Scholarship, said her friends at Central "became my family." One night, she recalled, she checked her GPS to see how long the ride home would be. The GPS indicated "home" was 300 Hampshire St., Lawrence — Central Catholic's address. Clark actually lives in Bradford.

"Call me idealistic, but I'm a huge believer that everything happens for a reason," she told her fellow graduates, faculty, family members and friends gathered in Central's gymnasium. "We hold the keys to unlocking successes that could transform our world as we know it."

She concluded her address by saying, "You should know the comfort of love because you have known Central Catholic."

Clark said she is undecided about her major, but thinks she will likely pursue a scientific career.

Salutatorin Maria Graziano talked about the struggles Central students have faced. At the freshman retreat, one of the leaders, Peter Graziano, her brother, cited the example of the butterfly.

"He explained that every butterfly must struggle to escape its chrysalis because, without that struggle, the butterfly will never be able to fly," she said. Graziano noted her class lived through the gas disaster of Sept. 13.

Some of her classmates have had medical problems, others experienced depression or anxiety, she said.

"Struggles bring us together. Struggles deepen our faith. Struggles give us courage," Graziano said.

She expressed a strong belief in God.

"God is always right there standing beside us. He will be there whether we know him or not and nothing could ever make him leave us. I pray that each of us has gotten to know him better here at Central and that we will grow even closer to him over the next four years and for the rest of our lives," Graziano said.

She and her classmates, she said, need courage.

"Especially in the world today, we need courage more than ever" courage to stand strong in a society that is so divided, courage to stand up for the dignity of life from conception until natural death," Graziano said.

Graziano will enroll at Providence College next fall. She plans to pursue a career in neuroscience or psychiatry. She was the recipient of the Brother Florentius Memorial Award, named in honor of the Marist Brother who founded Central Catholic.

The award is given to the graduate who "best exemplifies" the school's ideals. Graziano, of Atkinson, New Hampshire, was greeted by a receiving line of past recipients of this honor.

Christopher Sullivan, president of Central Catholic, said the Class of 2019 "made Jesus known and loved." He mentioned the students who came to him during the gas disaster and said, "We need to do something and we need to do something now."

He also noted that members of the class insisted on making a presentation to the custodial staff, who work hard to keep the building clean and well-maintained and "always have a smile on their face."

Sullivan paid tribute to the gregarious president of the Class of 2019, Josearmando Binet. When Brother Patrick McNamara, the provincial of the Marist Brothers in the United States — the "big cheese," as Sullivan called him — visited the school, Sullivan introduced him to "Mando."

The class president said to Brother Pat, "Dude, sign my shirt!"

After all the graduates had received their diplomas, Binet stood before them and with a relish, led them in moving the tassels from the right to the left of their mortarboards, thus signifying they officially graduated from Central Catholic.

Binet is headed for the University of Massachusetts Lowell, where he will study business management. At Central, he was a star wrestler in the 195-pound class and won the state championship despite being rated an underdog.

Asked if he plans to wrestle at UMass Lowell, he said he intends to focus on his school work.

His father, José Binet, said he is very proud of his son and expects him to work hard at UMass Lowell. Mando's mother, Milagros, said she is also proud of him and has high expectations of him.

The Class of 2019 included a set of triplets, Rachael, Elizabeth and Kathryn Dobson, of Merrimack. For the first time in their lives, they will be attending different schools. Before Central Catholic, they attended Sacred Hearts School in Bradford.

Rachael is headed for Quinnipiac University in Connecticut, Elizabeth will attend Roger Williams University in Rhode Island and Kathryn will enroll at Boston University.

They were accompanied by their parents, Jill and Mark Dobson; and their older sister Sarah, a 2013 graduate of Central who now works as a dental hygienist.

When the triplets were on their way, she said she knew she was going to have twins. The third baby was a surprise.

"They are good girls," she said, as she smiled at her newly graduated daughters.

REPEAT CHAMPIONS

Merrimack College wins second straight men's lacrosse national title

By MIKE McMAHON
sports@eagletribune.com

PHILADELPHIA — The Merrimack College men's lacrosse program walked into the history books on Sunday.

In their last game as a Division 2 program, the Warriors won their second straight Division 2 men's lacrosse national championship, taking down previously undefeated Limestone, 16-8, at Lincoln Financial Field in Philadelphia.

Next season, the Warriors make the move to Division 1.

Merrimack's road to the 2019 national championship was one of the toughest in history. The Warriors (17-3) had to knock off No. 3 Mercyhurst, No. 2 Adelphi and No. 1 Le Moyne just to face the top overall seed, Limestone (20-1) in the championship game.

Adelphi and Le Moyne are two Northeast-10 rivals who beat the Warriors in the regular season and Limestone defeated the Warriors in the 2017 national championship game.

"Our veterans held us together," said Merrimack head coach Mike Morgan. "You don't see it from the outside, but we faced a lot of adversity. We were fighting complacency and injuries early. They trusted us as a staff and they trusted their leaders."

"When you go through what we went through, losing some tough games, then beat all of our rivals and avenge our loss in 2017, these guys wrote their own story."

Merrimack started strong on Sunday and had a 3-1 lead at the end of the first quarter. The Saints rallied to tie the score with two quick goals in the second, but from there, Merrimack went on a 7-0 run that lasted 15:28 to take a 10-3 lead early in the third quarter.

It looked as if the Warriors had the game well in control, but the top-seeded Saints held Merrimack scoreless for the next 15:38, going on a 4-0 run that cut the lead to 10-7. That run included two Merrimack penalties and a man-up goal for the Saints.

"We just needed to weather the storm," said

Merrimack's Nick Ponte. "You'll get scored on. We just needed to grind it out and know the offense would take care of it once we got the ball upfield to them."

Merrimack's offense did take care of it, and the Warriors' best player took over and made his best plays.

Junior attacker Charlie Bertrand scored his 75th and 76th goals of the season to snap Limestone's momentum and give the Warriors a more-comfortable 12-7 lead early in the fourth quarter. That included scoring one goal while cutting to the net and taking the shot behind his back.

But Bertrand's dominance was only able to happen thanks to Davis Cronin's monster day on faceoffs. Cronin won 18 of 27 faceoffs on the afternoon, reversing the story from two years ago when Limestone used lengthy possessions off of faceoff wins to beat the Warriors in the 2017 national championship game.

Limestone head coach J.B. Clarke said he thought Cronin should have been the MVP of the game for his work on the X.

Merrimack College's Carlin Joyal celebrates after the Warriors won their second straight Division 2 lacrosse national title.

"Charlie Bertrand is special, but he doesn't do what he does today if that kid doesn't win 18 faceoffs," he said. "They doubled us up, and that's a huge factor. You need to limit their possessions because they have guys like Bertrand."

"We didn't play our best game, but a lot of that had to do with Merrimack. We weren't used to losing faceoffs as we did. When you give them double the possessions off of faceoffs, they're hard to defend. And that puts you in a hole right away. I'm pleased with how our D played, we just had to play too much of it."

Cronin, Morgan said, was a microcosm of Merrimack's entire team.

"Davis was awesome," he said. "Like our team, he started slow and was finding confidence early in the year. Then he went through some adversity and he got injured. Then he got going, and when he's going, well you saw what he can do."

"Coming into the game, we knew it would be tight. If you can win the faceoff battle, and 18 of 27 is a monster day, that gets our offense the ball and it keeps them off the field as much as possible."

The Division 2 era is now closed at Merrimack, not just for the lacrosse program, but for the entire athletic department. And there was no better way to close it out.

"For us, it will be knowing what we have to do and grinding," Morgan said. "We just grinded our way to a national championship. We've been running this thing for the last 8-9 years with a D-1 model, so it won't change much."
